NEVER ALONE.

I'm never quite alone,
Around and after me I find
Of the Eternal mind
Some presence thrown.

Though not in all my heart,
Yet ever near is He;
No loneliness I see;
We never walk apart.

Though severed far from men
In mountain solitude,
Or lost in crowds of good—
Lo's ever with me then.

The great God-heart is nigh
To relieve my way weak;
He fills the way with talk,
As if from heaven high.

WHAT THE EXPRESS BROUGHT.

With a roar and a rattle, the 6 o'clock express train rushed across the bridge leading from the narrow river road on the Derwent farm near Concord, and Alice Lane, the farmer's pretty, dark-eyed daughter, stood on the vine-clad porch, looking after it with an unconscious sigh.

"So many come by you, so many go by you, and into their great, wide, beautiful world," she thought, as she gazed over the fertile valley farm and out through the break in the circling blue mountains, from one side a trail of white smoke came floating back. "I wonder if you will ever bring me anything, or take me away or at most I live my life out to the end, shut in by these quiet hills."

"Supper ready, mother!" called out the hearty-looking farmer, halting in the glow of the bright firelight on the open hearth, as he came in from feeding the horses. "Coming! by his son Thomas, who was the living, breathing image of his sire."

"To be sure it is," repeated his beaming little wife, who had just such eyes and hair as many Alice, and just the same sweet smile. "Isn't it always ready, father, when the train goes by? Come Alice."

"Alice is out there looking for her fortune, mother," said Tom. "It is coming on that train. I know all about it."

Little did any of them think how many a true word is spoken in jest, or that the fortune which the evening express was to bring the daughter of the house was even then nearing their hospitable door.

"I've worked like a beaver all day long, Martha, and Tom has kept pace with me, and when I come home to my home, that we were too tired to eat. But this is comfort! It would be hard to see anything much pleasanter than this nice, full kitchen, and just as hard to find any of their French cooks that can beat you and Alice, my dear," said Elihu Derwent, glancing thankfully at the blazing fire, the table laid so neatly, inviting most all the good things, cakes and mantle syrup, wheaten bread and golden butter, and a large platter of cold corned beef and vegetables, that was placed before two hungry men.

"Mid, I present you all out the tea—strong, hot and fragrant.

"Supper Seaton, up in the big house yonder, don't often get such tea as this, with all his staff of servants," said Tom, looking across the valley to the brick-and-freestone palace of the one millionaire of the village.

"Poor man!" sighed Mrs. Derwent. "I do pity him! His wife and daughter dead, and his only son so wild and willful and a wanderer all over the world. Only last week he told me, with tears in his eyes, that he has heard of his boy, and that he had been seen lately in Leadville, intoxicated and poorly dressed, in a gambling house. Yet when he wrote there to him—and wrote kindly—he had disappeared. If I had a son Tom, Elihu, I should just break my heart. Tom, if you ever go off, promise me that you never will do as Philip Seaton, you will give your mother her deathbow."

"Thank God, I don't our Tom! I am sorry, too, for the man and for the boy. Mr. Seaton once told me he turned him out of the house, in New York, in a fit of anger, and that the boy swore he would never enter the doors again. Had temper on both sides, you see; and so—why, Martha, what on earth is that?"

The former Derwent might well ask the question, and rush from the tea table to the door, followed by his wondering wife and children.

A procession of four of his neighbor's was coming up from his garden gate. At the gate stood a horse and light express wagon, and from the wagon the four men lifted an inanimate body, and were bearing it toward the house.

"The 6 o'clock express has run off the track a mile or two up the valley," said Thomas, as he and his two sons and his brother-in-law reached the porch with their senseless burden. "Ever so many people hurt, but able to go on as soon as they got righted. But this poor fellow is so nearly dead that we thought we had better bring him along, for it was the nearest house, and send for the doctor. We found the man in the wagon, young and handsome, but dressed like a laborer, and that the doctor said 'it was a near chance whether he lived or died.'"

