Parole Granted

O. H. Burley, cashier of the Bank of Willard, with a credit of about 18 months service (including his "good time") was paroled Wednesday from the state Reformatory. The charge was receiving deposits after the bank was insolvent. The evidence presented showed that he was a victim of W. J. Rice, who organized and wrecked several banking institutions in Kentucky, Mississippi and Porto Rico. Rice seems to have looted the Willard Bank down soon after its organization with paper that was worthless. Rice is now in the penitentiary in Mississippi. The bank examiner who declared the bank insolvent recommended that Burley be paroled and stated that he found no evidence of any criminal intent. The prosecuting attorney and many officials and leading citizens of Carter county asked for his parole.

A. W. Murray Dead

A. W. Murry, died last Monday morning at the home of his son, J. L. Murray who lives on the farm known as the "Doc Moore" farm, near Maloneton, Greenup County. Mr. Murray was 82 years of age, a kind and congenial old man. He was born in Elliott county and moved from there to here, living with his sons in this county the latter years of his life. His remains were buried at Maloneton.—Greenup Republican.

It Pays To Advertise

A merchant at a Western Kentucky town is quoted as saying that he does not advertise because he cannot secure sufficient space to wait on his customers when he advertises. And when you come to think about it, that is just about as sensible reason for not advertising. Few of them, perhaps, would decline to advertise on such grounds, but after all, they couldn't better explain their non-progressive-ness.

Too Much Individualism

Individualism is a most excellent thing, but it is possible for a people to have a surfeit of it. This is the case in our country. It is difficult to hold men together in a common cause. So much of their time and thought is given to their own business and to personal matters that little is left for community interest. Inane selfishness has grown to the extent that it is a great handicap to progress and public improvement.

The community means a cooperation if it means anything. There is no advantage of having neighbors, in fact, they are distinct disadvantages, unless there is some co-operation. Twenty farmers can build the five miles of road to town where it would be impossible for one of them to do it. Again, they can unite to have a school and a church. These are only a few illustrations of co-operation. There are dozens of other opportunities for united effort to achieve a common end.

Community life is superior to isolated life because of the mutual helpfulness of neighbors working together. Co-operation is the principle, however, on which the success of community life depends. A crossing of purposes brings unhappiness, as well as poor results from a business standpoint. The only way for the neighborhood to be successful is for it to work as a unit. The individual must be in sight of personal interests for the good of the whole group. In the long run this will prove to be to the advantage of all. The time will come frequently when self-interest must give place to community interest, but the final results will always justify the sacrifice.

One man who did a vast amount of work during the world's series and did it well is John Heydler, the National League secretary. Most of the actual work of handling the tickets, if not the cheering by which they were distributed, fell to him, and he toiled day and night. The ticket scalper was a negligible factor. There never has been a series in which there were fewer complaints on that score, and the good work done by Heydler as well as by Joe O'Brien, the New York Giant's secretary, has much to do with this pleasing state of affairs.

Veach in Detroit Outfield.
A broken limb or the loss of an eye is about all that can keep Bobby Veach out of Detroit's left field next season. The Prognosis is contained as one sure sign of his position in a lineup that is daily in danger of another shift. Veach broke into the big league with a rush. He started out as a pitcher, then migrated to the outfield. He gained recognition at Fenwick, Ill., early this season. Indianapolis took him on a brief trial on Robert, and before the American association closed its season Veach was in Detroit. He made good at the start and has been keeping up the pace to a gratifying extent. The kind of pitching that Veach pulled off for the Tigers the past season was the best furnished by a Detroit outfielder. It has a powerful and true swing. As a fielder he is sure and a good judge of a fly ball. He has an easy style.

Durbin to Quit Aquatic Sport.
After his attempt to swim the English Channel, Charles Durbin, the Philadelphia swimmer, declares that he will quit the game for good. He announced recently that he will do no more long distance swimming this year. The proposed thirty-four mile swim from Sandy Hook to the Battery and there to Cooney Island has been called off.

