

OUR IMMENSE GRAND OPENING

Will Undoubtedly Be The
Most Elaborate Event of The Season

We are now installed in our new store, surrounded by our NEW and ENORMOUS stock of goods. We have just completed purchasing this exquisite line of dress goods, dry goods, fashionable haberdashery, children's garments, and choice table delicacies. We have given our undivided attention to the selection of these excellent assortments, which will, with our large and active business experience enable us to cater to the purchasing public of Olive Hill and vicinity in a manner which will attract attention of our numerous friends and patrons. We have not purchased an old or second-hand stock, but have bought direct from the factory and every article has the appearance and quality which only new and high grade goods can present. We have, however, purchased in such immense quantities so as to enable us to sell at extremely low prices and the profit which usually goes to the merchant, can be saved by our customers. Every article is fresh and new and you will do well to call early and get the best to be had. You are sure to be pleased.

Ladies!

This Will Interest You

To see our desirable line of Silks, Ribbons, Veilings, Laces, Insertions, Braids, Trimmings, Muslins, White-Goods, Dress Goods, Calicoes, Percalines, Gingham, Lawns, and our excellent assortment of high grade Underwear and Hosiery. We have taken the utmost precaution to make this important line the finest display in regard to quality, ever before seen in this section of the state.

GENTLEMEN, See our Haberdasher Department

We are in a position to show you the most complete and artistic line of fine up-to-date goods direct from the factory with all the latest designs and patterns. If you are in need of Shirts, Collars, Neckwear, Underwear, Half-Hose, or anything pertaining to the fashionable young man's wardrobe, we can fit you out in a style complete.

THE CHILDREN'S GRAND DISPLAY

We have not forgotten the needs of our little ones when purchasing our goods. Mothers, don't forget to select from our stock in the children's department for the goods you need. Our line of hats and caps and dress goods for the young members of the household is complete and is also an important factor to both the merchant and consumer.

CHOICE TABLE DELICASIES

Our long and practical experience has taught us how, when and what to buy in this department. We can furnish you anything and everything you desire to make your table inviting and pleasant. One glance through our stock will assure you of our excellent judgment in purchasing this line of goods; nothing is enjoyed so much as a neat, dainty arranged table. We extend to you a cordial invitation to inspect this department.

A Word To The Wise Is Sufficient

A Needless Expenditure Of Money Is An Injury Which You Do To Yourself

Save your pennies and the dollars will take care of themselves. That is precisely what we are trying to help you to do. What you want is the best quality and the most in quantity for the least money you can. We have both, and you will be convinced of this statement, once you have visited our new and beautiful line of goods, you will always receive that pleasant attention which we have always extended to our patrons. You will always be made to feel perfectly at home when dealing with us.

W. S. HICKS & SON, Olive Hill, Ky.

Carter.

Maggie Normack of Portsmouth, came home Monday to visit home folks. She returned Friday.

Elmer Warnick was visiting his cousin, Geo. Gannon Sunday. He has accepted a position on the stage line between Russell and Ironton.

James Ramey and daughter returned from Ironton, Saturday where they have been visiting friends and relatives.

Farmers are busy with their winter plowing this fine weather. Fred Artis is progressing nicely with his school.

J. D. Everman and bride returned from their honeymoon Saturday, and are now making arrangements to build a new house near the mouth of Buffalo.

Mrs. Davis entertained quite a number of her friends at her home on Grassy Sunday.

Wm. Ramey of Carter is recovering from his severe illness.

Mrs. James Warnick has been on the sick list but is convalescent at present.

Nellie Smith is very low with typhoid fever but is recovering.

Edgar and Mollie Everman returned from Antioch Sunday.

A protracted meeting is being held at present at Taggart's Chapel and will continue for some time yet.

A large crowd attended church at Coopersville Sunday. Services were conducted by Rev. Rice.

Sunday School is progressing nicely at Corinth. There is always a large attendance.

It looks as though we are going to have an ice famine next summer if this warm weather continues.