Two weeks passed on. The doctor came and went each day, but neighbors far and near volunteered their services all night. Squire Seaton, who lived his usual secluded life in his great mansion, hunting his books, and knew nothing of the stranger who lay at death's door.

"Poor boy! Alice, I wish you would go in and sit by him awhile," said Mrs. Derwent, on the first morning she felt third week of his illness. "He is asleep now. He wakes you can tell me. If we only knew his people, I would send for them. I fear he will not last long."

Alice crept in and found, for place on the nurse's chair. Tears of pity dimmed her eyes as she looked at the wasted figure in the bed—the pale, thin face, the fine, fair features, the hollow temples under the waving brown hair.

"I wish his mother or father could come!" she added, aloud.

The heavy lids opened. Two deep blue eyes looked at her imploringly.

"My father!" whispered the sick man. "Bring him—let him—I was coming—Seaton—"

The faint voice died away—the eyes again were closed.

Alice stood an instant like one struck dumb. She had unconsciously fled in sensibilance before; but now she could leave the side of the old Squire's counteenance in that pale, pinched face.

"Sleepy still? That is a good sign," said her mother, coming in, ready to resume her place for the night.

Alice hesitated a moment. Never before had she acted by or for herself in any matter of moment.

But the sound of voices might arouse the slumberer. Her father and Tom had gone on a household errand to the village; there was no one else to consult.

Finally, she threw on her waterproof, drew its hood over her head, and sped across the valley to the Seaton mansion.

Even the well trained servant were an astonished face as he ushered this mysterious visitor into his master's study.

"My son—my boy—my Philip at your father's house? And dying, you fear? Asking for me? Coming to me? Wait child! I'll go with you, of course—I'll go for my poor boy! But—the room is turning round—I think I must be going blind!"

Alice sprang to his side. The grey head fell on her shoulder. Tenderly she smoothed the silvery hair away from the high forehead, and faltered the pale lips with the cold water and fragrant essences which the frightened servants brought.

The old man revived, to find her ministering to him thus. And it was almost like father and daughter that they took their way across the valley together, leaning on her arm, and listening greedily to all that she could tell of the life of his long-absent, long-mourned son.

"It is my father's voice! I hear his step! I shall get well if he will only forgive me!" said the invalid, greatly to Mrs. Derwent's amazement, when a house-door softly opened to a stranger's touch.

"Father, I am sorry—I forgive me," he said, in a firmer voice, as Alice encircled his neck with her arms.

And then Squire Seaton came, feeling but just into the room, and held his son to his heart, sobbing aloud with gratitude and joy, while Alice drew her wondering mother into the kitchen and told her of her expedition to the house of the lonely, millionaire.

Joy se'dom kills; and there is a reviving power in love and happiness combined, far beyond the skill of earthly physicians, or the virtue of all earthly medicines.

So it happened that, as the spring blossoms opened into summer, Philip Seaton, strong and well once more, stood beside bonny Alice in the porch one evening to see the 6 o'clock express flash by.

"At Leadville, when I was utterly reckless, and utterly penniless, too, a letter from my father reached me," he said, in a low tone. "It was so kind, so sad, that it seemed to turn me from my wild course on the moment. Just as I was—in the rough garments of a miner—I set off to return to my father, like the prodigal son. And God led me here."

There was a long silence; the sun sank out of sight behind the circling mountains; the first chill of evening was in the air.

"I may—may I swore that I would never enter the door of my father's home! Here may I enter, purified, repentant, forgiven, if only the good angel of my new life will go with me. Will, will Alice?"

He took her hand.

"As I present pledged out the tea—strong, hot and fragrant.

"Squire Seaton, up in the big house yonder, don't often get such tea as this, with all his staff of servants," said Tom, looking across the valley to the brick-and-freestone palace of the one millionaire of the village.

"Poor man!" sighed Mrs. Derwent. "I do pity him! His wife and daughter dead, and his only son so wild and willful and a wanderer all over the world. THE MASSACRE.

Death of Will. Serey, another Victim.

MORE TESTIMONY.

No Provocation or Excuse for Firing on the People.