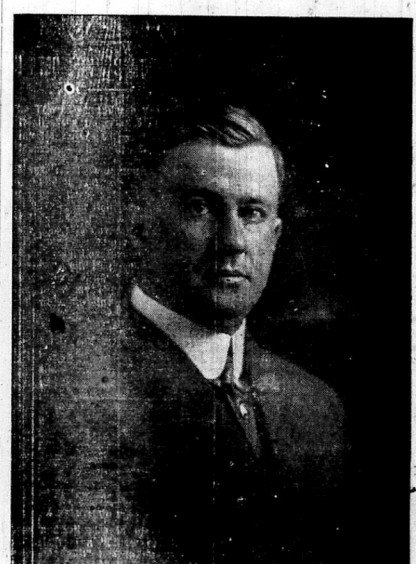

Fighter Kaufman Retires.
Al Kaufman, who was knocked out in two rounds by Luther McCarty at San Francisco recently, is through with the fighting game for good. When Kaufman reached his dressing room after the battle he turned to his seconds and said, "Well, boys, I have fought my last fight in the squared circle. When an inexperienced fighter like McCarty can stop me in two rounds I am satisfied that I am all in and should quit the game."

Wilson Has Remarkable Record.
Arthur Wilson, the New York Giants' clever catcher, made his eighth remarkable record in one respect last season. He made three home runs and every homer won a game. On April 29 he beat Sam Rice with a four base out for the last inning; on July 1 he cleared the bases with a home run slugged against Tyce of Boston, and on Sept. 7 he best Brooklyn again with a homer.

Berna Quits Athletics.
It has just been announced that Ted Berna, one of Cornell's athletes in the long distance running game, is to quit athletics for good after the next intercollegiate championship. Berna won the intercollegiate two mile championship in 1910 and 1911. He is a cross country runner of the highest class from the individual title several years ago.

BECKHAM ANNOUNCES FOR UNITED STATES SENATORSHIP

Former Governor J. C. W. Beckham has announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator from Kentucky, to succeed William O. Bradley, in the State primary election to be held throughout Kentucky in August, 1913. His card of announcement is as follows:

"In answer to a great many inquiries, I feel that I should, without further delay, make known my purpose in regard to the approaching race for the United States Senatorship, for which a Democratic nomination is to be made in the State's primary next August. Following my retirement from the office of Governor, about five years ago, and the result of the Senatorial campaign made to the people in that platform and in the recent campaign, I frequently dealing with serious and critical questions, had prepared me to welcome and enjoy the relief from public responsibilities and the peace of private life which such retirement offered me.

"But from the people and the press of the State I have received so many kind and flattering assurances that I might as a Senator from Kentucky be of some useful public service, and gratefully appreciating the honor implied in such expressions, I have decided to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for that office in the primary next August, and to submit my candidacy to the Democratic voters of the State.

"I believe the people of Kentucky have known me long enough and well enough to judge by what principles and purposes I have always been influenced in my public life, and how well or ill I have met every responsibility or obligation confronting me. I have been frank with them at all times, frequently when I believed it to be to my personal disadvantage, and I have never let them remain in doubt about my position upon any important political subject.

"So, upon the issues now prominent before the country, the people of Kentucky will know how I stand and what my course of action would be if I should be elected to the Senate. I am in hearty accord with the principles of the platform of the Democratic party, and I would be most endeavor as a member of the Senate, without ostentation or display, to earnestly and efficiently assist President Wilson and his administration in fulfilling the promises made to the people in that platform and in the recent campaign.

"The verdict of the American people in the recent National election was unmistakable and emphatic. They voted for a definite change in certain policies of the Government, the restoration of its control to the people, the deterioration of the power of special interests, relief from the burden of tariff taxes and tributes, the overthrow of monopoly in our industries, the relief of the people from taxation, the restoration of its control to the people, rather than those favored classes which have fattened upon special privileges, and for other just and needed reforms outlined in the Democratic platform. However much we may rejoice over the recent result at the polls, our victory is not yet won, and will not be won until we have substantially fulfilled these expectations of the people by enacting into laws the promises we have made. It is evident that the admirable man we have elected President recognizes the solemnity of the obligations placed upon him in these matters, and it is essential for the success of his administration that he should have in his Senate, as well as in the State, men who are in keeping faith with the people, men who are in cordial sympathy with his policies, and men who are willing and capable of finishing successfully the work to be begun.

