Farmerettes Ready for Championship Events

Only the most modern of farm machinery was good enough for these Pomona farmerettes. They were getting in readiness for champion farm girl contests at the Los Angeles County fair in Pomona. It was an international affair with exhibition events staged for Mexican, Portuguese, Italian, Swiss, Danish and Swedish girls.

Australia Gets New Governor

Brig. Gen. Sir Alexander Hore-Ruthven, an Englishman, is to succeed Sir Isaac Alfred Isaacs as governor gen.

He Finds Romance Again at 90

Twice a widower after marriages which lasted 23 and 38 years respectively, David L. Selke, ninety-year-old head of the congressional information bureau, was wed to Sally Mason, fifty-nine-year-old music teacher of California and Washington. Mr. Selke said he had so many children that he had stopped counting them. The bride and groom are shown above.

Howard Hughes Tests New Pursuit Plane

Surprising a huge crowd of pilots and airplane manufacturers, Howard Hughes, wealthy sportsman and film producer, permitted his new mystery racing ship to be photographed at Municipal airport, Los Angeles. The low-wing monoplane, powered by a 14-cylinder twin row Wasp engine, has an expected top speed of 365 miles per hour with a cruising speed of 350 miles per hour. Built over a period of two years, the plane is estimated to have cost more than $100,000. It is equipped with retractable landing gear and a tail skid, and has wing flaps and air brakes.

Going Down? Then Holler for Elsie!

Elsie Fischl of New York city has the distinction of being the only woman life guard in New York state, if not the entire country. Miss Fischl, who is twenty years old, has 16 rescues to her credit, and is a member of the staff of the Washington Baths in Coney Island.

Star of Finland Led the Parade

As part of the annual Harbor day celebration at San Francisco the last of the old square rigged vessels on the bay, the Star of Finland, was decked out in flags and bunting and towed by a tug at the head of the gigantic marine parade. The Star of Finland is the old sailor which it is planned to buy and anchor at the waterfront for use as an old time sea museum. Here the square rigger is passing under the catwalks of the San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge. The sight of a square-rigger is one that will be passing entirely from our ken before long, but there will be many sights in these same waters far more unusual in 1935, the year when a new World's Fair will celebrate the opening of the two great bridges now being built at San Francisco.

"Ears of the Army" at Work

The United States army's huge "ears," sound locators tuned to pick up noises which might come from "enemy" aircraft or infantry, as seen in the war maneuvers at Camp Pine, N. Y. These locators are synchronized with the huge searchlights and once a sound is picked up the lights reveal the cause of the disturbance.

Name Wendel to Fight for AAA

The newly organized League for Economic Equality, with headquarters at Sioux City, Iowa, which hopes to raise $100,000 among farmers in the Middle West to carry on a court fight for the AAA, has elected as their head, Alvera S. Wendel, prominent Woodbury county, Iowa, farmer. The league is fighting to retain benefits for farmers under provisions of AAA.

Winant Heads New Social Security Board

President Roosevelt appointed as chairman of the social security board

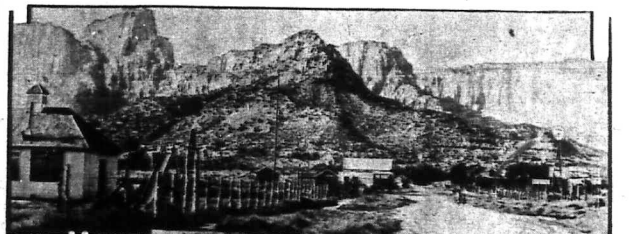

John G. Winant, former Republican governor of New Hampshire.

Army Tank Mothers Brood of Bayonets

Dashing out from the protective but speedy hulk of this modern tank, soldiers of the Sixteenth infantry, from Governor's Island, are pinning their invisible enemies to the ground with bayonets during the tank drill at the Camp Pine maneuvers at New York. These soldiers were the winners of the drill. The whole nation, indeed the whole world, had been watching with interest the army maneuvers at Camp Pine. The boys have been "fighting" among themselves in sham battles that are showing just where the strength and weaknesses of Uncle Sam's fighting force lie. To the observer, it certainly looks like sure-enough war. The activities at Pine camp are Uncle Sam's largest peace-time maneuvers.

