Emancipation in the Frontier States of the South.

The question of emancipation has not only been seriously agitated in Missouri, where an anti-slavery organization actually succeeded in carrying the city of St. Louis at a recent election, but the same dangerous delusion seems to have gained some foothold in Kentucky. Some few of the leading men of that State are avowed abolitionists, and an organ of this political sect has been there established with a view to give general currency to their sentiments. Kentucky is compared to Ohio, and, her population not being so numerous, she is said to be in a less prosperous condition; and this is adduced as evidence of the baneful influence of domestic servitude. Now if a teeming population is any evidence of prosperity, then should Belgium and central Europe be in a much higher condition than any portion of this Republic; while China must be a sublimary of the Elysian, where nothing is to be desired of all the blessings which earth can afford.—But if we institute a comparison between the individual condition of the citizens of Ohio and Kentucky, we shall find that the latter have no just cause to complain. The people of Kentucky, perhaps about the noblest specimens of the humanity, do not shoulder a habitable globe, have always enjoyed a greater amount of material prosperity than those of Ohio, and are now far ahead of their northern neighbors in the real wealth giving that gives independence and stability to a community. By a recent estimate it appears that "the average amount of wealth belonging to each free person in Kentucky, is $1,850. We should therefore suppose that it will be sometime before the Kentuckians begin to realize the withering effects of the prosperity ment which has been so graphically described in the columns of the abolition journal published in that State; and a considerable time elapse before the people of Ohio see in starving crowds on the southern banks of the "beautiful river," looking with longing eyes on the opposite shore.

But why is her population less dense than that of Ohio? This is a question which admits of a ready reply. The north western States receive nearly the whole foreign population which comes into the country, and an insignificant fraction of this immigration finds its way south, because the climate is unfavorable to white labor. In Ohio one-sixth out of every nine, according to the last census, is of alien origin. In Kentucky only one out of every thirty-two was born abroad.—But although Kentucky receives no small accession to her population from this source, the ratio of increase in that State during the ten years preceding the census of 1850, was only 36 per cent.; while in Missouri, these adventurers into the Land of promise are poursoomes with that of Maine, it was 77 per cent. Michigan and Arkansas came into the confederacy in 1836. The ratio of increase in Michigan during the ten years preceding the last census was 87 per cent.; and in Arkansas it was 114 per cent. So if the introduction of involuntary servitude has retarded the increase of population in Kentucky and kept that Commonwealth behind Ohio, it seems to be pushing Missouri ahead of Maine and Arkansas and Michigan; and Maryland has increased more rapidly than New England within the same period; the rate of increase in the former being seven 24 per cent., and in the latter 22 per cent. The six coast planting States, beginning with South Carolina, had an increase of 33 per cent. during the ten years preceding the last census, while the rate of increase in the Middle States, for the same period, was 29 per cent. And as the south furnishes largely over two-third of the exports of the country, we should suppose that quite a lengthened period must elapse before our citizens will be compelled to go north of the line for the purpose of bettering their condition.

But even if the admission could be made that the institution of domestic servitude has been the prolific source of innumerable evils to Kentucky, what is the remedy which the wisdom of these reformers has enabled them to discover. Their scheme which is simply amazing, they propose to raise a sufficient sum to purchase all the slaves in the State from their owners, and then emancipate them. There are now over 210,000 slaves in Kentucky, who are employed in the cultivation of the soil, and the rational supposition is that the produce of the labor adds to the material prosperity of the commonwealth. Now liberate them and see the result. Do you make white men of them by allowing them a nominal freedom? Can you convert the Ethiopian to change the color of his skin? Or are negroes in Kentucky different in their characteristics from the African race elsewhere? If they are not, you will soon find the emancipated negro will not work; and now the property of the State is to be enhanced by transforming nearly a quarter of a million of useful laborers into idle, worthless vagabonds, is a problem rather difficult of solution.

Before the adoption of this plan for ameliorating the condition of Kentucky, and putting her upon an equal footing with Ohio it would be well to inquire what has been the result of similar experiments in other localities. Compare Cuba with Jamaica.—The former still retains the institution of slavery; and even under the illiberal policy of the Spanish Government, which crushes the energies of her white population, the exports from the island are immense. In the Island the negroes have been emancipated and will not work; and even under English laws, which are the best in the world, with the exception of our own, that once magnificent island is rapidly relapsing into its primitive state, a mere wilderness of barbarism. And what has been the history of San Domingo? A reference to authentic records will show us what it once was and what it is now. Its soil rested upon it, and what it now is under the benign influence of "universal emancipation." From the pages of the historian Alison, we take the following extract:

"Long before the war commenced, or the fleets of France had felt the weight of British strength; before one shot had been fired on the ocean, or one harbor blockaded by a hostile squadron, the basis on which the French maritime power had rested had been destroyed. Not the conquest of the Nile or the conflagration of Toulon; not the catastrophe of Dumperdown or the thunderbolt of Trafalgar, ruined the navy of France. Severe as these blows were, they were not irremediable; while her colonies remained, the means of repairing them existed. It was the madness of ignorant legislation which inflicted the fatal wound, the fumes of revolutionary enthusiasm which produced consequences the world never forgotten.

"San Domingo, the pearl of the French possessions in the West India Islands, was the production of two hundred millions of francs, and three hundred English miles, in length, and its mean breadth in extent, thirty leagues, by twenty miles. * * * The product of the island, and the commerce which it maintained with the mother country before the commencement of the troubles, were immense. The French part alone raised a greater quantity of colonial produce than the whole British Islands taken together. Its exports amounted to the enormous value of 168,000,000 francs; and the gross produce, including the Spanish portion, amounted to 460,000,000 francs; while its imports, in addition, amount of the parent state, were no less than 250,000,000. More than half of this immense produce was re-exported from France to other States, and the commerce thence arising was the chief support of the maritime power. Sixteen hundred vessels and twenty-seven thousand sailors were employed in coasting all the branches of this vast colonial grade; with so magnificent a possession, France had no occasion to envy the dependencies of all other Christian powers. It was this splendid and unequalled colonial possession which the French nation threw away and destroyed at the commencement of the Revolution, with a recklessness and improvidence of which the previous history of the world had afforded no example."

In the preceding paragraph the historian alludes to the emancipation of the blacks, a measure which was strenuously opposed by the most enlightened statesmen of France, but which was finally carried by the political Assembly. Freedom was conferred on all persons of color in the Island. This was soon followed by a collision between the races, and by the bloody extermination of the whites. France soon perceived her error and attempted to regain her lost dominion. But the field cost the union sweat of the European troops by thousands, and the rupture of the treaty of Amiens and the interposition of a British fleet prevented the necessary reinforcements. Ultimately the whole island was abandoned to the blacks, who have never since been molested. And what has been the result? It can be given in a few words. In 1789 the population of San Domingo was 600,000. In 1832 it was 280,000. In 1789 the quantity of sugar exported from the island was 172,000,000 lbs. In 1832 not a single pound was exported. In 1789 the number of vessels employed in the trade was 1600. In 1832 but one vessel was employed. In 1789 the negro population, under the control of a superior race, were actively and usefully engaged in productive labor, and were constantly increasing in numbers. Since then a vast proportion of this population died out from starvation and disease induced by idleness and vicious habits, and at no distant day the miserable remnant will be swept from existence, unless they are rescued from the terrible fate which awaits them by the white race reconquering the island and bringing them back to civilization.

Such have been the abundant blessings conferred upon the blacks by emancipation in other countries, and the writer of this seems to suppose that it will be some time before anti-slavery journals and Abolition orators will be able to persuade the people of Kentucky to try the experiment of emancipation of enhancing the prosperity of the State by turning loose over 200,000 beings of an inferior race to become a horde of paupers and felons in the land. If such an experiment, we ever prevail, we apprehend that it would not be long before Kentucky would again become "the dark and bloody ground."

