On The Kinikiknick

On The Kinikikinick Winter was uponeus. The sky was as clear at a bell, but we smelled a storm brewing. Before noon the pines on the ridges were singing; a haze had come up from the south and all of the signs for a storm were out.
That-night, gas we three boys rolled into our bunks, we knew that in the morning the earth would be covered with snow.

That night, as-we three boys rolled pinto our binks, we show that in the morring the earthi would be covered with snow.

The aroma of beiling coffee woke we were, it was ally light, the snow was still falling and, as we ate our corn bread, and bacon, and dramk our black coffee, we we're planning; to have a rousing time hunting and trapiping and fashing.

We had toiled all summer and fall, in a logging camp, upon the head waters of the Kinikitricke, and pow that winter was in the land, timber work was suspended. The larger wild animals and a before rand beer, were, we sait, such as Bear and beer, were, we was and before tenany days we were taking pelts just-right.

The winter slipped by all too soon. About the middle of February there were signess of a thaw, the wind changed to the south, and a mist hung in the woods, and the drumming of the Pheasan of the south, and a mist hung in the woods, and the drumming of the Pheasan was no mistake, so we linked out to reset our trapp and idead falls February is the is the beat month for trapping—we each took our lines, and before tena-o'clock I was at the head of mine. On my vay up' I had taken the polts from two Coon, five Skunk, Four incomplete and the polts from two Coon, five Skunk, Four incomplete and the polts from two Coon, five Skunk, Four incomplete and the polts from two Coon, five Skunk, Four incomplete and the polts from two Coon, five Skunk, Four incomplete and the polts from the ground and clining to the trail of a larger popular stump about the trail of a larger

Couldn't Caten Him. Meissonier, like many other celebrites, had a passion for gardening. His sardener, an accomplished botanist, knew to perfection the speeds of every plant, and bis master had often tried in vain to throw him off his guard. This time I have him. The structure of the plant of the plant

"Do you know this seed?" Moissonier inquired.
The sardener carefully scrutinized
the grains.
"Why not?" he said, at last. "They are the seeds of the Poster finance,
"How long will they be coming up?" Meissonler saked, with a chuckle of suppressed exuitation.

How long will they be coming up? Meissonier naked, with a checkle of the present existation. The present existation was the reply. Two weeks later the guests were again assembled at Meissonier's table, and after dinner the gardener was announced.

"M. Meissonier," the man said, "the seed has just come, up. "The artist exclaimed, as he rose and the present of the artist exclaimed, as he rose and the present of the artist exclaimed, as he rose and the present of the artist present of the present of

Some people think that because good articles, Something of a real selling value of from $10 to $15 is advertised to be sold at from $6 to $8 that it is only worth the lower price and then making the dealer a handsome profit besides, and was only advertised in order to get it off hands at a profit. Don't class us with such people. We are your home people and expect to continue in business for an indefinate length of time, and if we "cheat" you once we could not expect yout future patronage.