Alleged Polygamist Colony in Arizona

Down in Arizona a colony of alleged polygamists has been discovered at the village of Short Creek, which is shown in the illustration. Elmo Bollinger, a county attorney, heard of it and started prosecutions. The twenty-five or thirty families were excommunicated by the Mormon church.

Political Announcements

Democrats

We are authorized to announce: J. J. THOMAS is authorized to announce: Of Owingsville, Ky. As a candidate for Representative from the Bath-Rowan District, subject to the action of the Democratic party at the August 3rd primary.

Republicans

We are authorized to announce: Mrs. Ethel Ellington Of Morehead, Ky. As a candidate for State Senator from the 31st General District composed of Bath, Fleming, Mason, Manifee, Powell and Rowan Counties, subject to the action of the Republican party at the August 3rd primary.

Policy

During the two primary campaigns the Independent has, more or less, endorsed and supported the candidacy of Hon. Thomas S. Rhea for Governor. Our endorsement of Mr. Rhea resulted from more than one factor, but the principal reason was that he favored a sales tax akin to the policy that has been pursued by this newspaper since the sales tax was passed. The desire to support Mr. Rhea was voiced by the majority of the Democrat stockholders of this paper.

We feel that Mr. Rhea has a better program than does his opponent. We cannot help but believe that he is the better qualified man. The voters of Kentucky will make the final discrimination on Saturday, and by this time next week we shall know whether Mr. Rhea is likewise the choice of the people. Judging from the present sentiment he will be.

The Independent is incorporated with 25 stockholders. Thirteen are Republicans and 12 Democrats. Hence the name "Independent" was given the newspaper. Although we feel kindly toward Mr. Rhea, we at the same time make no discrimination between him and Hon. King Swope, the Republican nominee. We feel that we are being loyal to our cause, and to the people who incorporated and founded this newspaper to hereby declare that our columns will be open to the Republican party and the supporters of King Swope, as well as to the Democratic nominee, whether it be Mr. Rhea or Mr. Chandler. In a fight between the Democratic and the Republican party, the Independent intends to make no fight either way or take sides.

This newspaper in the future will be the same as in the past; there will be no discrimination between Republicans and Democrats.

Property Values

Any doubt but that Main Street residents consider their property valuable, was dispelled this week with the opening of bids for the new postoffice building. The bids ran from five to forty thousand dollars. Most of the property bid in was not worth the amount asked. There were a few reasonable bids, and it is safe to assume that the postoffice department will accept one of those.

Is Kentucky Going Dry?

The prevailing sentiment throughout the state today is that Kentucky will go dry when they vote on the repeal of the state prohibition amendment in November.

So far the drys, with many prominent leaders in an active part at the helm of their campaign, have started the drive for the continuance of Kentucky's liquor laws.

Distilleries and dispensaries are expected to take the lead on the other side. Their start is a late one, but in view of the fact that most states are going wet, it is reasonable to suppose that Kentucky, likewise, will repeal its prohibition amendment.

The matter rests, however, with the "wet" leaders. Unless they do something within the next month to offset the gains already made by the "dry" this state is liable to remain the present amendment.

Kentucky Voting Strength

The huge Democratic vote of 440,000 in the August primary demonstrates Kentucky's strength at the polls. It also shows that the people are awakening to the fact that they are a part of this state government of ours and it is their duty to take ballots. In this respect, the bitter feud between Chandler and Rhea has been a help. It has gone far to educate the adult to vote.

Saturday, Kentucky has another primary election. It is the duty of every Democrat to go to the polls and vote. Cast your ballot for the man you believe will make the best public servant, but, by all means, vote.

