HIGH SCHOOL BOYS PLAY FIRST GAME OF SEASON AS GRAYSON CONQUORS BY SCORE OF 14-0

Black Cats Get Much Experience In First Game Of Life At Grayson, When They Met A Team Of Three Years Experience—All Say There Was No Injuries And Are Ready To Show Them Who Is Best The Next Time.

Morehead is proud of the Black Cats, who journeyed to Grayson last Friday and brought home the nothing end of a 14 to 0 score in the first football game of the season for the Cats. Incidentally it was the first football game of any season for the same Cats, which is the reason Morehead is proud.

Grayson won. It is true, but Morehead did more than win. They learned that they had a team. They learned that they could keep up their spirits and their morale in the face of defeat. They learned that they could carry the battle up to the last whistle, and could fight in the face of certain defeat. And that by the way is what makes men and soldiers.

The Cats as the results of the game and the way it was played showed we have some of the best material in this section from which to build a machine that will win. Every one of the boys was green. None of them had ever played a game of football before. They went up against a seasoned team, which had three years experience. Jun. Hill, Watt Pritchard, Dick Clay, Peck Robinson, Roy Cassidy, to mention only a few of the boys, showed real football, although it is unfair to the other boys to mention them. Every member of the team deserves mention, because every member was in it right to the last. The game was a proving ground and the local fans had plenty of proof that they had a real football machine in the making.

Probably the most noteworthy feature of the game was the pride which Morehead may take in having a gang of boys who can take the field in sport, and, whether they win or lose, be gentlemen. The Grayson people paid many compliments to the Cats for their conduct both on and off the field.

The Game.

Morehead kicked off, Grayson returning the ball to the ten yard line. The Cats held, but in the first minutes of play were unsettled and nervous, losing five yards on a penalty, which placed Grayson within five yards of the goal. They forced the ball over for the first touchdown within four minutes of the opening of the game. Morehead was offside on the play for goal, giving Grayson the extra point. Score Grayson 7; Morehead 0.

Grayson received on the next kick off. Morehead taking the ball and returning it ten yards. Morehead took the line gaining three yards. Another line plunge held and Morehead kicked, the Grayson receiver being downed in his tracks. Grayson tried Dick Clay's side of the line but it refused to give. They tried the other side of the line with the same results and kicked. Jun returned the ball for a good gain. The first quarter ended with the ball in Morehead's possession on the forty yard line.

Morehead gained on line plunges making their first downs and plowing through the defense of Grayson. A fumble lost them the ball and Grayson tied a trick play which gained them fifteen yards. The Cats held them without a gain and forced a kick. As the half ended Morehead had the ball and were making headway to the coveted goal.

The second half opened with Morehead receiving. The playing throughout the second half was in the center of the field with the Cats holding their own with one exception, when Grayson through a series of breaks gained possession of the ball on Morehead's 10 yard line and forced it over for the second touchdown of the game. Score: Grayson 14; Morehead 0.

M. W. C. TO MEET WITH MRS. H. C. WILLET

The Morehead Woman's Club held a business meeting, Monday night for the purpose of laying plans for the year's work. The first regular meeting will be held next Monday at the home of Mrs. H. C. Willet with Mrs. A. L. Miller assisting. Mrs. S. M. Bradley of the music department will have a charge of the program. Everybody is urged to be present.

Mr. and Mrs. Val Evans of Olive Hill, and Mrs. H. H. Henritze of Pikeville visited Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Amburgey and Mrs. G. D. Alfrey, Sunday.

RED CROSS DRIVE TO START MONDAY, 7th

The Red Cross Drive for members of 1929-30 will open in Rowan county, Monday, October 7th. The county has been divided into sections with the different organizations at work.

The churches of Morehead and the American Legion will assist in the drive. Last year the enrollment was about 40. This year it is hoped it will be at least doubled. The drive closes on Armistice Day, November 11th.

When you come into town Monday, come prepared to enroll in the Red Cross.

Kiwanians Enjoy Rev. A. C. Brooks

At the regular meeting on Monday evening the club had the pleasure of having as the speaker Rev. A. C. Brooks, of Mt. Sterling, who is helping the Rev. C. B. Cloyd in a series of meetings at the Christian church. The Rev. Brooks introduced his talk by saying there were three things a public speaker should adhere to, the first, stand up so people can see you; the second, speak so the people can hear you; and the third, sit down so the people will love you.

According to the speaker a luncheon club should make certain contributions to the life of the community. The main purpose is not to eat, although it is a fine thing to rub shoulders with your fellow man at the table. The outstanding contribution, however, should be: Developing a high standard of business and professional ability. The clubs exist to stand for and insist on high ethical standards. The luncheon club

Mrs. M. Clayton Has Bridge Party

Mrs. Morgan Clayton entertained with a bridge party last Thursday after, honoring Mrs. Garnett Chennault of Mt. Sterling and Mrs. Kirby Bradley of Huntington.

The home was beautifully decorated with baskets of gorsean flowers. High score prize was won by Mrs. A. M. Bradley of Ashland. Low score prize was won by Mrs. J. A. Holley. Attractive guest prizes were given to Mrs. Chennault and Mrs. Chennault and Mrs. Bradley.

Those present were: Mesdames Bradley, Chennault, C. B. McCullough, S. M. Bradley, C. B. Downing, Ernest Jayne, J. A. Holley, Mervil J. Lewis, C. B. Daugherty, Ed Williams, Clarke Lane, John W. Holbrook, H. C. Willet, Miss Ayne Bradley, Mesdames J. Thomas R. W. Kincaid, Charles Bristow, Leslie Shroat, George Taylor, Miss Kathleen Palmer from Owsingville.

Mrs. A. M. Bradley from Ashland, Mrs. Becker from Haldeman.

Guests for luncheon were Mesdames Hobart Johnson, Hartley Battson, Oscar Palmer and M. P. Davis.

The hostess was assisted by Miss Mary Sue Miller and Miss Christine Anderson, Ruth Denton of Owsingville.

The last of the old landmarks held over from the normal school, which was operated for many years by the C. W. B. M. of the Christian Church on the site of which is now the Morehead State Teachers' College, is rapidly being removed. The B. J. Murphy Construction Company, who was recently awarded the contract for the construction of the new library on the campus of the Morehead State Teachers' College has had at work a large force of men during the past week making way for the new building.