Mr. and Mrs. Madden (nee Mollie Ramey) formerly of Laurence Co. Ohio, are soon to make California their home. They will take up the profession of school teaching. Greenup Co. will miss them as they are two of the most successful in the County.

The teachers are all hustling for their schools. "The early bird gets the worm you know." Most of them have their schools selected. Mose Ratcliff has been very low with typhoid fever. He is recovering.

FORGET ME NOT.

LUCKIEST MAN IN ARKANSAS.

"I'm the luckiest man in Arkansas," writes H. L. Stoney, of Britton, "since the restoration of my wife's health after five years of continuous coughing and bleeding of the lungs; and I owe my good fortune to the world's greatest medicine Dr. King's New Discovery, for consumption, which I know from experience will cure consumption if taken in time. My wife improved with the first bottle and twelve bottles completed the cure." Cures the worst coughs and colds or money refunded.

At Dr. M. W. Armstrong's Drug Store, 25c guaranteed.

A bad wreck occurred a few days ago at Russell, Ky. Four cars loaded with corn—about 2,700 bushels—were backed into the sand pit, demolishing the four cars. The corn was bought of the road by a local speculator.—Greenup Gazette.

RIGHTFULLY BURNED.

Chas. W. Moore, a machinist of Ford City, Pa., had his hand frightfully burned in an electrical furnace. He applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve with the usual result: "a quick and perfect cure." Greatest healer on earth for Burns, Eczema, Wounds Sores, and Piles. 25c at Dr. M. W. Armstrong's Drug Store.

One of Lawrence county's farmers went to Ironton recently, and sold a beef to a local butcher. The latter wanted to pay for the beef on the spot, but the farmer demurred, stating that they would make a settlement when the beef was killed, as he wanted a quarter of the beef. A few days passed by and the farmer called on the butcher to get the quarter of beef and make a settlement, fully expecting quite a neat sum. His astonishment can well be imagined when the butcher told him he was indebted to him in the sum of thirty cents. There is a moral to this story and a good one.—Greenup Gazette.

UNFAMILIAR FACTS.

India railroads have just adopted a standard time, which is five and a half hours ahead of Greenwich.

The first insurance company was established in 1706. It was called the Phoenix, and its headquarters were in London.

Nearly 1,200,000 new cases were brought before the county courts of England, the so-called "poor man's court," last year.

At Wellington, a little town in the west of England of only 7,000 inhabitants, no fewer than 5,215 tramps had to be accommodated last year.

It is not generally known, but experts say the Tupperware River, in Indiana, is the best bass stream in the United States.

There are said to be nearly fifty different rural telephone lines in Crawford County, Kansas, owned by farmers.

Another attempt is to be made to bore the Rocky Mountain range west of Denver, in Summit county, for a mining and railway tunnel.

Until the reign of Edward I pennies were struck with a cross, so deeply indented that it might be easily parted into two for halfpence, and into four for farthings.

Lake Morat, in Switzerland, has the curious property, every tenth year, of turning red, owing to the presence of certain water plants, which are not found in any other lake in the world.

A company has been formed in Mexico for the extraction of oil from corn (maize) without thereby affecting the grain for purposes of distillation in the process of manufacturing spirits.

A Sheffield, (England) writer, in commenting on the desirability of the American market for razors, declares that more razors are bought in America for each man than in any country in the world.

One distillery company in Kentucky turns out every seven days 1,200 barrels of sweet mash whiskey. The output for a year would be 62,400 barrels. The cost of all this to the manufacturers may be fairly estimated at $274,000.

M. Caveran, of France, has discovered that the eggs of insects contain the same characteristic poison venom as the sting of the insect. So also the eggs of serpents. The discovery is important in its bearings on the phenomena of heredity.

At the Shikonsha festival, which is held in Japan every May, the names of all soldiers who fell in battle the previous year are officially printed. The soldiers who succumb to disease are not thus honored.

The trade of the American-Hawaii company has grown immensely during the last few years. It has eight large steamships in service, and has just let contracts for the building of two more at San Francisco.

The women of Wenatchee, Washington, have formed a local floral association and introduced plant flower culture into many homes. The success has been so great that a mid-winter fair is planned to properly exhibit flowers produced.