A DROP OF HIGH BILLS.—The following philippic against the "bankers" is quite a specimen of "composition," says the Philadelphia Inquirer, may be "bankers" against anything ever produced. It was written a half century ago, by Sir Boyle, Roche, a member of the Irish Parliament, in the Troubled Times of Ninety-Eight, who was a lawful man, from the county of Wexford, struck terror into the hearts of many gallant sons of Mars, as well as the worthy writer of the following. The letter was sent by a friend in London, and it is old enough to be new to nine out of ten of our readers:

"My Dear Sir: Having now a little peace and quietness, I sit down to inform you of the dreadful battle and confusion we are all in from these blood-thirsty rebels, most of them are, thank God, killed and dispersed. We are in a pretty mess; can't get nothing to eat, nor any wine to drink, except whisky; and when we sit down to dinner we are obliged to eat potatoes, both hands armed. Until I write this, I hold a sword in each hand, and a pistol in the other.

I concluded from the beginning that this would be the end of it, and I see I was right for it is not half over it yet. At present, there are such goings on that everything is at a stand still. I should have sent you your letter a fortnight ago, but I did not receive it until this morning. Indeed scares a mail arrives without being robbed. No longer than yesterday, they were robbed with the mail from Dublin was robbed near this town. The bags had been judiciously left behind, for fear of accident, and by good luck there was nothing in it but two aldermen's wigs, and nothing for thieves to take. Last Thursday, notice was given that a gang of rebels was advancing here under the French standard, but they had no colors, nor any drums except bagpipes.

Immediately every man in the place, including children, women and priests, came to meet them. We soon found our force much too little: we were too near to think of retreating. Death was in every face, but to his great surprise, not a shot was fired. Fortunately, the rebels had no guns except pistols and pikes, and as we had plenty of muskets and ammunition, we soon beat them to the crowd. Not a soul of them escaped, except some that were drowned in the adjacent bogs; and in a very short time nothing was left alive, except a few children, and a parcel of different colors, but mostly green. After the action, we went to rummage a sort of camp which they had left behind them.—It was a most amazing sight to see how much a parcel of empty bottles of water, and a bundle of French commissions filled with Irish names. Troops are now stationed all round the country, which quiets everybody's fears and ideas. I have only time to add that I am in great haste.

P. S.—If you do not receive this, of course it must have miscarried, therefore I beg you will write and let me know.

A good wife, according to Plutarch, should be as a looking glass to represent her husband's face and passions; if he be pleasant, she should be merry; if he laugh, she should smile; if he look sad, she should participate in his sorrow, and bear part with him in all things; they continuing in mutual love and kindness.

"See here my friend you are drunk." "To be sure I am, I have been for three years. You see, my brother and I are on a temperance school. He lectures and I practice."

MARIAN CHAPTON:
Or, Let Every Girl Choose Her Own Husband.

Seated in a pleasant chamber, was a young lady, the daughter of one of the most aristocratic merchants in New England. He had risen from obscurity, and by a course, although not strictly honest, yet in accordance with the practice of the wealthiest merchants in the country, had amassed a large amount of property. With him wealth was everything; he knew nothing of happiness, but when it was considered in the scale of dollars and cents; and it needed only that two and two should be counted by what means he became so, to insure respect.

His residence was but a few miles from the city of Boston, and it was one of the most beautiful in the vicinity. No pains had been spared to make it worthy of notice, for Mr. Grafton was a man fond of display. His youngest daughter, Maria, was the only child remaining at home. Two sons, on whom he placed his hopes for the reputation of his family name, and on whom he had designed to bestow the wealth and position of his wealth, died ere they had attained manhood. Of the three daughters, two were married, leaving Maria with her father, who loved her next to his money.

Sad were the thoughts of the fair girl, as she sat alone in her chamber; but they were soon interrupted, by the voice of her father summoned her to the parlor. When she descended, she found he was accompanied by a young gentleman named Stevens, who had some time previous, offered his hand to Maria. But not content with her refusal, and knowing the attachment of her father to wealth, he had "talked him to all." Maria raised her eyes as she entered the room, but as she saw Stevens, she turned her head and seated herself by the window. Her father addressed her, presented Mr. Stevens, and informed her that it was his wish that she should accept him as her future husband.—Maria informed her father that she had rejected Mr. Stevens once, and that even did she love him, which she was very certain she did not, her own judgement taught her better than to risk her happiness in his hands.—"What do you know of love!" said Mr. Grafton; "and why are you unwilling to risk your happiness with him? His wealth is sufficient to procure every comfort and his character is——"

"Infamous," interrupted Maria, looking him full in the face.

Stevens turned pale, his lips quivered with rage, and the anger of her father knew no bounds. At length, pointing his finger at Stevens, he inquired:

"And what do you know of his character?"

"Enough to convince me that my words are true," answered Maria.

"Leave us, Stevens," said Mr. Grafton, assuming a milder tone, "though you may have heard reports unfavorable to Mr. Stevens, believe me, they are without foundation.—He is one of the wealthie t men in the city."

"He may be all that you think he is," said Maria, "but I cannot marry him."

"Why you may as well consent," said the father. "I am determined that Henry Stevens shall be my son-in-law, and you must marry him or quit my house. I will settle my own nor support an ungrateful and disobedient daughter. To-morrow I shall expect your answer."

Maria knew too well the character of her father to make any reply. A crisis was coming which she had some days feared. She knew that her refusal of Stevens would lead to trouble in her family, and had it been written to both her sisters, stating the circumstances, and requesting, in case her father should visit her from the house, the privilege of sheltering a broken-hearted sister. Their husbands had married them more on account of the wealth of their father, than from any affection they had felt for them, and they feared, if they gave Maria shelter, their father would disinherit them. Such is the effect which wealth has on the affections.

Maria retired to her chamber, and after giving vent to a flood of tears, deliberated on what course to pursue. One thing was certain, she was determined not to marry Stevens. The next thing was, how could she obtain a living? After thinking of the matter for some time, she said to herself—

"Well, I have a good constitution and can labor; but how would it appear for the daughter of the rich Mr. Grafton, to go about the city seeking employment?"

At last she decided, that, rather than remain in the city, she would go to some village, and, if possible, obtain employment. At this moment she recollected having heard one of the boarders speak of being employed in a factory, and she descended to the kitchen.

"Hannah," said she, addressing the girl, "I heard you a few days since speak of working in a factory; how did you like it there?"

"O, I liked it very much, Miss Maria, and should have remained there, had my health been good?"

"Was the work harder than your work here?" inquired Maria.

"Why, no, I don't think it was, but it was more confined."

"Will you tell me where it was?" inquired Maria.

The girl gave the required information, and the name of the overseer of the room where she had worked, and the name of the girl with whom she had boarded, adding, "she is the kindest woman I ever saw."

The mind of Maria was now made up. She decided upon entering a factory. Another difficulty presented itself, she had told her father allow her to take her clothing and what money she had; she determined that if he should still adhere to his resolution to ask him the permission. In the morning she met her father at the breakfast table. At length her father inquired—

"Well, Maria, have you concluded to marry Mr. Stevens?"

Maria hesitated for a moment, but said firmly, "I have not."

Her father stamped in determination last night, said he. "I now repeat it. You must marry Henry Stevens, or quit my house."

"I cannot marry him, father," said she, "sooner would I quit, not only this house, but the world."

"Then go!" said he angrily, rising from the chair.

"Shall I take my clothes?" asked Maria.

"Yes, and never let me see or hear from you again," said he, slamming the door violently, and leaving her alone.

Maria sank back into her chair and wept bitterly. For a moment she seemed almost inclined to comply with his wish; but that she must be linked to a villain, and suffer reproach if his villainies were discovered, was more than she could bear, and she preferred the anguish of separating from her friends, free, and with honor, to that of mortifying Stevens. She hastily packed up her things, and in a few hours left her father's house.

As she passed through the city of Boston, where her slaves resided, a choice sprang up in her mind, that she would seek employment in the factory, which she had heard spoken of.

NOTHING TO WEAR.

IN SPRING OR CITY LIFE.