Burgess Hall was erected in 1902 by the C. W. B. M. and was named in honor of Mrs. A. O. Burgess of Indianapolis, who was at that time president of the organization. It was one of the best known buildings of the former school and of the new state institution. Since 1923 it has been the home of President and Mrs. F. C. Button as well as the chapel and music rooms. For many years it has been the community gathering place until its chapel was replaced last spring by the new auditorium which has many times the seating capacity of the old building.

For the past four years new buildings have been constructed on the campus to replace one of the old buildings. Burgess Hall was the last to remain due to its chapel. Its ivy covered walls gave it a romantic appearance and for several years it linked the old and the new school.

to help banish dishonest means through disseminating them in the community. The spirit of the business and professional man have been to discredit any attempt to dishonest practices in all communities. Another contribution the luncheon club can make is to promote a better understanding of each other. The club according to Rev. Brooks, helps to banish petty jealousies and ignorances. Petty selfishness and narrowness in a community is the worst enemy the community can have.

The president of the Club introduced the following members: Dr. R. L. Hoke, Mr. A. C. Points and Dr. R. F. Terrill. The following were visitors, Rev. A. C. Brooks and Dr. J. G. Black.

Kiwanian C. Van Antwerp, was appointed by President Adkins to be Chairman of the committee on ladies night and to bring back a report next Monday evening as to when and where held.

Circuit Court Convenes Monday

Rowan County Circuit Court will convene Monday, October 7th with a fairly heavy docket. There is only one criminal case that being the State versus Mrs. Jas. Reynolds, which is called for the third day of the term.

There are forty three equity cases continued from the June term with twenty new cases to be called this time. Divorces seem to be less in number this time, with eleven old cases and six new ones.

On the ordinary docket there are twenty six cases carried over and twelve new ones, and one appeal in which the Ashland Supply Co., is the applicant and T. H. Frank is the appellee.

Ten ordinary cases are called for the first day. The following are the list of the jurors:

Petite Jury. Fred Calvert, W. A. Crestwhaiter, Levi Eldridge, William McGuire, Everett, Oney David Epperhart Brach

John Seaggs, Mrs. Cora Adkins, Conley Arthur Blair, Wm. McCormick, Sherman Mabry, Jessie Pettit, Geo. Brown, Albert Hall, Julius Trent, M. F. Ky Wesleyan Frosh Play Here Friday

The team representing Morehead State College opens its season Friday with the Wesleyan Freshman team at the College Field. This is the Eagles first game and will give the student body a line on just what to expect from them before the season is over.

Morehead did not pick a set-up for its opening game. Wesleyan has probably the best Frosh team in the State and one of the best any College has had heretofore. Wesleyan Frosh recruits will form the majority of the team that will battle the Army next year at West Point and this great drawing card has drawn the cream of the high school stars of last year in the State to Wesleyan. These recruits will form the majority of the team that will battle Army next season and they come from every section of the state. Thirty men are donating uniforms every afternoon and are battling Wesleyan's Varsity on even terms. Their starting line will average 175 pounds with their backfield 166 pounds.

Many Good Lyceums Numbers This Year

The completion of the new auditorium on the campus of the Morehead Teachers College makes it possible to bring to this community a winter lyceum program that is rare in a city of this size of Morehead. For the past six years, the school has sponsored a Redpath program and during this time the citizens of Morehead have been permitted to enjoy these numbers along with the student body. Heretofore, it has been impossible to seat comfortably all who desired to attend these numbers but with the program now booked, the auditorium will meet any occasion.

The program is varied and consists of six numbers. It is divided into two sections, three numbers appearing each semester. The price of admission will be put within reach of those who appreciate artists in their line of work.

The first number will appear on the evening of November 5th. Morehead has always appreciated high class musical numbers and especially class quartettes. The Heidelberg Student Chorus is a male singing organization of the very highest type. Rousing student songs are featured, also selections from the "Student Prince," "Countess Maritza," "My Maryland," and other popular light operas.

The volume which this chorus attains is extraordinary and can only be compared to the swelling tones and rolling harmonies of a mighty organ. Astonishingly delicate tone shadings are also attained.

The Heidelberg Student Chorus is particularly notable because of the interesting feature that practically every member of the company is a soloist.

Each of the nine young men who compose the company is an entertainer as well as a singer, and much good humor and lively and original comedy are interpolated throughout the program.

The singers present a colorful picture upon the platform with their smart military coats or horizon blue shining boots and swagger student caps. A portion of the program is presented in full evening dress.

The other numbers that will follow are: The Garay Sisters, Gilbert's Male Quartet, Dr. Rows O'Neil, Mardon and Company and last is an excellent play, "The My Advice."

Revival At The First Christian Church

The meeting which began Monday night is going well. The crowds have not been so large but the services have been spiritual and very helpful. Rev. Brooks is bringing very strong and helpful messages. The people of the community are invited to have fellowship with us in these services. Some of the subjects which will be discussed by Rev. Brooks during the meeting are: "The Unpardonable Sin," "The Trend of Our Civilization," "God Is Not Mocked," "Why Join The Church?" "Are There Ten Righteous People In Morehead?" "The Efficiency of Prayer," "The Chosen Few," "The Sixth Sense," "A Released Religion."

GUESTS ARE SERVED AT CASSITY HOME

Mrs. and Mrs. J. M. Cassity had as guests Saturday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Caudill of Ashland Ky., Mr. and Mrs. Herman Butler of Portsmouth, Ohio, Miss Mary Cludill Mr. and Mrs. Otto Carr, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Boggess. Cards were the chief amusements of the evening.