A century ago France had 26 per cent of the population of Europe; now it has only 11 per cent of it. At one time French was spoken all over the world. Today it is the language of 45,000,000 people, while German is spoken by 100,000,000, and English by nearly 150,000,000.

Governmental supervision of railroads may be studied in America, as according to good authority the republic of Mexico now controls between 3,000 and 4,000 miles of the principal railway systems in that country, and at the present time is building additional mileage.

Inhabitants of the rural districts of France may now obtain from the post-office on their roads postal orders, etc., and may had their money for deposit in the savings banks, thus avoiding the trouble of going to the nearest post office for these purposes.

It has been discovered that fowls can be rendered immune from the ravages of cholera by means of vaccination with cultures of the cholera bacilli. The discovery will prove a great boon to poultry raisers, who often lose their entire flocks in a few days from cholera.

The largest raindrops are about one-fifth of an inch in diameter. To determine the size rain is allowed to fall into a thick layer of flour, each drop forming a hole in the flour, and these pellets are compared with dough pellets obtained from drops of known size delivered on the flour by artificial means.

A painstaking St. Louis statistician figures it out that, if the eggs hatched in the market last year were strung on a string like pearls, the string would be long enough to go around the earth seven times at the equator. No doubt the St. Louis man is right, but it is to be hoped that when he attempts to string this year's egg production the string will not break.

 "Clippings from a Frontiersman's Dairy,"

WRITTEN ESPECIALLY FOR THE OLIVE HILL TIMES.