Miss Flora M'Flimsey, of Madison Square,
Has made three separate journeys to Paris,
And her mother intends (if her health will allow)
That she and her friend Mrs. Harris,
Who is going to Paris (because it is fashionable),
Spent six consecutive weeks without shopping,
Of one continuous round of pleasure,
Shopping alone and shopping together,
At all hours of the day and in all sorts of weather,
For all manner of things that a woman can put
On the crown of her head and the sole of her foot,
Or wear round her neck, or in her ears, or on her
Or that can be sewed on, or pinned on, or tacked,
Or tied on with a string, or slipped on while lacked,
In front, or behind, above or below,
For bonnets, mantillas, cloaks, collars and sashes,
Embroideries, laces, ribbons, silks, and shawls;
Dresses to sit in, and stand in, and walk in;
Dresses to ride in, and dance in, and talk in!
Dresses in which to do nothing at all;
Dresses for winter, spring, summer and fall;
All colors, all shades, all hues, all tints!
Silk, muslin and lace, crape, velvet and satin,
Brocade and broadcloth, and other materials,
Quite as expensive and much more ethereal—
In fact, for all things that could ever be thought of
Or found in the city of Madame Demorest!
Flora has, in all quarters of Paris, and to every store
While M'Flimsey in vain stormed, scolded and swore,
They found the streets and he footed the bills.
The last trip, their goods shipped on the steamer
Arago,
Formed, M'Flimsey declares, the bulk of her cargo.
Not to mention a quantity kept from the duties,
Or tied on with a string, or slipped on while lacked,
Which did not appear on the ship's manifest,
But for which the ladies themselves manifested
Such a determination to smuggle them in,
Their own proper persons in layers and rows
Of hoops, petticoats, bonnets, mantillas, collars, Gloves, handkerchiefs, scarfs and such trifles as these;
Then wrapped in shawls, like Circassian beauties,
Gave good bye to the ship and go by to the duties.
Now, Flora and her friend (all married, no doubt, Miss Flora had grown so enormously stout)
Go for an actual belle and a possible bride;
But the mirror answers when she tried inside out,
And the truth came to light and the dry goods vanished
Which, in spite of collectors and custom house
sentry,
Had entered safely port without any entry.
And yet, though scarce three months have passed since the day
This memoirable event, on twelve carts, up
Broadway,
This same Miss M'Flimsey, of Madison Square,
The last time we met, was in great despair,
Because she had nothing whatever to wear!
Nothing to wear! Now, as this lady is rich,
I do not assert—this you know, between us—
That she's in a state of absolute nudity,
Or, like Madame Hubbard, in the Middle Ages,
But I do mean to say, I have heard her declare,
When at the same time she had on a dress
Which cost five hundred dollars, and not a cent more,
And jewelry worth ten times more, I should guess,
That she had nothing in the wide world to wear,
I should mention just here that out of Miss Flora's two hundred and fifty or sixty adorers
I had just been selected as he who should throw at
The feet of the shade, by her gracious bestowal
On myself, after twenty or thirty rejections,
Of those fond remains which she called her affections,
And that rather decayed, but well-known work
of art,
Which Miss Flora persisted in styling her heart.
I have long engaged the services of a friend
Who is known to shoemakers, or haberdashery grove,
But in a "fashionable" sort, most brilliantly lighted,
Beneath the gas-fixtures whispered our love,
Which, I thought, was accepted, when we parted
Without any leave in Miss Flora's blue eyes,
Or blushes, or transports, or such silly notions
As young ladies are supposed to indulge in
With a very small sprinkling of sentiment, if any,
Which, if they happen to possess, they keep
On the virginal lips while I imprinted a kiss.
She extolled, as a sort of parenthesis,
And I reckoned the cost of her love at "nothing at all,"
"You know, I'm to polka as much as I please,
And I'm to be married—now mind, I repeat it—
And you must not come here more than twice in the week,
To talk to me either at party or ball,
But always be ready to come when I call;
So don't spoil the sport, I shall be perfectly free,
For this is a sort of engagement, you see,
Which lasting on you, but not binding on me."
Well, matters went on, we wed Miss M'Flimsey and gained her,
With the silks, crinoline, and hoops that contain her;
I bill, as I thought, a contingent consignee,
Who, I found to my sorrow, and the trial proved
To appear as its escort by day and by night!
And in being the week of Saucage's grand ball,
I could not have been out a fortnight or so,
And act all the avenue on the tiptoe
Of expectation to see the first sound
And see if Miss Flora intended to go,
I found her—as ladies are apt to be found,
When the dance commences between the first sound
Of the bell and the visitor's entry is shorter Than usual—not dressed and waiting with her fixtures on the pier glass, undoubtedly meaning
To see if perhaps it didn't need cleaning.
"Why, Flora!" I entered—"Why, Harry, you slander
I thought you went to the Flashers to dinner!"
"So I did," I replied, "but the dinner is swallowed,
And disgusted, I trust, for its now nine or more.
So, as you see, I have dressed—" "Well, I adore
Inclination, which let me, you see, go to sleep
And now will your ladyship condescend
As just to inform me if you intend
Your beauty, and glamour, and presence to lend,
Or which, when I'm with you, I'm quite sure I borrow,
To the Stockbridge, whose party, you know, is tomorrow?"
The fair Flora looked up with a pitiful air,
And answered quite promptly: "Why, Harry,
I should like above all things to go with you
But really and truly—I've nothing to wear!"
"Nothing to wear! (its just as you are
Were the case to be tried, and you'll be by fair,
I engage, the most bright and particular star
On the firmament of fashion—) Nothing to wear,
Notwithstanding this delicate out of factory,
Opened on me at once a most terrible battery
Of scorn; as the indignant Miss Flora, I fancy,
But gave a slight turn to the end of her nose,
Intimated that I was a fool for my pains.
"How absurd that my same man should suppose
That a lady would go to a ball in the clothes
Of last winter! Dear me, I'm sure every day
So I ventured again—"Your wardrobe is broad, Overwhelming in extent, Flora!" Thus too dark by shade,
Your blue silk," "Why, that's fearfully heavy," "You
Have the pearl one," "That's too light—"
"Wear tulle over satin," "I can't endure white,"
"Your crimson brocade," "Why, I look like a fright
"I haven't a friend of proper face to match it,"
"Your brown—" "Dreadful, dreadful!" "Or, and look like Quakes,"
"The pearl-colored—" "I would, but that plague
Mrs Jones
Has had it a week!" "Then that exquisite lilac,
In which you would melt the heart of Stylites,"
"I wouldn't wear that for the whole of creation."
"Why not?" "Why, Harry, Cora's nothing could stand
As more suns if she," "Yes, but dear me, that Is Quite another thing—Cora's complexion is Sallow!"
Sallow! Stockings has got less just like its
And I wouldn't wear your dressed like a chit of sixteen."
"Then rainest in this bonnet," as the chap said when a basin of water was thrown over him by a lady he was serenading.

Common sense is such a rare commodity, that the world has entered into a tacit compact to live without it.

It is easier to declaim against a focused sin in others, than to mortify one in ourselves.

Fashion is like a flash of lightning that breaks through a gloom of clouds and glitters for a moment. Cheerfulness, keeps up a daylight in the mind, filling it with a steady and perpetual serenity.—Addison.

Poetry is the language in which man speaks of things that do not exist, and music is the art of the prophets.—Bulwer.