LIBERTY TICKET

A BIG DIFFERENCE

If there is even one radio fan around Morehead who imagines that the nightly advertising he hears over his set is going to make radio a serious competitor of the press, here is a chance for him to change his mind. Roger W. Babson, noted statistician, recently had an ad published in five newspapers that brought him 222 replies for every reply he received from a half-hour broadcast over the Columbia circuit network, which cost him the same amount of money as the ads. The broadcast brought in 16 inquiries and two orders, and the ad brought 4000 inquiries. That seems to set aside any contention that radio will ever oust the newspaper as an advertising medium. But there is a little more to the argument in favor of the newspaper, if you want it. The replies Mr. Babson received from the radio broadcast cost him $166.66 apiece, while those he received from printer's ink cost him but 75c each. Now draw your own conclusions.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE NEEDED

Everyday in every way, the need of a Chamber of Commerce in Morehead becomes more and more apparent. That, to paraphrase the once famous Dr. Cone is that situation as it stands at present in Morehead. Nor is that statement a criticism of any existent clubs or organizations in the city.

without question. If it did nothing more than bring the business men together where they may rub elbows with each other and get acquainted it would unquestionably be worth while. But any civic organization of the type of the Kiwanis Club is intended chiefly to supplement the Chamber of Commerce and not to take its place. Its work is too limited, its scope is too prescribed to take over the functions of a commercial organization. Nor does Kiwanis pretend to usurp that function. If Morehead had a Kiwanis Club, a Rotary Club and a Lions Club rolled into one, each would look after one certain line of endeavor and none would replace the old Chamber of Commerce, that link that binds every business man in a community together for the furtherance of business and industrial life in a community.

Morehead has everything but the thing she needs. We have natural resources second to none. We have a great institution of learning, that is but now coming into her own. We have retail stores that are a credit to any city. We have a citizenship of which any town would be proud. But we have no organizations that binds the business men together that advertises the city, that seeks to bring in new industries, that working as a unit, tries to build up the industrial and business welfare of the community.

Morehead right now could be a city of some six or seven thousand inhabitants if we had the factories that would offer to its citizens. Given a center of attraction such as the Morehead Teachers' College, people want to settle here and make this their future home. They want to bring their children here where they may educate them free of cost. And the one reason that they do not do so is the simple and prohibitive reason that they are not offered an opportunity to make a living while their children become educated. Thousands of people have expressed the desire to make Morehead their home, but have been kept from it for that reason.

Now suppose we had an active Chamber of Commerce, an organization that was leaving no stone unturned to bring to our city factories that would use our abundant natural resources in manufacture? Suppose we were able to say to those seeking a home location in a good school town that we had industries developed here that would take care of all of them who chose to come? What could be the result? Within a year or two, Morehead would double in population. And the population would be of the sort that improves communities, for only that sort are interested in locating in a school town.

And when their population doubles the opportunities double. A new citizen brings other new citizens. A new home creates another new home. Cities are built by action, concerted action that comes only from a close knit organization such as a Chamber of Commerce.

PROF. H. C. HAGGAN,

Of The Morehead State Normal School and Teachers College.

ROWAN COUNTY'S SOIL NEEDS LIME

Most of the soil tests made with Rowan county's soil shows a deficiency of lime. This deficiency is admitted by many farmers but little lime is used to solve the problem. The cost of lime plus the freight can be had at the Morehead station for less than $2 per ton. The added costs in hauling it to the farm will produce added returns which will pay dividends on the investment. Many farmers figure little in the amount of return on each $1 invested in fertilizers. He experiments little in leaving a check plot to see whether each dollar invested in fertilizers will bring in $2 or $3 or whether or not it shows a loss. Each year sees a lowering of the crop producing power on many farms and this will continue as long as farmers fail to study their local needs.

DO WE FIGURE OUR COSTS CORRECTLY?

After passing up the above, it is rather strange to see a farmer figure closely on what it costs to lime a field but it is difficult to impress one with the return on the investment. Some have hesitated to lime their fields for fear their soil will be improved, larger crops will be harvested, and the assessor will raise the value of his farm. This is ridiculous. A farmer will find it easier to pay higher taxes when his farm is producing profitable crops than many find it at present in trying to make ends meet by producing crops at a loss on a poor farm.

SUCCESSFUL LIME ASSOCIATION

The community of Farmers has well demonstrated how such an association can function in Rowan county. A lime association was formed there not long ago by interested farmers. They put up a $5 membership fee and cooperatively built a shed to house the lime. The Citizens Bank loaned them money to further their project. These who belong to the association can purchase any quantity of lime at cost plus 25 cent handling charge and non-members pay a 50 cent handling charge will be sufficient to purchase a car of lime in advance and then the association members can purchase any quantity of lime at cost and at any time it is desired. It will be a convenience to many farmers in the vicinity of the lime shed.

SEE THE COUNTY AGENT ABOUT THE NEW LIME ASSOCIATION

At the present time, other farmers are signing agreements for the establishment of several other lime sheds along the railroad, and within hauling distances of their farms. The location of these sheds throughout the county will eventually lead to crop increases and in building up the soil of these farms. It is a new enterprise as advancement of a community the burden of promotion or progress falls upon the shoulders of a few interested men. Rowan county has these men and they are setting the pace for the others.

DOES THE USE OF COMPLETE FERTILIZER ALWAYS PAY BEST?

One sees load after load of complete fertilizer being hauled to different farms throughout the county. These farmers are trying to solve their fertility problem of low crop yields in an expensive way. These farmers have done little to study the fertilizer needs of their soils or else complete fertilizers would not always be purchased. Soil tests made throughout the county show that nitrogen, phosphorus, and lime are the deficient elements. It matters not how much nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium are added to the soil if lime is the deficient element. A crop can produce no more in yield than is the supply of the deficient element. It has been proven in tests brought out the county that when super phosphate added to lime and applied to soybeans or cowpeas yields had from two to three times that of the check plots where no lime and super phosphate had. However, the soybeans should be inoculated. A farmer can purchase lime cheaper than he can purchase complete fertilizers and at the same time bring his soil up to fertility. The use of fertilizer alone cannot build up the organic supply which is deficient in most soils of the county. Fertilizer is only a temporary fertility aid when it is used on soil deficient in organic matter crops are more likely to show

LIME PRODUCES CROP GROWTH AND MORE ORGANIC MATTER

The richer the soil in organic matter, the greater will fertilizer respond in increasing crop yields, and the poorer the soil, fertilizers will give less return on the $1 dollar invested. Therefore the growing of more legumes that have been inoculated, limed, and super phosphate added, the greater is the opportunity of building up the soil in organic matter and fertility.

LIME USED WITH SUPER PHOSPHATE

One will find that when lime is used it will pay increased dividends by supplementing it with super phosphate. Where two tons of lime had been added to an acre of soil it will pay to use from 200 to 400 pounds of super phosphate that tests about 16 per cent. In tests carried on in the county this spring increased yields beyond belief by most farmers have been secured.