THE LAW ON THE SUBJECT

Verdicts of the Coroner's Juries.

The Coroner's Jury met last Monday, pursuant to adjournment. The first witness recalled was

J. J. KOUNS, SHERIFF:

Knowing nothing about the military matter I asked the whole question of Major Allen to manage himself. I told him I left it all with him. Major Allen came to me in regard to it, and I told him I was nothing about military affairs. I told him I left it to him to manage. I took it needful that I was in conversation with him when he came opposite me without leave. I never heard shooting mentioned. I told Major Allen I left it to him.

Question by Capt. Russell, one of the jurors: Major Allen was in conversation with me at the ferry-boat left the landing the Sheriff of Boyd county instructed me to use my own judgment about firing, and to commence whenever I thought it necessary. I told Major Allen whether that statement issue or not true.

Answer.—As to the firing I don't recollect anything was said about it. I don't recollect I think we were together. I left everything to him, and he managed it as he thought best. I did not consider that my orders gave me the control of the men. I gave Major Allen full control of the whole thing. I was on the boiler-deck when the steamer was fired on from the Ohio side. I was there all the time and stayed their until the firing was ended.

RICHARD ADAMS:

A number, perhaps twenty-five or thirty went on the ferry-boat and some two or three came back off the boat before she pushed out. The ferry-boat pushed out, but she did not go very far. The steamer was there. I saw no signal from the ferry-boat. I was on a elevated place where I could see plain and was not excited. The steamer had almost passed the ferry-boat which was on a place with the bow down the river. The boats were 16 to 20 yards apart. I heard two or three reports of musket, and then a volley from the steamer, which drove everything from the line of fire. I was there all the time. I while the smoke was so thick that I could not see the ferry-boat. I saw the men fired at by the military was on the people standing near where Col. Report was killed. I got down on my knees behind the stove and I raised up another volley was fired. I then heard some one say there was a man shot. I saw Mrs. Serey after she was wounded. I did not see Col. Report until after the second volley was fired. Half the balls seemed to strike the bow of the ferry-boat.

CAPT. A. C. DAVIS:

I saw from eighteen to thirty go down to the ferry. They appeared to be very active in getting the ferry-boat out, and when she got about thirty yards from the shore I heard a volley fired pretty down stream. I went down to the little boat house standing on the bank of the river below the hotel. My impression is the Granite State kept as near the Ohio shore as possible. The ferry-boat did not get fairly out before the steamer passed, going down stream and seemed to be out of control of her. I heard four or five shots from the ferry-boat, or from some point above me, and then a volley was fired from the steamer into the ferry-boat. I saw five men lying on the deck of the ferry-boat. Some distance from the steam pipe of the ferry-boat and ahahead her. At no time was the ferry-boat nearer the shore than 20 or 25 yards. I thought the steamer kept firing until she got almost out of sight. I believe the boat did not get off the ferry-boat had the effect to make them run to the bow and to the front part of the boat. They did not shoot from the ferry-boat after the first volley was fired from the steamer. I was there all the time. I saw no boat put off from the ferry-boat, but they shot twenty or thirty times. I heard distinctly the same one call, "Let's go to the ferry-boat." There was a good deal of shooting at the time when the crowd from the train stopped, and the time men went on the ferry-boat. The first volley was fired when the train stopped at the best house. I was not in range of the ferry-boat. I was in the house. The shots pointed at the ferry-boat at that time would about hit the hotel. After the steamer had got below the ferry-boat some distance I saw the balls strike in the water; they were scattering pretty much. I lived in Greenup county; was a Captain in the Union army; was in several hard battles; I never heard balls fly faster than the ones from the steamer. The Granite State was firing the firing came from. The Granite State coming down whistled as it to land. The firing came from the steamer. I was on the ground, though the standing rain sought to hide, with the rain, the misty mountains tops. The Big Sandy Valley is full of charms to those who love the beauties of nature. The party arrived at the Peach Orchard tunnel about noon, in a great deal of work has been done in this vicinity recently in the way of reducing grades, putting in ballings, pouling tunnels and in different directions, etc. This tunnel is 2,700 feet long. Beyond it is one of the one mines just opened, crossed by a six foot vein of remarkably fine, hard coal. Mine waiting the completion of the tunnel a large dump in course of erection. This coal has been piled up in the open air. The weather does not seem to affect it, as it stands in large, shining hard blocks just as it came from the mine. It looks like jet in size and purities. The opening of this section of country to railroad facilities will undoubtedly add all our river territory with a quality of coal as good as Pittsburg and cheaper, thus giving the poor people of coal fuelness in future. After inspecting the mines the party were soon in a beautiful and elegant repast, prepared by J. W. Damron, of Catlettsburg. The party were accompanied by Mr. Seaman, President of the road, and Mr. John Carlisle, of Cincinnati; Mr. R. F. Thomas, civil engineer, C. E. Bickerdyke, Superintendent, and Geo. L. Richardson, Superintendent. On their return to the train they were greeted by unanimous resolution, acknowledged the hospitality of the officials of the road. The train arrived at Ashland too late to connect with the Scioto Valley, whereupon Capt. Frank Cole offered the use of his hack to carry Lucy Cole, and brought the appreciative party back to their homes in Ashland.