Tonight as I sit before my shanty fire nursing a sprained ankle and listening to the howling storm without, I am reminded of another stormy winter night away back in the sixties. That was when the most of north-east Kentucky was a virgin forest, when you could travel all day long and see no living person, except now and then a trapper or hunter. It was only a lad then and a man had in a lumber camp. We had made up from Meadow creek to Wolf pen, a distance of some thirty odd miles. Winter had set in. The men had come by squads until the woods were almost deserted, and our camp was full. One third of November Mr. Hewitt, the proprietor, dispatched me to the nearest post office with some very important letters to post and bring back any that might be there for him. I'd never traveled the road before if indeed it could be called a road for it was only a dim path through the thick brush. I arrived at the office about two in the evening. The distance I had traveled was 22 miles. I had intended to return the same evening at the forest was lit up by the full moon, which would make the way back to the camp. By the time that I had transacted my business at the post office, the north-west wind was blowing icy cold. Dark clouds had over spread the sky and there was every indication of a madden snow storm. I put up with the best I could for the night. There were several in the village but I was informed they were all full, many campers saying arrived the week previous. While I was in the office I noticed several high-looking fellows poking about in a suspicious manner. I was slightly acquainted with one of them and had some words in camp some time since and the boys had seen sides with me and run him off. They appeared very interested when I came from the office a large square package that was directed to Mr. Hewitt. The news spread about town that I was to carry the currency to camp to be paid to pay the hands off. This I did not mind so much as that it would be paid until pay day, but of course I did not want to break a sealed package to give proof of my denial. The following day there was two feet of snow and it was still snowing. My mail was not to remain until the storm had subsided but to me only was law and at a stroke I swung out on the trail to beat the worst storm I had ever seen, for several miles all went well, then a sudden rific and the wind increased and began to grow uneasy for the snow had begun to drift. I toiled on at times in my drifts up to my arms. I had only the marks to guide me now, for a long time since the trail had been very dim in several places but now it was entirely lost. On and on I struggled until finally exhausted I sat down on a fallen pine to rest and eat a bite of the post man's wife had prepared for that morning. I looked at my watch and found it was eleven. When I had finished the bunch I began to look around to get my bearings. I was surprised to hear the sound of voices and directly two tough looking fellows here in sight. They were looking for some one evidently for I heard one of them say: "Maybe he's cuter cross by Catamount Gap and gone that way." Instantly it flashed into my mind what they were up to, as they were the same men that were in the office when I received the package. They had seen me put the bundle in a small grip the which was now sitting in the snow by my side. I knew there was no money in it but I was determined they should not open it. I done some mighty rapid thinking just then. As quick as thought I unlocked the grip, took out the package and replaced it with a small bundle of hose and shirts I had bought for myself at the village, and against they had discovered the package was snug in a large inside pocket of my fur coat. In a moment they were standing around me firing questions at me. I could see they had been drinking, and the coarse vulgar language they used showed them to be ruffians that would stoop to any crime. Finally one of the bearded monsters addressed me: "Now had all we be wanten is the air bunch ye got outter the post office yesterday. We be honest tellers, but we're hard put. Jist you hand us over thet leetle grip, it's in that and we'll mind our own g'n. I'll put that and we'll mind our own g'n." As he spoke he stooped and picked it up. I said: "Gentlemen, ye've got the drop on me for I've got no gun." I had had a 38 Smith & Wesson in my breast pocket put the truth was I was completely baffled by their ugly looking squirrel rifles. "Take it," I said and started to leave them, but was at once stopped by one of the men who took me by the arm. "Dont be in such a big hurry," I had hoped they were going away without looking the grip but I was disappointed for the other fellow commenced to open it, and a savage curse greeted my ears when he discovered shorts and hose instead of the square packages. The man holding my arm gave me a savage jerk which threw me flat on my back the instant my back touched the snow I heard a strange uttering sound through the air over my head and I saw a long yellow object shooting downward. The next moment one of the men gave a desperate scream, then all was the wildest excitement. The man that had thrown me down articulated: "My God!" and fled into the bushes. In a moment I was on my feet my revolver ready, then I knew what had caused the trouble. Crouched low upon the breast of the prostrate man was the largest panther I ever saw. Was I scared? Well yes. I knew the danger but this was not the first of those yellow devils I had ever seen at close range. Quickly I had to choose between duty and revenge. Only a moment before this man had talked insultingly to me, and I was prepared to slip me, now there he lay, helpless waiting a horrible death. Which should it be? A pistol shot answered the question; and I well knew a bad shot would be fatal to the man. With one mighty leap the Panther rolled a few times in the snow and lay peacefully still. I knew the man was not hurt, for they have a peculiar train, after they spring upon their prey they crouch, wagging their tails and wait patiently for signs of a struggle, and then with a few strokes of his paw he strikes down his prey. I was a doozy. We two were left alone, my blood was not by this time and the ruffian saw it he saw my gun too and began to whine. I helped him to sit up and then began to march him to camp to let the men deal with him. We compromised, he agreed to take the pelt from the animal or me if I would let him go back home. He was positive to give me the pelt, he chattered together and his knees shook he could scarcely stand. "After all I have saved your life," he said, "Yes I will admit it, and I saved you from a worse fate than I ever attempt to do me I would never have seen camp, for that yellow monster was lying up there among the large oak limbs waiting for a mowen my part to make its final spring. It was two o'clock next morning when I reached camp. I had lost my wind and not until the clouds cleared away and I got the position of the north wind did I get the right direction, there was easy sailing. My feet were sorely frozen. After breakfast I took my bearings from Mr. Hewitt and took the pelt to the floor. "Take this and give me the pelt," he said as he handed me $20. The package proved to be a number specimens from New York and was worth more to him than the money I was to pay off the men. The secure six more yellow hides but one as big as this one. Yesterday I received a letter from Mr. Hewitt, in which he said: "Dont fail to come back spring as I want you to prospect some hard in wood timber. There are a number panthers there but there is plenty of excitement never the less."

St. Peter at the Gate

St. Peter stood guard at the golden gate With a solemn mien and air serene, When up to the top of the golden stair A man came, ascending there.

Applied for admission. They came and stood Before St. Peter, so great and good. He bore the City of Jesus to win, And asked St. Peter to let them in.

The woman was tall and dark and thin, With a rancory beak upon her chin. She was short and thick and stout, His stomach was built as it rounded out.

"Oh, how who guardest the gate," said she, "We've two come hither, knocking thee. To let us enter the heavenly land, And play our harps with the angels band."

