Booming Morehead College Brings Prosperity, Culture To Community

By GERALD GRIFFIN, Courier-Journal East Kentucky Bureau

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 5.—From its humble beginning as a normal school for training of elementary teachers, Morehead State College has reached maturity under the guidance of its seventh president, Dr. Adron Doran.

The college, halfway between Lexington and Ashland on a half-mile campus of 350 acres, is growing rapidly and is lending a cultural atmosphere to the town of Morehead, the Rowan County seat.

Before the establishment of the college in 1922, the town was little more than a village trying to live down its frontier past. Now, like the college of which it is so proud, Morehead is drawing itself up with new business houses and gracious homes. All that can be traced to the college influence.

In an attempt to keep pace with the increase of its student body, the college is undergoing an expansion program.

Two new blocks already are under way: plans for four others in the drawing-board stage. Because the campus itself is so crowded, efforts are being made to expand it through acquisition of additional acreage along U.S. 60.

A row of duplex apartment buildings under construction will house the rapidly expanding Morehead faculty. The new buildings will blend architecturally with the Tudor-Gothic style of most of the other structures lining the campus drive.

Nearing completion is a new fire-resistant brick dormitory for men. It will contain 201 bedrooms, each housing two students.

In the same general area, bulldozers are preparing the way for construction of a modern housing center to include 1,000 studio apartments for married students and faculty members.

Faculty Increasing

This project will replace, or at least supplement, the present married student village of barracks-type frame apartment buildings, Quaker huts and small cottages that were a wartime expedience.

The rapid increase in the number of students (from 698 four years ago to 2,104 now) has brought about a compensatory enlargement of the faculty, which now numbers 170. All but at least one advanced college degree and 18 have doctor's degrees in education or philosophy.