Somebody Slipped Up

A driver over the road between Owingsville and Mt. Sterling on U. S. 60 which has been constructed for only a few years, convinces us that something is wrong. This road is torn in hundreds of places, the concrete is breaking until whole sections are slipping out, and there is so much tar on the concrete that it resembles a macadam highway.

In accepting this piece of road, the state highway department at that time evidently slipped up. There is no reason for a road tearing up so soon after it is constructed. The strip of concrete on the same highway between the Fayette County line and Lexington was built 13 years ago. Yet it is in much better shape than that in Montgomery county.

It is slips like this that is costing the taxpayers many thousands of dollars annually, both in maintenance and construction of new roads to replace ones that have worn out before they should have.

Politics Business Et Cetra

BIDS: APPARENTLY, Harlan Blair has the inside track on the bidders for the new postoffice which the government has so graciously decided to construct for this mountain city. Blair's bid of $5,300, or $50 per front foot, appears to be the best out of the 11 submitted. Judging from the general run of the bids submitted Main Street property in Morehead is worth more than any city of its size in the entire state.

STRIKES:

WE NEVER Miss a really good thing until it is gone. Such is true of the payrolls of the Lee-Clay Products Co. and the Kentucky Tire, Brick Company, both of which are closed down either because of a strike or a threatened walk-out.

Present indications are that we may look for a settlement and a resumption of work this year. Adverse reports are that the plants won't get started again until the first of next year, if then.

ELECTION:

The general opinion of disinterested parties point to a victory for Tom Rhea in Saturday's primary. The lines are so tightly drawn throughout the state that a great change from the vote in the first primary is improbable. Chandler's best bet seems to be to swing a large portion of the 35,000 that Wallis polled. If it is held improbable that he can do this, insupportable as a large part of Wallis' vote came from Western Kentucky, and a note of Western Kentucky versus Central Kentucky, has been definitely instilled in this campaign since Billy Blair announced for "Happy" WPA and Projects.

Rowan County and the City of Morehead are in line to secure their portion of the enormous WPA projects that are being given out over the state. Aware of the advantages of working fast, both the county, represented by Judge Jennings and the city, headed by Mayor Blair, submitted projects aplenty for Federal approval.

UNEMPLOYMENT: Work for everybody is the order of the day under the present Roosevelt policy. With 5 billion dollars on which to draw, the WPA plans enough projects to put every unemployed citizen to work. We'll worry about paying that 5 billion of later, and the present concentrate on good times.

KY. SENATORS: It has been rumored and remains unconfirmed that Congressman Fred M. Vinson will oppose Senator M. M. Logan for the Senatorial post next year. Such a setup ought to prove a "breeze-cure" to Vinson's overwhelming victories in the past, including his state-wide victory of 3 years ago, stamp him as a worthy foe of Mr. Logan.

A lot depends on the present election, however. Vinson has openly declared for Rhea, while Mr. Logan has made no definite statement, but is believed his sentiments are toward Mr. Rhea—hence the withdrawal of his brother from the race for Auditor of Public Accounts.

PROJECTS FOR HUGE WORK RELIEF PROGRAM MUST BE SUBMITTED BY SEPT. 12

An intensive drive to secure ample projects by September 12, to keep Kentucky's workable unemployed on jobs for a period of a year was inaugurated today by George H. Goodman, Administrator for the Works Progress Administration.

and to insure full cooperation between Works Progress officials and those of the various cities and counties.

Regulations governing the submission of projects were somewhat modified by Mr. Goodman to meet the emergency. Heretofore, it has been necessary to file complete plans and estimates on each project with the application. Until the deadline, September 12, Mr. Goodman said, rough estimates on projects will be acceptable to the Louisville office and to Washington, leaving more accurate details to be worked out at a later date.

Counties able to assist financially with a given project, Mr. Goodman said, still will be required to do so on the basis of a sworn financial statement but in the instance of pauper counties it may be possible for the government to bear all of the expense of the project. Projects should be set up, he continued, showing all Federal costs allowable up to the limiting cost per man-year for the sponsoring unit concerned. The balance necessary for the prosecution of the work will be shown as a contribution.