"I seek this position as Senator from my Native State not merely with any selfish consideration of the honor it may bring me, but for the broad opportunity it would afford me of rendering some useful and patriotic service to the people of the country. I think that I have had such experience and training as would make me reasonably well prepared for the work. I do not come before the people of Kentucky in this race unknown to or untried in my public career in the past in that they have had ample opportunities to determine whether or not I can be trusted with official responsibilities, or whether or not I am accustomed to redeem my promises and obligations to them.

"Upon their sound judgment and generous confidence I rest my candidacy for this high office, seeking their support if they believe me worthy of it, and trusting that they will vote for some other man if they believe he can more fully and successfully serve them."

Chutney Sauce.
Twenty-four ripe tomatoes, four green peppers, four onions, four tablespoons of sugar, four of salt, three cupfuls of vinegar, one-half pound of raisins, one ounce of dried ginger. Soak and peel the tomatoes, pit the peppers and remove the seeds and chop fine with the onions, add vinegar into shreds, then put all together and boil three hours. Put in jars and seal.

Care of the Coffeepot.
To keep the coffeepot sweet and clean put a tablespoonful of carbonate of soda into it, let it nearly fill with water and let it boil for a little while. Then rinse very thoroughly with warm water. If this is done once a week the pot will always be fresh and nice.

Kitchen Hints.
If eggs are to be stuffed they must be put into cold water as soon as they are taken from the stove. This will keep the whites in better shape.

Civilizing the Philippines

THE twelfth annual report of the director of education for the Philippine Islands contains information sufficient to kindle anew the keen interest of the American people in their island possessions between Australia and eastern Asia. The Philippines have belonged to the United States for a dozen years, and the contrast between the Filipino population as a whole at that time, and the present affords a striking parallel, the achievements of our civilizing industry and efforts offering compensation for whatever trouble these islands have been. And it was reasonable to expect that Uncle Sam would have his troubles for the Philippine Islands as a whole at that time, and the present affords a striking parallel, the achievements of our civilizing industry and efforts offering compensation for whatever trouble these islands have been. class rooms, with assembly room, offices and storeroom. Concrete reinforced with steel is the construction material which meets conditions best. It is specified for the standard schoolhouses.

Already 125 school buildings of this type have been completed, and 173 others are in process of construction, of which eighty-nine lacked very little of completion and were already occupied at the time the director made his report.

As a result of a campaign for acquisition of adequate sites to provide suitable room for the buildings to be erected, for the future development of the school plant, for school gardening and for suitable playgrounds the bureau now has in its possession 337 school sites.

One new educational center of very great interest has been established during the past year, a school of household industries. The director describes it as follows:

"The purpose of this school is to train adult women in certain selected home industries. In five or six months of daily work in embroidery and lacemaking the persons attending this school can become very proficient in these lines. They will then return to their homes, or to other towns agreed upon between themselves and the director of education, where each woman will be employed at fair wages. Doubtless many of the women who receive instruction in local classes will be ambitious to form similar organizations on their own account, and in this way it is expected that an ever widening circle of industrial activity will result.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.
The industrial program is being promoted constantly through the medium of provincial industrial supervisors, inspectors and instructors from the front offices of the general office, various publications, bulletins and correspondence, through industrial exhibits, through the appointment of pensionados to receive training along such lines, and by means of the special courses offered in the Philippine Normal school and the Philippine School of Arts and Trades. An examination of the figures included among the statistical tables of this report will show that of the total enrollment of 223,740 boys and 138,842 girls during the month of February, 1914 (an average monthly, 210,290 boys and 132,292 girls)—81 per cent of the entire monthly enrollment—were doing some form of industrial work.

The athletic program of the bureau has found general acceptance among the masses of the people of the islands. It is confidently expected by the director that as soon as the introduction of the playground and group games became general at least 80 per cent of the school children will participate in athletics.

FASHION RULES OF CHINA.