"I've told the sinners about the day When they'd repent of their evil way, I've told my neighbors—I've told 'em all How I shall meet them at the Pearly Wall."

"I've never would pray with an earnest vim, Or go to revival or join in a hymn. So I had to leave him in sorrow there While I, with the chosen, walked in prayer."

"I've done enough—a saint I've been, Won't that atone?" Can't you see him lean? By my grim gospel I know 'tis so That the unrepentant must fry below!"

"But don't show me any way that you can see That he may enter whose door to me? It's a narrow gospel which I preach, But the chosen expect not narrow ways."

"I've done enough—a saint I've been, Won't that atone?" Can't you see him lean? By my grim gospel I know 'tis so That the unrepentant must fry below!"

That he would certainly have to go. That if she went to the regions dim, There wasn't the ghost of a shadow for him.

Slowly he turned, by habit bent, To follow wherever the woman went. St. Peter, standing on duty there, Observed that the top of his head was bare.

"Friend, how long have you been well?" "Thirty years" (with a weary sigh) And then he thoughtfully added, "Why?"

"I've done enough—a saint I've been, Won't that atone?" Can't you see him lean? By my grim gospel I know 'tis so That the unrepentant must fry below!"

"But don't show me any way that you can see That he may enter whose door to me? It's a narrow gospel which I preach, But the chosen expect not narrow ways."

"NED," The FARMER BOY A Possible Result of a Lad's Industry and Foresight. By GEO. E. FOSTER.

COPYRIGHTED BY THE AUTHOR

CHAPTER IV. Elements of Success.

"How does your farm progress, Ned?" queried Mrs. Jackson, one afternoon, as she, with unduly interest, went out to see her son's work.

"Nicely, mother, it has raised just enough, and it is better than I thought, to make potatoes good, and the squashes are doing splendidly," said Ned, enthusiastically.

"It seems to me that you have passed the happiest summer of your life," his mother replied, "and you know you are to be so contented before."

"Yes, mother, I have been a happy season. It is the best I have ever known, something to look forward to, and somehow this business has given me more and more interest in my ambition in me, that I never get before. I have been too busy to have time to hang about my hands. I have not had my usual time to get into mischief, and consequently you have had less occasion to find fault with me. I guess we have had better success on account of this little plot of ground. You know, mother, that our business was very good, and that Satan always sends mischief for idle hands to do. I have not heard you quote it for some time."

"That is true, Ned," replied Mrs. Jackson, "and you are very much gratified at the change in your case, and you are developing into a better man, but do you think you would like to be a farmer?"

"I do not know, mother; but it appears to me as if I should for something more, and your aspirations appear to have given me the impulse on this plot of ground. When I have seen from what little box plants these plants have grown to their present size, when I reflect that the great ones over there come from a little corner, and that the fruitful apple tree by the roadside, that every day blossoms over these come from a little seed, to me as if I might become both useful and great some day."

"It is possible," said Mrs. Jackson, "where there is a will there is also a way." To win in this life one must be brave, and give and go, and in doing, dare also to do right. All this season, Ned, your father has led you to your own device, so far as this field is concerned. He has had your work for him, to pay for the use of his horse and tools, and also for his own work. He had an object in this. He thinks it you are growing into a man, and when you are of an inimitable value to you, when you reach manhood."

"When Willie came here the other day, he said he thought father meant to become a farmer, and for his work, and for the use of horse and tools," replied Ned.

"There is a great difference in the way we bring you up, and the way Willie's parents train him, I admit," said Mrs. Jackson, "but Willie has everything he does for, he seems to be entirely lacking in ambition. He looks at a good day's work, that his father's wealth will fall to him. He runs to his parents in every trouble, and happens to have every particle of self-reliance. Your father and I differ in Mr. and Mrs. Case, and many parents do. We think that too much is often done for children when they are small, and that parents often teach their children the lesson of self-reliance. Your father often says that of all the elements of success in business, none is more vital than self-reliance. A determination to be one's own helper, and not to look to others for support. He thinks it is the secret of all individual growth and vigor, the key that unlocks all difficulties in all professions, and every calling. He who begins life on crutches will generally end on crutches. Remember, my child, that the toughest plants are reared on Alpine cliffs where the storms beat most violently, and the weak are found in sheltered gardens."