All work that can possibly be combined should be so submitted, Mr. Goodman said. All road work within one county should be submitted on a single application form describing work to be done, estimating mileage of roads to be worked. The same applies to school projects and any other kind or type of work that can be set-up on a county-wide basis, sponsored by one governmental unit.

City and county officials throughout the State, Mr. Goodman said, have been notified of the September 12, deadline. These officials will be in a position to know what kind of work is anticipated and will cooperate to the fullest extent with the Works Progress Administration. At the same time Mr. Goodman has offered the services of his own organization in assisting various city and county officials in preparing their estimates, and obtaining the necessary funds from Washington.

Finally, Mr. Goodman said, and before funds are allocated by the Louisville office to a city or county for a given project all detailed data pertaining to the project, as previously outlined, must be submitted and approved.

In order to comply with the September 12 deadline set by Washington Mr. Goodman pointed out that it would be necessary to have Kentucky applications for projects to be in the Louisville office not later than September 9.

"I repeat," Mr. Goodman said, "that all of the various classifications of labor are to be provided for and all types of work and programs must be anticipated. This will necessitate a wide variety of projects and for the assistance of the various sponsors I enumerate a list of some suggested types of work that should assist in planning a well rounded program for any given community.

Roads, streets, alleys, sidewalks, curbs and gutters, bridges, municipal buildings and grounds, county buildings and grounds, hospitals, schools, stadiums, swimming pools, gymnasiums, playgrounds, parks and park buildings, golf courses, insect eradication, street gradation, publicly owned utility buildings and grounds, airport hangars, landing fields, education, clerical, library, research and statistical surveys, recreation, music, sewing, canning, gardening, tools and equipment, landscaping and public health.

"If Kentucky ever had a golden opportunity," Mr. Goodman said, "it stands in that position today. All any city or county has to do in order to secure improvements of a permanent nature is to file the proper application with the Louisville office and then meet with the requirements Washington has set up for the program.

"This certainly is an opportunity for diligent and wide awake city and county officials to make a record for civic improvement that will stand as a monument to all of us for years to come. I have instructed my organization to leave no stone unturned to be helpful in securing these projects. They are willing to work night and day until the deadline is reached, so naturally the cooperation of the officials is all we ask.

"And speaking of cooperation, I should like at this time to express my appreciation to the Press of the state for the wholehearted spirit of helpfulness it has shown since I became administrator. We at all times, shall attempt to in the future. After all ours is a joint mission of improvement and good for Kentucky."

Concluding, Mr. Goodman said, the Works Progress Administration was authorized to handle all projects up to $25,000 in cost to the Federal Government. All projects above that amount fall within the scope of the Public Works Administration, a separate and distinct government organization. There has been some confusion, he said, in some localities in distinguishing between the two organizations.

INDIAN DATA LAID BY PIT NEAR LOUISVILLE

Exhumation of forty-five skeletons from a prehistoric Indian village near Jeffersonville, Ind., together with dozens of tools, weapons, beads and other articles of handicraft has unraveled another year in the tangled skein of Indian cultures that revolved about the falls of the Ohio for centuries before Columbus lived and sailed.

E. Y. Guernsey, archaeologist of the Indiana State Historical Society, Sunday announced that investigation of the village is complete, and that excavations there have been refilled. All bones and artifacts found have been removed for study and classification.

At the same time, Mr. Guernsey disclosed that students have barely scratched the surface of Clark county's archaeological possibilities. In the county, he said, there are still about 200 Indian sites which have never been touched.

SHARK DISGORGES HUMAN ARM AS CLUE IN UNSOLVED MURDER

SYDNEY, N. S. W. —The only clue a curiously tattooed human arm disgorged by a shark, Patrick Brady, 42, shearer, is to be tried at the Summer of James Smith, yacht carepreme Court here for the alleged taker.

Brady, discovered to have taken Smith fishing the day the latter disappeared, was arrested when a live shark in the Coogee suburb aquarium threw up the arm before a crowd of horror-struck spectators.

