EXTRACT FROM THE

SPEECH OF MR. WATTERSON,

OF TENNESSEE.

In the House of Representatives, April 2, 1840—In reply to Mr. Bayly, on his bill to secure the freedom of elections, and to provide more effectually for the faithful administration of Executive patronage.

Mr Watterson said:

I hold in my hand, Mr. Speaker, a pamphlet containing the proceedings of the late Harrisburg Convention, together with the names of the delegates from the several States, who nominated General Harrison as candidate for the Presidency. In looking over this pamphlet, the inquiry suggested itself to my mind, who were these delegates? What are their professions? Were they delegates "fresh from the people," or were they the representatives of monopoly corporations, of mere town politicians and street brawlers? Although I knew the task would be so arduous one, and the performance of it might call down upon my head the vengeance of the Opposition, yet I set about it, and have collected a mass of information on all these points, which I will take the opportunity of laying before the House and the country.—I would have state that I have derived my information, not from one, nor two, but at least fifty members of Congress from every portion of the Union, and have full confidence myself that it is strictly correct, so far as it goes. If, however, I should make any statement which is not substantially true, I regard it as a duty, when in the convention, I was to be corrected as I proceed. I would do no man intentional injustice, neither will I deal in abuse, will simply give such facts as I have been able to obtain, and in doing, which it will be clearly shown, whether General Harrison is the "people's candidate" or not—whether he is the candidate of those who live in "log cabins" and drink "hard cider." I will also note those who are for John Q. Adams for the Presidency, and wish to show the gentleman from Massachusetts how many old friends he had in the Harrisburg convention, and at the same time to let my colleague see with whom he and the Whigs of Tennessee are co-operating. It may be that my colleague has changed his opinions of his present political associates since 1832, when he charged Mr. Adams and Mr. Clay, in a letter to his constituents, with coming into power under "circumstances affording all the evidence of a coalition formed upon the basis of mutual benefits to be received and conferred," when it is alleged that doctrines were held by the Administration, "subversive of the first principles of free Government." At any rate he seems to be in strange company. But to the conventions:

PRESIDENT.

James Barbour of Virginia, lawyer, was Mr. Adams's Secretary at War; also Minister to England under the same Administration.

Mr Lincoln rose and called the gentleman to order. He was not in the habit of interrupting the course of the discussions going on, but the course of debate of the gentleman from Tennessee was such, that he felt it his duty to endeavor to put a stop to it. The gentleman was giving biographical sketches, and commenting on the political conduct of individuals over the whole Union. Such a course of debate was entirely out of order; and he called upon the Speaker now to decide whether the rules of the House were to be enforced or not.

Mr Watterson said that his colleague [Mr. Bell] had yesterday entertained the House with a discussion on the influences exercised by office holders in the political affairs of the country, and he thought it but right, as an offset to that course of argument, to show the influence attempted and exercised by those seeking office.—He wanted to show the political characters of the motley assemblage of those seeking to break down the present Administration, and the discordant materials of which their party was composed.

Mr Starkweather said it appeared to him that the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Watterson] did not seem disposed to speak of men and things in this country, when the colleague of the gentleman [Mr. Bell] was yesterday permitted to tell a long story about a loafer out of the country [in France] who went about sucking people's blood.

Mr. GENTRY hoped that his colleague might be permitted to proceed.

Mr. Mason strongly objected to the course of debate indulged in by the gentleman from Tennessee, [Mr Watterson,] and expressed the hope that the Speaker would enforce the rules of the House.—Mr. M. said that he intended, on the question, to call for a division of the House, in order that it might be definitely settled whether discussions of this character should be permitted. Mr M. was proceeding with his remarks, when

Mr. Wise called him to order. His friend from Ohio, he said, while lecturing the gentleman from Tennessee on a point of order, was himself out of order.

Mr Briggs objected to the gentleman's proceeding out of order. If, said he, the Speaker decides that he is out of order, I object to his going on without permission of the House, and will call for the yeas and nays on the question.

The Speaker was understood to say that the course of the remarks of the gentleman from Tennessee was certainly not in order. Gentlemen had been in the habit of indulging in great latitude of debate; but this, being the custom of the House, was permitted by courtesy; but the gentleman from Tennessee had commenced on the political conduct and character of individual, which was not custom.

He understanded that the gentleman from Tennessee had not departed from the course of discussion that had been pursued in the House, and he thought it should not be permitted to [illegible] in the House, which motion [illegible]

[illegible] very much that [illegible] because he could [illegible] the interruption. He said [illegible] Mr. Bell] had been de[illegible] of the Government as [illegible] the conduct of the coun[illegible] subject [illegible] Mr. Watterson wanted to come into power? But, in order or out of order, the House had given him liberty to proceed, and he would do so! Who acted in the Harrisburg Convention as

VICE PRESIDENTS?

