THE VALENTINE.

That Jack Wiseman sent.

"Valentines, valentines, nothing but valentines to-day!" solilo quized a youth, as he passed along the street; "the shop windows are full of them, young men's hands are full of them, and even the school-girls show, by their blushes and laughing, that the letters they hold are veritable valentines. Strange I never thought to send any! Now, there's my cousin Kate, she's twenty plenty of others, but I know she will not send one from me; and it isn't too late yet to send one. Let me see; my yesterday's drive left me just two dollars in hand, well, I can get a pretty nice one for that;" and he was about to retrace his steps, when a peculiarly sweet, childish voice arrested his attention; it said, "I do hope we shall get the letter this morning from father!"

"So do I!" said her companion.

"I shall be so glad then, L zzie, that we did not get it yesterday!"

"Why, Nellie, when we need the money so much!"

"Why, I was thinking, if it came to day, it would be like a valentine, a real valentine; they often have presents in them, you know—and it would be so pleasant to say that we had a valentine!"

"And you know the first thing mother is going to buy with the money is to be a pair of shoes for me—then the girls can't laugh at my toes sticking out—and I thought I could tell them that my valentine brought me some new shoes; it would sound so funny!" and the little girl laughed, and her sister laughed, too, and said, "Yes; to think of a valentine having a pair of shoes in it! It would have to be a pretty large one, wouldn't it!" and they laughed again.

Jack looked at the little girls, and thought to himself that they would be very pretty, if they were only nicely dressed; and as for the shoes of the younger one, he did not wonder the school-children laughed at them. Scarcely thinking what he was doing, he followed the children, listening to their remarks.

"How I wish father didn't have to go away!"

"So do I; but you know he could not get as well paid for his work here, and if he gets along as well as he expected to in L——, you know he is going to take us all there in the spring, and then we can live together again, and mother won't have to sew till she makes herself sick."

"Here's the post office; how I do hope we shall get the valentine!"

"Is there a letter for Mrs. ——" asked the eldest child.

The man in waiting turned over some letters, then shook his head, and uttered the unwelcome sentence, "Nothing for her!"

"Don't cry, Lizzi!" said the youngest one, as they left the office. "We didn't get our valentine; but I guess it will come to-morrow."

"I'm not crying for myself; but I am so sorry you can't have your new shoes!"

"I would not care for that, either, if it were not that the Pentecs are coming in to examine us in Arithmetic. I have been studying so hard; but if I have to go up to the board to do a sum, with those old shoes on, I shall feel so ashamed, and all the girls will point at them, and laugh so, that I shan't be able to think of my sum at all!" and her tears flowed faster than her sister's.

"Poor little thing," thought Jack; "you shan't fill for want of a pair of shoes!" and waiting long enough to place his two dollar bill in an envelope, and close it up, he approached the children, as they sauntered slowly on, and handing it to the youngest sister, said pleasantly, "Here is a valentine for you!"

"For me! are you sure it is for me!"

"Yes; take it home to your mother!" and with wonder and delight, the children ran home with the wondrous news that a young gentleman, Nellie's valentine! Could the joy his two dollar bill afford, the little Nellie danced though asked the Miss whose name we have introduced here.

"I can never forget my cousin Kate!" replied the ardent boy, thinking that he had never seen her looking so lovely, as she stood in the shade of the dark crimson curtains, clad in that most becoming new velvet basque. "I never can forget my cousin Kate," he continued; "but I have given only one valentine this year, and that one I know she will approve of!"

"Approve of, when it was not sent to her!"

"I had intended it for you; but listen Kate!" and the boy narrated what he had heard, and what he had done.

"A wise feline, truly!" said the young lady, with a sneer, "to give two dollars to a little street beggar. You'll be a rich man, if you fling your money away in that style! I never give such persons more than a penny, and then only to get rid of them; for mother says it was a downright sin to give them money, and so encourage them in idleness."

"Kate, this was no beggar, but a nice little girl, whose family, I am sure, have been better off; and I should not have dared to give her sixpence, except in the playful way of a valentine."

"How do you know that they had not planned it, and beforehand, hired the little girl to get money from you?" said the little woman of the world.

"Because they were not acting a part—it was plain enough to see that, and I am sure they spoke truthfully, spoke as they felt."

"Pshaw!" said Kate; but she was not quite so cold-hearted as she made believe; for she would have been quite willing that Jack should give the poor child a pair of shoes, only she could not feel pleased that he would rather do that than send her a present. She wanted to be first in his thoughts, that he will; and older and better people than Kate have had the same feelings.

