Cutting Asparagus Shoots.
This crop consists of the undeveloped shoots which, if allowed to remain, would soon produce branches and leaves. This removal of these shoots is most exhausting to the plant, and should not be carried to excess. The old rule, to stop cutting when green peas are abundant, is a safe one. As long as cutting is continued, cut clean, removing every shoot, large and small. After cutting excess the shoots are allowed to grow, and if the bed had no dressing of fertilizer early in the season it should have one when cutting ceases. Well decomposed manure or a liberal dressing of fine bones or superphosphate — 500 conchals to the acre — should be given. Nitrate of soda has been applied with good results. Salt is a favorite application. The growth of the roots, if the bed is shaded closely, will not shade the ground as to prevent the growth of root weeds. The few large weeds that appear should be pulled by hand. Unlike many crops, asparagus may be sent a long distance, and if not sold at once will remain in good condition. — Farmer's Voice.

A Singing Flood Gate.
Hard rains will come, and small streams and open ditches that are almost dry one day, may be rushing torrents the next. This makes it a matter of importance to provide a suitable and safe flood gate, at all those places where the farm fences cross such streams or ditches.

That are easy of construction, economical and above all self-acting. The one shown in the accompanying engraving consists of a flat piece of timber — a straight cut sap — which fits into round holes in the fence posts on each side of the ditch.

To this bar, which turns readily in the posts that hold it, the gate, or length of fence is securely fastened with heavy spikes, or better still, with bolts. On the lower portion of the gate, in addition of short boards, cut to fit the ditch, may be made as shown in the engraving. The whole gate, thus constructed, turns readily upon the horizontal bar, the bottom sliding out with the water and allowing it to pass, but returning to its former position, so soon as the water subsides. In making this gate, it should be borne in mind that the part below the turning bar, should be a considerable heavier than that above, so that small stock will not try to push their way through, but that it is to swing only by the application of a strong pressure at the lowest part, as is the case with a rising, rushing stream.

Growing Demand for Farms.
The cry of the city people in "Back to the land," and in a program to boost that movement toward our farms, said Commissioner C. A. Stuyvesant of the New York State Department of Agriculture.

In carrying out the provisions of the law enacted at the recent session of the Legislature, Commissioner Whiting has prepared a circular for distribution among 1,000 or more new purchasers, calling on them for the following information: The name of each purchaser in the district and its distance from the nearest post office, the number of acres it covers, the nature and quality of the soil, the number of acres of meadow, pasture and timber land, the nature and condition of the farm house, barns and outbuildings; how the farm is watered; the kind and condition of fences; the price and terms, and the number of the route. If the farm is a free delivery route.

Many of our city residents are looking for farms, and the cry is "Back to the Land." Many people in other States are looking with covetous eyes toward the low prices of farms in our State, and thousands of English, German, Swede and other good laborers are looking for homes wherever possible.

Preparing Corn for Market.
Sweet corn is a bulky article to carry, so it should be watered and packed in perfect care. Sort it carefully before putting in the wagon by opening each husk slightly so that you may see if the grains are well filled. Very early in the season it may pay to put the small second ears by themselves and sell at a reduced price. If gathered and kept over, slight sweet corn should not be sacked closely in barrels, nor left in such places that it will heat.

Protecting the Corn.
An ounce of zincol was added to a quart of water and the corn shed under the woods was with the mixture. Green worms, beetles and moths did not molest the corn, while they did damage that of a man across the woods very lately. Now we want to know if the zincol has been used by others for the same purpose.

WHISKY STORED IN GERMANY.
Distillers Find It Cheaper Than Paying Taxes in This Country.

It is not generally known that Louisville distillers and warehouse men own warehouses in Germany in which considerably more than a million gallons of Kentucky whisky is stored and will some time be returned to this state, says the Louisville Herald.