Thomas Metcalfe, of Kentucky. He was a Representative in Congress in 1820, and voted for John Q. Adams.

Elisha M. Huntington, of Indiana, lawyer, and was for John Q. Adams.

Peter R. Livingston, of New York, a retired lawyer, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Jacob Burnet, of Ohio, lawyer, is an avowed Federalist, and wore the black cockade in 1798. But let him speak for himself:

Cincinnati, Nov. 1837.

DEAR SIR: Though I am not disposed to say much, or indeed any thing of myself, further than is necessary in stating the transactions in which I participated, I am unwilling to conceal the fact, that I was, and ALWAYS HAVE BEEN, A FEDERALIST. Educated in that school, I retain and cherish the name, as descriptive of the purest Republican patriotism the country has ever produced.

I AM, &c. JACOB BURNET.

To J. Delafield, jr.

I would add, that Judge Burnet was one of Gen Harrison's chief spokesmen in the convention. So well were the delegates pleased with his speech, in which he pronounced Harrison a Jeffersonian Republican, that by a vote of the convention, it was appended to their proceedings. It has also been published in pamphlet form in the city, and extensively circulated throughout the country. Verily, it appears a little odd to hear "black cockade Federalists," eulogizing men for their "Jeffersonian and Republican" views.

Here Mr W. was again interrupted.

Mr. Watterson then resumed his remarks. He said he was now about to show that General Harrison's principles, and the principles of the Whig party generally, which he could not do, without going into the nominating convention, and seeing who were there. All who might not be very palatable to Mr. Speaker, to see the war carried into their own camp, yet he hoped they would stand the fire, and not keep behind the tales of the aide-de-camp's stalkers for protection. But even the aide-de-camp would be ready to concede that it would appear in his published report. But he was obliged to the noise of the House for the hint, and should continue his biographical sketches.

VICE PRESIDENTS.

John Andrew Schultz of Pennsylvania. He was elected Governor of that State by the Democratic party, but soon evinced symptoms of opposition, and eventually left and over into the Federal ranks, where he has been a valiant soldier for near ten years.

James Wilson of New Hampshire, lawyer, anti-war Federalist, Abolitionist, and was for John Quincy Adams. When a candidate for Governor of that State, in 1838, he advocated the most ultra abolition doctrines. "Congress has power," said he, in reply to the interrogatories of the Abolitionist, "to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia and in the Territories, and the slave trade there and between the State. I am of opinion Congress ought, without delay, to exercise the power that body has over the subject."

ISAAC C. BAYES of Massachusetts, lawyer, bank director, agent for Massachusetts claims, member of the State council, an old Federalist, and was for John Q. Adams.

Mr. CUSHING said that he had heard gentlemen all around him saying "let him go on," but really he thought the point should be made and decided whether the remainder of the session is to be consumed in unprofitable debate or not.

The SPEAKER said that the gentleman was substantially in order, but he hadn't proceeded to show to the House to go on.

Mr. DAWSON hoped the country would be given to understand that the character of their proceedings was not owing to the SPEAKER, but to the House itself; for, whenever he attempted to enforce the rules of the House, the House had uniformly interposed, and suffered the disorderly debate to go on.

Mr. DUNCAN observed that it was a little unfortunate that the gentleman who weress solicitous about the preservation of the rules, should have been silent when the debate on the Cumberland road was going on. On that occasion they indulged themselves in the greatest latitude of discussion, and made speeches of two hours' length, in which the Cumberland road was little thought of, but an abundance was said in relation to the claims of General Harrison to the Presidency. Now, when a Democrat gets up to reply, which he has the right to do, and which his duty to his constituents requires, he cannot say a word in relation to General Harrison and his supporters, without being called to order.

Mr. LINCOLN said the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. DUNCAN] did not apply to him; for when the Cumberland road was under consideration, he interposed his objections to the course the debate had taken.

Mr. DUNCAN said his remarks did not apply to the gentleman from Massachusetts, but to others of the party he acted with.

Mr. LINCOLN, after a few remarks, said it was now time to decide the question for the rest of the session, whether the rules shall be enforced or not, and whether these irrelevant discussions shall be indulged in any longer. He objected to the gentleman's proceeding until a motion was intended to call for the yeas and nays.