Before many returns of St. Valentine's day, Jack found that his thoughts depend upon his exertions for a support; he was not cast down at this, but went boldly to work, determined to be something, and to accomplish something worth living for. Gradually he began to feel that his cousin Kate could never be to him all that he had once fancied she might become; for though they called each other "cousin," the actual relationship was much more distant than that. He was pained to see how heedless she was permitted to grow up, and sometimes ventured to talk with her about it, but received only taunting replies and cross looks for his pains. When he heard the young lady declare that she "could not, to save her life, mend an article of dress she had torn, and that she always did dirt sewing," her mother only said, 'Well, take it into my room to the seamstress, and tell her to mend it for you." Jack could not help saying to himself, "What kind of a wife would such a girl make!"

Kate, on her return to the parlor, wished to know the subject of his deep cogitations, and when he candidly told her, she only laughed, and said, "I did not know that the words wife and slave were synonymous."

So they grew more and more estranged from each other in manner and habits; Kate insisting her sweetest smiles upon those Jack considered brainless fops, while he sought the friendship of those who would be likely to benefit him. So that alone a while, there was scarcely any sympathy between them.

They both married in time, but I can not now tell you of their married life; whether they were happy or miserable, I leave to your imaginations. But I must tell you how *sur*prised Jack was, one day, when the conscription turned upon valentines, to have his intelligent wife—now fading and called Nellie—say, "I have the renoun yet of what my very first valentine brought me, and I must show them to you, Jack!" and opening a box she held up a child's pair of shoes. "There, do you recognize that!" she asked with a blush and a smile.

"Hardly, as I doubt having ever seen it before," was the answer.

"But you saw what bought it, and the mate to it," she said. Jack had forgotten the circumstance, but she recalled it to him, adding, "we were seeing our darkest days then, bright ones came afterward; but I always took pleasure in looking back, for the sake of remembering that noble boy who gave me my first valentine!" AUNT HATTIE.

THE IMPORTED SPANISH JACK,

MORO CASTLE!

IMPORTED into Kentucky in the Spring of 1853, by the Mason County Jacking Association, and decidedly the finest animal of his kind in America, is now in fine health and condition, and is for the first time, offered to a public season. He has made partial seasons only in the years '53 and '54, and has proven himself to be a sure foal getter; and has raised a breeder from Jennets and mares, never had a superior on this continent. His Jack colts from Jennets of his own blood that were imported with him, are greatly in advance of anything ever before seen by Kentucky breeders, and the introduction of this strain of same cannot fail to make a new era in the breeding of this hitherto much neglected animal.

He will make his present season, which has commenced and will end November 1st, at the stable of H. W. Graves, ten miles from Paris on the road to Flat Rock, and will serve Jennets at Fifty Dollars to insure a living colt. He will be allowed to serve small Jennets under 13½ hands high that are of native or common stock, at prices corresponding to their value as may be agreed upon by special contract. Grass gratis, and grain fed at moderate prices. He will be shown in Paris the April County Court.

Never before has there been such an opportunity of purchasing Pianos either as regards price or variety. Our present stock being fully twice as large as any other in the country, and our Pianos are well known to be of the first makers of the Union.

Our friends in Cincinnati will understand the reason of this extraordinary reduction in prices. Those living at a distance are informed that the extremely stringent state of the money market is the cause of our thus offering first class instruments at these rates. SMITH & NIXON,

The New Bounty Land Bill.

The new Bounty Land Bill, which we published in the last number of the Eagle, will no doubt be the means of transferring from the possession of Government to the hands of private persons, an immense slice of the public domain. The United States certainly rewards its old soldiers more munificently than any other Government in the world, and we do not wonder that people are so eager to fight for so munificent an employer.

We presume that the passage of the Bounty Land Bill, may be regarded as the knell of the Homestead Bill of last session. It will, we suppose, effectually kill off that magnificent measure of demagogueism. Compared with the principles, provisions and objects of that Bill, the present one is excellence itself; and if the United States must get rid of her public lands in a hurry—as seems to be the fact—we do not know that a less exceptionable mode than the present could be devised.

We have always thought and still think, that the plan of administration of the Public Lands, contained in Mr. Clay's Land Bill, was the most just, wise, catholic, and equitable disposition of the public domain which could be made. But that measure appears to have lost its vitality, and we presume there is no hope of its resurrection.