We last week characterized an editorial in the Cincinnati Gazette as "villainous." To show our readers that we called it by the right name we quote the Gazette:

Better information puts a different face on the affair of the military guard at Catlettsburg and the lynchers at Ashland, Ky., on Wednesday. It was no accidental volleying of military guard had to deal with a truculent mob of rioters, made bold by their superior numbers, and unprovoked by any provocation to command, and it had a difficult duty to perform. It was a duty to be done, and the purpose to lynch the two alleged murderers justified them in killing the guard but a military guard of the law is not required to assume to be judge.

A mob which resolves to kill the officers of the law in order to execute a couple of alleged murderers, is itself guilty of the crime of murderers. This is not the pursuit of justice; it is its perfidious reversal.

The military guard kept back the arrived Ashland rioters by continuing to discipline, and by keeping a line between the rioters and the withdrew to the boat. This saith the return of the mob to the boat, which it tries to refuse while the boat was coming.

It gave time for the rioters itself to a more ferocious recklessness, and this appears to have been its purpose. It is now probable that the prisoners could have been taken through Ashland by the railroad. The attempt to land at the Ashland wharf, followed by the terryboat filled with riders, shows that they had resolved to overcome the guard by whatever means were necessary. They could not expect to do it without killing at least some of the guard, and therefore they had determined to kill.

They from the boat guard, and on the plot and captain of the land. Soldiers acting as guardians of the law are under no obligations to hold still to be fired at. Low breakers who fire on officers of the law know the consequences. If innocent persons are hit in the mêlée, the rioters are guilty of it. But persons who assemble where they know a mob is going to have a collision with officers of the law are not innocent bystanders.

Gov. Blackburn stated yesterday that the militia was sent to the disposition of Judge Brown. The event proves the need.

There was nothing in the case that required chase men to engage the law's own lives, nor to order the lives of the officers of the law, in order to execute the alleg murderers. If they examine their motive they will find that it was not so much desire for justice as a spirit of lawlessness. The affair is deplorable, but it appears that those who defied the law are alone to blame.

THE MASSACRE.

Edward Layden, William Flint and John Moriarity. ●

Father L. G. Clermont and Father Goesslein conducted the impressive burial services of the church and administered its last solemn consolatory rites over the beloved dead, so sorrowfully and unsparing.

Some prayers having been read by Father Clermont, he said that he hardly felt able to address the meeting; his heart had been so full for not few days of late, and amidst the scenes that he could be barely able to govern his feelings, yet he felt bound, on the present occasion, to say a few words. Then he proceeded in those words:

It is a sad duty, dear brethren, that we have to perform to-day towards this little friendless stranger, his poor child. There lies his mangled body, cold in the embracements of a most untimely death. He is another victim to the unprovoked, unjustifiable, unprotected against us. The blow struck at us by such a shameful deed, has caused grief, sorrow and mourning seem to have full sway in our midst, and we can only, in sorrow, in our midst, and who can recount the pange of agony suffered by some river from the shore. Sad, indeed, is the heart of our people in these days of deep affliction of bereavement.