On motion of Mr. BAYLY of Virginia, Mr. WATTERSON was permitted to proceed. He was very much embarrassed in having so many points of "order" raised upon him, particularly as his colleague had spoken nearly seven hours, and, a part of the time, wandered much further from the subject before the House than he had done. Why did not those great ticklers for "order" arrest his remarks?—Why did they not bring him back from France, whither he had roved in search of vampires? No, no; their "bull" was then going "sure on," and it was all well enough; but so soon as the "goring" commences on the other side, the "galled jades" begin to "wince," and they bellow out "foul play." Now for the other

John S Peters of Connecticut, physician, and a stockholder in banks. He was once a zealous man, but deserted about the time of the panic, which was gotten up by the opposition, in consequence of the removal of the deposites from the bank of the U. States.

David Hazard of Delaware, merchant, director of a bank, and was for John Q. Adams.

George Howard of Maryland, formerly Governor, and was for John Q Adams.

Ephraim marsh of new jersey, proprietor and keeper of a hotel at a fashionable watering place, and was for John Quincy Adams.

John Owen of North Carolina, planter.

SECRETARIES.

Charles a Penrose, of Pennsylvania, lawyer. He made a twodays' speech in the Legislature of that State, in 1834, against the bank of the u. States, and such was his decided opposition to that institution and the Whig party, that he was re-elected in 1835 or 6. But lo! to the astonishment of every body, he immediately tumbled over into the Federal ranks, and to cap the climax of his apostacy, voted for the rechatter of the bank, and by his influence carried the measure over the heads of the Democracy. He was also notorious on account of the speech which he took in the memorable "buckshot war" at Harrisburg in 1838, and will never be forgotten for the heroic exploit, whilst Speaker of the Senate at that time, of becoming frightened at his own imagination and jumping out of the back window.

Sylvanus R. Lyman, of Maine, merchant. He is now a member of the Legislature, and voted for a resolution instructing the Representatives in Congress, from that State, to rescind the resolution refusing to receive or act upon abolition petitions.

Charles Paine, of Vermont, manufacturer, maybe son of Elijah Paine, who was appointed District judge of Vermont by the elder Adams. He was for John Q Adams.

George W Ralph, lawyer, and was for John Q Adams.

I will ask, Mr. Speaker, take up the States represented in the Harrisburg convention in geographical order.

MAINE.

John Neal, lawyer, and was for John Q adams.

Samuel Bradley, another delegate to the Harrisburg convention, is a lawyer, Abolitionist, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Here Mr W was again called to order by

Mr. SALTONSTALL, who said he would like to know what the Hartford convention had to do with the subject before the House.

Mr. WISE must in justice say, after making a speech in favor of the gentleman from Tennessee, that his imagination could not see the relevancy of his remarks.

Mr WATTERSON. I have said nothing about the Hartford Convention. The gentleman from Massachusetts seems to be extremely sensitive on that subject, and furnishes a striking illustration of the fact that the "wicked fleeth, when no man pursueth." I am very sorry to be called to order so often. If members of the Opposition on this floor would strictly confine themselves to order, I would strictly confine myself to order. If gentlemen will not permit me to lay before the House the complexion of the delegates to the Harrisburg Convention, they cannot deprive me of the privilege of doing so when I write out my remarks. But as I have sat here from day to day, and listened to Whig members making party speeches, which had no relevancy, but the most remote, to the subject before the House, I little expected, I confess, to hear myself called to order so repeatedly from that quarter.

[Cries of "go on," "go on," from many—let's have all their names.]

Mr WATTERSON said no. Leave had been given him to proceed several times, and before he could define the position of more than a single delegate or two in that convention, he was again called to order; and he was now determined to go on with his comments, which he supposed would be in order.

[Names of the delegates from the different States in Harrisburg convention, which Mr W. was not permitted to lay before the house nor he pledged himself that they should appear in his written speech, and here they are:]

MAINE.

Elisha Allen, lawyer. He is a member of the Legislature of that State, and recently voted to instruct their Representatives in Congress to rescind w. cost johnson's resolution against the reception of Abolition petitions.

George Pendleton, merchant, abolitionist, and was for John q. adams.

Richard H Vose, lawyer, abolitionist, and was for John q Adams.

Zina Hyde, merchant, abolitionist, and was for John q adams.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Godfrey Stephens, merchant, and was for John q Adams.

Solomon McNeil, speculator, and was for John q adams.

James Wilson, lawyer, abolitionist, and was for John Q Adams.

Joel Eastman, lawyer, Abolitionist, a defeated candidate for Congress, and was for John Q adams.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Pelegro Sprague, a lawyer, was for John Quincy Adams, and formerly a Senator in Congress from Maine. He came to Boston, it is shrewdly suspected, because he was too aristocratic for Democratic Maine.

Samuel Hora, lawyer, Federalist of the blunest sort, bank director, Abolitionist, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Arthemas Lee, manufacturer, Abolitionist, bank director, and was for John Quincy Adams.