Hold the lady, becoming exalted and frenzied, "Then wear," it exclaimed, in a tone which quite Opposition, that gorgeous tulletie which you
In Paris looking over at the grand presentation,
When you quite turned the head of the head of the
And by all the grand court was so very much
The talk of the town was particularly noticed you
And with the tight waist and the—" "Why, Harry,
Cora
As she turned upon me with the force enough
I have worn it three times at the last celebration
And that and the most of my dresses are ruined
Here I ripped out something perhaps richer than Quite innocent, Harry, I'm sure, I'm so unlucky
More striking than you, as she, in a tone which Philadelphia, is it not? I wonder the ending Doesn't fall out and crush you—but, there, I have no feeling
Whatever, I'm wearied, difference of opinion
Who are you to dictate to us, pray, and pension
Your silly pensioners, why, what a commission
Is this, what do you know of a woman's dress
I have told you and shown you I've nothing to wear
And it's perfectly plain you not only don't care
But you do not believe me, (here she commenced to sob)
I suppose if you dared you would call me a liar
Or worse, (here she fainted) I'm sick of this!
You've listened and a monster, and I don't care what
I mildly exclaimed the worst—Mrs. Harris
Flirtation and manillas, Tartar and Shakers
Are nothing compared to this, which, right before
But this only proved an exception to the rule
And the storm I had raised came forth and Flora, who had fainted, was carried out
Bailed
Intelligently, when, presumed, till laughing quite Subsided
To express the absence, she was found to be Quite well, and was, in fact, once by a torrent of tears
And my last, fated, despairing attempt at an Explanation, I left the house in
Well, I fell for the lady, and fell for her hat
Improvised on the crown of the latter hung
Lots of expensive trimming which I
Quite well, and was, in fact, worth twice
Thus, without going through the form of a bow
Or saying a word, I left the house in
Of the Madison Square, and I walked
On Sundays and sidewalk, you bet—but Opposite
Of home, I reflected in my own cozy chamber
Filled my flat tobacco stopper, my feet
Upon the fender, and I said to myself
Supposing a man had the wealth of a Czar,
Of the Czar, so far as the wear is concerned,
On the whole, do you think he would have much
to wear
If he married a woman with nothing to Since that night, taking pains that I should not be seen
Abroad in daylight, I've ventured
A course of theatres, concerts and dances
Of this vital subject and find, to my horror,
That the fair Flora's case is by no means
Not that I relate the story
In our female community, solely arising
From this unmerited destitution of dress
Which the poetical mind of Miss Flora
With the pitiful wail of "nothing to wear"
Remarks—for, as a friend of the lady assures me,
Several the most painful and pressing occasions,
Of which let me mention only a few:
Two single balls and one Fifth Avenue,
Three young ladies were found, all lately married
Who have been three whole weeks without thing new
In the way of dresses, and, thus left in the lurch,
Are unable to go to ball, concert or church;
In another large mansion, near the same place
Was found a delightful, heart-rending case
Of entire destitution, which occurred
In a neighborhood block then warbound, in three
Total want, long continued, of corsets and hoops
And a suffering family, whose case difficult
Of relief, I regret to say, was made more
One deserving young lady almost penniless
Is now in the hands of a friend who Another confined to the house when to whom
Was usual, because her dress was Another, in the midst of new Brussels
Ever since the end of the disaster
Has been in a state of mind bordering on (For whose fate she perhaps might have found consolation
Or borne it in mind with sweet resignation
But the choicest collection of French
Ever sent out from Paris, worth thousands dollars,
And all at sea in most rechercha and rare,
The want of which leaves her nothing to
And, reduced to the last, she is
That she is quite a recluse, and absolutely
For she toothingly says that, under
Almost first of religion the world
And philosophy has not a maxim to
Of the loss of such a wardrobe
But the saddest by far of all these features,
Is the cruelty practised upon the poor
Who, in order to furnish the Tuesday,
Why rent the silk, touching appeal made for diamonds,
By their wives and their daughters, are
Unsupplied with new jewelry, fans and bouquets, Even laugh at their mamas when they chance
And decide their demands in accompaniments
Quite out of a hack and a hackney
Too and for belief but, alas! true, too true,
Were instances refused, yet so cruel
To permit her to take more than ten trunks
Sharon;
The commentary was, that when she
At the end of three weeks she had nothing
And when she appeared at the
At Newport, the manager refused out and
For his laziness cruelly alleging as reason
Except that she had worn two
Such treatment as this was shocking, of course,
Such treatment as this was shocking, of course,
Such treatment as this was shocking, of course,
But why harrow the feelings, by lifting the
From these scenes of woe? Enough, it seems
Has been disclosed to stir up the
Of the fashionable world, to
And stir up Humanity into a center
To such and such ladies that Won't somebody, moved by the touching crying
Come forward to succor and lend a helping

THE EXPRESS.

ROBERT McKEE, ::::::::: Editor

MAYSVILLE:

WEDNESDAY, - - August 26, 1857

JOB WORK.—We are prepared to do Job Work of all kinds in, good style, upon reasonable terms, and with dispatch. Orders are solicited.

TO ADVERTISERS.—We desire to call the attention of the business community to the Express as an advertising medium. Its circulation is now greater than that of any other paper in Northern Kentucky, and is rapidly increasing. The editor and proprietor having been connected with a large Western Jobbing House for several years, has been enabled, in consequence of the acquaintance he thus acquired with the retail trade, to place it in the hands of an unusual proportion of country Merchants, making it particularly desirable to the Jobber and Commission Merchant as a means of communication with the trade. We have, also, a list of the names of several hundred Merchants, living in Northern Kentucky and Southern Ohio, to whom, for the benefit of our advertisers, we will send copies of the Express, on the first day of September, and at stated intervals thereafter. Advertisements from a distance will be inserted at reasonable rates, if accompanied by the cash, or satisfactory reference is given.

Hon. J. L. Robinson.

Some of our exchanges are advocating the election of the distinguished gentleman whose name heads this article to the office of Speaker of the House of Representatives. There is not a man in the Union we would rather see elected to that office; and we are sure there is not one who would discharge its complicated duties with more fidelity, or with more satisfaction to the people. He is a native of this county, and possesses all the characteristic frankness, manliness, candor and chivalry of the true Kentucky gentleman. Having been for six years a member of Congress from the Bushville district, Indiana, he has the necessary experience to enable him to fill the office satisfactorily. In politics, he is a firm, consistent, unwavering faithful democrat, and to the defence of the principles of that party, he has consecrated his time and his talents. There is nothing of the time-server or the demagogue about him. He would not flatter Neptune for his trident. He never dodges an issue or shirks a responsibility. He is ever found where duty calls him; and is ever prompt to defend his principles regardless of consequences. He is a relentless foe of abolitionism, no matter in what form, or in what manner, or in what place, or at what time it presents itself. He was, we believe, the first man in Indiana who took a decided stand in favor of the Kansas Nebraska bill; and the position thus taken was defended with signal ability and success. His determined and patriotic course made him particularly obnoxious to the black republicans, and he has been assailed by them with more than their wonted unscrupulousness and malignity; but amidst all their clamor he has pursued the even tenor of his way, unawed by their opposition, and unintimidated by their threats. Falling in every other means to silence him they hung him in effigy, and resorted to personal violence; but his noble spirit disregarded the one, and repelled with vigorous blows the other.

He is a sound, reliable, conservative politician, a patriotic citizen, an honest man, and in his election to the clerkship of the House of Representatives, the South will reward a faithful friend, the Northern democracy will confer merited distinction upon one of the truest of their social number, the Country will secure an efficient public servant, and Abolitionism will be rebuked by the exaltation of one of the most determined of its opponents.

A STAR CONCEDES.—The administration of Jackson, during its second term particularly, was cotemporary with the most brilliantly intellectual Congress we ever had. A correspondent of the Lowell Journal, calls attention to the composition of the twenty-third Congress, which commenced December 2, 1833, and terminated March 3, 1835, and is surprised at by the number of members who have filled high places under our government. Six of them, J. Q. Adams, Tyler, Polk, Fillmore, Pierce, and Buchanan, have occupied the Presidential chair. Five members, Mason, Calhoun, Johnson, Tyler, Fillmore and King, have been Vice Presidents; and no less than eight members, Messrs. J. Q. Adams, Henry Clay, John Forsyth, Daniel Webster, John C. Calhoun, James Buchanan, John M. Clayton, and Edward Everett, has filled the office of Secretary of State. Thirty-two members have been Governors of States, and twenty-three members of the House have since served in the Senate.

☞ The Harrodsburg Transcript contains the following account of the achievements of one Empire Carter, of the Mortonville district, in Woodford county. We consider it a beautiful specimen of Plug Uglyism.

"He not only required a citizenship of two years after naturalization, but actually required the voter to swear that he was bona fide resident a citizen of Woodford county during the remainder of his natural life—provided the voter was a Democrat. For the extraordinary degree of zeal he displayed in the late election, he is certainly entitled to some mark of consideration from the "order."—We think the brethren ought to present him with a pair of brass knucks."

☞ The Bowlingreen Standard is in favor of Hon. B. L. Davis, of Simpson County, for the United States Senate. Mr. Clarke was our candidate for Governor in the memorable contest of 1855, and gallantly, faithfully and honestly discharged the arduous duties which devolved upon him. Mr. Clarke has many friends in every part of the State who would rejoice to see him in the Senate; and we are right certain that no man in the State is more worthy of the our Senate of the Democratic party than he.

