THOU SHALT NOT STEAL BRIBE NOR GRAFT

VOL. I. NO. 11

OLIVE HILL, CARTER COUNTY, KY., JANUARY, 29, 1913.

Price: $1.00 per year In Advance

In some Eastern Kentucky counties office aspirants are already circulating nominating petitions, thinking to be early in the field might make their labors easier in securing the necessary number of names to their petition, but such before May 2, will only be labor lost.

The new primary law is very specific in matter of time for securing names to nominating petitions, and provides that such petitions of all candidates, irrespective, cannot be circulated earlier than ninety days prior to August 2, and must be filed with the County Clerk, this year, not later than July 2. In counties having cities in which registration is required it is a duty of the County Clerk to verify the names on the petition by checking the petition with the registration stubs. Not only the name, but the address and date of signature and political affiliation must appear on the petition.

Care, and the sense of the primary law, should be minded by the prospective candidate, as names secured before May 2 will be stricken from the petition and chance to imperil the nomination.

A Measly Shame

It was a dirty Irish trick, but can't be helped now. A traveling man, who doesn't make Olive Hill every week, however, landed here last week on one of his rounds and to cope with the disagreeable weather and chilly mornings, had stocked his grip with two quarts of "boozology." A traveling friend being "wise," took possession of the whiskey, during the owner's absence leaving a note instead stating the juice would meet him in Ashland. The "wounded" man almost collapsed when he returned and examined his grip, but soon recuperated and all was pleasant.

Uncle Kiah Fultz has almost recovered from a paralytic stroke which has been his ailment for several weeks.

Mrs. David Branson, since the recent death of Mr. Branson, has gone to Indianapolis where she will make her home with her son.

Oppenheimer's Big Forced Sale

L. Oppenheimer & Co. are conducting a real cut price sale for this week and next. It's a case of "have to sell" that has made them make such almost unreasonable cuts in prices on their entire stock. The building they now occupy has been sold and it is up to them to move so everything is offered at bargain price, cost and less. Read their adv. on last page.

On and after February 1st, I will be located in rooms over D. Tabor's store.

Renfro Missing

Deputy Marshal Cecil Thompson was in Elliott County Sunday looking for James Renfro who shot to death Wm. Boggs, his father-in-law, on last New Years morning.

Renfro is under bond for appearance at the coming term of Elliott Circuit Court, but the killing was done in Carter county and Marshal Thompson was seeking the service of a warrant issued from Carter authorities, but his efforts were futile, as Renfro seems to be gone and no one has any knowledge as to when he left or where he went.

Convicts Have Pay Day.

From August 1, 1912, to Jan. 1, 1913, the convicts of the Frankfort Reformatory have earned for the State of Kentucky the sum of $15,597.80. Under the law 20 per cent. of the convict's earnings at labor is allowed the convict. One fourth of this is placed in his savings account to be paid him upon his release. The balance is given the convict to spend as he likes.

Relative to Campaign Contributions

The Senate last week passed a bill to prohibit corporations making any contributions for political conventions or primary elections. The bill is an extension of the campaign contribution law enacted in 1907 under which corporations were forbidden to contribute to general election campaign funds. A penalty of $5,000 or a year's imprisonment for officers of corporations violating the law is carried by the bill. It would further restrict to $5,000 each and all contributions by individuals in connection with the nomination or election of president, vice-president or senators.

My Doctor Said

"Try Cardui," writes Mrs. Z. V. Spell, of Hayne, N. C. "I was in a very low state of health, and was not able to be up and tend to my duties. I did try Cardui, and soon began to feel better. I got able to be up and help do my housework. I continued to take the medicine, and now I am able to do my housework and to care for my children, and I feel as though I could never praise Cardui enough for the benefits I have received."

TAKE CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

Cardui is successful, because it is made especially for women and acts specifically on the womanly constitution. Cardui does one thing, and does it well. That explains the great success which it has had, during the past 50 years, in helping thousands of weak and ailing women back to health and happiness.