Ten sessions of the new republican congress in Peking have been devoted to the problem of dress. One who yesterday was taken over to the trying on of hats, and all possible and impossible fashions of men's and women's clothing were displayed and examined. The results of this interesting investigation may be gathered from the following resume of the laws passed:

First.—All Chinese officials, without fail, and the Treasury of the Empire wearing European clothing. This suit consist of black walking coat, top hat of Chinese silk and patent leather shoes. No mention is made of trousers. On ordinary occasions a derby hat may be worn.

Third.—Those belonging to the military, police and to the judicial and statutory shall wear the prescribed uniform.

Fourth.—Women shall use European hats, but otherwise retain their customary dress with certain modifications.

The etiquette greetings was defined as follows: Ordinary greeting, hat off, bow once; ordinary greeting, hat off, bow twice; on special occasions hats on.—Berlin Tageblatt.

A QUEER INDIAN CRADLE.

Unique and probably the most primitive cradle rocking device ever seen or employed in any part of the world is the one that has been adopted by the matter of fat squaws of the Kwakwaka'wakw of Indians now living on Vancouver Island, British Columbia. The mother performs the double duty of spinning and rocking her infant, snugly packed in a hollowed out cradle stuffed with cedar bark strips suspended from the limb of a sapling.

This, says the Christian Herald, is about the most realistic and accurate representation of the old nursery song, "Rock a Bye in the Treeway of Time" so far known, the most striking part, however, being that of the Indian mother, who, by the use of her native power. With a cord attached to the bent limb and the other end wound around her foot, she swings her darling offspring to and fro, leaving her hands entirely free for weaving. So out of the ordinary was this scene of Indian life, which was met by an expedition of the Smithsonian Institution, that the subject recently was set up in the North Ethnological hall of the American Museum of Natural History, New York city.

Grist From the Sport Mill

By STADIUM

THE association of the English royal family with sport has never been so close as it is now, when a sailor king is on the throne, which fact at first sight may appear to be an anomaly, but yet upon consideration it is nothing of the sort—that is to say, if heredity counts for anything in such matters, for King Edward was a sportsman as keen as any of his subjects, and all the house of Hanover, excepting maybe the first, were generous supporters of the sport of kings, and some of them of shooting likewise.

It must be remembered, too, although by reason of his profession the present sovereign has not been favored by opportunities for developing the more athletic and virile outdoor exercises, that obviously is so strong within him to the extent of becoming proficient in many of them that he has kept himself well informed of all that has been going on.

It is presumable, therefore, that the king's devotion to British sport and his encouragement of its development in every branch were responsible for his recent visits to Henley and Lord's, while his partiality for Rugby football was previously rendered evident by his patronage of the great game at Twickenham. His majesty, moreover, has done much to advance the interests of other sports and pastimes.

The French army boxing championships will be held in Paris Jan. 22.

As a result of the defeat of the French athletes at Stockholm, a college of athletics has been formed in France, and the committee appointed to organize the college has issued a report which is signed by Rodin, the editor, Jean Richpin, Dr. Weiss of the Academy of Medicine, M. G. Lestard Bouvallet, the Marquis de Polignac, Dr. Brocard and Maurice Cobart.

The college will give a center for all French athletes who wish to train for the next Olympic games. The training will proceed along rational lines, and after a course of scientific instruction is reached the men will be placed in the hands of American coaches, who will be appointed to direct the special activities of pupils in different branches of athletics.

A table of the best French athletes and their performances will be drawn up so as to make possible the selection of the men best qualified to represent France at the next Olympic games. All sports will be practiced, including swimming and football.

DREAMS.
My sweet illusions slip me by,
And every wish for better things.
An unrequited beauty nears brings.
The fate is servitor of love,
Desire and longing and loving prove
The secret of immortal youth.
And man's choice is his own truth.

O kind illusions weave sweet,
Still withal with benign intent,
Still move us through divine unrest
Till we have loved and die serene.

Be long the fleeting glimpses of good
Shall rest in full beatitude,
And man's choice is his own truth
Shall rest us on the other side.—Waltter.

Homemade Christmas Gifts

Two pretty bags and a powder puff case are illustrated here. Any of these articles will make acceptable Christmas gifts and may be made by the girl who has nimble fingers. The first bag is a simple affair of satin with a ribbon run through a goring in the neck. It may hold the toilet necessities of the party or the matinee opera glasses. With a pocket shaped over cardboard for the end of the bag it will do for a handkerchief bag.