The United States as a government is still young; and, like other young folk, is foolishly prodigal of its wealth and resources. We believe that instead of giving away these Public Lands to every Tom, Dick and Harry, who asks for them, they should be wisely administered in such a way as to constitute a reserved resource for future times; or they should be given to the several States. The United States is still young, and it is to be hoped has yet a long career ahead. Other wars will be waged, and other "old soldiers" will arise to be rewarded, and through the long succession of years which constitute but a brief space in the life of a nation—where are the lands and the treasures to reward them to come from!

Maysville and Lexington Railroad Company.

An adjourned meeting of the Stockholders of this Company took place at the Court House this morning—but there being no quorum present, an adjournment was had until to-morrow (Friday) morning, at 10 o'clock, at the same place. An important letter was received from Capt. DANIEL TYLER, as the agent of the Bondholders, and read to those who were present. Its subject-matter will be discussed at the meeting to-morrow. The citizens should attend.

Fine Regulator.

Our enterprising young townsman, ROBERT F. ADAIR, has just added to the attractions and conveniences of his business, an elegant and excellent Regulator Clock, made to his order by one of the most celebrated makers in London. It is a beautiful and perfect piece of mechanism, one of the best anywhere in the West or East. Mr. A. promises it shall regulate and keep in trim time all the watches and clocks (the City Clock inclu'ded) that choose to rely upon it.

☞In our notice of the Amateur Concert, last week, we spoke in deservedly high terms of Mr. JAMES B. HARRIS, of Germantown.—We should have said, Mr. Joseph B. Harris, for it was he of whom we spoke.

☞THE MAYSLICK IMPORTING COMPANY closed out at public vendue in Mayslick on Tuesday last, the remnant of their late importation of Jacks from Spain, as follows:

Marseilles,	sold to Geo. W. Wells for	$400
Madrid,	" " " same	$399.
Cognac,	" " " A. M. Peed	" $515.

The tightness of the times, the contraction of Bank circulation, and the scarcity of provender, combined to make this stock market less buoyant than formerly. A better state of affairs is anticipated when nature begins to send forth the evidence of another harvest.

The Hog Crop.

The Cincinnati Price Current of Wednesday morning, publishes a statement of the number of hogs packed in Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Tennessee, which shows a decrease in number of 451,888 head, and an additional decrease of pounds of equal to 103,67 head, making a total decrease equal in number to 555,525 head. In the number of hogs shipped East, and in the packing in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Wisconsin, there will doubtless be an increase, but to what extent, we are not able from the returns received, to form an opinion. The trade, however, promises well for holders.

☞We are requested by "MANY VOTERS," to say that LEWIS C. PEARCE will serve if elected as Councilman from the Middle Ward.

MR. H. W. THOMPSON,

Sir—Mr. WADSWORTH having resigned his seat in the Board of Councilmen, it becomes necessary that the voters of the Third Ward should select a representative to fill that vacancy, whose integrity to the interest of our Ward can admit of no invalidation. And believing you to be that person, and eminently calculated to serve, in the present crisis of our City affairs, we respectfully solicit your consent to fill that respectable station—assuring you the cordial support of

MANY VOTERS.

Cattle Dying of Starvation.

The Winchester (Clark county) Chronicle mentions several instances of cattle dying in that county from starvation, viz:

Mr. Marion Chrislan, living on Boone's creek, about five miles from Winchester, has lost fourteen head of cattle, by starvation.

Mr. Johnston Watts, on Four Mile creek lost seven head of fine steers—same cause.

The same gentleman was compelled to sell some dozen more to two of his neighbors, who were better prepared to feed them, at one half the price he paid for them two years ago.

For the Maysville Eagle.

Gov. Bonnifoy on American Ism.

"Against the spirit of Democracy, infinite the jealousy of a free people ought to be constant. Perhaps it is true of the most beautiful form of Republican government, that it is fragile.

"I most devoutly wish that we had not a single foreign manager, no, except the Marquis de Lafayette, who sets us different principles from those which govern the rest."—Washington.

"I hope we may find some means in future, in shielding ourselves from foreign influence, political, commercial, or in whatever form it may be attempted. I wish that here an ocean of fire lowers this and the old world."—Jefferson.

"Foreign influence is a Grecian horse to the Republic—we cannot be too careful to exclude its entrance."—Madison.

"It is time we should become a little more Americanized, and instead of feeding the paupers and laborers of England, feed our own; or else, in a short time, by very partial policy, we shall be paupers ourselves."—Jefferson.

