BELOW ZERO WEATHER. Not in the Last Six Years Has So Equal Been Experienced in the West.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—Not during the last six years has the equal of the present cold weather been experienced in the west and in many places no such low temperatures have been recorded since the establishment of the weather bureau.

The area of the cold wave extends from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico and from the Rocky mountains to the Atlantic. The line of zero weather is about in the latitude of Memphis, but all through the south freezing weather is reported. In the north the mercury has registered anywhere from five to 45 degrees below the latter mark being cleared at Richmond Center, Wis. Although details are lacking it is estimated that about a score of people have lost their lives, the majority of the fatalities being in the southwest, where distances between houses and towns are great, and shelter hard to find.

INTERESTING STATE NEWS

TO BE SOLD AT AUCTION. By the Hundred Loads Tobacco Has Reached Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 13.—Unable to hold any longer for what seems to be an uncertainty, the burley tobacco growers will make the first serious break in the ranks of the association by placing their crops with the Burley Loose Tobacco Warehouse Co. to be sold at auction on their breaks in this city. This is taken to mean that the Burley association has been defeated in its fight against the Continental Co. and that the expected capital to enable them to hold the crop has not been forthcoming. Several hundred wagonloads of tobacco from this and adjoining counties arrived here this morning.

The farmers are outspoken in their denunciation of what they term "the manipulations of the combine," and assert that their failure to secure the money with which to finance their scheme is chargeable to the combine's hold on Louisville, to investigate charges against seven officers of the First Kentucky regiment, and as a result of the approval, Adj. Gen. Haly directed that a general court-martial be held. Several of the officers are to be charged with disloyalty to the government and adj. general, and officers with failure to make proper return of state and government property.

LOCATION FIXED. Hunt Site Chosen By the Legislature For the New State House.

Frankfort, Feb. 9.—The location of Kentucky's statehouse was settled forever by the passage of the bill agreed on by the joint conference committee on Monday and passed by the senate on Tuesday. There was no delay about a vote, as the bill was taken up as soon as it was reported from the senate. The amendments made by the conference committee were adopted and the bill, as amended, passed by 63 to 14. This fixes the location on the Hunt site in South Frankfort, on an elevated plateau of 30 acres, on which the new building can be viewed with fine effect from many directions and can be seen plainly from the L. & N. railroad trains going and coming from Lexington.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 10.—The reading and comparing in open session of the bill locating the new statehouse on the Hunt site was all the work the legislature had to do and as the session day. The bill is now in the governor's hands. He will approve it.

THE WRIT OF PROHIBITION. Circuit Judge Parker Presented His Response To the Hargis Petition.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 11.—Circuit Judge Parker, of the Fayette circuit court, presented before the court of appeals his response to the petition of the Hargis brothers and Ed Callahan for a writ of prohibition to be issued by the court to restrain the state from taking them into custody. The response questions the power of the appellate court to interfere by any mode of procedure except by review upon appeal, but declares that he will abide the result of its determination by the court.

ON BIGAMY CHARGE. The Governor Approved the Finding of the Court of Inquiry.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 11.—Gov. Beckham approved a finding of a court of inquiry of state guard officers, recently held at Louisville, to investigate charges against seven officers of the First Kentucky regiment, and as a result of the approval, Adj. Gen. Haly directed that a general court-martial be held. Several of the officers are to be charged with disloyalty to the government and adj. general, and officers with failure to make proper return of state and government property.

THE GREAT RIVERS TON FURNACE HAS BEEN SOLD. It is Said.

Madisonville, Ky., Feb. 14.—It is rumored that the Great River iron furnace has been sold to St. Louis capitalists by the Illinois Southern Railway Co. and that the railway company will acquire the furnace and the iron ore of these hills for its own use. The furnace are located at Grand River, Ky., the town which was started and bought by Thomas W. Lawson. In connection with the rumor, it is said that the railroad company will establish a rolling mill at Grand River, which will again furnish employment for hundreds of hands.