The powder puff case may be made of cardboard covered with silk or satin cut in any shape and supplied with a small powder box which can be fitted inside. It should also have a tiny powder puff.

The other bag may be used for a work bag or for any purpose most convenient. It is made of Dresden ribbon, with several compartments, all of which are grouped over a round base covered with ribbon and finished with a ribbon tassel. Tiny ribbon bows are used as decorations.

CARE OF THE HAIRBRUSH.

To clean a hairbrush first comb out the loose hair with a coarse comb. Turn the brush face downward and scrub the bristles on a smooth, firm surface to dislodge all dust and dirt. Then rub them over a Turkish towel to dislodge all loose dust.

When you wish to wash a hairbrush take two bowls of cold water, one in which to wash it and the other for rinsing. In the washbowl place one tabspoonful of ammonia to one pint of water and place the bristles in this solution without covering the back of the brush. Rub the bristles back and forth until the hands in the water until they are clean.

Never lay a wet brush down on the back, as this allows the water to run down the legs and soak into the glue, with which they are fastened. Do not place the brush in a dish in the direct rays of the sun.

How to Avoid Strong Mutton Taste.

The strong taste of mutton is largely due to lack of proper care in trimming and cooking. This flavor comes chiefly from the fat of the neck and the head, and frequently when the sheep is skinned a thin membrane, which is little seen, is left on. It is hardly perceptible to the eye without close examination, but if not removed it gives a most unpleasant flavor to the meat. A shaving of fat should be taken off every piece of mutton, whether it be a chop, leg or loin.

Boiling instead of frying is another measure of prevention, and in roasting the dripping pan should have a rack or grate under it, so that the meat will not stew in its own fat.

For the Afternoon Tea.

A home recipe for raising cookies calls for four cups of flour, one cup of raisins, a teaspoonful of baking powder, a saltspoonful of salt, three tablespoonfuls of butter and a cupful of scalded milk. The milk is to be scalded with just stiff enough to be beaten on a double boiler. Work the butter into the dry mixture, and the milk and then work in the raisins until the mixture is thoroughly blended and the dough smooth. Roll out, cut into small squares and bake, brushing over with milk before they go into the oven.

White men must be held accountable for the degradation and passing of the Eskimo even in a lesser degree than in the case of the Indian. Says James Oliver Curwood in Redskins, when the first whalers went into the arctic the Eskimo was a most enterprising and venturesome man. He was a fisherman and a hunter. He was a trader and a warrior. He was a man of many parts. But the white man's ships quickly changed this. They brought him flour, sugar, dried fruits, canned stews, tobacco and liquor, and the Eskimo's dietary system underwent a change, so that in the course of a generation these things became necessities to him. As the polar bear and the walrus disappeared, they became still greater necessities, until at last the failure of a whaler to winter near a village meant starvation. For a time the Eskimo paid for these things in furs, but as furs grew more and more scarce and whalers more and more numerous he had to find other ways of payment. His basic idea of morality was almost nil, so it was not difficult to influence him to part with his women.

In the village east of Victoria Island I found that nearly every adult woman and many of the young girls had at one time or another been white man's property. It is a curious fact that while the white man did not have to be urged to leave their native husbands for an alien partner they are strangely faithful to their white purchasers after they have once become their property.

I met one old Eskimo who, through an interpreter, told me a little of the days when his fishhooks bought a wife of him. At that time the fishhook was about the most wonderful thing that had come into the lives of the Eskimo, and even today a "sale" for a "rental" of a wife or daughter is very seldom made without a certain percentage of payment in fishhooks.

Character of a Happy Life.

That happy life is but a dream and a quest. And so we seek another with whom our life is the best. There is a man in the world who has a wife who loves him and who he loves her. Who loves none that claims that rise. How does he get his wife? He is given by grace. Who rules of wife, but rules of soul. Who rules of wife, but rules of soul. Who rules of wife, but rules of soul. Who rules of wife, but rules of soul.