The reason for storing whisky in Germany is to save money, although there may be the contributing reason of securing a sea flavor. The national law formerly provided that whisky must be taken out of bond inside of three years, and the tax of $1.10 a gallon must be paid on what taken out. It also provided that if whisky be exported such tax would not have to be paid on it at the time of the taking it out, and further, that it might be re-imported upon payment of $1.10 a gallon. The duty on imported whisky which is not made in America is $2.25.

Many distillers and warehouses found it cheaper to export the whisky and import it later than to borrow the money for internal revenue taxes. An enormous quantity of whisky was thus sent abroad, and as Germany is the only country which will admit it without payment of a duty it was the latest. Both Mexico and Canada impose a heavy duty. The distillers figured that the cost of transportation both ways was cheaper than the latest on the money with which they would have to pay taxes at the time. They could keep the whisky stored in Germany many years, or as long as they wanted to, and bring it back in small quantities, so they were not put to the embarrassment of borrowing very large amounts of money for taxes. Congress has since passed a law allowing whisky to remain in government warehouses eight years before the internal revenue taxes are paid.

Educating Children's Memory.

As children, part of the Japs' education is learning to notice. A tray with a dozen things on it is given to the child for a few minutes, when it is taken away from him and he is required to repeat from memory the name of everything that was on the tray. Gradually the numbers of things are increased, and the time he is allowed to look at them decreased, until nothing becomes a habit, and in a single, cursory glance he can give the names and details in an almost magical way. One mother, who heard of the method, was so struck by its simplicity and by the value of quick observing that she tried the experiments with her own children — not with trays and objects, but with their walks. She found that the children developed splendid memories as well.

Odd Form of Coal.

One of Colorado's greatest discoveries in the form of innovation in coal mining experts and geologists in that state, where a deposit four and half feet in thickness has been prospected for two miles in extent and has yielded coal in the strikingly peculiar form of little cubes and hexagonal-shaped columns. It separates easily, the seams give off little dirt or dust, it burns with a blue flame, retains heat a long time and makes little ash.

It breaks to a small nut size and is considered suitable for hard coal burners and grates. Many regard the new coal as one of the most valuable finds in this almost unknown empire of riches.

The Oath in Slam.

The formula of the oath of office in Slam is long and complex, and it is also very violent. For example, here is such a form of its high functionaries go through in swearing solemnly to their sovereignty:

"May the blood drop from my body, may my head break in two; may the floodgates devour me; may I be compelled to carry water in wicker baskets to quench the flames of hell; may I suffer the most horrible tortures until my ears are as an anvil, my eyes as a grind by the sea, if I violate this, my solemn oath."

King Christian's Palace.
Fredensborg, where year by year King Christian's descendants gather in patriarchal fashion, is about two hours' distance by rail from the capital. The palace contains about 400 apartments, including a vast-domed hall where dinner is served every evening, and the various suites of rooms devoted to the use of King Christian's sons and daughters when returning for a space to Fredensborg.

It is said that one of the simplest is that occupied by Queen Alexandra, whose little possessions are treasured most carefully. Fredensborg has many memories of the late Queen Louise.

Buccaneer Fish.
The blue baccaneers are among the most voracious of all fish. Swift, strong, armed with efficient teeth, they possess unlimited appetites and they know not the meaning of mercy or fear. Most destructive of all our sea fish, they rival the worst of the carnivorous species of South American waters. They are the wolves of the sea, and very frequently they destroy for what appears to be a mere love of butchery. They move in large schools and they never hesitate to attack fish of almost twice their own size.

Observing Yukon Day.
What St. George's Day is to Britain, what Dominion Day is to Canada, and what Independence Day is to the American republic, is August 16 to the Yukon. It was on that day nine years ago that Stookson Wain washed out his fortune on Rabbit Creek, when there was the bringing of thousands of people to the country and enriching the world by $100,000,000 in gold. — Yukon Herald.