The able and venerable Statesman, whose name heads the foregoing quotations from our early Presidents, having addressed me the subjoined Letter, I take pleasure, by his permission, in spreading it before the reading public.

The subject of Americanism is discussed with singular point and "stone hammer" freedom. It will be found, on perusal, to be a document of great power; and will no doubt be widely read, and judging from the current indications of the public sympathies, not less widely admired and commended.

A Platform is presented by the American Party upon which all may stand, irrespective of sects, politics, pursuits and classes.

Around the same altar every true American may stand in security only, in resistance to that fraternal emblem which adorns the shield and banner of our glorious Commonwealth.

Americans have at last found the rock upon which they cannot split—a rock which will prove to them and their common country a tower of strength; a rock which will stand firm amid the vicissitudes of governmental policy and of national strife; against which may dash the waves of bitter party dissention, of fanaticism, and of threatened disloyalty and revolution. But they will dash in vain; they will beat upon it only to be thrown back with accumulated violence, and lost in their native seas of shame and oblivion. Upon this rock Union-loving Natives will build their temple; that will in all time prove to the generations to come after them their devotion to the great principle, that "Americans shall rule America."

Under the influence of that prophetic voice which warned us to "Place none but Americans on guard," I am for devoting to American politicians and American interests. I am for American in preference to foreign labor, American mechanics, American manufactures, American navigators, American commerce, American agriculture, American breadstuffs, and an American market. J. J. B. HERNDON.

Mayslick, March 7, 1855.

FOREST RETREAT, KY., Feb. 26, 1855.

J. B. HERNDON, Esq.,

MY DEAR SIR: Your very kind and respectful letter of the 14th inst., would have been answered before now, but for the severe indisposition under which I have been laboring for some weeks; and from which at present the prospect of recovery is by no means very cheering. But then you know—

"The wretch condemned with life to part,
Still, still on hope relies;
And every pang that rends his heart
Bids expectation rise."

Whilst the fever is on me in this merry mood, I take pleasure quite briefly and frankly to respond to your several queries—giving my poor opinion for what it is worth, to be published or not as you may think proper. In doing so I shall run the risk of pleasing but few, and possibly of offending many whose good will I should regret to loose. Be that as it may, my duty to my country when in such peril as at present, is paramount to all other duties, with the exception of that higher and holier duty which I feel my inability to perform to my Maker.

You ask me, "Are you as an American citizen prepared to share with aliens the right of governing the nation at the ballot-box as soon as those aliens can make a declaration of intention?" My answer is most emphatically in the negative. We ought not to grant it! They ought not to ask it. Their own future prosperity and happiness, not less than our own, forbids it. To grant it, would be proof positive that we set but a low estimate upon the value and importance of that sovereign power which hitherto has been the pride and glory of American citizens. Under the present constitution of the Republic and the Union, such a step will go far to establish the degeneracy of the American character, and their own unfitness to enjoy the blessings or to exercise the rights so bountifully showered upon them by their illustrious forefathers.

Of what has the foreigner a right to complain? He had fled from the land of oppression and misery—not unfrequently from actual starvation—and taken refuge in the "land of the free and home of the brave," not for the purpose of combining the action of a government founded upon principles, of which he is so utterly ignorant but for the generous and noble purpose of planting his offspring, where they may enjoy a degree of freedom, and acquire some knowledge of the duties of freemen, before they are called upon or permitted to exercise these duties.

To say nothing about that immense emigration of foreigners who are driven from the land of their births for the commission of crimes and misdemeanors; ought not the intelligent and respectable foreigner to be content when he is protected in person, in property and religion by the same laws, rules and regulations that protect the American people? Shall he insist immediately on all the upon his right to seize the rein of a government, the most complicated and difficult to manage and keep in the right track, of any other known in history! I repeat that if he does insist, that fact alone will be proof conclusive of his unfitness to receive favor of his ingratitude.

The native American has fallen by himself or forefathers won by the hardest all the rights exercised by him as one of the sovereigns. Let the foreigner pay and do likewise!

Wo! be to this people, no matter whether natives or foreigners or adopted citizens, if they continue to run after, and receive their insensible and pitiable wisdom from little Thompsons, the Kossuths, and Michels from abroad—as infamous as they are impudent) and fit only to be cheered and run after by filthy idolaters—certainly not by Americans.

Again you ask me, "Are you as an American citizen prepared to share with foreigners every blessing and benefit conferred upon you as a citizen of the Republic) and even to give them a share of the public domain?"