LIME DEMONSTRATIONS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTY

On the farm of Ben McBryer a soybean demonstration was carried out. A plot of ground was divided into two parts. Both were seeded into Yellow Mammoth Soybeans. The fields were prepared the same and crops were seeded about the same time. On one field the beans were inoculated and lime was used at the rate of two tons per acre and super phosphate at the rate of 300 pounds per acre. The check plot was not inoculated, nor was lime, or super phosphate used. The treated field produced beans that measured close to 42 inches and many plants beyond this. The foliage was dense and it was impossible to walk thru the plants. The plants were filled with pods. The entire treated plot was of dark green color. The crop will produce close to three tons per acre. The untreated plot was about two feet high and the stems contained few leaves and practically no pods. The foliage was of a sickly yellow color. It is doubtful whether the yield here will be 1000 pounds per acre. On examining the roots of plants scattered over the treated field, they were filled with bacteria gathering nodules and this accounted for the increased growth, dense foliage, and rich green color. The roots of the untreated plants were shorter, had practically no nodules and their yellow color showed that no nitrogen was obtained from the air, but the plant had to draw upon the soil for its supply of nitrogen and very little was there to be had.

DID IT PAY TO USE LIME AND SUPER PHOSPHATE

There is a difference of well over two tons per acre in yield of hay on the treated field. This increase in yield will give a return of close to $5 for each dollar invested in lime and super phosphate.

The "DESERT MOON MYSTERY"

By KAY CLEAVER STRAHAN.

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER III—Mrs. Magin has an uneasy feeling that there is a sinister motive in the twin's presence at the ranch, and her suspicions are strengthened by the girl's mysterious prowling around the place. John becomes engaged to Danielle. Canfield shows a pronounced liking for Gabrielle.

CHAPTER IV

The Cabin

The girls had been on the Desert Moon a little better than six weeks when, one evening, Sam came out into my kitchen where I was setting bread. "Mary," he began, real solemn for him, "the ancients used to have cities that they called cities of refuge. No matter what a fellow had done, if he could get inside into one of those cities, he was safe. Your kitchen always kinda seems like that to me—a city of refuge."

"Lands, Sam," I said, "what have you been up to that you are heating this safety first movement?"

"I haven't been up to anything," Sam answered, "and I don't aim to be. But, Mary, some time ago you came to me with some suspicions. I laughed them off. I am not laughing now. I'm worried. Queer things are going on around here. What I want to know, now is what do you know?"

"Nothing," I said.

"What do you, suspect, then, Sam?"

"Nothing. What do you?"

"Nothing."

"That, I see now, wouldn't have been a bad place for us both to laugh. Neither of us did."

"Have you any idea," Sam questioned, "why the girls go prowling all over the place, about and horse-back, daytimes, and nighttimes, too, when they should be in their beds?"

"Well, all I know is just what I've known all along. They are hunting for something."

"Sure they are hunting for something. But what?"

"I don't know. But whatever it is, they are going to use to get revenge, to injure maliciously somebody."

"Revenge, h—!" Sam said.

"Have it your own way. Only I happened one night to hear Gaby say to Danny that they had come to and opened the pass-window a crack. Just as I opened the window I heard John say, "I thought Danny was in here."

"No," Gaby said, "but won't you come in and talk to me?"

"What about?"

"About—this."

"I dared not peek, so I did not know what she meant until she said, 'Why won't you kiss me?'"

"I'll kiss you," I said, "but I don't want to pick flowers in Hubert Hand's yard?"

"I hate you!"

"Don't be sore at me, Gaby. John said, 'But I'm telling you, that's a lot nearer the truth than what you usually say.'"

"John was one of the poorest talkers ever heard. One of those strong, silent men supposed to abound in the West, and who are likewise supposed to make every word that they say count. If John's did, they counted backwards."

"My dear, haven't I proven over and over again that I love you? In every way, I have made myself ridiculous here, because I haven't been able to conceal my feelings for you."

"I think," John said, "but most of that stuff you pull is just to spite Danny. It doesn't spite her, though she knows she's the only girl in the world for me. I wish you'd cut it out—all of that, Gaby. Won't you and just be good friends?"

"You'd not want me for an enemy, would you?"

"Getting at anything, going any place, Gaby?"

"Perhaps. If Danny should hear that you have made love to me—" her, that maybe all of us would like to go; all that is, except Martha and herself. Celebrations were never good for Martha.

"I spoke right and said to count me out. I know the deserts in July. But the boys were enthusiastic about it, and Danny was interested. Gaby, coming in late, greeted the idea with the same enthusiasm with which a woman greets moths in the clothes closet."

"When she craved for a Fourth of July celebration?" she asked.

"We have never seen a rodeo," Danny answered.

"Go, by all means," Gaby said, "Buy pink lemonade. March in the parade. Ride in the Liberty car. Mrs. Magin would be stunning as the goddess of Liberty, with—"

"Don't let my stuntness stop anything," I said. "I am not going."

"It would be a long, hot ride. Probably we should all have a pleasant time, right here at home."

But there was something in the way she had said it, too quickly in answer, to a look from Gaby, that made me think there was more to her backing out of the plan than had appeared on the surface.

Gaby had just begun her dinner. The rest of us had finished; so, according to our custom, we excused ourselves and went our ways. Gaby tried to stay with Gaby, but Martha fussed and insisted that he come with her.

I had a sure feeling that Danny would return, and that she and Gaby would have something to say to each other. I went into the kitchen, stepped back into the pass-pantry,

"I have never made love to you. It would be your word against mine. I think Danny would take mine, if it came to a showdown. Listen here, child; don't you try to make trouble between Danny and me."

"Meaning?"

"Nothing. Except that it wouldn't be healthy for anyone what tried it."

"Boo-oo! Dangerous Dan McGrew stuff? Out where men are men? Killer loose tonight—all that, eh, Johnnie?"

"A door opened," I said, "came in Danny's voice, 'I'm looking everywhere for you.'"

"What," Danny questioned, when the door had closed behind John, "made you both look so angry just now?"

"Never mind. Are you going to that fools' celebration, with only a day or two left, now?"

"I suppose not, if you don't want me to. I'd love going. I know there is no use in staying here."