If you are a woman, feel tired, dull, and are nervous, cross, and irritable, it's because you need a tonic. Why not try Cardui? Cardui builds, strengthens, restores, and acts in every way as a special tonic remedy for women. Test it for yourself. Your druggist sells Cardui. Ask him.

Civilizing the Philippines

Maglo Touch of Americanism Is Beginning to Tell in Island Possessions—Remarkable Progress in Educational Work. Worst Forms of Savagery Gradually Disappearing.

THE twelfth annual report of the director of education for the Philippine Islands contains information sufficient to kindle anew the keen interest of the American people in their island possessions between Australia and eastern Asia. The Philippines have belonged to the United States for a dozen years, and the contrast between the Philippine population as a whole at that time and the present affords a striking parallel, the achievements of our civilizing influence and efforts offering a compensation for whatever trouble these islands have been. And it was reasonable to expect that Uncle Sam would find his troubles in the archipelago were overrun with wild savages. Even now the savage element is strong in number, as shown by the United States census giving the population as 14,000,000, 9 per cent of whom were savages. There are something like a million semicivilized inhabitants. But for all that, marvelous progress has been made.

When this country acquired the Philippines, head hunters swarmed throughout the islands, but the American government of the islands has almost entirely disappeared. Another encouraging statement recently was made by Major Henry Glisheuser, commander of the Davao district. He said that the Bagobos of Mindanao had quit killing their fellows and taken to farming. It formerly was a rule that a man of the Bagobos could not marry until he had killed a human being. Major Glisheuser's news is particularly cheering, as some of the dozen or more tribes of the Mindanao are so savage as to be almost hopeless.

A BETTER GENERATION
While they are improving, the Bagobos cling to some of their savage customs, such as filing and blackening their teeth. They are polygamists. Their human sacrifices, which Major Glisheuser says have been abandoned, were attended with praying to the mountains. The Bagobos have always raised hemp, but now that they are becoming better farmers they are growing it in larger quantities. Large numbers of the Bagobos have been assembled in villages which have schools, and scouts and the police teach the savage children in other sections. Boys of the surrounding tribes are now coming in to attend the agricultural and industrial school in their town of Davao.

The report of the director of education for the islands, covering the school year ending April 1, 1912, shows very encouraging results were obtained in all lines of school activities. The general instruction has been organized and developed to a greater extent than in any previous year, and a large number of present school buildings have been completed. A decided improvement is reported in the teaching force, both American and Filipino. In the past year 361 Filipinos have been assigned to positions as superintending and assistant supervising teachers. The organization begins with the first year of the intermediate grades, five courses being provided for the general course, the course for teaching, the course in farming, the trade course, the course in housekeeping and household arts and the course in business. This specialization is incorporated into the course of study in order that the child may secure such training as will directly prepare for a useful life.

GROWTH OF EDUCATION
In furtherance of the policy of providing adequate school accommodations standard plans based upon the unit system of construction, which allows additions to be made as necessity may demand without detracting from the appearance or utility of the original structure, have been prepared. Each unit is a class room of standard size, 7 by 6 meters. Plans have been adopted for buildings of from one to twenty class rooms, with assembly room, office and storeroom. Concrete reinforced with steel is the construction material which meets conditions best. It is specified for the standard school-house type. Already 125 school buildings of this type have been completed, and 173 others are in process of construction, of which eighty-one lacked very little of completion and were already occupied at the time the director made his report.

As a result of a campaign for acquisition of adequate sites to provide sufficient room for the buildings to be erected, for the future development of the school plan, 407 acres of land were secured and for suitable playgrounds the bureau now has in its possession 137 school sites.