In recovering from the shock of the terrible calamity, we should, first of all, be resignedly and so undeservedly, we asked ourselves, we asked one another, how did this happen? How did such a tragedy come to pass? In this occasion, before God's altar, we should remember that it is a day of sad affair is contained in those words: It is God's visitation. It is God's call to all of the Lord, and remembering our sins, let us, as true Christians, submit ourselves with love and reverence to the will of God, "who is the Lord chastineth He loveth;" then, in consequence, we should pray for Heaven's help and blessings by patience and resignation.

But the blow was so hard, so unexpected, so ruthless that it struck terror to our souls, and, in the first moment, we turned through each one's breast. The shooting of these Winchesters and Springfields was so great, on that a wall of agony went up in our fair city; the moans of the dying and wounded were so sad, so heart-rending, and were them took place? Scene of desolation and sorrow, such as we never before witnessed such that, even to-day, it can hardly be realized. Some of the poor people fell under the dreaded rifles was yet hanging before our eyes. Oh, God! Oh, God! Oh, God!

W. C. Moulton, Esq., of Goshen, honored our office with a call on Tuesday. We regret to learn that his brother, Capt. Merritt, who went to California for his health, has nearly recovered.

Mr. Kenney's butter is very much vaulted with business. He has to keep up a head and tasteful office at the Ashland Furnace, where he is prepared to see any of his friends. They say it is a pretty office.

Rev. C. F. Crooks, of Gwynnsville, W. Va., spoke in a pleasant call last week. He has family residing in Colorado, where he has been spending part of his summer.

Mr and Mrs. B. C. Chaffee have returned from their visit to Richmond, Va. They report good times in Virginia, very much amused at the nonsense of Ashland citizens in their old home—Southern protectors.

There are several Tramps among the railroad, during night, in which Thomas Hoal, stable boss at Furnace, was hurt last Saturday. Rows in spite of argument.

Mr. Geo. Ellis of Bob's Fork, Ky., George and Wm. Grizzle, cousins, four cheeses of more than a ball that filled a wagon bed that held 20 bushels, the cheeses averaged 18 hills square, and weighed 18 pounds apiece. Who can beat them? Cheeses measured thirteen inches in length.

Robert Fraley was badly burned last week at the Portsmouth Rolling Mill by a ladle of iron falling from a buggy into a puddle of water. He was carried home, and turned into about the head, breast and arm, but he soon had a good start. He is brother of Mr. J. J. Fraley, of this city.

Gallipolis Journal: Dr. Stephen Thompson was of Ashland during the late measures of the tornadoes. He stood on the river bank while the rain of shot struck down many women and children. He characterizes the shooting at the bank by the soldiers as a cowardly affair. He describes the action of the lady about 36 years of age, who emptied down beside a single railroad tie and when the firing ceased struck a bee line for her home.

Catlettsburg.

The following deeds transferring real estate have been left with Clerk Sherritt for record. Joseph Emerick to Joseph S. M. Mitchell, half of lot on the Ashland and Catlettsburg turnpike; John Powers to Joseph L. Fannin, 20½ acres land on Brock's Fork of Beef Creek—consideration, $600; L. L. Dorifield and wife to Emma Carter, undivide interest in lands belonging to the estate of John Barnett—consideration, $100; G. R. Burgess to Mary T. Burgess, lot No. 33 in Catlettsburg—consideration, $1,500.

Marriage licenses were issued to the following named parties: John A. Hughes and Clara Belle Bradshaw; Henry Royal and Minos Hoodson; Henry Mayhew and Emma Ewings; John G. Davidson and Jennie Stuart.

Dr. Carnahan has his new frame house up and the roof on.

The temperance meeting last Friday night was well attended. Mrs. I. G. Zeigler delivered a very able address, which was received with satisfaction by her audience.