John Howard, cashire of the Springfield Bank, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Harrison Gray Otis Colby, lawyer, bank director, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Benjamin K. Hough, speculator, and was for John Quincy Adams. His father is president of a bank.

George Ashman, lawyer, bank director—was for John Quincy Adams, and would like to be in Congress.

Barker Burnell, cashire of Manufacturers' and Mechanics' Bank Nantucket, and an aspirant for Mr. Reed's seat in Congress. He was for John Quincy Adams.

Henry Shaw, lawyer, director in the Agricultural Bank, Pittsfield, has a strong inclination to be in Congress, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Nathaniel M. Davis, lawyer, bank director, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Charles Hudson, clergyman, Director of Western Rail Road, member of the State Council, bitter Federalist, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Warren Lovering, lawyer, bank commissioner, and was for John Quincy Adams.

James H. Duncan, lawyer, president of the Merimack Bank at haverhill, member of the State Council, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Richard Haughton, editor of the Boston Atlas, and it is said was not a delegate to the Harrisburg Convention, but went as tender to Peleg Sprague. As his name is found, however, among the list of delegates for Massachusetts, it is sufficient to say that he is an Abolition apologist, (as is almost every other delegate from that State) and was for John Quincy Adams.

RHODE ISLAND.

George G. King, lawyer, bank commissioner, bank stockholder, and was for John Quincy Adams. In 1833, he made a speech in the Legislature of Rhode Island against Mr. Atherton's anti-Abolition resolutions, adopted by the House of Representatives in Congress, and in favor of the Abolition cause generally.

James F. Simmons, president of a bank in the city of Providence, is a large stockholder in banks, and an old Federalist. He was for John Quincy Adams, and is now a warm admirer of that veteran in Federal doctrines, except when he kicks out of the traces, and then he cursed him. Mr. Simmons is a leading politician in Rhode Island, and an aspirant for a seat in the Senate of the United States. A little better than a year ago, he made a speech against Atherton's resolutions, in which he aimed to conciliate the Abolitionists.

William Anthony, manufacturer, bank director, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Byron Diman, manufacturer, a stockholder in several banks, was a quasi jackson man until Jackson vetoed the Bank. He is now the Whig candidate for lieutenant Governor of Rhode Island.

CONNECTICUT.

Charles Davies, editor of a Federal newspaper in the city of Hartford.

Wm. W. Boardman, lawyer, and bank stockholder.

Charles H. Phelps, lawyer, bank director and stockholder, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Charles Chauncy, lawyer, bank attorney and stockholder, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Joseph S. Gladding, manufacturer, president of the Jewett county bank, and was for John Quincy Adams.

E. Champion Bacon, lawyer, son of the president of a bank, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Ebenezer Jackson, lawyer, bank attorney, and was for John Quincy Adams.

VERMONT.

Wm Henry, bank stockholder, cashier of a bank, and was for John Quincy Adams.

A. B. W. Tenney, Abolitionist, and was for John Q Adams.

Samuel H. Holli, lawyer Abolitionist, lives in Mr. Slade's district, and is one of his right hand men. he was for John Quincy Adams.

Wm. B Briggs, lawyer, and abolition lecturer he was for John Q uincy Adams, a postmaster under his administration, and was turned out under the administration of Gen. Jackson.

NEW YORK.

Chandler Starr, merchant, bank commissioner, and was for John Quincy Adams.

John A. King, lawyer, son of Rufus King, and was appointed Charge d'Affaires to England by John Adams. He is the same man who lately introduced a resolution into the Legislature of New York, denouncing a resolution adopted by this house, in regard to Abolition petitions, together with the Democratic Representatives from that State who voted for it.

Dudley Selden, lawyer, and bank director.

Judah Hammond, lawyer, and speculator in real estate, in the city of New York.

James A. Hamilton, a retired lawyer, aristocrat, and the son of Alexander Hamilton.

Robt C Westmore, merchant, bank director of a bank, abolitionist, and was for John Q Adams.

Hudson McFarland, manufacturer, director of a bank, abolitionist, and was for John Q Adams.

Henry Ross, lawyer, & would be the last man to drink hard cider, until the Champagne was exhausted.

Elphas Fay, school teacher, and was for John Q Adams.

Amos Briggs, manufacturer, and was for John Q Adams.

Solomon Van Rensellaer, he belongs to the Albany aristocracy, and was lately removed from the post office in that city. He is an old Federalist, and was for John Q Adams.

Henry, Hamilton, lawyer canal commissioner, & was for John Q Adams.

J. Knickerbocker, lawyer, president of the waterford Bank, shaver, a blue, light Federalist, and was for John Q Adams.

Bernard Blair, lawyer, and was for John Q Adams.