One new educational center of very great interest has been established during the past year, a school of household industries. The director describes it as follows:

The purpose of this school is to train adult women in certain selected home industries. In five or six months of daily work in embroidery and lace-making the persons attending this school can become very proficient in these lines. They will then return to their homes, or to other towns agreed upon between themselves and the director of education, where each woman will be expected to establish a local class for instruction in her speciality. It is desired that she gather about her a group of industrious women and girls whom she will instruct along the lines of her training in the School of Household Industries. When the women of the surrounding communities will employ them at fair wages. Doubtless many of the women who receive instruction in local classes will be ambitious to form similar organizations of their own account, and in this way it is expected that an ever widening circle of industrial activity will result.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING
The industrial program is being promoted constantly through the medium of provincial industrial supervisors, inspectors and instructors from the traveling corps of the general office, various publications, bulletins and correspondence, through industrial exhibits, through the appointment of pensioners to co-operating training along such lines, and by means of the special courses offered in the Philippine Normal school and the Philippine School of Arts and Trades. All examinations of the figures included among the statistical tables of this report will show that of the total enrollment of 253,740 boys and 153,312 girls during the month of February, 1912 (an average month), 216,290 boys and 125,203 girls—81 per cent of the entire monthly enrollment—were doing some form of industrial work.

The athletic program of the bureau has found general acceptance among the masses of the people of the islands. It is confidently expected by the director that as soon as the introduction of the playground and group games become general, at least 90 per cent of the school children will participate in athletics.

An educator from one of the greatest universities of the United States returning from a lecture tour in the Philippines writes relative to the work of the bureau of education in the islands:

"The more I learn about the work of your bureau the more I think that it is the most significant constructive work ever undertaken in any colony in the tropics or in its entirety in any state in our Union. You have in your hands the means for the achievement of a civilization and a high culture. I consider it one of the best bits of good fortune that ever came to me that I have been able to see it and get in touch with it personally."

A DISCORDANT NOTE
But in spite of the beneficent influence of the United States, educational and otherwise, Manuel L. Quezon, representative of the islands in the house of representatives, says that the Philippines will never consent to remain a dependency of the United States. He says:

"The only manner in which the Philippines will prove to be commercially and otherwise of benefit to the United States is by the recognition on the part of this government of the right of the Filipinos to elect their own government and to manage their own affairs. I am not in favor of their being treated as a dependency of the United States, but I am in favor of their being treated as a nation of equals with the other nations of the world."

FASHION RULES OF CHINA.

Dress Problem Deliberated at Ten Sessions by the Congress in Peking.

Ten sessions of the new republican congress in Peking have been devoted to the question of dress. One whole day was given over to the trying on of hats, and all possible and impossible fashions of men's and women's clothing were displayed and examined. The result of this interesting investigation may be gathered from the following resume of the laws passed:

First.—All Chinese officials, without distinction of rank, shall wear European clothing. This shall consist of black walking coat, top hat of Chinese silk and patent leather shoes. No member in dress of trousers. On ordinary occasions a derby hat may be worn.

Second.—Non-official persons shall likewise to show on festivals.

Third.—Those belonging to the military, police and to the judicial and student bodies shall wear the prescribed uniforms.

Fourth.—Women shall use European hats, but otherwise retain their customary dress with certain modifications. The etiquette of greetings was defined as follows: Ordinary greeting, hat off, bow once; official greeting, hat off, bows three. Women keep their hats on.—Berlin Tagblatt.

A QUEER INDIAN CRADLE.

It Reminds One of the Song "Rock a Baby, in the Treestop."

Unique and probably the most primitive cradle rocking device ever seen or employed in any part of the world is the one that has been adopted by the mather of fact squaws of the Kwakwaka'wakw Indians living on Vancouver Island, British Columbia. The mother performs the double duty of spinning and rocking her infant, snuggled in a hollowed out cradle equipped with cedar bark strips suspended from the limb of a sapling. This, says the Christian Herald, is about the most realistic and accurate representation of the old nursery song, "Rock a Baby, in the Treestop," so far known, the most striking part, however, being that of the Indian mother using her big toe as the pivot power. With a cord attached to the bent limb and the other end wound around her toe, she swings her dancng offspring by her feet, leaving her hands entirely free for weaving. So out of the ordinary was this scene of Indian life, which was met by an expedition that a life-size group of this subject recently was set up in the North Ethnological hall of the American Museum of Natural History, New York city.