The Mite Society will meet to-morrow evening (Friday) at the residence of Mrs. A. J. Moore.

Rev. I. G. Zigler united in matrimony on Thursday last, at the residence of the bride, Mr. John G. Davidson and Miss Jennie Stuart, the ceremonies were held in all the churches last Sunday, by the respective ministers.

Charley Carpenter, of Mt. Sterling, was doing our city Sunday.

Jas. O'Brien, of Louisa, was in town last week.

Some of the young men of our town have organized a "Ping Pat" club. A fine of 25 cents is imposed each member who fails to wear his "ping" on Sunday. The object of this amendment is simply to induce each one to come out on sunday, so that when one wears his "ping" the satisfaction of knowing it, is not alone to be an object of talk.

John H. Clay, of Pikeville, a drummer for a Baltimore house, has been sick at this place for some days, but is rapidly recovering.

Dan. Davis, of Paintsville, was here Saturday, en route to Cincinnati.

Mrs. Hadley and son and her mother, Mrs. Rogers, of Paintsville, passed through our town Friday for St. Louis, on a visit. The judge accompanied them as far as Cincinnati.

If you want to rent a residence in Catlettsburg you can get one by applying to Jas. Borders. Five rooms, a cellar and cistern—apply at once.

At the St. James Hotel are registered: Joe Brock, Jas. Brock, H. W. Atkeson, Edgar Hager, S. P. Hager, Ashland; C. H. Borders and wife, Wm. Merry, George's Creek; Hiram Conley, Jackson; Jas. Wood, of Ashland, president of the Presbyterian Church here last Sunday, it being communion sabbath.

We are sorry to have to chronicle the death of W. W. Ely, the proprietor of the "Florentine." He is supposed to have ended his own life in a fit of despondency. A few months ago he was married, and that to one engaged died, and since then he has been most of the time seemingly melancholy, refusing to go into society, and avoiding the company of the young people. Brooding over his misfortune he thought have temporarily unsettled his reason, and while laboring under an aberration of mind he committed suicide. He was a moral and religious young man, and had many friends who offer their sympathy, and friends we tender our sympathy.

Miss Julia Littlejohn, of Grayson, has been guest of Mrs. E. J. Golden, but has now returned home.

Miss Josie Tilton, of Normal, is visiting Miss Stella Prichard.

Our reporter being informed last week that Jas Borders was in Cincinnati on business, hastily formed the conclusion that he went there to buy goods. This was a mistake. The firm of Mines, Borders & Co. buy their goods in the East, mostly direct from the manufacturers, and as a general thing sell them to country merchants cheaper than they can buy them in Cincinnati.

Dr. Morton and bride returned on Friday from their wedding tour. They have now gone to their home at Hinton, W. Va.

The Daisy Literary Club met at Miss Nettie Thomas's last Monday.

Mr. A. F. Maupin and lady, from Hinton, are visiting the families of Mr. Wm. Clark and Mr. Hugh Wellman.

Registered at the Crow House are—L. H. Atkins, Jas. A. Abbott, Louisa; Joseph Pyemaule, Logan county; W. Vaj. A. D. Morrison, Proctorville, Ohio; D. White, Ashland; J. B. Atkins, Yorkville; W. O. White, J. Bennett, Walbridge.

Dr. Tom. Prichard, who is attending the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati, spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

G. F. Gallup has the contract for building a switch, half a mile in length, for Mr. Williams, to run to his saw-mill on the river bank, below Smith & Mitchell's.

Mr. James Sartram is very ill.

Mr. Brown last week decided that the Town Trustees had no right to grant licenses for the sale of liquor in Catlettsburg, as the old State law in regard to Boyd county has never been repealed. Consequently the saloons have closed up.

Chris. Fisher and wife have a new boy born last Thursday. Chris. came near forgetting to give the item to the reporter, as he says such occurrences are so frequent that they make but little impression on his mind.

Capt. Jas. H. Hogan, Capt. W. Swinley, A. H. Clawson and Dave Kouner left on Monday for White Sulphur Springs, from which place they will make an expedition into the mountains after game. They will hunt there some two weeks.