Sylvester Gilbert, merchant, and was for John Q Adams.

David Petrie, merchant, and was for John Q Adams.

C P Kirkland, lawyer, a defeated candidate for Congress, and was for John Q. Adams.

A Z McCarty, lawyer, a Federalist of the old school, and was for John Quincy Q Adams.

D D Spencer, editor bookseller, and was for John Q Adams.

John Russell, physician, & was for John Q Adams.

Vincent Whitney, a gentleman of pleasure, he turned Democrat, got office, and then returned to his first love.

James Dunn, lawyer, editor, and was for John Q Adams.

Amos P Granger, Lawyer.

J D Dunlap, a gentleman of leisure, & was for John Q Adams.

Geo H Wood, lawyer, aristocrat, & was for John Q Adams.

Gray V Basket, lawyer, and was for John Q Adams.

Henry W Taylor, lawyer, abolitionist, aristocrat, and was for John Q Adams.

John N Dox, lawyer.

Phineas L Tracy, lawyer, abolitionist, and was for John Q Adams.

Allen Aynauth, president of a bank, a shaver, and would take "the pound of flesh from the tenant of a "log cabin," in the twinkling of an eye, or as soon as any other manned man.

Chauncy Tucker, lawyer, and was for John Q Adams.

Robt Smith, owner of an extensive stone cutting establishment in the city of New York.

Davis F Allen, director of the city bank of Buffalo, and assisted in gutting it. The bank is blown sky high, and he with it.

Henry P Voorheen, a retired merchant, and was for John Q adams.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Moses J Clark, one of Thadeus Stephen's canal commissioner under the administration of Ritner, and was for John Q adams.

Joseph Lawrence, a defeated candidate for congress. My friend Lect laid him out as cold as a wagon tire.

Jonathan Roberts, one a senator in congress, a bitter broken down politician, and was for John adams.

E P Reigar., lawyer, abolitionist. and was for John Q adams.

John Swift, lawyer and Mayor of Philadelphia.

Alexander Quinton, tavern keeper, a regular built federalist, and has always been opposed to republican men and measures.

Collin M Creed, merchant, and was for John Q Adams.

James Calhoun, merchant, and was for John Q Adams.

George Chambers, lawyer, abolitionist, and was for John adams.

Thomas Eleanor Fisher, lawyer, and was for John adams.

wm R Morris, lawyer, abolitionist, and was for John adams.

John pickey, merchant, and, like his friend Penrose, voted in the Pennsylvania Legislature for the rechartter of the bank of the United States, in violation of pledge made to his constituents, and the principles which he professed when elected.

David Leech, president of Leech's Transportation company on the Pennsylvania canal, and was for John Quincy Adams.

Edward Darlington, lawyer, abolitionist, and was for John adams.

Samuel M marchy, lawyer, abolitionist, and was for John Q adams.

Robt. W. Bowie, planter, and was for John Q Adams.

James Moores, planter, and was for John Q Adams.

Aston Alexander, physician.

VIRGINIA.

Benjamin Watkins Leigh, lawyer, and a leading member of the Harrisburg convention. He made a speech in the Virginia convention, in which he contended that the log cabin men, whom he called the peasantry, ought not to be entitled to the right of suffrage, any more than the slaves, as they were not qualified to judge of political affairs. Now, I presume, he is the very pink of Democracy, and is exceedingly fond of hard cider.

James W. Pegram, lawyer, and was for John Q Adams.

—Ed. R. Chambers, lawyer, and was for John Q Adams.

Wm. C. Mosby, lawyer.

Mr. W. again resumed his remarks.—He said the information he had been prevented from laying before the House, would show whose candidate General Harrison was. It would show what kind of "concerpt fathers," as he had seen them described by the Whig press, had assembled at Harrisburg, and nominated him. It would show that, in that convention, there was every hue of opinion—slave-holders and Abolitionists, high tariffites, and those who are for "free trade," Federal Republican Federalists, and apostate Republicans, latitudinarians, and those who profess to be strict constitutionists. No wonder they did not publish an address to the people of the United States setting forth their principles. No wonder the delegate of Virginia violently opposed, and the convention almost unanimously voted down such a proposition. They know very well that if all their conflicting principles were spread out before the American people, they could no longer hunting out of delude those and those who are honestly co-operating with them. They thought it their best policy to continue their old crusade against the Republican party—without showing their own banners—by mere presenting facts—impugning motives—crying out corruption—prodigal expenditures—defalcations—bankrupt Treasury—distress—ruin—bloodhounds—bull-dogs—and rascality generally, Sir, with these weapons they have been fighting for years; but thanks to the patriotism and intelligence of the country, such slang and slander make no more impressions on the minds of the honest-hearted and sturdy Democrats, than the falling of a sun-parched leaf upon the Rocky mountains. If it had, sir, you would hear much offener the roar of cession, and the voice of Federal orators, celebrating Whig victories.