☞ The Democrats have elected seven members of Congress in North Carolina, and Republicans carry one by a close vote.

A REMEDY.—The people of the South have for years past deprecated the progress of abolitionism, and have looked forward with anxious solicitude to the moment when the power to accomplish its fanatical purposes will leave the Southern States no alternative but unconditional and ignominious submission or a dissolution of the Union. The warfare waged against the institutions of the Southern States is altogether unprovoked, cannot be justified by any considerations of reason or honor, and, if persisted in, must ultimately lead to the most disastrous consequences. The elimination and recrimination which it has produced, has already alienated, to a great extent, the feelings of the people of the North and the South. If continued, it must inevitably produce, and that speedily, evils of the magnitude and extent of which we can now form no proper conception. The progress of Abolitionism must be checked, its clamors silenced, its aggressions upon the property, the rights, and the equality of the Slaveholding States, prevented, or we must cease to hope for peace, or to expect security.

How can these results be realized?

We have a remedy, legitimate and perfectly proper, in our own power. We can apply it when we please; and by doing so rid ourselves of an evil, while averting a danger. It should be used promptly, energetically and thoroughly.

Free negroes are found, in larger or smaller numbers, in every Southern State. They are a constant source of danger to themselves; they are an injury to the slave population by which they are surrounded; they are an unmitigated curse to every community in which they exist. We can rid ourselves of them. If we drive them from our borders, they must necessarily take refuge in the free States. As a matter of course they will go among their professed friends. They will seek the strongholds of abolition communities. The abolition candidate for Governor of Ohio thinks that negroes are as good as white men; that all laws making a distinction between white men and black men should be repealed; that the negroes should enjoy equal privileges in the common schools and at the ballot-box. Avowing such sentiments he has once been elected Governor of that State. He is supported by a large party for re-election. Ohio and New England are the hot-beds of abolitionism. If we drive them from our midst, the free negroes will expect to find protection, congenial society and social freedom in Ohio and New England. Thither they will flock in crowds. The disinterested philanthropy of these States will be taxed with the sufferance of a class of population less respectable, and far more troublesome, than would be the inmates of our State prisons. Our people, the people of these States, honest, but misguided, would have before them a living demonstration of the utter incapability of the negro to enjoy liberty. They would learn that their efforts to abolish slavery are not only unjust to the slave-holder, but, if successful, would be an unmitigated curse to the slave himself.

They would learn that slavery is the natural condition of the negro—that he is fitted for no other station in life.

The demagogues and small beer politicians of the North might still fume and fret about the aggressions of the South, but in one year from the moment this class of our population was driven among them, the people of that section would be thoroughly cured of their mawkish sympathy for the negro, and heartily sick of abolitionism. The leaders of that faction would be deserted by their followers, reason would resume her sway, justice be conceived in the South, and peace and harmony and fraternal feeling would take the place of acrimonious discussion and embittered recrimination.

Nor would the effects of the expulsion of the free negroes from the South stop here. They would become intolerable to the people of the Northern States. They would, in a few years, be driven from thence as a nuisance. They would be compelled to add to the numbers and respectability of the inhabitants of the dominions of Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain. Canada, the great depot of the Under Ground Rail Road, would be compelled to receive into her bosom, this miserable people. Its inhabitants would be compelled to retain them; and we would would thus visit upon them a terrible, but just, retribution for the inducements they have held out to our slaves to escape.

We hope our Legislature will give this subject its early attention; and we are sure prompt action and active measures will be productive of the happiest results, both to the State and to the nation.

AGGRAVATED CASES OF SEDUCTION.—The Henderson Commercial, a Know-Nothing paper, is attempting to account for the defeat of its party in this county, by the fear too that some of our friends were seduced from their principles and their candidates and tempted, without any resistance on their part, to vote for their most implacable political enemies."

☞ The Frankfort Yeoman recommends J. H. Harney, of the Louisville Democrat, for United States Senator. Mr. Harney is an able, reliable, and eminently worthy man, and against his election to the Senate we have but one objection—he cannot be well spared from the press in this State—his place in the editorial corps cannot be filled.

☞ We are glad to learn that HENRY M. DOAKES, Esq., a sterling democrat, has been elected to the Legislature from Fleming and Rowan. In the list of members of the Legislature we published last week, the election of both the know nothing candidates in these Counties was conceded. We learn that the official majority of Mr. Dobyns is 20.

☞ A gentleman friend has just brought to our sanctum a beautiful bouquet, the fragrance of which has no resemblance whatever to the "composition posy" and "pasta bucket." If instead of being a very handsome one, we were a very beautiful specimen of the female persuasion, we would—well! We would blush.

☞ Captain Cox the great know nothing orator who was going to ride rough-shod over the 9th district, and back to Congress "like a bird," has "heard something drop." It proves to be a very black cattle "dropping" after the last act in the political drama. His last words were—"its dark, all dark!"

FIRST EXHIBITION OF THE

North Kentucky AGRICULTURAL AND MECHANICAL ASSOCIATION

Of Mason, Lewis and Fleming Counties,

To be held on the FAIR GROUNDS, near the City of Maysville, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th days of October, 1857.

OFFICERS FOR 1857.

SAM'L. W. OWENS, Recording Secretary.
THO'S. A. CURRAN, Corresponding Secretary.
ROBERT A. COCHRAN, Treasurer.

ORDER OF EXHIBITION.

All articles designed for Exhibition on the First Day, must be properly labelled, showing the Class in which they are to be exhibited, &c., and placed in their appropriate places within the Amphitheatre, by 9 o'clock, on the morning of that day, to remain in charge of the Superintendents until the close of that day's Exhibition. The awards will be made and the Premiums announced and delivered at the close of the day.

FIRST DAY—Manufactured Articles of every kind, Fruits, Flowers and Poultry, and all Products of the Soil. Last in order, Female Equestrians.

SECOND DAY—Cattle of all grades, Sheep and Hogs.

THIRD DAY—Fine Horses of all ages; Geldings and Mares in Harness, and Mules.

FOURTH DAY—Saddle Horses, Jack and Jennetts. The awards of the Judges will be announced as soon as the decision is made, and Premium Animals designated by suitable badges.

REGULATIONS.

No member in arrears can compete for a premium.

Those who are not members may make Exhibitions by paying five dollars at the time of entry.

Any person may become a member of the Society at any time before the Fair, by application to ROBERT A. COCHRAN, Treasurer, and paying three dollars.

All entries must be made by nine o'clock on the day of Exhibition. If the entry be an animal under one year old, the precise day of its birth must be given.

All Stock, and every article presented for Exhibition shall be under the control of the Marshal.

No animal shall contend for but one Premium, except in sweepstakes.

Exhibitors of Stock shall elect at the time of entry, in which class they will show, and shall not show in any other class except the above named—ownership of stock withheld from Judges—and no owner of stock will be admitted into the ring, when contending for a prize—provided that the owner of saddle or harness horses may have the privilege of riding or driving the same, when on Exhibition.

No premiums will be awarded to any article or animal unless the Judges shall deem such worthy of the.

Judges of Stock are requested to report themselves at the business office on the grounds, by half past eight o'clock of the day on which they are to act for that purpose. Judges of articles are requested to report themselves during the first day of the Fair.

Premiums of $5 and over will be paid in silver plate—less than that amount will be paid, unless otherwise provided for in the list.

In the Mechanical and Household department, no articles of the Mechanic Art will be allowed to exhibit; but the Wood-workman or Iron-workman of Carriages, Carts, &c., may enter jointly or individually; but no premium will be awarded, and that for the entire complete.

The Exhibition will open at 10 o'clock each day. The Secretary and Treasurer will be upon the ground at an early hour.

Admission to the grounds free to members and their families, (including females and servants, and all males under twenty-one years.) All other persons will be charged 25 cents, with privilege of entering with Carriage, Hack, Buggy, or on Horseback, free from charge on vehicle or animal.