Beware of Them.

A good article that has achieved success, and attained a world wide reputation, by its true merits and wonderful results, is always imitated. Such is the case with Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. Already unprincipled parties are endeavoring to delude an unsuspecting public, by offering imitations of this most fortunate discovery. Do not be deceived, but insist on having the true remedy, and take no other. Trial bottles free at W. Meinhart & Co.'s Drug Store. Large size, $1.00.

Married—In Ashland, on Monday evening, 13th inst., at the house of the officiating minister, Rev. Charles Harris, Alexander Goslin to Miss Rebecca Lesse, all of Catlettsburg, Ashlandians, Tom Wellman and Miss Annie Fiross.

RUSSELL.

Our streets and alleys are somewhat muddy, but business is as lively as usual.

F. S. Limpson is closing out his charcoal contract, and is preparing to furnish his neighbors with stone coal. He has also taken stock in the Kanawha lumber yard.

Mr. Prater is also doing a good business in the grocery line.

Mr. Hurst is turning out work at a lively rate at his blacksmith shop.

Mr. Bramner and wife, a boarding girl, Dr. Bramner was the physician in attendance.

Mr. H. B. McKnight, of this place, has gone on a business trip to Cincinnati.

Mr. George Clark, of East York, began the fall session of our school a short time ago, and has given general satisfaction as yet.

John Simpson, who drives a four-mule team for Limpson, charcoal for the furnace, will soon get through and start to school, where he will reap the reward of his summer's labor.

F. U. Simpson, jr., the boss roller, will also soon have a resting spell from a hard summer's toil.

Mr. James Rayburn is weighing pig iron on place, ready to build house when lumber is needed. While our village is in a prosperous condition, increase of our improvements will be need which would require more capital than we have here. This is one of the best places for cotton factories in Sandy Valley for a good flourring mill; then, to a large scope of country on both sides of the river to patronize a mill; the custom work would run a mill of ordinary capacity the year round. The Chattaroi Railroad Co. will have a large amount of stack and nut coal, which could be bought delivered here for less, and very cheap for fuel. The parties owning the land here would make very easy terms with any one proposing to erect a mill; it is something badly needed, and would fully compensate the undertaker of the new enterprise.

Rockville would also be a good situation for a graded school or College; it is in a healthy location, within two and a half miles of the celebrated Bear Creek Sulphur Springs, and is surrounded by beautiful mountain and forest scenery, and is easily reached either by river or rail. Being a new place, it would be free from many of the vices that exist in large towns and that are calculated to decay the student away from his duty. Past experience leaves but belated schools are most successful. The centers of land here would not only donate to such an institution the site for building, but would take stock in the arrangement; very appropriate donations for a building by some six or seven hundred yards west of the railroad station.

In addition, this would be a good point for a wagon, hub and spoke factory; vast amounts of oak, hickory, and considerable locust timber could be obtained within a short distance to supply such a manufactory with the necessary material; there might be added to the same manufactory a planing mill. On our side there should be quite a forest of good timber which will be cut, eventually, into lumber and delivered at this point. All the lumber necessary to run a mill for considerable time could be bought at the place at reasonable prices.

James Caywood has been sentenced to eleven years in the penitentiary from Wolfe county, where he has been taken on a change of venue, for administering cantharides to a young lady in Carter county, and then accomplishing his heinous purpose.

Four hundred cattle were disposed of at a sale in Warren county last week at prices sixty hundred lbs. on average, at Ky. years ings at $39 per head; two-year-olds at $46; long yearlings at $30, and calves at $18.

Diamond Dyes will color any thing any color, and never fail. The easiest and best way to economize. 10 cents, at all druggists.

WOMAN.

Woman is the sad problem that man can't solve and won't give up. She is a mystery; she is a conundrum.

"When she will, she will
You may depend on it;
When she won't, she won't
And that's the end of it."

Why she will suffer month after month with a pain in her back when SHIVER'S VINEGAR OF MAY FLOWER will give her speedy and permanent relief, is a question that perplexes the mind of man—but

"If she will, she will."