In part this question has been answered in my reply to the first. But why or wherefore, should the American citizen, whose blood and treasure has been so profusely poured out for the acquirement of the public domain, be expected or required to share it out to foreigners of every grade and character beneath the sun. Forbid it, anti demopyopsian—forbid it, common sense, and the operation of "sober second thought" upon the democratic American patriotic mind!

Here I believe I might close my letter without incurring the charge of having failed to answer only by answering interrogatories.

I did intend, after answering your queries, to turn out, (as it takes from 1 one week to do, a business) in my country's service, by furnishing you with such views and opinions, as experience in regard to various other matters connected with the general welfare of our common country, now so heavily taxed, seventy millions per annum—and so deeply cursed by a deplorably corrupt, the people having lent their necks to the yoke of an elective despotism (from the time the present administration commenced under that ignoble sentiment uttered by the tool of tyrannic power—"to the victor belong the spoils," which in its application to the voters of our country, assumes the right, and exercises the power of rewarding and punishing the so called freemen, with their own money, the treasure of the nation, under the control of despotic executive power. Nearly if not all the evils now so stupendous and so infamous, by which the Union is endangered, and the Republic will be brought to a stubborn stand, is the necessary result of the corrupt and accursed doctrine and practice—as it must be confessed, practiced by each of the old parties—the one as much as the other—in office—the other because the system originated with their own great leader, himself so fond of power and revenge, and because they love the spoils.

I had intended to "make good" to show up this doctrine and practice in its true colors. I intended to prove that it was the very foundation of the serious convulsions for which we are last becoming so most distinguished of nations. I had intended to prove that we were indebted to the spoils system first accepted by tyrannic and despotic power, and by the test of a lyrant, for the creation of the "higher law" fanatics or hypocrites or both; at any rate for the treasonable constitution-and-oath-defying putrid element, which has for some years been festering in our noble and patriotic northern section, and threatening disunion. I had intended to give my humble opinion of the causes, by which we as a nation have been conducted to the very brink of ruin; and how the Republic and the Union was to be saved, with its ancient purity of action and of character, if at all. But my extremely delicate health, which I fear is mainly the result of the weight of years, and my intention are long to lay before my old friends of Mason and Kentucky my views in full, provided a kind Providence shall restore my feeble condition, must for the present be my apology for omitting to extend this letter so as to embrace the different points herein indicated. I will barely add, that I am not what they call a Know Nothing, an anti-Know Nothing—a Catholic or an anti-Catholic; and having the facts before me of a total failure on the part of the one or the other of the Whig or of the Democratic parties, so to manage governmental affairs as to ensure the perpetuation of the Republic, or any thing like a safe administration—I will act with good men and true, not with party. See BENTON's late speech exposing the fearful corruption. See the speech of VERANDE of N. C. two years ago, containing similar charges—reflect upon the unavoidable consequences of an atrociously corrupt representation of the nation; upon what must of necessity be the consequence of arming the executive with the treasure of that nation to enable him, with that treasure, to reward or punish; and say if you can that the virtue and intelligence of every American patriot in the land, no matter what party he may heretofore have acted with, cannot not now, and without delay to be put in requisition! For my own part, all that I have to say in regard to sectarian denominations, so far as I am concerned, is

"For forms of faith let graceless zealots fight,
He can't be wrong whose life is in the right."

With great respect, your obedient servant,

THOMAS METCALFE.

For the Maysville Eagle.

MR. ROBERT W. LEE, Marshal of the City of Maysville:

Sir: The Cane which I have the pleasure to present you is of Hickory. 'Twas cut by me in the County of Lewis, upon one of its mountain tops; and tho' young, it had become familiar with the awe of darkness, and the thunder, and the sublimity of the mountain, and the torrent. And tho' now separated from its parent stock and its early associations, it still retains its wonted firmness, having lost in the transfer no jot of the grass region nothing but its greenness; and appropriate to use the language of the great Hungarian—great "and clarity." You are the Marshal of this City. You have been elected by its inhabitants to keep watch and ward over them and theirs—and hence you are called a warder; and tho' no relation of my respected friend, the Rev. Mr. Warder, yet your duties are somewhat akin: he is a sentinel on the walls of Zion, and you along the walls on Water or Front Street; with this stick, and your known vigilance and that of your predecessor, I think I can, amid all fog and darkness, exclaim with hope and confidence, "who's afeard?"