No Omnibus, Carriage, Hack or Buggy running for hire, can enter the grounds, but shall discharge and receive passengers at the footman's gate.

The Stalls upon the grounds are free for Stock to be exhibited, on the day such stock is to be exhibited.

The gate of the amphitheatre will be closed in ten minutes after the call of the Marshal for each class of stock.

The intermission at noon of each day's exhibition, will be devoted to exhibition of Stock within the amphitheatre, and a competent auctioneer will be employed for that purpose, who will attend to selling stock at reasonable charges.

Exhibitors will place in the hands of the groom, a card containing the age of all animals under three years of age.

Discretionary Premiums may be awarded by the Board of Directors, on the recommendation of the Judges.

Sheep and Hogs will be exhibited in the pens.

August 20th, 1857.

Intercepted Letter.

LEWIS COUNTY, Aug. 9th, 1857.

DEAR BLANT:

The jig's up with us in Kentucky. We have at last come to the order—Break Ranks! —March! Circulars went to any good now. Your hand writing aint familiar to the boys—they don't know you. They wont plank up like they used to. Money's getting awful scarce in this region. Boys all hard up. Our lodge met on Sunday night before the election—six members present—thirty cents raised for election purposes—not enough to do any good—used it for drinking purposes. This County is fast going to H—ll. The any niicker have got every thing by the smooth handle! Great talk among our party of Nigger Equality in Maryland. Fool that wouldn't do. Don't know where the D—l we will go.

Mason County did the thing right. Raised a thousand there. Elected Taylor and gave Cox a good majority. Old Mason all right—every other County all wrong.

Don't send any more circulars up here—money awful tight. Yours in hope,

ZEB JONES.

Never do that in prosperity. n hatend you [illegible]

One often regrets saying too much but seldom of saying too little.

The trials of life are the tests which constitute how much gold there is in us.

[COMMUNICATED.]

Editor of the Maysville Express:

Please insert in your valuable paper the following Testimonial of our high esteem for the character and talents of our old fellow-Townsman, JACOB O. PHISTER:

Though we cannot own to the cheerfulness that now with January the 1st, and prosperity of other sections of the Union, we can have occasion to regret that the tempting allurements of the mighty west, attracts away from us so many of our friends, neighbors and friends. This remark is drawn from us on learning that we are likely soon to lose the pleasant duty of presenting our familiar to our excellent friend, Mr. JACOB O. PHISTER, who is about to migrate to one of the new States or Territories, to promote the fortunes of his family. While we shall part from him with reluctance, we cannot but rejoice at the prospect of that future prosperity which will assuredly reward talents and energy like his. A native of Maysville and raised in our midst, our people do not need to be told who he is and what Mr. Phister is; but it may interest those among whom he may hereafter cast his lot, to learn something authentic of his character and history. His honored father, a well living amongst men of unblemished name, possessed these high and estimable qualities, which invariably command the respect and confidence of others, and he, with his family, grew up, all distinguished by more than ordinary attainments and capacity in their respective walks of life. Young Jacob, at the proper age, joined of our Circuit Court, is unquestionably distinguished by a high rank among the eminent jurists of the country. Our friend Phister, with such a family, and such a father, up to a trade. While yet a very young man, the penetrating eye of the Hon. Jno. Chambers, first Judge of Kentucky, and merits, selected him as his Secretary, while he was the United States in the capacity of Governor of the then Territory, and State, of Iowa. He discharged the duties of that office with promptitude, fidelity and ability, securing the hearty approbation of the Governor and the applause of the public. It was his design to return to Kentucky in June, when from such a basis, he would have rapidly risen to eminence; but on a visit to the home of his father, he was overwhelmed with parental benediction, and he married and settled here. But we know him well enough to be justified in saying that with added experience, his intelligence, energy, and probity and general capacity, qualify him for high trust, whether in public or private life; and we do not doubt that we shall hear of him hereafter winning his way upward to fortune and influence; and there are hosts of friends whom he leaves behind him, who will rejoice at his prosperity and delighted to hear of it, particularly as we will.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE CITY.

Telegraph Dispatches.

MAYSVILLE, AUGUST 26TH., 1857.

☞Ex.-one Sale, the great Novelist, is dead.

☞The Express Office was handsomely serenaded last night by the Maysville Brass Band. Sorry no one was at home.

☞Blanton Duncan, of Louisville, has refused an agency for a new patent circular saw. He says he was a circular instrument himself, and he knows they wont take in Kentucky. Sensible, at last.

☞We invariably charge for the insertion of all notices of communications intended to further private enterprizes or promote private interests, at the rate of ten cents a line for the first ten lines, and five cents a line thereafter. We will insert none upon any other terms.

☞The Advertisement of the First Exhibition of the North Kentucky Agricultural and Mechanical Association, crowds out several communications, and some editorials, which were intended for this number of the Express. We will have something to say of this Fair next week.

☞Micajah Wyatt, School Commissioner for Fleming County, will receive applications until the first day of September next, from any male person, of said County, between the ages of sixteen and thirty years, who may desire to attend the next Session of the State Normal School.

☞Messrs Antes & Bergeman have removed to their new and handsome store, on Second Street, opposite Court Street, where they will always be found with a good supply of everything in their line. They are clever, worthy men, and we take special pleasure in calling attention to the inducements they are prepared to offer to buyers.

The Vital Fluid enters every organ of the body through the circulation, distributes the nutritive principle to every texture and the source of every secretion. In a word, it is the life of man. How important, then, that it should be kept in a pure and healthy condition. Hurley's Sarsaparilla is known to possess properties which become assimilated with the blood, disinfecting it of disease, and restoring exhausted nature to pristine vigor.—Columbia (Texas) Herald.

☞The Wheat Crop is unusually large this year, and every farmer has some to sell. The farmers of Mason County all sell their wheat in Maysville; and we assure our friends in the interior that they will always find buyers here who will pay them in cash the highest market price for wheat, rye, barley, oats, and other produce, who and will deal honorably and fairly with them. There is not a better or more reliable market for "small grain" in the west, than Maysville.

The Diseases of the Digestive Organs—Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint, in their incipient state, effect very peculiarly the mental powers. When young persons of a sedentary turn complain of their aches and pains in the head, motes in their eyes, hemorrhage of the nose, a purification of the system becomes necessary, and this can be easily and safely attained by a few doses of the Moffat Life Pills and Phenix Bitters. Sold by the proprietor, W. B. Moffat, 335 Broadway, New York, and his Agents.

Rev. R. McMurdy's Seminary.

Rev. R. McMurdy, formerly of Washington, an accomplished gentleman, a worthy man, a fine scholar and a good teacher, is about to establish a Female Seminary at Frankfort, Ky.

The number of pupils will be limited to twenty, that each one may have his constant attention and instruction; and his reputation as a teacher is so well established and so widely known, that we would suppose the school would soon be filled.

We regret to lose Mr. McMurdy from our midst, and heartily congratulate the people of Frankfort on his location among them.

☞Messrs. Pearce, Tolle & Co., Merchants of this City, sold in the year ending with 1st inst., $296,400 worth of goods.

Their trade has been regularly increasing for some years; and they have enlarged their Store, and are making arrangements to do a much heavier business hereafter. Their facilities for doing business are equal to those of any other Western Jobbing House; and their thorough acquaintance with the trade of North Eastern Kentucky, and their knowledge of the wants of that section of the Country, enable them to offer great inducements in the style and quality of their goods.

☞In another column will be found the advertisement of the Washington Female College and the Washington Male Seminary, in E. Bl. Warner, Principal. The school, under the control of Rev. R. McMurdy and Mr. Warner, has established a high reputation, which we are confident will be maintained by Mr. Warner and his very competent assistants. Mr. Jno. H. Waterman, his associate in the male department of the school, is a graduate of Dartmouth College, and has large experience as a teacher. Miss Emily Le Blond, an accomplished and thoroughly qualified English lady, will have charge of the Music and French departments. Miss H. L. Marquart remains in charge of the primary department.

A Minsters Testimony.

Hooktown, Beaver Co. Pa., Feb. 5th 1857.

We prefer buying BOERHAVE'S HOLLAND BITTERS for cash, to save the discount. Hope to send you soon a recommendation from our Minister, testifying to its curative powers. (Signed,)

INDIGESTION.