Our Illustrated Story HONORING A CLAIM

By MORTON F. PINE

DUK was clouding the landscape as Noth Sterling, well built, with blue eyes in contrast to his gray hair, stepped on the porch. He leaned against the framework of the door and smoked his pipe, apparently oblivious of the voices fluting out from the kitchen.

"It'll enter no family uninvolved. Your father has his pride, I mine!"

The girl's voice was pitched high and broke suddenly. Then followed indignant pleadings from her companion, whom she answered: "It's true, all right. But I'm in the mill, a mill hand, while you—some day you will be boss."

"Don't say it, Bess. I am the unhappy creature in the world, the son of a strange-made man. Father forsok me as was once a laborer, choosing his wife for himself. I'll do the same."

"You are all his in the world. I'll not come between you."

Noth Sterling glanced into the dim room. He could see Bess fighting against her love and the stalwart son of the mill owner as he held her hands. Noislessly he stepped from the porch to the coolness of the little garden. It was quite dark when he returned, and no light greeted him from the open door, but a low sob broke the stillness who guided him to the girl's side.

"Oh, Daddy Noth, my heart is broken!"

"You sent him away bravely. Now you cry for him."

Bess cleared her throat.

"That's the woman of it. Yet I ask for what you spoiled me. When did I get for myself—and you not give it to me?"

"Don't set your heart on that. You truly love young Thadd?"

"It's all the world!" Sterling with drew his hand abruptly. Impetuously Bess flung her arms about his neck.

"Not that I love you less, clear or ever could. Yet you loved my mother—you understand you must."

"Understand! Sure I understand. Soothing her, he drew her to his knee and held her in his arms."

"Are you not going to bed?" she questioned.

"Presently, child."

Yet he had scarcely stirred when the gray dawn showed in the east; then he rose stiffly, determination in his

FOR THE RECIPE BOOK.

VALUE OF THE ONION.

English Experts Say the Vegetable is Worth its Weight in Gold.

The value of onions in diet was emphasized in an address at the Royal Horticultural hall, London, by one of the best of education lecturers, Hermon Sewall.

Mr. Sewall, who is managing director of the Universal Cooking and Food Association and one of the best known English experts on food and cookery spoke on "The Cooking of Root Vegetables."

He went so far in his praise of the onion as to declare that its use "worth its weight in gold." The onion, he said, possessed an important medicinal value which could not be over-estimated. It was considered a cure for skin diseases and the first antidote for sleeplessness.

Mr. Sewall had a good deal to say, too, on the subject of potatoes. He remarked that, although there were known to be no fewer than 300 methods of cooking potatoes, the only methods practiced in English houses were boiling, baking and frying. The made extruded quantities of potatoes existed immediately under the skin and were often lost by careless peeling.

Oyster Lett.

Cut a slice from the top of a lot of stale Vienna bread and remove the soft crumbs. Fill with oysters seasoned with salt, pepper and tomato ketchup. Dot with bits of butter, replace the top and bake in a hot oven, basting frequently with the oyster liquor.

Graham Popovers.

Stir together one-third cupful wheat flour, two-thirds cupful of Graham flour (unsifted), two-thirds teaspoonful of baking powder and a little salt. Add the yolks of two eggs, a teaspoonful of melted butter and three-quarters cupful of milk. Beat hard and then add the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Put in buttered popover pans and bake in a quick oven.

Hashed Brown Potatoes.

Sprinkle two cupfuls cold boiled potato cubes with salt and pepper. Blend one tablespoonful butter and flour, add one-half cupful stock. Cook five minutes, stirring without breaking potatoes. Melt one tablespoonful butter in frying pan. When brown turn in potatoes, spread evenly, cook ten minutes. Fold like an omelet. Serve hot.

Milk Cream Pie.

Line a pie plate with rich crust and bake. Fill with a mixture made of the following ingredients: A cupful of milk, a cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of vanilla, yolks of two eggs and vanilla to flavor. Cook until thick, then fill the crust with the cream. Cover with a meringue made of the whites of two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar and bake in the oven until a light brown.

Chicken Pie.