Experts scoffed at the sensation for the shark had been hooked ten days previously off the coast and towed to the aquarium as an attraction for holiday visitors.

No human limb could remain in the stomach of a shark of ten days, they said.

Police nevertheless published a picture of the arm, and were soon informed by one of Smith's cronies that its strange markings "looked just like old Jim Smith's tattoo." Smith's wife corroborated the assertion.

"COLLEGE SCANDAL" AT COZY SUNDAY

Wives and mothers who complain about matrimony interfering with their careers had better stay away from pert and vivacious Arline Judge. She has no sympathy with their complaint.

Just over twenty-one and the mother of a three-year-old child Arline Judge is one of the busiest players in Hollywood, averaging 40 weeks of work a year. The new picture is Paramount's "College Scandal," coming Sunday and Monday to the Cozy Theatre.

Miss Judge is the wife of Director Wesley Ruggles, and the manner in which she manages her professional and domestic careers would win the approval of any mother's club.

On work days she manages to rise with her baby, a boy, bathes, clothes and feeds him and then turns him over to the care of a nurse. It is her only contact with the youngster when she is engaged, but Miss Judge manages to make the most of these few moments.

"On Sundays or off days I don't let the nurse do any of the baby's work," says Miss Judge, "because I enjoy the job of motherhood."

"I have no sympathy for young women who say their careers were spoiled by motherhood. I believe that most of these complaints come from persons who have neither the energy to pursue careers nor the right to motherhood."

"If it came down to a direct issue, I would give up my career as an actress gladly, rather than sacrifice my enjoyment of my child."

In "College Scandal," Miss Judge is featured with Kent Taylor, Wendy Barrie and Eddie Nugent. It is through her resourcefulness that a campus murder mystery is solved. Elliott Nugent directs the film.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

CONSIDER RYE THE BEST COVER CROP

Soil experts connected with the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station give rye first place among cover crops for Kentucky. It will grow on almost any soil, may be sown early or late, grows through most of the winter, and makes good winter pasture. It also is a fairly satisfactory nurse crop for young grass and clover.

Wheat and winter barley and winter oats are other small grains that make satisfactory cover crops, but generally are not considered as good as rye.

Dr. Fergus points out that small grains intended for cover crop purposes only should be sown about a third heavier than when sown for a combined grain and nurse crop. Late seedings should be heavier than early seedings.

Other crops sometimes used for cover purposes and in addition for pasture include crimson clover, hairy vetch, and the mixed grasses and legumes.

Crimson clover makes a heavy winter and early spring pasture. In addition to covering the soil it tends to enrich it, especially when plowed under in spring.

Hairy vetch is also a soil builder and a good green manure crop.

The soils used by the Experiment Station are insistent on the value of cover crops under Kentucky conditions, to protect the soil from losses of plant nutrients by helping to control erosion and leaching.

COMPLETE PLANS FOR CELEBRATION AT KY. STATION

Plans have been completed for the celebration on September 25 of the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, according to Prof. J. D. Turner, head of a committee arranging the commemorative services. Principal speakers include Dean P. B. Mumford of the Missouri College of Agriculture and Senator Perry Gaines of Carrollton, Kentucky. Attendance will be a large number of distinguished Kentuckians, agricultural leaders, scientists, educators and other interested persons.

Following a program of speaking, music and a historical review of the founding and development of the Experiment Station, visitors will inspect the laboratories, plants, equipment, experimental plots, herbs and flocks at the station buildings and farms.

The Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station is one of the oldest, and best known of its kind in the country. It was founded in 1835, and has had three noted directors: Dr. M. A. Scovell, its founder, and Dr. Joseph H. Kastle and Dean Thomas P. Cooper.

COLLEGE TO STRESS SOIL CONSERVATION AT FAIR

A banner reading "When soil is lost all is lost" will strike the keynote of the soil conservation of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture at the Kentucky State Fair—September 2-14. The exhibits will be pictured 2 farms—one badly eroded and the other protected by terraces, contour plowing, cover crops and other methods of saving the soil.