Darbestown, Montgomery Co., Maryland, January 31st, 1857.

I never felt the benefit of any medicine so much as from the bottle of BOERHAVE'S HOLLAND BITTERS I purchased last fall I wish to know where I can get it, without fear of imposition. (Signed,)

JOSEPH C. DELLETT.

FROM A DRUGGIST.

Apollo, Armstrong Co., Pa., Dec. 15, 1857.

Messrs. R. Page, Jr., & Co.

Dear Sirs—I purchased one doz. of your BOERHAVE'S HOLLAND BITTERS, from your traveling agent, which has given great satisfaction in this section. Send me another dozen, for which I enclose the money.

W. C. BOYARD.

Telegraph Dispatches.

Washington, D. C. August 22.

The Department of the Interior has received intelligence from a reliable gentleman and fugitive Mormon that Brigham Young is preparing to resist Gen. Harney; that he has relapsed into the grossest Infidelity and Atheism, and continues to hold up the Government of the United States in supreme contempt to the Mormons.

Among the dispatches just received by the Government, is a correspondence between our naval officers and the Government of Singapore, relative to the seizure of our flag to be hauled down by a British officer, from the Dutch bark Henrietta Maria, which had been abandoned by her officers and most of her crew, and taken possession of by the master of an American ship.

Governor Blindell earnestly declained for the want of money to raise the American flag, and to the rights of American citizens. This was all he felt it his duty to do; but the matter does not here terminate. The bark has been delivered to the Government of the Netherlands, on the ground that the vessel being Dutch, and if the Chinese Coolies being found on board are innocent of mutiny, they have a claim on the owners; and if guilty, were punishable only by the Dutch Criminal court.

The Sales of the Kansas Indian Trust Lands have yielded over $387,000.

Chicago, August 22.

A terrible hurricane passed over Woodland, Wisconsin, last evening, destroying every house in the place. Mr. Fox, station agent, was two miles distant, and vainly endeavoring to stop some freight cars which the wind had set in motion. The telegraphic lines are all prostrated and the railroad track considerably damaged.

New York, August 22.

Considerable excitement has been caused at the St. Nicholas Hotel in consequence of a discovery of defalcations to the amount of $20,000 on the part of one of the entry clerks in the establishment. The accused was arrested, and is in custody at the hotel, awaiting the result of an investigation by the proprietors, Treadwell, Acker & Co.

St. Johns, N. F., Aug. 22.

The weather is pleasant with light westerly winds.

The submarine telegraph fleet is confidently expected to arrive at Trinity Bay as early as Tuesday next if the undertaking proves successful.

Chicago Aug. 22.

The Iowa Republican State Convention met at Iowa City on the 19th inst., and nominated General R. P. Lowe for Governor and Orin Parrillo Lieutenant Governor.

St. Louis, August 22.

Col. Roberts, from New Mexico, reports a battle between the Apache Indians and Col. Miles' command on the Gila Riliron which twenty-five Indians were killed, and upward of thirty wounded. Lieutenan's Stein and Davis and nine privates were wounded.

Col. Miles recovered a large amount of property.

How a Californian got into a Religious Bookstore.

A short time since a returned Californian came on to this city from New York, in the night time, with six thousand dollars in gold dust. He was up bright and early on the following morning, and clutching his treasure tightly, he strode up Chestnut street to the Bible House. He arrived there about two hours before the opening of that institution, and set himself down upon the steps, muttering something about the laziness of Uncle Sam's servants. Casting his eyes across Broadway he saw a large sign, with the words—"Presbyterian House." He rushed over, and went into the second story, where, finding none of the offices open, he took possession, and locked the door. Flinging his bag down on the table, he proceeded to take an account of his stock. While deeply engrossed, one of the gentlemen belonging to the building had occasion to go into the room. He was much surprised to find the door fastened, as he had left it open a few minutes before. Peeping through the key-hole, he espied our "unkept and uncombed" California friend seated at the table, pouring out the dust from the small bags into a larger one.

He at once mistook him for an escaped lunatic, particularly as he had a large bowie knife and revolver lying alongside of him. Hastily summoning assistance, he knocked at the door, taking care to keep out of range of the revolver.

"Who's that?" demanded the Californian in a stentorian voice.

"Open the door!" replied the gentleman in the white neckcloth.

"No! I'm bless'd if I do," returned the Californian; "I've heam too much about gartrers and Peter Funks. I know what you are after—you want to rob me."

"No my good friend, we do not—we only want you to open the door," meekly and soothingly replied white neck-cloth.

"Now, look'ee here, strangers—I'm an honest man—but cuse me if I'm going to let any such varmints as you get a sight at my pile."

Finding expostulation in vain, white neckcloth invoked the aid of the police. They soon brought the unruly Californian to terms and he opened the door. As the party rushed into the room, the Californian stared wildly around, and seemed to think that things were not exactly all right.

"My dear friend—come, like a good man, and go out with these gentlemen—they will a harm you," coaxingly said white neckcloth, keeping a watchful eye on the implements of war which were lying on the table.

"Thunder and firelocks—where am I?" demanded the Californian, grasping with a firm hand his bag of dust.

"Why you are in the Presbyterian House—religious book store."

"Oh! ha! ha! ha!" roared out the Californian—daylight just begining to creep through his shaggy head. "Why, what an old jackass I have been making of myself. Bless my buttons, strangers, I'd have sworn when I came in, that the Presbyterian House was rather a sanctified name for a Hotel."

A roar of laughter followed the explanation of the mistake, and our Californian friend bundled up his dust and shot over to the mint.—Transcript.

Epitaph.

Fillmore and Houston, Crittenden and Scroggs,
Douglas and Stephens, George Law and Rhett
And the rest of the party, have gone to the dogs,
Or are only left remaining in very small spots.

And Hanson and Prentice and T. Lovely Jones,
And that "Eloquent Speaker," Leander M. Cox,
Have gone where the tempest will whiten their bones,
To the home of Old Sam, on the Salt River Rocks.

The Grand Council of Kentucky K. N.'s Sued.—A novel suit was heard in the Circuit Court of Campbell county yesterday. Messrs. Shipley & Bro., seal makers and engravers, of this city, were sued for damages, in proceedings against Col. Smalley and Maj. Caldwell, of Newport, Ky., as agents for the Grand Know Nothing State Council of Kentucky, for the recovery of $350 with interest, being the amount claimed by the plaintiffs for seals manufactured for the Grand Know Nothing State Council of Kentucky, ordered by the agents of the Grand Council, Col. Smalley and Maj Caldwell, and which they have refused to pay. The case was argued by Webster appeared for the plaintiffs, and Col. John W. Stevenson, Democratic Member of Congress elect from the Tenth Congressional District of Kentucky, for the defendant agents of the Grand Know Nothing State Council of Kentucky. Mr. Webster pitched into the Know Nothings right royally, and provoked a degree of merriment not equalled in Newport since the High Sheriff of Campbell county was fined for sitting on the Court House fence.

Col. Stevenson replied in a long able, and eloquent argument, basing his plea upon the irrefragable proposition that the suit was improperly instituted against Col. Smalley and Maj Caldwell, and claiming that the plaintiffs should have proceeded against the "Administrators and Executors of Sam," as in such cased provided by law. Col. Stevenson also strongly maintained that if Sam's Administrators collected assets from the estate of the deceased, the plaintiffs ought to proceed against the 30,000 of Sam's boys whom Col. Smalley avowed had been sworn into the order of K. N.'s in Kentucky. The jury, however, seemed oblivious to such subtle arguments, and returned a verdict of $332 in favor of the plaintiffs.—Cincinnati Commercial.

PLAN OF THE LOTTERY.

The Numbers from 1 to 5405, corresponding with those Numbers on the Tickets printed on separate slips of paper, are enrolled with small tubes and rolled in the Wheel.

The first 4-7 Prizes, similarly printed and enclosed, are placed in another Wheel.

The Wheels are then revolved, and a number is drawn from the Wheel of Numbers, and at the same time a Prize is drawn from the other Wheel. The Number and Prize drawn out are opened and published to the assembled Managers and Commissioners; the Prize being placed against the Number drawn. This operation is repeated until all the Prizes are drawn out.