Divide a chicken in pieces for serving. Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, add one-quarter cupful chopped onion, stir of parsley, leaf herb, four cloves and one tablespoonful of salt. Place in chicken and cover with boiling water. Cook till tender. Arrange chicken in baking dish. Cover with strained milk thickened with starch. Place a pastry crust on top and bake in hot oven until crust is ready.

For Our Boy and Girl Readers

THE FAIRY AND THE MOUSE.

How Bleeding Heart, Resigned a Poor Little Boy's Pet.

Once there lived a little mouse in a cage. His keeper was a boy of nine, who lived in the backwoods with his poor mother and father. The mouse was all he had to play with, and he loved it dearly.

One day his mother called him to her and said: "Angus, you must sell your little mouse, because of the hard times in the house. Your father cannot do work." Angus, crying, took his pet out to the town. He met a boy who was just as poor as he.

"That night when he was in bed Angus saw a fairy on his pillow. 'Don't be sad, little boy,' she said. 'I will reward you.' The queen of the seven kingdoms, your little mouse is wanted very badly, and if you give it to me, I will give you a gold coin. You must give it to me by midnight, and I will reward you.' Angus went to the house of the boy who had his mouse. He worked ten days at his task, and got his little mouse back again. When he came home with it his mother said: 'Look, Angus, the money you sold your mouse for has turned into gold.' Angus was not a bit surprised, because he knew it was Bleeding Heart's work. Angus' father bought a farm, and they lived happy ever after."

Dowager Queen Visits Cripples

By American Press Association.

Dowager Queen Alexandra of England was deeply interested in a recent visit to London by Mrs. Trevelyan's hospital and college for poor crippled children in London. She is seen looking at three tiny patients who were taking the air under the hospital's sun-parade.

THE GAME OF CITIES.

It Will Spur the Players to Try to Think Quicker.

This is a little "game" for quick witted people, young or old. The players are seated in a circle, and the leader says: "I shall name a city and then you play rapidly. The one of my name must name another city beginning with the last letter of the city I name." For instance, the first city named may be Chicago, the next player may name Omaha, and the next Atlanta, the next Albany, then Napoleon, New York, and so on.

After a few turns round cities seem to crowd scarce, and the fun increases, increasing the effort for the best and quickest answers and forfeits demand: "Name these you fall!"

A Dancing Egg.

To exempt this experiment you need a hard boiled egg and a smooth china plate. To be sure that the experiment is going to be successful keep the egg in a perpendicular position while it is being boiled.

Place the plate upside down on the table to be able to catch it quickly with your hand. Place the egg in the center of the plate and, putting the thumb of the left hand and the index finger of the right hand on both ends of the egg, give it a sudden twist, bringing it to turn around in quick motion. The egg will gradually stand on one end. Then you pick up the plate, and you have done it. To keep the egg in motion, which is not difficult.

FORETHOUGHT OF INSECTS.

Parent Bug Protect Eggs, but Never See Young Grow.

A very striking instance of insect forethought was shown to an officer in India who was sitting at his writing table when an exquisite little shining fly flew in at the window. After much trouble she settled to chiding out one of the gull pens he had been using, and into this she rammed a green caterpillar, and her own eggs last. By sticking the whole tightly into the proper made of fine clay, which she fetched for the purpose, thus securing privacy and future in one act.

Forethought of this kind is in the insect tribes the more remarkable because they seldom live to see the young for which they so elaborately provide. One of the most despised and abhorred of creeping things, the common earwig, is almost the only insect which hatches her young under her own protection. She mounts guard over the little ones and fights for each shelter them as long as they are helpless, as a hen tends her chicks.

Flowers on the Dead Sea.

The Zerkas—a stream almost as great as the Nile—flows into the Dead Sea, and the same character, but having a small plain on the seashore that might very well be identified—flows into the sea. It is some fifteen minutes' journey from the north from California. Here, as elsewhere, the wild oleander, with its beautiful pink flower, is abundant; also the red, with its feathery tuft or bloom, "shaken by the wind," and referred to by Christ; also the willow of the tannarick, the garban, a pretty looking weed from which a cherry, and that strange plant, the apple of Sodom. This, though looking like a beautiful fruit, collapses when touched and is found to consist of nothing but a little smoky dust and some salt-like fiber, used by the natives for stuffing pillows. Mount Neba, from which Moses viewed the promised land, is about opposite the north end of the sea, on the tablelands.—Wide World Magazine.