"In other words, you would sacrifice my future for a rodeo? I more than half believe that you know—"

"What possible object could I have?"

"Many, my dear. Very many. Though I think that getting rid of me would outweigh the others. Listen to me, Danielle Canneziano, if I thought that you were keeping this from me, in order to bury me alive in this God-forsaken hole, and force me to watch you and John—"

"Gaby!"

"I've been a fool! Why can't I learn to take into consideration your d—n moralities? Understand this Dan. Don't fancy for one instant that failure is going to keep me here. Did you think, with a weapon like that in my hands, that I'd stand for anything less than a fifty-fifty proposition?"

"Your original plan would have been better—easier, simpler. But I'll have my share out of this, anyway. So, if you do know—"

"Gaby, I don't know. I'll swear that I don't. How could I? But surely you wouldn't—would attempt—"

"That is for you to say, darling." Darling, as she said it then, was as wicked a word as I have ever listened to.

"For me to say?"

"Give John to me. I've changed my mind. If you'll do that, I'll stay right here, and settle down, and do an imitation of a moral, model wife that would satisfy even you."

"Gaby, you speak as if John were a child's toy, to be passed about. I couldn't give him to you, if I were willing to."

"You could, and you know it. You won't. So, that's that. But keep your righteous fingers out of my life; stop your d—n preaching and meddling. I am going to the cabin now. You would better come with me."

"We've searched that cabin a thousand times."

"All the same, it is the one logical place—far removed, and under cover."

"The cabin is the one Sam built to live in when he first came to the place. It is up Boulder creek, about half a mile from the ranch-house. Sam has kept it in repair, but he's not doing it, I think, so sentimental memories, though he declared it is to be used he dislikes wreck age on the place. When John and Martha were little things, Sam used to hide their Christmas presents up there, under the shelf in the kitchen."

"The shelf, about three feet wide, is built across one end of the kitchen. It served Sam for a tabl, pantry, and sink. Being a man, he built it right handy, like a chest, so that the entire top of it had to be raised to get to the storage place underneath. There was no secret about it. All anyone had to do was to move everything off the top of it, and lift the lid. But I had read how the hardest problems for detectives always turned out to be something that had been too simple to notice; so my plan was to go up there and raise the lid."

"On my way, I met the girls coming home. I imagined that they looked at me with suspicion. I passed a remark about the sweet-smelling clover hay, and hurried right along."

"Hal! an hour later, when I was expecting instant death at any minute. I thought about that sweet-clover smell, and how unappreciative I have been of it, and of the blue

PAINS Went Away

"I WAS very much run-down in health. I had a dreadful ache across the middle of my back. I had a dull, tired feeling and I dreaded the thought of having to do my household tasks. I was tired when I got up in the morning. I got no rest, I was from my sleep, and I was sleepy all day long. My husband got a bottle of Cardui for me. It was not long before I began to show a decided improvement. My strength began to return and I felt much more like myself. The sleepy spells gradually quit and the pains in my back and sides disappeared. Cardui is a splendid tonic for women. I proved it for myself." Mrs. J. E. Shelley, Box 22, R. F. SCHOOL NEWS

Reverend A. C. Brooks, who is conducting the meeting at the Christian Church will speak to the students here Friday morning at 11:15 A. M. Mr. Brooks is a splendid speaker and parents and friends of the school will enjoy his lecture. People of the town are cordially invited to this as well as all other meetings of the local high school.

The Seniors met and organized their class. Those who were elected officers were, Louise Caudill, President, Roy Cassidy, Vice-President, and Ted Crosswaite, Secretary and Treasurer.

The class has decided to sell candy at noon and with the proceeds cleared on candy the members decided to buy some thing and leave to the school. Roy Cassidy moved that the class install a drinking fountain in the flower hall.

Probably no more useful object could be placed in the school. Facilities for getting a drink are not satisfactory.

The Senior Class of last year gave a nice clock to the school. A small repair needs to be made before it will run. Up to this time it has been impossible to get anyone to work on it.

Everybody was delighted with the showing our boys made in the football game last Friday afternoon against Grayson. This was our first game and Grayson had a team composed of boys who had played two or three years.

Season tickets are out for our home football games. It is hoped that all who expect to attend or support the team financially will buy a season ticket so that some of their obligations may be met successfully.

Miss Lona Cooper, our third grade teacher has been out of school this week, because of the illness of her mother. Miss Marie Holbrook is substituting for Miss Cooper.

The football team and officials of the school are very grateful to Dr. Adkins for his service in giving the boys a physical examination. This is very important and if each boy had been compelled to have it done would have cost quite a little money. We owe Dr. Adkins a great deal for this help.

Pupils and teachers are happy over the fact that work started last Monday on the foundation of the main building.

Coal is being put into the bin for the winter. It seems that it is just in time. We had our first fire in the furnace Tuesday.

HALDEMAN SCHOOL NEWS

Our school now has an enrollment of 300 in the grades and 36 in the high school.

The teachers and pupils are doing better work as they are becoming more acquainted with one another.

The basket ball teams are practicing regularly and they are enthusiastic over the coming games.

A new pump is being installed on the school ground so as to accommodate the children.

MIDLAND NEWS

SAYS GOOD SHEEP WILL CONTINUE TO PAY KENTUCKY

Kentucky farmers who produce standardized lambs of high quality can reasonably expect to continue to secure good returns from their flocks, thinks C. D. Phillips, of the department of markets and rural finance of the Experiment Station and College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky.

He believes, however, that it will be necessary to give attention to quality in order to meet competition from other lamb producing regions. The market wants a fat, well-bred, bloody ewe or wether lamb weighing are paid for lambs of this type, and farmers to secure the most for their lambs should endeavor to meet the market requirement.

FIRE INSURANCE

Refund To Help Mammoth Cave Park

Louisville, Kentucky—Fire insurance policyholders, by endorsing their 12 1/2% refund drafts and mailing them to headquarters of the Mammoth Cave National Park Association at 401 Marlin Brown Building, Louisville, Ky., are in position to help greatly the establishment of the National Park for Kentucky.

It has been shown that while each refund check to be received by the policyholders is very small, averaging around 75c, the sum total of refunds would be a considerable amount, because of the large number of policyholders who will receive them. Quite a number of policyholders have already endorsed and mailed their checks to the association headquarters, and the Mammoth Cave National Park Association is requesting the co-operation of all others who are interested in the establishment of a National Park for Kentucky.