"That is just what our minister says to me the other day," said Ned.

"When he saw me lacking away with my hoe, through that bed of witchgrass, he remarked that the difficulties, hardships and trials of life, and the obstacles one encounters on the road to fortune, are positive blessings, they act the muscles more firmly, he said, and each self-reliance. I told Willie what the minister said, and he laughed, and he said he never found obstacles a blessing yet."

"Poor Willie," said Mrs. Jackson, "unless he changes his course now, I fear he will not grow up to be a useful man."

"Since I have been at work here, mother, the words of the declaration of independence, all that I have been keeping in my mind, you know how they run:

"Let the woman have faith in themselves, and bid them take earnestly to hold of life, scorning all pretence and business, all that the world offers them. Let them believe that no man man, on God's earth is willing or able to help any other man. Let them strive to be creators rather than inheritors; to bequeath rather than to borrow; to wield the sword of valorous fortitude, let them form their own opinions, and their own consciences of the God in them, and the Providence over them, fight their own battles with their own hands."

"That is a most excellent sentiment," said Mrs. Jackson, "and he who wrote it was a great man."

CHAPTER V. The Crop Harvested.

"You don't say that you have raised all those potatoes," exclaimed Willie as he called to see Ned one afternoon.

a pile of nine bags potatoes which were heaped together at the side of an apple tree.

"Yes, I do. I have just measured them, and I find that there are thirty-three bushels of the large ones, and thirty-five bushels of small ones," replied Ned.

"I suppose you feel pretty rich, don't you?" exclaimed Willie.

"Well, it is a good beginning for the first year, anyhow," said Ned. "Laudford Jones says he will take the lot and pay me thirty-five cents per bushel. It is a little above the market price, but he thinks they are extra fine. That is, let me see—thirty-three bushels of large ones makes $31.50 for potatoes alone."

"I did not suppose you could get so much out of a quarter of an acre," said Willie.

"It is only a little above the average of the acreage of the agricultural papers," replied Ned.

"I suppose you made something out of your potatoes also, father?" inquired Willie as he walked around the potato field to better see the hands of the potatoes.

"I had thirty vines, one died from the effects of a grub that worked in the soil, and a few became plants and sprang out the rest did wonderfully well. The twenty-four vines produced me a few bushels of potatoes, and I sold fifty pounds of them at five cents per bushel, and got $1.25 for them. I will be $1.25 more."

"Where are you going to do with the money?"

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

"What are you going to do with the money?"

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

"I will buy the savings bank," replied Ned.

CHAPTER VI. In Which Ned Prepares for His Next Year's Crop.

"When are you going to begin feeding your cows for the winter?" asked Ned of his father one day, after he had moved his potatoes from the lot.

"Right away," replied Mr. Jackson, "where are you going to feed it?"

"I shall throw it into the pasture, so that the cows can eat it on their way home at night," said Mr. Jackson, "and you can see what a good thing it will be for them. I was developing in his mind."

"I was not thinking of it," replied his father, "I would like to mow a large lot with you," continued Ned.

"What can it be for, father?"

"If you will cut my cow to the feeding place, I will cut the other and when it is done, I will get a little farther away," replied Ned.

"I do not see what you want to do that for, and I do not mean to let you do it," replied Ned.

"Well, father you have given me the use of the soil for several years. This year you had a property secured, and in shifts to raise as good crop next year, I guess you will be a rich man."

"That is so replied Mr. Jackson, but what has this to do with feeding cattle?"

"I was ever, father, I thought that when the feed was very short in the winter, and you have to feed the cows with fodder, that the cows must always come to the feeding place a little before the cows, and then they will be more anxious for the evening feed, and this will be a good thing for them."

"I will be a rich man," replied Ned.

"I will be a rich man," replied Ned.

"I will be a rich man," replied Ned.

"I will be a rich man," replied Ned.