COLLEGE REUNION. Most Remarkable Ever Known in the South To Be Held at Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 11.—Steps have been taken here to hold the most remarkable college reunion ever known in the south. Kentucky university, the oldest college west of the Allegheny mountains, reuniting ever known alumni, who took up the work. It contemplates a big outdoor dinner on commencement week, with prominent speakers and a gathering of old students and alumni of the college for 40 years from all over the globe. Steps were taken to get the names of these men.

TOBACCO UNSOLD. Owingville Is Filled With Disappointed Farmers.

Owingville, Ky., Feb. 14.—This town is filled with disappointed farmers who had turned their faith to the Farmers Tobacco Growers' association. More than 5,000,000 pounds of tobacco are yet unsold in this county because of the association, and it is thought the farmers will make an appeal to the fiscal court at its next meeting for an appropriation for a new armory. The company will be reorganized and new officers will be chosen.

RETIRES WITH HONOR. Lexington, Ky., Feb. 14.—Attired in the uniform of the naval service, J. S. Hargis, who graduated in the class of 1867 at Annapolis, has been promoted to the highest grade in gunnery, passed through Lexington en route to his home in Winchester.

Still wending my way, on and on day after day, our lives should be an open book and each day a page. I am neither the son of a King or of a Sage, nor do I care to paint the bright side of any thing. I care not for notoriety or fame and I know some will think my writings tame. A man has friends as well as his foes, so on and on at this article will go. So when I get out in the wild and woolly west this article will suit you all best. Where the Buffalo and the Antelope used to roam and bed was the carpeted grass and my pillow the Broncos saddle and my cover the starry Heavens. The poet has said "a little nonsense now and then is relished by the best of men," so sense and mirth well combined should be relished by the most refined.

So back to Morehead my mind does wander, the night I showed there I was scared like thunder, just what I cleared there I could never tell, when those demons gave the Rowan County Yell what I did I shall never tell. From that day to this I have not them adieu.
I passed through on the "kivered kars" it was my six and no six to everything they said. Oh! my that night I never went to bed, next morning I had them adieu thinking the fellows one H— of a crew.

FROM HABERDASHERY TO HIGH FINANCE.

Operations of Munroe Brothers, the "Laundry" Brokers in Wall Street.

BEGAN ON CAPITAL OF $1,600.00

Before Many Months the Two Young Men Were Dealing in Millions and Hobnobbing With Gotham's Most Influential Men—Their Dreams of Wealth Rudely Shattered.

New York.—"Failure in Wall Street." This is a headline that is often seen in Gotham dailies, but it seldom creates much comment. It only records the fact that another firm has been caught on the wrong side of the market and forced to suspend.

But the bankruptcy proceedings recently instituted against the Munroe brothers reveal a remarkable story of the operations of two young men whose only business experience before their advent among bulls and bears had consisted in the selling of collars and neckties in a distant and virtually foreign city, who came to New York with practically no capital and in the course of a few months were dealing in millions and hobnobbing with some of the most influential financiers of the "street," until the inevitable crash came.

They hobnobbed with millionaires and some of the best men of the metropolis and saw visions of wealth beyond the dreams of avarice for themselves, but, as a shrewd veteran of Wall Street said, "the game goes too big for them."

Plan of the Brothers.

James Stillman, president of the National City bank, describes the transactions by which Munroe & Munroe, the "laundry" brokers, obtained from the bank a daily loan of $50,000 for eight days on an unsecured and unsecured demand note for the purpose of buying hundreds of thousands of shares of Montreal & Boston Consolidated mining stock in the curb market, as the act of a junior officer of that institution.

That junior officer was Archibald G. Loomis, second vice president of the bank and the leading member of the Montreal and Boston underwriting syndicate. Of course there had to be somebody upon whom the responsibility could be placed by the public for the unusual transactions, and the curiosity of men on the street was satisfied when Mr. Loomis resigned.