APPROXIMATION PRIZES.—The two preceding and the succeeding Numbers to those drawing the first Prize 7 will be entitled to the 8 Approximation Prizes. For example: If the ticket No. 1146 draws the $60,000 Prize, Tickets numbered 1145, 1144, 1143, 1142, will each be entitled to $100. The Tickets numbered 1147, 1148, 1149, 1150, will each be entitled to $100, and so on according to the above scheme.

The 5,000 Prizes of $20 will be determined by the last figure of the Number that draws the $60,000 Prize. For example, if the Number drawing the $60,000 Prize end in 1, then all the Tickets where the number ends in 1, will be entitled to $20. If the Number ends with No. 2, then all the Tickets where the Number ends in 2 will be entitled to $20, and so on to 0.

Certificates of Fractions will be sold at the following rates, which is the full price:

A few short extracts from Letters, Testimonials, &c.

"I have used Jacob's Cordial in my family, and have found it a most efficient, and in my judgement, a safe medicine." Hon. Thos. Hoge, Warner, Judge of Supreme Court of Georgia.

"I have used Jacob's Cordial in my family, and recommend Jacob's Cordial—my own personal experience, and the experience of my neighbors and friends around me, is a sufficient guarantee for me to believe it to be all that it purports to be, viz: a superior domestic." —W. H. Underwood, Farmer by Judge Reporter Court, Cherokee Circuit.

"I take great pleasure in recommending this invaluable medicine to the Ladies and Gents, who are in the habit of using Jacob's Cordial, and have tried by me."—A. A. Goulding, Deputy G. M. of the Grand Lodge of Georgia.

"I have used Jacob's Cordial in my family, and this, with all I hear about it as a remedy by those who have tried it, I consider it to be all that it stands at the head of every preparation of the kind, and I would recommend its use in the diseases for which it is compounded." Rev. Jno. Dobbings, Cashier of the Bank of the State of Georgia.

"If there is any credibility in human testimony, Jacob's Cordial must stand pre-eminent above all other preparations for the cure of Bowel Diseases. From the mass of testimony in its favor, I cannot but believe, that it is, in most very fertile advance, as a curative agent, of most if not all other patents' preparations."—A. Flemming, Cashier Marine and Fire Insurance Bank Griffin.

CHOICE FARM LANDS FOR SALE.

THE IILINOIS CENTRAL R. R. CO.

IN THE PROPRIETARY TO SELL ABOUT

1,500,000 ACRES

CHOICE FARMING LANDS!

IN TRACTS OF 40 ACRES AND UPWARDS,

ON LONG CREDIT

AND AT LOW RATES OF INTEREST.

These lands were granted by the Government, to aid in the construction of this Road, and are among the richest and most fertile in the world. They extend from Northern Illinois, the entire length of the Middle State, to the extreme South, and include every variety of climate and productions found between those parallels of latitude. The Northern portion is chiefly prairie, interspersed with groves and timber, and in the middle and Southern sections timber predominates, interspersed with beautiful prairies and openings.

The climate more healthy, mild and equable than that of any other part of the country—the air is pure and bracing, while living streams and springs of excellent water abound.

Bituminous coal is extensively mined, and supplies a cheap and desirable fuel, being furnished at many points at $3 to $4 per ton—and Wood can be had at the same rate per cord.

Building Stone, of excellent quality, also abounds, which can be procured for little more than the expense for transportation.

The great fertility of these lands, which are a black rich mould, from two to five feet in depth, and yet so easily cultivated, combined with the ease by which every facility is furnished for travel and transportation, to the principal markets North, South, East, and West, in connection with which they can be cultivated, render them the most valuable farming lands in the West. We have spent the most favorable opportunity, for persons of industrious habits and small means, to acquire a comfortable independence in a few years.

Chicago is now the greatest grain market in the world—and the facility and cheapness with which the products of these lands can be transported to that market, enable them much more readily, at the prices asked, than those more remote at governmentates,—as the additional cost of transportation, is a deduction from the price which must be borne by the producer, in the reduced price he receives for his grain.

The Title is Perfect—and when the final payments are made, Deeds are executed by the Trustees appointed by the State, and in which the title is vested, to the purchaser, which convey to them absolute titles in Fee Simple, free and clear of every incumbrance, lien or mortgage.

THE PRICES ARE FROM $6 TO $20,

Interest Only 2 per cent.

Twenty per cent. will be deducted from the credit price for Cash.

Those who purchase on credit, give notes payable in 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years after date, and are required to improve one-tenth annually for 5 years, so as to have one-half the land under cultivation, at the end of that time.

Competent Surveyors, will accompany those who wish to examine these Lands, free of charge, and aid them in making selections.

The Illinois Central Railroad are as rich and valuable as those which have been disposed of.

SECTIONAL MAPS

Will be sent to any one who will enclose fifty cents in Postage Stamps, and Books or Pamphlets, containing numerous instances of farms purchased and occupied by respectable and well-known farmers, living in the neighborhood of the Railroad lands, throughout the State—also the cost of farming, price of cattle, expense of harvesting, threshing, etc.—or any other information—will be cheerfully given on application, either personally or by letter, in English, French or German, addressed to JOHN B. ROSELL, Agent, Land Commissioner of the Ill., Central R. R. Co.

WATCHES & JEWELRY.

The Subscriber begs leave to inform his customers and the public generally, that he has received a very fine Stock of Goods, in his line, which will be sold cheap. Silver in Watches of the most approved makers; Railway Watches; Gold Pens; Gold Pencils; Gold Vest Chains; Keys and Seals; Lady's Chains; Cameo, Mosaic, Gold-stone, and Filigreen setts; Gold Bracelets; Gold Rings, and a great variety of other articles, too numerous to mention.

The great fertility of these lands, which are a black rich mould, from two to five feet in depth, and yet so easily cultivated, combined with the ease by which every facility is furnished for travel and transportation, to the principal markets North, South, East, and West, in connection with which they can be cultivated, render them the most valuable farming lands in the West. We have spent the most favorable opportunity, for persons of industrious habits and small means, to acquire a comfortable independence in a few years.

Chicago is now the greatest grain market in the world—and the facility and cheapness with which the products of these lands can be transported to that market, enable them much more readily, at the prices asked, than those more remote at governmentates,—as the additional cost of transportation, is a deduction from the price which must be borne by the producer, in the reduced price he receives for his grain.

The Title is Perfect—and when the final payments are made, Deeds are executed by the Trustees appointed by the State, and in which the title is vested, to the purchaser, which convey to them absolute titles in Fee Simple, free and clear of every incumbrance, lien or mortgage.

THE PRICES ARE FROM $6 TO $20;

Interest Only 2 per cent.

Twenty per cent. will be deducted from the credit price for Cash.

Those who purchase on credit, give notes payable in 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years after date, and are required to improve one-tenth annually for 5 years, so as to have one-half the land under cultivation, at the end of that time.

Competent Surveyors, will accompany those who wish to examine these Lands, free of charge, and aid them in making selections.

The Illinois Central Railroad are as rich and valuable as those which have been disposed of.

SECTIONAL MAPS

Will be sent to any one who will enclose fifty cents in Postage Stamps, and Books or Pamphlets, containing numerous instances of farms purchased and occupied by respectable and well-known farmers, living in the neighborhood of the Railroad lands, throughout the State—also the cost of farming, price of cattle, expense of harvesting, threshing, etc.—or any other information—will be cheerfully given on application, either personally or by letter, in English, French or German, addressed to JOHN B. ROSELL, Agent, Land Commissioner of the Ill., Central R. R. Co.

HOBLETS CELEBRATED SARSAPARILLA

OF all the remedies that have been discovered during the present or past generations, I believe that such is her to," none equal this Wonderful Sarsaparilla. Only three years have elapsed since the discoverer (who spent a decade in studying, experimenting and perfecting it) first introduced it to the public, and it is already recognized by the most eminent physicians in all parts of the country to be the most efficacious and effective remedy for certain diseases of which they have knowledge.

Numerous compounds or syrups of this root have heretofore failed to command the sanction of