The soil conservation theme will be further developed in an animal husbandry exhibit about methods of making poor land pay through pasture improvement. This exhibit will show some of the work done in the development of bluegrass pasture on poor sandstone land at the Western Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station at Princeton.

The college's State Fair exhibit, which will be in its regular place in the Grandstand building, also will include 4-H club work, home demonstration work, weed control, insect control and farm management.

Sixty to seventy counties will send trained teams to enter the 4-P club livestock judging contest on Wednesday, sponsored by the College of Agriculture, The Courier-Journal, the Bowman Stock-Yard Company, the Ewing-Von Almer Company and the Kentucky Hatchery. Fat cattle, swine, and sheep dairy cattle and poultry will be judged by the club members.

The Lucky Lawrences

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

Copright by Kathleen Norris WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

The Boston Lawrences came to California at the beginning of the gold rush, but the holdings of the family have shrunk to a few acres near the old family home in Clipperville. Phil, twenty-five, has been a success in his work. Gail, the public library and Edith to the book department of a store. Sam is in school, and seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming a problem. She has fascinated little state teacher Lily Casin, whose husband has deserted her. Young Van Murchison, son of a wealthy family, returning marriage with Gail, has visions through marriage with him, of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's friend, has the run of the hotel. Phil suggests, to his sister's consternation, that they invite Lily Casin to the house. Gail goes with Van for a ride to the bank in his Chippie, his uncle and aunt. She is rescued coldly. A policeman had sent Ariel, at midnight. Next day Ariel admits she was at the bank, and displays a remembrance. A policeman had sent home announcing that a child has been killed in an automobile smashup. Ariel was driving one of the cars. Dick Stebbins, who has been admitted to the bar, has the race against Ariel dismissed. Gail suddenly realizes that she loves Dick and not Van.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

He had no money, he was country-bred, he was only the son of the people who rented the old Lawrence place over in Stanislaus—it did not matter. Gail, who had had five years' experience in Clipperville limited and bounded herself quite willingly—ah, breathlessly willing—to live contentedly in Clipperville forever and ever, the Stanislaus ranch forever, if Dick so decreed. What Ariel or Edith would think of this sudden altering of all his dreams was nothing, there was nothing anywhere, except Dick!

All life was a miracle now, and she waited in the glory of it like somebody lifted above the earth, with the happy old customs that she and Edith had known for years were touched with new joy and new pain. When Dick joined the lawrences, there was only a little more electrified than when he did not come.

And meanwhile Van had established a more comfortable footing in the old Lawrence house than ever before, and while he and Ariel did not seem to be exactly flirting—exactly having an affair—there was a close intimacy, a base to their relationship that his friendship with Gail had ever known. Very quietly, in an almost bored tone, Ariel told her sister of his plan. She knew that Van was going east to get to work.

"No more college?"
"No, he wants to get into business. His father says he'll start him in the New Jersey plant."
"Then he won't come back to Clipperville!"

"He's coming back after her!" Edith said, when she and Gail were alone.
"Oh, Edie, it does look like it!" Gail's imagination was off at full speed: Ariel married at eighteen to young Van Murchison; Edith and Phil and Sam living on her at the old house; herself and Dick . . .

But this last smatched at her breath. Herself and Dick. A couple in the library would glance at her: "She's engaged; she's going to marry that young lawyer, Richard Stebbins."
Dick would have her, and she would study every detail of every case and keep up with him. And she would have babies—babies tumbling about among the flowers.

Happiness, happiness, happiness—to be married to him, to have Dick all to herself! The miracle of marriage, the amazing flaming glory of it, surrounded her with a cloud of mist by day and of fire by night.

It began to seem as if things were happening in Clipperville, after all. The sluggish current of Gail's life was stirred in many ways. It was not only that Phil got a raise, and that Van Murchison might marry Ariel. Sam was working for a scholarship, and might actually win a year at Columbia; Columbia university in New York. Gail was assisting librarian under the name "Albigal Lawrence" printed in gold on the library windows and a salary of fifty-five dollars a month.