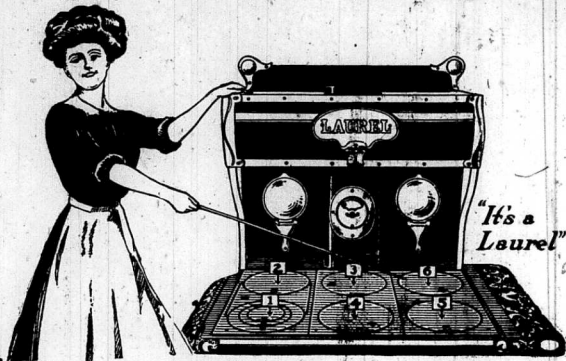

The Lawyer.

For this game each boy chooses a partner, and then all stand in a circle, becoming the lawyer in the center, who becomes the lawyer. He asks questions of any person in the company, but the answer in every case must be given by her own partner, spoken by his or her partner. If the person spoken to makes answer of his partner fails to do so promptly the person may be, as the lawyer's phrase, "taken down."

Conundrums.

What kind of crowd is it in which we cannot get gems? The crown of the head.

A Practical Demonstration

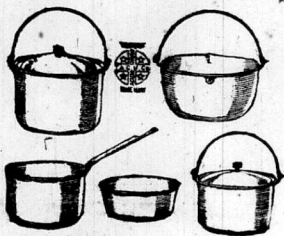

will be given at our store all next Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Everybody attending will be served with delicious, evenly browned biscuits and good coffee and cream.

You are invited to come, at any time that is most convenient, and learn how good these biscuits are and see how easily they are baked in a LAUREL TWIN-FLUE RANGE.

Don't stay away because you are not interested in buying a range at present. You will want one some day, and may never again have as good an opportunity to learn why all ranges do not bake and cook as quickly and economically nor with the same uniformly successful results which any LAUREL RANGE will give you.

As a special inducement to you who will need a range soon, we offer, provided you purchase or order a LAUREL TWIN-FLUE RANGE during this demonstration and sale.

Your choice of two very useful premiums

An $8.00 Set of "Wear-ever" Aluminum Ware

This is the best set of aluminum ware you could buy no matter what price you were willing to pay. "Wear-ever" contains only pure aluminum. It is unequalled for any kind of cooking. Aluminum ware is light and always remains clean and bright. It will not crack like enameled ware; it will last a lifetime and will always be valued for its superior cooking qualities. Food flavors are not absorbed by aluminum and foods which are easily burned in utensils of other materials are not even scorched in aluminum ware under the same conditions. Remember we give this premium only with Laurel Twin-flue Ranges ordered during the demonstration.

A 26-Piece Set of Handsome Silverware

Containing, in all, 6 knives, 6 forks, 6 teaspoons, 6 medium size table spoons, which can be used also for soup spoons, and one each, butter knife and sugar shell. Every piece is warranted R. & B. silverware; a guarantee of wearing quality going with each set. The design is the beautiful Poppy Scroll which is so popular at the present time; it is carefully raised and carved to give the proper effect. This set of silver makes a valuable addition to any table service. Come in and examine these premiums, which are now on display in our store.

This demonstration which we will conduct is given to convince you that the stoves is of as much, if not of more, importance than the "cook."

You will notice in the illustration shown above that the lids of the stove are numbered. In other ranges than LAURELS the heat passes only under Nos. 1, 2 and 3 when the direct draft is opened. Laurel Twin Flue Ranges are built differently; they heat the entire stove top; they use less fuel; they heat the entire oven to a uniform temperature when you want it, but do not heat the oven at all when you don't want it. This saves fuel and makes the kitchen more comfortable. The special Laurel Twin-flue construction which makes this possible will be explained, with many other desirable Laurel features during each day of this demonstration.

Don't Forget the Dates—December 19, 20 and 21. A Useful Souvenir will be given every lady attending this sale.