MR. EDITOR: Will you please publish the foregoing speech, made by a well known friend of mine upon the presentation of a Cane to our City Marshal, who was so affected by the allusion to his responsible duties that he could not reply. Yours,

CANE McSHANE.

Sale of Railroad Stock.

The sale of Ohio and Mississippi Railroad stock advertised by Page & Bacon, came off yesterday, at a quarter past twelve o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange. All the stock advertised, (5,100 shares,) was sold, ranging from $20 to $33 ¾ share, the highest being $50. The bidding commenced very cautiously, the first offer being $5, and the lot of one hundred shares running up to $29.50 by small advances, but after an approximate rate was once established, the sale went off with more spirit.

This stock was hypothecated to Page & Bacon by the contractors of the road, and the sale was for the purpose of reimbursing Page and Bacon for their advance to the contractors. The sale realized about $100,000. J. H. Obear Esq., was the auctioneer.

There were also sold at the same time ten shares St. Louis Insurance Co. (old) stock, at $25.50 ¾ share, and fifteen shares at $19 ¾ share.—St. Louis Intelligencer, 27th.

Hemp and Tobacco.

For a day or two past, Hemp operators have been inactive. We quote fair at $95, good $100, prime $105. In store about 2,000 bales. Yesterday, a small break of Tobacco was sold at the State Tobacco Warehouse, a portion of it off the new crop, the first offered. Figures $5.20, $5.40, $5.85.

For the Maysville Eagle.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me through the medium of your columns, to call the attention of the medical profession, to the terrible scourge of epilepsy—the dropsy—apoplexy or madness, who drink, this, pitty quarts of RUM in a day; or if he did, his complaints were of very short continuance. The words of the poet therefore, with a little alteration, apply to my subject, with as much propriety as they do to the treasures of knowledge:

"Drink deep or taste not the distiller's spring.
A little sip is a dangerous thing:
Shallow draughts produce disease and pain;
But drinking deep dispels them both again.

We are told further, that RUM is an improper drink in hard weather, for coolness and water—vinegar and water—milk and water, and small beer, should be given to reapers, instead of it. Well, I suppose for those colicky liquors, never know the pleasures of drinking any thing else!—For my part I pity the unfortunate wretch, that the inhabitants of the United States, will always find good sense enough, to prefer the rosy face of RUM, to the pale and squalid look, which are imparted to the consciousness, by the vile liquors which have been mentioned. Hail! ardent spirits and universal cordial!——Thou art the liquor of life, and the opiate of care—the conqueror of family troubles! The best of courage! The antidote to fever!—The enemy of aristocratic pride—and the life and soul of republican forms of government! in spite of the revilings and declamations of those who perhaps may thy influence be perpetual in the United States! Whether a short or long life await our country, may she never want the blessings of RUM! If she is destined to a long life, may RUM be the milk of her old age,—but if a premature death awaits her, may she!—O! may she expire in an ocean of RUM!!

The Western Virginia papers state that the cattle in that section of the country are actually perishing for want of food. This is also the case with the cattle, in this the heart and granary of Kentucky. Corn and provender are so enormously dear that the farmers in many instances are compelled to allow their hogs and cattle to die. Lexington Observer.

A CARD.

To the friends of Temperance in Northern Kentucky, at whose board I have received such uniform kindness and christian courtesy, while laboring in my humble way in the great and noble cause that now engrosses so much of their attention. I desire, before leaving this hospitable soil, to return my heart-felt thanks. My most fervent wish for Kentucky is, that a strong Prohibitory Law may, at an early day, be engrafted upon her Statute Books, and the glorious cause of Temperance be triumphant in all her borders.

R. ANNA DONOVAN.

Maysville, March 7th, 1855.

When death is at the door, the remedy which would have saved life, if administered in time, comes too late. Do not trifle with disease. Rely upon it, that when the stomach will not digest food—when laziness and languor prostrate the system—when the sleep is disturbed, the appetite feeble, the mind lethargic, the nerves unnaturally sensitive, and the head confused—rely upon it, that when these symptoms occur, the powers of vitality are fast failing, and death, unless the mischief is promptly checked, life will be forfeited, as will as rendered miserable. Now we know from a mass of testimony, greater than was ever before accumulated in favor of one remedy, that Hoofland's German Bitters, prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson, Philadelphia, will prevent all this state, and, in the end, entirely remove all of these disorders as surely as a mathematical process will solve a problem. Who, then, will endure the agony, and the risk of life, with health and safety within reach? See advertisement.