It would, show, also, Speaker, that aside from their crooked schemes, and nine-tenths of the delegates in the Harrisburg Convention belonging to mere town politicians, who hailed from towns, and villages, the plains why it is that the Whig papers have been tearing out with the dings of Harrison meetings, to his nomination, to use the language, in such gallant and gay style! All the delegates had to return to their respective towns and villages, call together a few hoppers, brokers, petitioners, and skin flints, appoint a chairman, secretary, draw up a long preamble and resolutions denunciatory of the Democratic party, make a few speeches in favor of "Old Tip," fire a few guns and bonfires, and, if there happened to be a few barrels of Champagne and cider, sing a few "Tippecanoe songs" then what a soul-stirring time there is it—what a glorious Whig revival—what wonderful reactions! The whole country of the village, town, or city paper, as the case may be, contains, during account of the most unanimous uprising of the people that has occurred for years—a spontaneous burst from the bone and sinew of the land—the voice of the real people, the immortal "log cabins," had no part nor lot in the grand farce, and not a solitary feeling in common with the actors and participators in it.

reason why the Whigs are so deceived in regard to the elections, mistake the voice of the few for that of the many. They do not know that one Whig blusterer represents, and does, make more noise than hundred Democrats in the country.

Passing, Mr. Speaker, from the general Whig Convention to the State conventions, and we find the same, or nearly the same materials, both as regards professions and politics. I have stated, that there were opposed to the Whig Convention of Ohio, five hundred and forty-two delegates, &c., seven hundred and three office holders, three hundred and forty-six lawyers and doctors, one sand and forty-eight merchants, and speculators, and upwards of five hundred Abolitionists.

President Van Buren's Sentiments.

We have addressed enquiries to twenty-seven members of Congress, and find that twenty-two have adopted the Sub-Treasury.

President Van Buren.

"I shall go into the Presidential chair the avowed and uncompromising opponent of every attempt on the part of Congress to abolish slavery in the District of Columbia, against the wishes of the slave-holding States; and with a determination to resist the abolition of slavery with all it is in the States where it exists. And it now only remains for me to add, that, be full convinced, that I will never receive my constitutional sanction."

President Van Buren.

William Henry Harrison's Sentiments.

"I believe that the existence of slavery in a country is the GREATEST EVIL that can possibly happen to it, and I believe it to be the duty of the non-slaveholding States to offer their sister States every intervention, and all the every facility, to get rid of THIS CURSE."

William Henry Harrison.

"Should I be asked if there is no way by which the General Government can aid the cause OF EMANCIPATION; I answer, it has long been an object near my heart, to see the whole of its CAPITOLIS REVENUE appropriated to that object."

William Henry Harrison.

"A vote of the Senate of the United States attached to my name a disgrace, which I fully convinced, no time or no efforts of mine, will ever be able to efface."

William Henry Harrison.

Democratic Meeting.

The Town Lt. Clerk has been requested to attend at the Bethlehem meeting house, near Aberdeen, Ohio, on Saturday the 30th day of May, next and invite the citizens who may attend, on the general business of the country. It is also expected all other distinguished individuals will address the meeting on that day. The citizens of the surrounding counties in Ohio and Kentucky are invited to attend.

There will be no charge for ferriage during the day to those who wish to attend the meeting from Kentucky.

Com. of Arrangements.

PROOF CONFIDENT!—The Whigs are manifestly alarmed, and begins to feel that Mr Letcher has a more formidable competitor to contend with, than they at first imagined. Judge French, whenever he has met Mr Letcher, has proved more than a match for him either in strength of argument, soundness of principle, or the advantages of personal deportment.—Hence, it is that Mr Letcher is now, and is coming uneasy—restless and desperate. They are forced to the extremity of making up by slander and vilification of Judge French, what their own candidate lacks in talents and principles. One charge which has recently been urged against the Judge, and which is but an invention of his enemies, conceived and propagated to counteract the effect of Mr. Letcher's own exceptionable course in this respect, is' that of his having been an advocate of the South Carolina and Ohio Rail Road Bank.—The charge has not the least shadow of justification in truth, and is warranted by no vote, or other evidence, that can be produced against him. On the contrary, his vote wherever it has been given upon the question, directly falsifies the charge. The election between Messrs Glover and Apperson in Montgomery, brought the question immediately in issue. Mr. Apperson was an uncompromising friend of the Rail Road Bank, and Col Glover as decided an opponent of that project. Judge French exerted his influence and voted in favor of Col Glover. Does this look as if he had been a Rail Road Bank man?