EZEEKEL PARSON
The great red orb was slowly sinking behind the hills, and night was gradually creeping over the vast forest, by and by the moon rose, casting a wondrous glow over the scene. The discordant squawks of the night-hawks mingled with the "Hoo, Hoo, Hoo" of the owls made the loneliness well nigh unbearable, a slight breeze raised and sighs through the tops of the spruce and cedar up in the hollows of limestone a family of Foxes keep up a continual "Up Yaw."

All about me, in the grass and among the Katydid, and as I moved my hands, a cold, shivery pulse glow lit up the southern for a moment, presently I caught the sound of distant thunder, "Lookout for a storm and then frost," I said to myself as I rubbed my hands. I awoke in midnight darkness, the storm was on, the rain beat upon the eaves and the wind tore and crashed among the timbers. After the wind ceased the sound of falling rain made me look to sleep, when I awoke the Eastern sky was red with the fire light of a new morning. It was a beautiful sight, the silvery shadows reflected a myriad of gems while the monarchs of the forest blazed in their diadems. The pure cooling air was cool and bracing, the wet weather sprang weeping from the earth, overhead I caught the joyous, clear notes of a Wood Thrush, a Robin, the sweetest melody in the branches of the maple, a Junco Jay was peering atop a black Locust. The crafty crow was slowly winging his way flight southwards, a sure sign of early winter, away off to Westward I caught the sound of a Turkey Cocker calling his mate to the morning meal. I shouldered my old Deer Rifle and was away, after a half hour of creeping through underbrush, I came to the mouth of a steep ravine and about twenty yards up this I discovered a dozen or more plump turkeys engaged in picking wild grapes from a vine that clustered close the ground, laying my gun in the forks of a nearby bush, I directed aim at the largest and my finger pressed the trigger he dropped his wings once and then lay still. Not until I had bagged four did they take flight, satisfied with the morning's sport, I swung the Turkey Cocker by his shoulder and faced about for another.

Upon top of the bluff I saw two deer feeling and disposing of my load, I caught a head on the largest of the two, and snap, the flint fell and failed to ignite the powder in the gun, away they ran, and I followed far what seemed to be miles. Their trail was easily followed through the peavine, finally I snared them on a grassy knoll, quietly feeling. The wind was in my favor and I managed to get them in easy range again. I drew a head and snap. All day I followed tracks often as I got a head on one, the flint refused to make fire, again the orb of day was casting long shadows Eastwards, a chilly, frost laden wind sprang up from the North, and I reluctantly gave up the chase and turned my steps shaggywards. For an hour I plodded on through underbrush and misted Peavine, night came on, one by one the stars come out at last, I cast myself down by the trunk of a large tree to rest a while and wait for the light of the moon. Away up from a yawning chasm, I heard the weird scream of a Panther. Instinctively I resumed the path of my gun again, far despite the life, I had lived in the woods, that sound made me uneasy. I arose to go, and to my amazement there before me stood the two Deer that I had followed all day. Again I got a head by the light of the moon and snip. I was never inclined to be superstitious but once in my life, I took the Buckeague, I lit on for home in earnest, the two Deer kept directly ahead of me, again I heard the scream of a Panther, this time not three hundred yards away, I tore on through tangled vine and brush. At length my toe caught under something and I went sprawling to the earth, regaining my feet, I looked behind me and not more than sixty yards I saw a brown object running towards me—a Panther! My hair stood on end. When I thought of the stubborn flint, instantly I had the gun against my shoulder, crack! the flint had struck clear and snip, I must have wounded the beast, for with a terrific yell, it bounded away into the night, I looked for the Deer, they too had vanished. After I reached camp, I loaded and fired my gun several times to make sure that nothing was wrong with the flint or pan, then I shook myself to see if I was not asleep and dreaming. I have heard of spook Deer, strange stories of their antics, but this was altogether the strangest that ever befell me.

Lexington folks, who have a chapter for a Federal College, are making advances to a Willard people to plant it there in connection with the movement of Prof. J. B. Seecrest. If a success, Willard will become the Educational center of Eastern Kentucky.
