ENROLLMENT FOR 2ND TERM MAY INCREASE

Present Registrations Exceed Those of Last Year.

MANY NEW COURSES

January 27th is the Big Day of the Year.

January 27 is the big day of the year.

If the number of advance registrations received at the office at this time are an indication, the enrollment for the second semester, opening January 27, should exceed that of last year. Reports indicate that practically all of the present student body will remain. Many old students will return and a number of new home students have applied for admission. Signs also point to a more equal distribution of high school and college enrollment than ever before in the history of the school.

Adequate arrangements are being made to take care of the increased enrollment. A number of new courses have been added to the schedule, including beginning courses in Physics, Chemistry, Biology, Home Economics, English, Foreign Language, Mathematics and Education, a college course in Elementary Principles of Journalism, and various other courses.

All classes for the second semester will begin on the hour, commencing at 8 A. M. and running through the noon hour up to 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The chapel will be held during the ten o'clock period on Monday and Friday.

Plans for registration, to start promptly at 8 o'clock on Monday morning, have been completely worked out. Direction of registration may be secured from the chart on the bulletin board.

Dean Taylor Gives Address

Current problems of interest to parents, teachers, and students were discussed before the public of Morehead in an interesting address by Dean W. S. Taylor of the University of Kentucky in the college auditorium, Monday, January 14, at 8 o'clock. The address was sponsored by the education department of the Rowan County Woman's Club, of which Mrs. Warren Lippin is chairman. Mrs. Katherine Brown, president of the club presided, and Miss Pearl Jordan, vice-chairman of the education department, introduced the speaker. Dean Taylor spoke of changes during the last 100 years in methods of living and methods of education. He stressed especially changing conceptions of discipline in the home and school. "I think if physical punishment is ever of great benefit to a child," the speaker said, "I am inclined to agree with John R. Watson that no woman has ever reared a completely happy child."

At the close of the address, Dean Taylor spoke of the problems of peace. "It is here peace more than war is being a pacifist, I am a pacifist," he said. "A willingness to defend my country in time of need is being a militarist. I am a militarist." Contending that the next war would last but a few hours and would wipe out civilization, the speaker urged that the members of women's clubs all over the country should study and promote peace.

Dr. J. G. Black Ranks Kentucky

Kentuckian Shows Why Kentucky Is 47th In Education

Why Kentucky was ranked 47th among the states in the latest report of the United States Bureau of Education was explained by Dr. J. G. Black at chapel, Thursday morning, January 2.

"The reason Kentucky ranks 47th," Dr. Black himself a Kentuckian, boldly stated, "is because a competent board has decided that there is one state lower in the scale than Kentucky."

The rank of Kentucky by several methods of classification was then given by the speaker. A comparison of 41 states by median scores made by white recruits in the Army Alpha tests gives Kentucky a rank of 40 with one state lower. Among the 48 states ranked by per-capita circulation of 18 widely-read magazines Kentucky is 41st. If the 48 states are ranked according to the per-capita circulation of 13 high-brow magazines, Kentucky is 42nd. A comparison of the 48 states by per-capita income places Kentucky 43rd. Among the 48 states ranked according to the ratio of per-capita savings-bank deposits to per-capita income, Kentucky has the 37th place. A comparison of 47 states as to the places of persons listed in Who's Who in America ranks Kentucky 34th. If the 48 states are ranked

Brick Selected For Library

Board Selects Cut Stone for Front.

The high water mark in campus architecture at the Morehead State Teachers College will be attained in the new library building now in rapid process of construction on the site of Burgess Hall.

The use of Swirling Green cut stone, instead of face brick, for the entire front of the building is to be an interesting feature of the new library. This decision was reached at a meeting of the board of Trustees of the college at Morehead, Friday, January 10, at which time more than 100 varieties of face brick were presented to the board for examination.

Does any one ever keep a New Year's resolution? If you should attempt to answer this question you would no doubt admit that there are hundreds broken where one is kept. I should have been tempted to say that no one ever keeps a New Year's resolution had my friend Professor

Henry's Letter

Now, people say that I am getting educated fast in more ways than one. The 'disciplines' have not decided on my case yet and I will let you know just what they did.

Since I have given you all the news from here, I had better quit and start to study if I am to get the high grade Jim Woodhead and I are here for.

Your dutiful and loving son,
Henry.

Muddy Creek, Ky.
Jan. 14th, 1930.