It is stated by officials of the association that while the Mammoth Cave National Park is assured, a considerable amount of money is needed in order to make further payments on land and caves which have been purchased by the association.

Two-thirds of the Mammoth Cave Estate, all of Colossal Cave, and fifteen thousand acres of land have been acquired by the Association, and negotiations are being carried on for further purchases. It is stated by Mammoth Cave officials that steps toward making the cave area a National Park have already resulted in a large increase in the number of tourists visiting Kentucky.

ing about 80 pounds. Highest prices. The marketing of spring lambs so far this year has been heavier than during the corresponding period of 1928, and the remaining supply to be sold is greater, while fewer lambs are available for market in western states. The demand for feeder lambs this year probably will exceed that of a year earlier, and as a result prices may be forced to a place where feeding operations will not be as profitable as during the 1928-1929 season.

With prospect of smaller receipts from the west and the continuation of the demand for lamb for the next few months, prices may ad-vanse somewhat from the present level. The producer who has raised choice ewe or wether lambs should be able to secure a good price for them even under somewhat adverse conditions. On the other hand if the lambs which are still to be marketed are poorly fed and are rough, and consist of a large percentage of buck lambs, prices are liable to be unsatisfactory.

FALL PASTURING

Many farmers are now depending on pastures for the entire feed of their livestock. Some of them are faring well enough at the present but most of the pastures are almost entirely Japanese clover and it will be killed at the first frost and the pasture will then be about gone those who do not get their stock on a better ration at once will soon lose what they have gained since pasture improved after the fall rains began. Especially is this true of cattle both dairy and beef types. And what is lost this late in the fall can not be regained during winter either in flesh or milk production. Don't wait until your pastures are gone before starting to feed some grain and hay.

Now is a good time to check up on the value of Japan Clover or Lespedeza. It is now about the only pasture plant that has been giving satisfaction for two months and at present it is as good as any that is found. The farmer who can see the benefits of lespedeza in his pastures it is now growing. Seed will be available next spring at a reasonable price and every progressive farmer should sow some of it for pasture and not wait for it to seed itself which will do in from five to ten years. It can be sown on sod land and with no preparation of the soil at all and a seeding of 5 pounds of seed to the acre will give a fair stand that will thicken up the next year. Look your fields over and decide now to seed them next year where ever it is not growing now.

ADAPTED CLOVER SEED
BEST, SAYS STATION
After studying for several years the relationship of unadapted seed to clover failures, the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky believes that many failures are due to the use of seed produced in foreign countries or in states where climatic and other conditions differ from those in Kentucky.

While many persons think red clover no longer can be grown in Kentucky, still farmers are found in about every community who continue to produce good clover from year to year. Most of these successful growers save seed, and have been using nothing but their own seed for years.

One Daviess county farmer has been saving seed for 26 years, and another one for 15 years. A Trimble county farmer failed to grow red clover for three consecutive years, spending $150 for seed. He observed volunteer clover plants in another field, and from them obtained seed for a small patch, and continued to produce home-grown seed until he had enough for his own use. He has not had a clover failure in 15 years.

The Experiment Station has tested foreign and adapted, red clover seed in different parts of the state. Average yields for 1927, 1928 and 1929 in three different parts of the state were: Adapted Kentucky seed, 4,200 pounds of hay per acre; western grown seed, 1,980 pounds; western seed, 1,150 pounds, and foreign seed, 810 pounds.

The Station desires to hear from farmers who have tried the plan of saving their own seed.

POULTRY POINTERS

With egg prices going up you are naturally interested in securing the largest number of eggs possible from your flock. This can be done only by giving the pullets the attention they deserve. It is highly important that the pullets be in good flesh when they begin to lay, so if you have been feeding sparingly increase to full feed. That is, give the pullets all of the feed they will consume. Do not worry about getting the pullets too fat, for fat pullets will continue to lay during the winter, whereas those in poor flesh are likely to go into a winter molt.

To secure winter eggs the following suggestions should be followed:

1. Examine the pullets closely for indications of worms. If worms are present, the pullets should be treated before being moved to permanent quarters.
2. The birds should be dusted with sodium fluoride or black leaf 40 should be applied to the roosts. To rid them of lice.
3. Thoroughly clean the house and disinfect it with a coal tar disinfectant before housing the pullets. Place clean straw in the house. The straw should be 6 inches deep.
4. Cull out all slow maturing, late feathering pullets. Buy only well developed pullets in the laying house.
5. House the pullets in comfortable quarters, allowing ample room—(three and one-half square feet of floor space per bird for Leghorns and square feet per bird for general purpose breeds). Regardless of the price of eggs it does not pay to raise your birds. If you have more pullets than house room, sell some birds or provide more houses.
6. When housing the pullets keep them confined to the house two weeks, after which they may run out during favorable weather. Keeping birds confined permits them to become accustomed to the house and encourages them to consume more feed.

If there is any indication of roup, the pullets should be vaccinated, you may secure detailed information on worm treatment or vaccination by writing to the Veterinary Department, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky.

Family Re-union At Willard, Ky.

On Sunday, September 22, a number of friends and relatives assembled at the home of Mrs. Malinda Barber, at Willard, Ky. Three states were represented by different members of the group, namely Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky. The guests began to arrive about 9 o'clock in the morning, bringing with them lunches that contained almost everything that one's appetite can crave. The day was spent in getting re-acquainted with relatives and in exploring the old home, which contained many antiques and other oddities of particular interest, which provided entertainments for those who were particularly interested in furnishings preserved from the good old days. The house contained an immense dining room in which the lunch was spread and in which many happy minutes were spent. In the afternoon the guests were entertained by various kinds of music given by different members of the party. Before leaving the old home, a "help-yourself lunch" was served from the left-overs of the noonday meal.

The guests began to depart about five o'clock in the afternoon after spending one of the most delightful days of their lives.

The party was made of of the following people:

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thompson and little daughter, Freda Vera, Mrs. S. C. Taber and son, Sable Jr., Mrs. and Mrs. L. B. Zimmerman and daughters, Helele Lee, Justine and Louise, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. In 5 MILLION HOMES TONIGHT

A host of babies will enjoy sound sleep tonight. And their parents will have unbroken rest. Castoria is the cause of this contentment in a multitude of homes.