The Rail Road Bank had not in the whole State, a more active friend than Mr. Letcher. So thoroughly had he identified himself with that magnificent humbug and wretched scheme for prostrating the dignity and independence of the State, at the feet of a southern junto of designing politicians, that he drew from Col Menninger a public compliment addressed to his conduct and zeal in behalf of the Rail Road Bank. If the people are taxed, as they must inevitably, and will be, to relieve the commonwealth of her difficulties, Mr. Letcher will have to share as much of his responsibility as any other of his party. But Judge French has no such sins to answer for—his skirts are clean.

AN UNPALATABLE DISCLOSURE! A Whig convention met at Bolivar, Ten, on the 22nd ult. and early in the morning of that day, an equivocal looking crimson flag was seen floating from the spire of the Court House. This was regarded as great indignity, and when the convention met, every speaker had something to say against the subject of the red flag. Gen. V. D. Barry was particularly indignant in his remarks, and charged the offence upon the whole democratic party, interspersing his sentences with a great deal of abuse. A Mr. Lyon, who was present, a good democrat, rose and stated to the Convention that he knew who the person was that raised the petticoat, and instead of his being a democrat, he was a thorough going Whig! This was of course not believed, and the house rung with a roll for his name. Gen Barry vociferated loudly, "his name?" "this name?" Mr. Lyon hesitated to give his name, but pledged his honor that the person was a Whig. But it would not do, and the house was again called for, General Barry bawling at the top his voice. Mr. Lyon then stated to the Convention, that "the petticoat was raised by H. A. Barry," pointing to the General, "your son." If a flash of lightning had burst upon the meeting it could not have been more terrible to the discomfited party, than was this disclosure.

Might not the rotten eggs have been thrown by Whigs?

HIGH AND LOW CLASSES.—It has been urged by at least some of the Whigs heretofore, as an excuse for countenancing the fellow Bean, that he suits the low class very well, and among them will do a great deal of good for the cause. So the Whigs recognize two classes in the community, one the high, or well-born, and the other the low, or mean class. Mr. Bean, a fellow of no character, ignorant and ill-bred, is considered good enough for the latter grade. And who are they who really constitute the class looked upon by those well bred Whigs, as the lower class? The farmers, workingmen, mechanics and laborers of Kentucky. These are the men thus stigmatized and set apart, as fit to be operated upon by the vulgar rant and bulldozing of an infamous bawler! What think you, fellow citizens, who have not been born with a silver spoon in your mouth, or have never been able to wield a yard-stick, own bank-stock, or live without labor, at such an insult!

TOO BAD!—The Whigs by running the State head over heels into debt, imposed upon the last Legislature the necessity of causing to be issued, as a matter of temporary relief, a large quantity of State bonds. These bonds were generally of small denominations, made so with a view of giving them circulation, as they were intended to be paid to contractors and others who could not afford to retain them on hand. Now, strange as it may seem, the Whig banks turn their backs upon them, and the Whig merchants throughout the State, scout it, and refuse to touch them. Is'nt this too bad?

THE LOCKJAW CANDIDATE.—Is it really true that Gen Harrison is afflicted with the Lockjaw, and can neither speak nor think? We were aware that his thinking was done by a committee, but did not believe the gentleman was in so bad a fix as not to be able to speak. A correspondent of the Yeomas says, he took the lockjaw immediately after the Harrisburg Convention, and has been so ever since.

THE FEDERAL BEAR.—This fellow is a good for nothing loafing rowdy, who has quite an honest employment, because he was too lazy to work, and is roaming through the country in the service of the Whig party, imposing himself upon the people as a decent man. He has upon several occasions, we understand, boasted that he would make ten or twelve hundred dollars by his speeches, before the election was over.

Why is the Editor of the Eagle like General Harrison? Do ye give it up?

Because he has a "Thinking Committee."