And more than all to earth denied
Shall greet us on the other side.—Waltter.

Grist From the Sport Mill

By STADIUM

THE association of the English royal family with sport has never been so close as it is now. When a sailor king is on the throne, which for the first time may appear to be an anomaly, but yet upon consideration it is nothing of the sort—that is to say, if heredity counts for anything in such matters, for King Edward was a sportsman as keen as any of his subjects, and all the house of Hanover, excepting maybe the first, were generous supporters of the sport of kings, and some of them of shooting likewise.

It must be remembered, too, although by reason of his profession the present sovereign has not been favored by opportunities for developing the latent love of British outdoor exercises, that obviously he is strongly within him to the extent of becoming proficient in many of them, that he has kept himself well informed of all that has been going on.

It is presumed, therefore, that the king's devotion to British sport and his desire to encourage its development every branch were responsible for his recent visits to Henley and Lord's, while his partiality for Rugby football was previously rendered evident by his patronage of the great game at Twickenham. His masterly, moreover, has done much to advance the interests of other sports and pastimes.

As a result of the defeat of the French athletes at Stockholm, a college athletics has been formed in France, and the committee appointed to organize the college has issued a report which is signed by Rodin, the sculptor; Ordre, the physician; M. Gabriel Bonvalet, the Marquis de Polignac, Dr. Roucard and Maurice Collet.

The college will act as a center for all French athletes who desire to train for the next Olympic games. The training will proceed along rational lines, and after a certain stage of efficiency is reached the men will be placed in the hands of American coaches, who will be appointed to direct the special activities of pupils in different branches of athletics.

A table of the best French athletes and their performances will be drawn up so as to make possible the selection of the men best qualified to represent France at the next Olympic games. All sports will be practiced, including swimming and football.

W. A. Rembert Hall of the Polo Monthly has announced that he will have $100,000 of English money to bet that the English polo team will lift the cup from the American team next year. In his statement he says that the English are quite confident this year that they will win the international match. So confident are they that money is now on the way here to cover some American bets. "We have one lot in England with the international match, and another lot with a New York banker of $50,000 to place in New York that the English team will win three straight matches." He goes on to state that for months agents of the Duke of Westminster have been searching for polo ponies, and now have practically all worth having in England.

Our Cream Butter Factory

WHILE nothing has been mentioned of such, we have learned from very responsible sources that Olive Hill is being considered as a very favorable location for a Cream Butter Factory.

The factory, if built here, which will depend greatly upon the interest and encouragement given by the business people of Olive Hill and the support probable from the farmers of this section of country, will be on the "Cathedral Cream Butter Factory" plan, such as are now operating at several points throughout the bluegrass section of the State.

The promoters are considering the establishment of a factory here as a test venture from the viewpoint that the creamery interest on the farms this far from the blue grass section is not considered strongly by the farmers toward marketing this product as a secondary source of income.

This is very naturally true, of course, and the same condition was naturally true 25 years ago in this same section as regards our now famous clay interests, and the same conditions could have been found at Jenkins only three years ago with regard to the mountains of coal, until the railroads opened up a way to market.

We do not claim the present interest in dairying as it manifests in the middle and western counties of Kentucky, but we think first for farmers owning their own farms, have good grass soil, are prosperous as farmers and want only to be assured of a market for their cream to give a butter factory a healthy business.

We feel absolutely secure in vouching for a loyal support and hearty cooperation of each and every business man, not only in Olive Hill, but of this section, of the proposed industry.

The plan of organization of these factories are built and operated on the co-operative plan. The complete plan and proposition will be ready in a few days, so we were informed, and are promised us for our next issue, when we hope to be in position to say more of the project.

So many projects, such as our light plants, etc., have proven only advertised bubbles that we hesitate to comment with much recommendation on enterprises coming our way unless we are shown facts and figures.