Old Castoria! Children cry for it. Mothers swear by it. Not a household where there is an infant should ever be without it. A few drops of Castoria quiet Baby in a perfectly innocent manner. It is natural, slumber that follows. Castoria is a purely vegetable product. No opium, no narcotics, of any kind.

Now you know why trained nurses give Castoria as often as an infant is ailing, or even restless. And why doctors tell mothers it is the first and only home remedy when Baby has constipation, colic, diarrhea, or other upset. It is made for babies, and safe to give babies, and other things are not.

Fletcher's Castoria is "old-fashioned" if you count its fifty years, but it's an old-fashioned mother nowadays, who worries along without it. Twenty-five million bottles bought last year! Think of the number of mothers who rely on Castoria! All these mothers can't be wrong! To keep a bottle in the home is a precaution you owe your little one.

sky and fresh air, and of the green things lighted yellow with sunshine and I took a vow that if I ever did get a chance to enjoy them again, I would spend the remainder of my life in so doing, and in being grateful to the Creator of them.

In the cabin, I went at once to the kitchen; and removing fish baskets, fly-hooks, and reels from the shelf, lifted it back.

I am sure that I had expected to find it empty. What I had not expected to find and what I certainly had never hoped to find, was what was there; any number of neatly wrapped packages addressed to Mr. Sam Stanley, sent by express, and labeled, variously, "Danger." Explosives.

It did not take any common sense to know, straight off, that sent to him or not, Sam was not mixed up in any business that had to do with explosives, bombs, and Bolshevism. It was easy enough to remember then, that Sam had not been to Rattail for the past ten days; that Hubert Hand had been making the trips down for the mail, expressage and supplies.

Just as he came into my mind, I heard his voice. It was a startling coincidence; but I need a better excuse than that, for surely no mortal ever did a more foolish thing than I did then. I climbed into that chest, along with those packages, and lowered the lid down over me. If I had any idea, I suppose it must have been a desire not let him know that I had discovered his secret—his and Gaby's together, undoubtedly—but I can't remember having any thought at all until, just as the lid closed, I remembered the sad poem about the bride and the mistletoe chest.

Then I heard, through the thin boards, Hubert Hand, talking to some one, come into the kitchen. I chose death by suffocation or combustion. "My dear woman," were the first words I heard from him, "you may set your mind at rest. I am not going to marry the girl. I am not a marrying man, as you know; and if I were, she wouldn't have me."

"You leave her alone, then. Under stand me. Leave her alone."

If I believed my ears, than was Mrs. Ricker's voice; that was Mrs. Ricker, not only talking, but talking like that to Hubert Hand.

"You flatter me," he said. "Jealous, still, after all these years? I told you that I wouldn't marry her, and that she wouldn't have me, if I were willing to!"

"Wouldn't she, though? Wouldn't she? She's mad about you. She can't look at you without love in her eyes, nor speak to you without love in her voice. She tries to hide it; but she can't hide it from me, I know. She loves you."

I am not sure whether I read it, or whether I figured it out for myself; but I do know it is a fact that no woman ever accuses another woman of being in love with a man unless she could imagine being in love with him herself.

"As to that," Hubert Hand said, "what possible differences would it make to you, Ollie?"

"Only that I would kill her, and you, too, before I would let her have you."

"Easy on, there, my girl. Your last attempt at murder—at least I hope that was your last attempt—was not, you may recall, very successful."

"I would be successful another time."

I kept quiet; very quiet. Surrounded, in there by explosives, and out there by people who talked of murder as calmly and as comfortably as if they were discussing moo-roses, very quiet did not seem half quiet enough.

They went into the other room of the cabin and stayed there for a few minutes. I could not hear what they were saying, but I did not budge an inch. After I heard them passing the window, and was sure that they had left the cabin, I remained, very quiet, in the chest for about five minutes longer before climbing out of it.

I was progressing toward home, shivering in every bone, limping, since both my legs had gone to sleep when Sam, riding his bad tempered bronco named Washbone, came up behind me and dismounted.

"Corns bad, Mary?" he questioned. "Want to climb up on Washbone and have me lead him?"

"When I go to meet death," I told him, "I shall go on the back of a nasty-tempered bronco. Consider that everyone on the Desert Moon, at this minute, in mortal danger of their lives, all you lighthearted jesting seems pretty much out of place."

I told him, then, about the packages of explosives hidden under the shelf. I had not told him about my climbing in with them; so I was in no way prepared for his actions.

He stopped. He dropped Washbone's bridle. He put both his hands on his stomach and leaned over and burst into uproarious laughter. "Ho-ho-ho," it rolled out, seeming to fill the entire valley.

"Fireworks," he gasped. "I got them for Martha. Going to surprise her on the Fourth. Sent for them months ago. Hid them up there. Ho-ho-ho! I told you to stop pussy-footing around. Mary. Ho-ho-ho!"

"Do not look for wrong and evil, you will find them if you do—"

With as much dignity as a heavy woman, with both of her legs asleep, could muster. I turned and left him. His words and his actions had certainly given me one decision. From this time on, I would tell Sam Stanley nothing.

When I got back to the house, John was driving up the road in the sedan. He had been to Rattail for supplies and for the mailbag out to me and drove around to the kitchen door to unload. There was a letter for Gaby postmarked France.

About a month before this, Gaby had received another letter that was a duplicate of this one; the same gray paper, the same sprawling handwriting. Instead of taking it indifferently, as she did other letters, and reading it wherever she happened to be, she had snatched it out of my hand and had run off to her room. All that evening she had seemed to be preoccupied and worried. Sending only two letters in close to two months, it seemed to me that whoever had written them did not write unless he or she had something of importance to say. I was still puzzling over it, when Gaby came into the room.

Surprised enough she snatched it out of my hands, just as she had done with the other letter, and ran straight upstairs with it.

When John and Danny came in, a few minutes later, I went upstairs. Habit stopped me at Gaby's door for a minute, with my ear to the key-hole. Faintly, sounds came out plainly through our thick doors. I heard the portable typewriter that she brought with her when she came to the ranch, click, clicking away.