Location of Rockville.

The village of Rockville is situated on the Chattaroi railroad, fifteen miles from the town of Catlettsburg, the county seat of Boyd county, and twelve miles from Louisa, the county seat of Lawrence county. The population at present is not large, but is increasing yearly. We have two stores doing a good business. The firm of Hatten, Warren & Co., established about two years since, carry a large stock of all kinds of merchandise, and trade largely in tan-bark, hoop-poles, staves, sawed lumber, live stock, and in fact, everything produced in the surrounding country. Their store stands close to the railroad, within about thirty feet of a neat little station house erected by the senior member of the firm, and thrown open for the use of the railroad; this building is also used for telegraph and express offices.

The other store belongs to Moses, Kenner & Son, keep a good stock and do a profitable business.

We have two hotels where the weary traveler can find lodging, besides a number of boarding houses.

We have a large and well-arranged blacksmith and wagon shop, where all kinds of work, such as the general public needs, is done, and another blacksmith shop, lately erected by a party, who will make a specialty of farm work and wheeling machinery.

There are three carpenters living in the place, ready to build houses when one is needed. While our village is in a prosperous condition, increase of our improvements will be need which would require more capital than we have here. This is one of the best places for cotton factories in Sandy Valley for a good flourring mill; then, to a large scope of country on both sides of the river to patronize a mill; the custom work would run a mill of ordinary capacity the year round. The centers of land here would not only donate to such an institution the site for building, but would take stock in the arrangement; very appropriate donations for a building by some six or seven hundred yards west of the railroad station.

In addition, this would be a good point for a wagon, hub and spoke factory; vast amounts of oak, hickory, and considerable locust timber could be obtained within a short distance to supply such a manufactory with the necessary material; there might be added to the same manufactory a planing mill. On our side there should be quite a forest of good timber which will be cut, eventually, into lumber and delivered at this point. All the lumber necessary to run a mill for considerable time could be bought at the place at reasonable prices.

Laws Relating to Newspaper Subscriptions and Arrears.

We give the following law as it stands relating to Newspapers and Subscribers.

Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.

If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bills and ordered them discontinued.

If subscribers move to other places, without informing the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has ordered it or not, is held in law to be a subscriber.

If subscribers pay in advance, they are bound to give notice to the publisher at the end of their time, if they do not wish to continue taking it; otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it on, and the subscribers will be responsible until; express notice, with payment of all arrears, is sent to the publisher.

BALL'S

HEALTH PRESERVING

CORSET.

BALL'S HEALTH PRESERVING CORSET.

By a novel arrangement of these coiled wire springs, which yield readily to every movement of the wearer, the most PERFECT FITTING and comfortable corsetet ever made is secured.

It Approved by Best Physicians.

Give it a trial and you will never be without it. For sale by Geiger, Powell & Ferguson.

Two-thirds of the weaknesses and ills of females are directly attributable to the enfeebling relaxation of the bowels. This can be best remedied by enforced exercise, thus brought by the introduction of Elastic Sections composed of a series of fine coiled wire springs. These springs are warranted to retain their perfect elasticity till the corset is worn out; and, unlike rubber, will not heat the parts they encircle.

The Corset yields readily to every position, and is equally comfortable in any position assumed by the wearer.

It is the ONLY Corset pronounced by the Medical Profession "NOT INJURIOUS TO THE WEARER."

To secure the best results with this Corset it should not be laced tighter than necessary to produce a snug fit, and should not be expected to exceed one and one-half inches in the back.

The Bad and Worthless

are never imitated or counterfeited. This is especially true of a family medicine, and it is positive proof that the remedy imitated is of the highest value. As soon as it had been tested and proved by the whole world Hop Bitters was the purest, best and most valuable family medicine ever made, dozens of imitations sprung up and began to steal the editors in which the press and people of the country had united the grand honors due to, and in every way trying to induce suffering invalids to try what they imagined, a worthless mixture, or something that would cost them more money in the end. But the good name attained by this unequaled medicine, has caused many to imitate