It should be said, however, that in the transactions the bank was in no way credited. The $50,000 borrowed were paid back by Munroe & Munroe before the close of banking hours each day, so that the bank lost nothing.

An interesting phase of the negotiations was that the Munroes, unknown and untried youths, became close personal friends of Loomis.

Began on Capital of $1,600.

The worldly capital of the Munroes when they quit the genteel occupation of gen's furnisiers in Montreal to take up even a more genteel occupation in New York, was about $1,600.

The furniture in the office would have cost more than that—it had been paid for, and reflected great credit upon the good taste of the gentlemen. The desks were of the finest and most expensive make and the furnishings lavish. There was a grill of chastely ornamental iron work which contained the cashbox, and probably kept him from absconding with the firm's heavily bonded debt.

The furniture included a set of big easy leather-lined chairs and an imposing sofa. There were other tasteful touches about the place, and everything suggested to the uninitiated that untold wealth was at their command.

But it was these same furnishings that first brought the trouble that resulted in bankruptcy proceedings.

Bankruptcy Proceedings Instituted.

About October 1, Munroe & Munroe approached McHugh & Co. They wanted a bill of goods sent up to their broad street offices.

They mentioned as reference the National City bank, the institution which afterward lent them $50,000 daily on their unsecured notes. McHugh & Co.

had sold goods to the National City bank. With that reference there seemed to be no doubt that the firm was financially "good." The furniture concern sent up $300 worth of goods, together with a bill. Munroe & Munroe made a few more purchases in the course of a week, raising the bill to $389.

The bill wasn't paid in October. Still the furniture man didn't think it worth while to press such excellent customers. In November a short and very polite reminder was sent. No answer.

And still McHugh & Co. were not worried until, on December 2, along came a collector for another firm to whom they were also indebted, who had heard that McHugh had trusted Munroe & Munroe; also that things didn't look quite right. He dropped in to give a friendly little business tip.

Joseph McHugh decided to brook the possible wrath of the National City

The Beginning.

Until about four years ago, George and Alexander Munroe kept a little haberdashery shop in St. Catherine street, Montreal. They were quite young men and apparently devoted to their business.

It was generally understood that they received financial backing from J. N. Greenfields, a prominent Canadian broker of the city. George Munroe married a sister of Greenfields and through his influence the brothers were introduced in good circles. There had always been speculation as to whether or not the haberdashery store prospered, but one day it was announced that the Munroes had sold the store. At that time the mining craze was springing up over the country, and the brothers went down to the financial center of Montreal, opened up an office and put out a sign, "Munroe & Munroe, Mining Brokers."

Move to New York.

Although they dealt in few stocks on commission, it was generally credited that their chief business was the handling of mining stocks in which Greenfields was interested. Even in the mining business, however, they failed to attract an attention in Montreal, and not long afterward they came to New York and established themselves on broad street, in the very heart of the financial district.

While in Montreal they had become connected with the Marconi Wireless Telegraphy company of Canada, and as it was understood that the stock was valuable, they began to advertise it extensively through their arrival here, and worked up a wonderful trade among the Italians, who were attracted in part, no doubt, because of their kinship of nationality with the investor.

Meantime the Munroes had also become interested in the Montreal & Boston Consolidated Copper company, which is at the bottom of the present value of five dollars a share, and a contract was entered into by which the persons who were to underwrite it were to pay $100,000 on a dollar per share.

Various persons went into the syndicate, with the provision that they were to take or underwrite a certain number of shares, paying one dollar per share, 20 per cent of the purchase price, at the outset and the balance within six months of the time.

The understanding was, however, that those who had underwritten the stock would not pay the one-dollar price unless the money became necessary for the development of the mining property, the promotion of stock sales, and so on. It did not, while they agreed to pay a certain amount should the exigency arise if that in spite they would be no more "to the good."

Resort to Washing.