I think Sam does, though he won't altogether admit it. Just the same, when there isn't a thing we can put our fingers on, is there?"

"I suppose not. Sometimes, though, when I see Danny looking as she looked when he went upstairs just now, I feel as if it would be a good thing if somebody would put their fingers around that vixen's throat."

"John," I spoke sharply to him, "don't say things like that. You don't mean it. It is wrong to say it."

I was sure that he did not mean to me, with something in her voice that made me shake in my shoes.

I turned and looked at her. Her face wore an expression that was not human; and expression that would have made any decent woman do as I did, and turn her eyes quickly away.

"Tell Danny to come up here," she said.

I hurried off downstairs, and delivered the message to Danny who was with John in the living room.

"What's the matter, Mary?" John questioned, when Danny had gone upstairs. "You look as if you had seen a ghost."

"I think," I answered, "that I have—the ghost of Sin."

"Doggone that girl," he said. "I wish she were in Jericho."

"You're darn right. She's causing all the trouble around here."

"What trouble?" I asked, just for a feeler.

"I don't know—exactly. She keeps Danny miserable. But that isn't it, or not all of it. Don't you seem to feel trouble around here, all the time? I thought everyone did. I do Gosh knows."

"I know," I said. "I feel it, too. I think Sam does, though he won't altogether admit it. Just the same, when there isn't a thing we can put our fingers on, is there?"

"I suppose not. Sometimes, though, when I see Danny looking as she looked when he went upstairs just now, I feel as if it would be a good thing if somebody would put their fingers around that vixen's throat."

"John," I spoke sharply to him, "don't say things like that. You don't mean it. It is wrong to say it."

I was sure that he did not mean to me, with something in her voice that made me shake in my shoes.

I turned and looked at her. Her face wore an expression that was not human; and expression that repeated those words to a living soul because that was the way that Gaby was mangled; choked to death with great brutal bruises left on her throat.

STATEMENT FROM MARVIN WILSON, CANDIDATE FOR TAX COMMISSIONER TO THE VOTERS OF ROWAN COUNTY.

It having been circulated that if I am elected that I will not call at the home of the tax-payers for the purpose of taking their list, I wish to say that this statement is absolutely false, and unfounded.

The law requires that the Tax Commissioner shall call at the home of every tax payer for this purpose and this I will do.

I respectfully, solicit your vote and influence, and promise you that I will at all times keep uppermost in my mind the welfare of the tax-payers.

Black Cats Give Hard Battle

son got all the breaks of the game, blocking several passes. The boys from Morehead were there, showing up well in spite of that it's a cinch that Grayson knew when the game was over that they had played a game of football.

In spite of the fact that everyone from Morehead would have liked to see the boys win, they were perfectly satisfied with the results. They had seen them play, they had learned that they had the material and best of all they had proved that they could play a clean game and be good losers. As the poet said, so said Morehead. "It isn't the fact that you lost that counts, but how did you play the game." And the Cats did play the game, and how!

College Team

What the Eagles have is speculative. There are eight letter men in the squad of twenty that has been reporting daily but none has shown any exceptional ability. Instead of the team being a one or two man team as it has been in years gone by, this year's eleven will be a eleven man team with no outstanding stars. One thing that this year's team has shown that is characteristic of all Downing coached teams and that is that indomitable will to win. They have the spirit and believe that they can't be stopped and with this determination somebody is going to be in for a mighty unpleasant afternoon next Friday. Bitter scrimmages in a misty rain has been only half of their work as they have attended skull practices in the evenings in preparation for their opener.

The squad is in as good a shape as possible with the exception of a few injuries. Ted Perry has been out for the past few days with a bad foot and it is doubtful whether or not he will be able to start. Clarence Allen in Monday's scrimmage sustained a bad bruise about the body but by game time should be able to go. The other boys are in splendid trim and are waiting for the whistle that will unleash them upon their opponents in the curtain-raiser.

All of the games are at home this season with the exception of one and the fans are urged to support the team to the limit. The game will start promptly at 2:30.

Must Guard Fire Prevention Week

Fire prevention should be impressed upon the minds of every pupil of the school. The burden of keeping a watchful eye on everything which might cause fire could be delegated to the young folks as well as the older ones.

If teachers would teach the children the dangers and cause of fire, where they are apt to start, and where they might look for defects, they would be of great assistance in keeping their property from destruction by fire.

It is a matter which should be freely and frequently with the children about the ever-existing dangers of fire, acquainting them with the great dangers of losing life as well as property, are neglecting their plain duty.

Many children are burned to death every day in the year. Most of them, horribly burned, are hurried to hospitals, there to endure the greatest suffering known, which continues usually until death ends their suffering. They seldom live after serious burns, and if they do, they are usually disfigured for the rest of their lives.

The greatest fire hazards are well known. These should be brought forcibly to the minds of the children, enumerating each. The children should be taught where fires are most likely to start and when anything defective which may cause fire is found, the fact should be reported to the teachers.

The great loss of life and property through the careless use of gasoline and kerosene goes on and on with our apparent abatement. Most people know of the great danger which confronts them when they hurry fires with oil, or use gasoline for other purposes, which enhance the chances of losing life and property, but they take the chance just the same.

We trust that every reader of this article will do his or her share to spread information which will convince those who follow the practice that they are endangering their lives every time they attempt to clean clothing, etc., with the fluid which is more dangerous than dynamite.

The Governor of this State has issued a Proclamation designating October 6-13 as Fire Prevention Week, pointing out the facts that the annual loss of life by fire in the United States is 15,000 people, and that approximately 17,000 people are severely injured by fire each year and the property loss is about $500,000,000.

"Fire Prevention Week" should be only the beginning of a continuous warfare against the cause of most fires, and every week of the year should be made a week of "Fire Prevention."

Two Rowan County Girls

Myrtle Calvert and Marjann Carter have entered the school for girls at Midway, Kentucky.

This school is becoming one of the big institutions of Kentucky. While it offers only high school courses, its endowment was increased more than the combined increase in the endowment of all the Kentucky Church Colleges except Berea.

A strong Business Course is being endowed. This one Department is fast becoming popular. Sixty students are enrolled in it this year.

The school has room for 225 girls. These girls are selected from the orphan girls in Kentucky. It is expected that an increasing number will go from this county. Its number school is not limited to orphans.