READ AND INWARDLY DIGEST!! We ask attention to the extract which we give to-day from the masterly speech of Mr. Watterson, recently delivered in the House of Representatives. The modern Whig party have never yet had so effectual an exposition as was inflicted by the hand of the gallant Tennessean, in this exposure of the constituent elements of that aggregation of contraries. He has completely unmasked the party, and by holding up to the world a correct and faithful analysis of the political character of every member of the Harrisburg Convention, fully establishes what has been so frequently and boldly denied by the friends of Gen. Harrison, that he was nominated by, and is the nominee of the party, composed of old Federalists, Hartford Conventionists, Abolitionists, speculators, &c.—Look at the record—there stand their names, their political history, their principles, in a few words, but true to the letter. One portion of them the early Hamiltonian federalists—who would make hereditary senate and president for life; another the supporters of the "alien and sedition law" of old John Adams of black cockade memory: Hartford Conventionists, enemies to the Union as well as to the war, tories who in the midst of their country's calamities, rejoiced at her sufferings and misfortunes: abolitionists, mad, bad incendiaries, who under the promptings of a dark fanaticism, seek to deluge the land with blood, to effect the unconstitutional and immediate emancipation of the negroes: renegade democrats, who have betrayed their party for a mess of pottage, and speculators, bankers and others, who prop upon the substance of the honest workingmen and wrest from him the hard earned fruits of his toil and industry. These make up the character, and fill out the outlines of that Convention. And the people of this country are appealed to, to unite with such men in electing to the presidential chair, an individual who owes his nomination to that convention! Ye, all ye! ye! ye!

ROUNDS & REED.

April 2, '40—3t.

100 DOLLARS REWARD,

RANAWAY from the subscriber a mulatto slave, named ALBERT, aged 19 the following description: About six feet high and of a round shouldered make, and of a very light complexion, nearly white; has very little, if any black; it would be difficult to distinguish him from a true race of the white blood. He was taken to, by he is in the habit of wearing his hair straight in the nose, and then glancing to the left and throwing his head down. He is a good hand at any business he may be required, except a spar around his left ankle and foot, caused by a burn from stepping into a tub of boiling lye when a little boy at the time. He has good clothing. Sometimes wears a blue cloth sprigged and sometimes a black cloth sprigged, and has probably got a handsome fashion in Kentucky many. He is a remarkably good hand to work, and has been used to driving.

He may be near Carlisle, or in Greenup county, or some of the frontiers in Ohio, or he may be with his owner in Bourbon. The subscribed will be glad to hear of his being secured, and will be glad for the delivery of the said slave, or the securing of the slave so that I may get him. Ky. I will give the above reward, or fifty dollars for taking and delivering him in any jail out of the State, or that I may get him, and twenty and 25 cents, to pay for taking and delivering in jail in this place, or any place within the state.

JOSHUA EWING.

GOELICKE'S

Matchless Sanative.

A Medicine of great value to mankind obtained solely from the vegetable, mineral and animal kingdoms, and possessing a three fold power—a medicine, which though designed as a remedy for consumption, is possessed of such mysterious influence over many diseases of the human system, as to effect radical and perfect cure in many cases where all other remedies are inadequate.

Many certificates might be adduced to show that the Sanative has effected the most astonishing cures in almost all the diseases to which humanity is subject; but it is deemed unnecessary, as the general popularity which the Sanative has obtained, recommends it fully to the public. The following is a brief statement of the principle diseases to which it has successfully been applied: Incipient and confirmed consumption, pain, epilepsy, venereal, dropsy, colic, insanity, indigestion, pleurisy, gout, dysentary, gravel and strangury, diabetes, rheumatism, spine complaint, partial deafness, nervousness, Asthma, Weak Lungs, spitting of blood, and delirium tremens. Pays for itself in a few months.

The above medicine is for sale at the store of the subscriber at Vanceburg, Lewis co.

GOELICKES'

MATCHLESS SANATIVE,

A MEDICINE of more value to man than all the vast mines of Austria, or even the united treasures of our globe: a medicine, obtained equally from the vegetable, animal and mineral kingdoms, and that possesses a three fold power—a medicine, which, though designed as a remedy for consumption solely, is possessed of a mysterious influence over many diseases of the human system—a medicine which begins to be valued by Physicians, who are daily witnessing its astonishing cures from patients for four or five years, and who was unable to dress himself when he commenced taking this medicine, but rapidly gained so well that he felt quite well, could dress himself without any trouble, and thinks he shal wholly recover.

Yours in haste,

R. RUSSELL, P. M.

Rush Post Office, monroe co, N. Y.

Dear Sir—In 48 hours after I received the package of Sanative, I sold six of it—and have come to the conclusion that it must be all that it is recommended to be. It is sufficient to say, that the benefit derived from a portion of it, has convinced the most prejudiced of its utility. The enclosed money you will pass to my account, and I wish you to send more of the Sanative as soon as convenient.

Respectfully, &c.

JOHN B. CROSBY, P. M.

Haverhill, Mass. March 26, 1838.

Dear Sir—Numerous cases have come to my knowledge in which the Sanative has proved beneficial, and one case in particular which it performed a wonder. I can procure you a good certificate from the patient if you wish. Please credit me with the enclosed money, and forward me more of the Sanative by the bearer.

Yours truly,