Dear Henry:
Your Paw and I read your letter with amusement. We were naturally surprised when the folks came home and told us of your letter but I know that you could explain everything, when you did.

It may be that we will beat the 'disciplines' to it and take you out of school at the end of this term. I don't believe that you are learning anything out of school from the reports that we have heard.

One word of warning: Make good grades this term or your Paw will have to go.

We are still praying for you.
Your mother.

POETRY

NIGHT

The twilight paces, twinkling stars appear
Among the scattered clouds to blink and shine

Or about across the sky like coasters

New cupid sits upon the silver sphere.

And taking from his shaft the darts so fine

Discharges them along each moon-beam's ray.

The nightingale is calling to his mate
Who trembling listens from the yellow-pine

And answers with a plaintive little cry.

The breeze kisses the rosebuds by the gate.

Then lingers with the homely myrtle vine,

Leaving its odorous presence with a sigh.

'Tis such a night that leaves one's fancy free

To roam unbound until the rosy dawn.

To dream, to wake, and learn that dreams come true.

On such a night as this I'll come to thee

And boldly speak my love upon the lawn

With cupid ever watching from the blue.

—E. R. White.

SNAP COURSES

There is little doubt that the majority of the student body, because of the advice of President Payne, will choose difficult courses for the coming semester; and, knowing the Morehead student body quite well, I fear those students who work continually with merely a suggestion from their instructors may injure their health. Therefore, I take this opportunity to give you ideas of the type of schedule one should choose. President Payne is right in advising each student to choose a course in higher-mathematics or chemistry as it gives a student the opportunity of proving to himself that he is capable of mastering the thing. But in order to prevent being overworked one should choose a snap course with such difficult one.

In case you do not know which courses are snap, you will be able to get information from the students in the different courses; those have been inquiring about same and here's a bunch: Take Tests and Measurements, Historical Geography 21, or English 11, 21.

JANUS

Janus the two-headed god who gave its name to January goes in to the past and future. Yesterday he saw a one-room mission school located in a small feudal castle with no modern conveniences. He saw it grow until he saw views upon that same beautiful buildings in old Kentucky, and a school with an annual enrollment of more than one-thousand students. He sees a modern college town located at the junction of two railways and upon a national highway connecting the Atlantic and Pacific.

Tomorrow? What does Janus see in 1930 and the years to follow? Judging from the school spirit, the students expense and the results the new officials of our college are obtaining we can say with all certainty that Morehead has a great future not only in the years to come but in the immediate future—tomorrow.

We students do not merely believe in Morehead; we know what it is. Knowing what it is, we congratulate you new students in that it is possible for you to attend our school and welcome home you who have previously been with us.

HOLIDAY TRICKS

Go! but I was anxious to get home to see mother and sister and Jack. Yes, Jack came over and stayed until 2 A. M. Every night that there was not a party as there was on Christmas and New Year's Eve, and too, there were the other parties my friends gave for me on which occasions I came in considerably later. Oh, Boy! but my holidays were a swell! And what take it from me, M! I was sick half the time I was home.

I think brother must have had a wonderful time too, for no sooner had we got home than he went to see Alice. The only time that he was at home during vacation was for Christmas dinner. He came in all flattered up and Papa threatened not to let him come back. He had such a time, it will take us two weeks to get back to work again. I'm just dead on my feet.

Well, these are the holiday tricks made by college students. Such tricks! Still if you ask them for their opinion of the length of the holiday vacation, each will reply by saying that he thinks it should be quite long as every one needs a rest.

I WONDER

Two girls were sitting near the rear of the room; they had chosen this location because of its being most suitable for the purpose; things went nicely for a few minutes but suddenly a puzzled look clouded a gay young face. Yes, that very question; she might have known it would be the very one she had not studied. But there was Joan. She wrote a large figure, 3 on the back of a tablet and held it so that Joan could see. Joan picked up an extra sheet of paper, wrote for a few minutes, folded the sheet, placed it in a compact and passed it across the aisle. Thelma was not long getting it from the case and copying it onto her own manuscript. The teacher was never the wiser and so A grade was given.

Years have passed. This morning I stopped at a village school. There was a familiar face in that school room. The lady was giving a test. A small girl trying to pass a note across the aisle, was caught; her paper was taken; she was asked to go to the clock room and wait till the teacher came.

I wonder what that teacher said to that girl.