Brokers who were members of the exchange were readily found who were willing to dispose of certain number of shares a month, and what they received was to go 50 per cent to them and 50 per cent to those who had underwritten the stock in the beginning. It was then decided that in order to sell the stock at a price above one dollar per share, the amount should be advanced to the process known as "washing."

In other words, they agreed to themselves purchase the stock at a high price in order to set the market rate. Par being five dollars, and they having obtained it at one dollar, they arranged for stock sales at $250 and $3, themselves buying at that rate, in order to show that the stock was active and to induce the public to take it at the market.

In point of fact, so as to make a showing of large sales, those who were selling the stock were themselves bidding on it, all the transactions being credited on the books. "It has been shown that under this system, one outsider bought 50,000 shares, at from $2.50 to $3. In disposing of the stock, Munroe & Munroe "washed" about 3,000,000 shares or more in the process of getting rid of about 120,000 shares, for which they are said to have paid the company not more than $120,000 in all. The brokerage on raising this $120,000 is to pay commission because they had to pay commissions on the whole 3,000,000 shares.

How Sales Were Made.

The Munroes would give orders to certain brokers to sell and to other brokers to buy, and they would give orders to check the following morning, and then they would use that check, turning it over to the brokers they had employed. The result was that on December 7, the day of the failure, they received checks in payment for the stock sold on that day, and they used these checks to pay for the stock they had bought the day before, but when it came to their paying for the stock they bought on December 7, they had no money. The "endless round" broke, the Munroes went into bankruptcy, and all these persons are creditors for the stock.

Before this situation was reached, however, the Munroes had their day of prosperity, or rather, George did, for he is the head and front of the combination, even though his brother was set for member of the firm. When they came here they were aggressive and enthusiastic young fellows, of the type that are so common in Wall street, and they quickly made friends. Mr. Loomis was one of these, and Leach another, and here of late the names of Leach and Loomis in financial circles. Loomis became chairman of the syndicate's executive committee, and it was through his influence that the loans were obtained from the National City bank.

Reputed a Millionaire.

The friendship of men like these brought other friends to the brothers, and before long George Munroe was reputed to be a millionaire. It is said he lived at the rate of from $50,000 to $100,000 a year; this young man who only a little while before had been a hard-working dishwasher had a luxurious home on East Fifty-seventh street, and another in Washington, L., and often he occupied a suite at the Waldorf-Astoria.

A Costly Junket.

He always did things in lavish fashion. When Montreal & Boston was at the height of its exploitation, Munroe thought it would be a good plan to let those whom he was trying to interest in it see the actual mine property. Now, it lies away off in British Columbia, on the foothills of the Selkirk, and it costs money to take a party out there. He never considered the expense. A private car was chartered, loaded with everything of the best in the commissary line, and the junketers started away. The car could not go, but Alexander took charge.

The party included senators, bankers, politicians, and newspaper men—everybody, in fact, who might be of some aid in advertising the mine.

They stopped at various cities on the way out and had a jolly time.

Not Unlike Fiction.

The relations in the Munroe case make it not unlike the story told in one of Emile Gaboriau's novels in which a Parisian set of men in the sixties who needed a large sum of money to get their work from a firm whose business it was to outfit people who needed sumptuous offices temporarily.

The firm Gaboriau pictured could, on short notice, give any office the appearance of glittering wealth. It rented out massive desks, cashier's grilles, safes and pictures, and was constantly on hand with a supply of curio for special purposes—miniature specimens for mining companies, original curio for people in the city and the country, and cheap rubber for rubber companies. Such objects, scattered carefully about the office, gave the air of the article the best and genuinest of any old enterprise.

But it is not necessary to go as far as this in three days, as it is shown in this article that the Munroe case has brought about methods.

Limited Opportunities.

Caller.—Anything new in the neighborhood to-day?

Mrs. Axtell.—Nothing that I know of. I suspect that the Smiths are preparing to give a big blow-out, but our party line telephone has been out of order all day and I haven't been able to learn any of the particulars. Provoking, isn't it?—Chicago Tribune.

Love and Superstition.

She.—Henry, I'm afraid you are rather superstitious.

He.—Nonsense! What put that into your head?

She.—You think I am very much in love with you?

He.—Of course.

She.—And isn't that superstition?—Chicago Journal.

Baffling.

A maid neither rich nor romantic. Wed a man neither poor nor pedantic. Had a good time and a bad one. And empty of spirit.

The neighbors are nearly frantic.

—Fuck.

OUTWITTED.

A gentleman from Kentucky recently told a story of an old dorky down south who was informed that if he were bitten by a snake and drank a quart of whisky the snake would die and he would go unscathed.

"Dar's only one trouble 'bout dat cure," the old man said, "I know whar dere's plenty snakes, but whar's I gwine ter git de whisky?"—Chicago Journal.

Watched.

Miss Lighted—Was very much admired at the wedding ceremony last night, noticed one gentleman who never took his eyes off me the whole evening.

Miss Sharp.—Did the gentleman have a blank mustache waxed on the end?

"Yes; do you know him?"

"No; but he is a detective. He was there to watch the presents."—Tit-Bits.

Henry Getting Economical.

"Mother, Henry writes that he has had money right away for to get an automobile."

"Land sakes! what does that mean by such extravagance?"

"Extravagance? Looks ter me like it's his right to have a car, but you know how economical he is. He says he lives so far from the college he wants it to save carfare."—Judge.

Change of Mind.

How far the future is! From my hall, I should have discovered, But he did it—N. Y. Times.

SEE KNEW.

"I've just been introduced to your husband; a most interesting man."

"Then don't you see, he could have been my husband."—Ally Sloper.

A Preference.

Cholly.—Which would you rather be, 40 or 50?

The Philosopher.—Fifty.

Cholly (in surprise).—You would. Why?

The Philosopher.—Because, while 40 is the old age of youth, 50 is the youth of old age, and I'd rather be young among the old, than old among the young.—Ally Sloper.

The Horse's Hope.

Young Horse.—Nothing but work, work, work! I've a great mind to come out!

Old Horse.—Have patience. When you are so old that you can't walk, you'll be advertised as suitable for a lady to drive, and then you'll live in ease and luxury.—N. Y. Weekly.

Certainly Not.

Perly.—When a fellow is trying to kiss a girl, don't ye know, and she struggles and resists and finally says: "If this you are, get out!" then what should a fellow do?

Algy.—Keep right on, dear boy. No gentleman ever declines his lady.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Two Clogs Calls.

Hodgins.—By George! I've had no room to escape from being rich! I mean this man is drawing the goods I prize in the lottery.

Bilgins.—And I have had a narrow escape from matrimony. I proposed, and if the girl had said yes, I should have married her.—Chicago Journal.

A Blank Airway.

She.—What a pity!

He.—Oh, I don't care. He will never be missed.—Tawa Topic.

bank and sent a collector down to Munroe & Munroe. "Why, certainly!" said that firm, obviously, and drew out a check for the full amount on a Montreal bank.

McHugh & Co. deposited the check that afternoon, on December 2—and thought no more of it for a week. At the end of the week back came the check marked "N. C."

A member of the McHugh firm went down to investigate. He found a clerk situation. After the smash in copper two years ago, however, they had a hard row to hoe, and little was heard of them in connection with this company. They nevertheless kept the Marconi stock to the front, and when there came a revival of the demand for copper abroad, their prospects brightened.

Lay Plans for Coup.

They recognized the Montreal & Boston, got some other properties together, and then laid plans for one of the biggest stock market coups in the history of the curb.

As a preliminary step, they formed to have the stock of the company underwritten with the special provision that the work should be done by stock exchange firms as Munroe & Munroe were not members of the exchange. The stock was of a par