And then Christmas came. All ways exciting, it seemed doubly so in the mornings, and Edith would come home in the darkness of five o'clock, with her singing over dinner preparations in the kitchen.

Dick was boarding with them now, for his mother had gone to Oregon to stay with a daughter newly widowed, and there were only men on the Stanislaus ranch.

There was one cloud in the sky, to be sure. Gail and Edith acknowledged its existence bravely one December evening when they asked Dick if he thought Phil really cared for Lily Casin.

"That's a hard question to answer," Dick said, with a faint frown and a sigh.

"Do you like her, Dick?"

"Well—she's not my type. But she's an awfully sweet little thing, really."

"Is she devoted to Dick?"

"No. But there's talk of it."

"If she were, do you believe Phil really would marry her?"

A pause. Then Dick asked slowly, "Would you girls care?"

"You've answered!" Gail said, with a brief, mirthless laugh.

Angels at seven; Ariel had promised Miss Lizette Vail, with whom she had been studying dramatic expression, to have supper with Lizette and her mother.

"But come home early, darling, we've tomorrow's your birthday, and we have to celebrate all over again!"

Thus Gail, as she flew about the kitchen in the full glory of dinner-getting.

"Oh, I will, Gail!" Ariel was very docile. She seemed to her sisters to be at her sweetest today. Van had sent her no present that they knew of. But Christmas mugs were always the post office at noon, returning ladies with cards and small packages. But if Van had sent either to her, Ariel gave no sign.

At two they sat down, ravenously, to the feast. Everything was perfection. Long after three o'clock the sextette lingered at the table, nibbling raisins and nuts, trying the German house cakes that had come as a greeting that morning, sampling the Christmas candy.

And when finally there was a stir, it was only after an unanimous decision to abandon all plans for supper. Phil had got up to come, but Edith probably to see Lily—Sam helped clear the table, Dick had to walk down to Edith to get some papers, and Ariel herself suggested that she walk with him because she had a present for Mary Binney, and could leave it by the way.

"But please leave the silver and glasses for me to wash—please," Ariel pleaded.

"With, nonsense!" Gail said. She and Edith made short work of the clearing-up.

The short day ended with them both stretched languidly on Gail's bed, reading at intervals, talking desultorily, waiting for night to bring the other members of the family home.

"How long will Dick be in Los Angeles, Gail?"

"Only about two weeks. It's a ship case. A great change for him."

"I think he'll see the big city," said Edith. "He's awfully fond of him this fall," said Edith.

"He's a darling."

"I've been asleep," she said, blinking.

"We looked in and saw you when we came back."

"I'm going to Miss Vail's now," said Ariel, who was hatted and coated and gloved. "I'll be back—early."

"I'll be back!"

"I know it. I said good-bye to her."

"Ariel looked very pretty in her dark blue coat and snug blue hat," she came in, kissed Gail, kissed Edith. "I don't want to go!" she said, with a weary sigh.

"I hate to have you," Gail said affectionately.

"Mother of being eighteen tomorrow, baby. Father's next, eighteen."

"Mother's birthday," Ariel said bitterly.

"Gail," Edith asked, when Ariel had gone, "did she get anything from Van?"

"Not that she told me."

"It might be delayed in the mail."

"A telegram wouldn't be."

"I know."

There was a silence in the big, shabby, pretentiously furnished room. Gail roused herself, stiff and drowsily. "I told Dick I'd start packing his bag for the trip," she said, with an exultant rise at her heart.

"Well miss him."

"Oh, won't you?"

Edith yawned agonizingly. Gail crossed the hall to Dick's cold big barack of a room to find him done with his packing and ready for good-bye. He looked almost handsome—or at all events Gail found the lean, big-featured face handsome—as he belted his coat and pulled on the new gloves that Edith had not been too self-conscious to give him, if Gail had.

"You're worrying about this case?" Edith accused him. "For he seemed unusually grave."

"No, yes, I'm kind of worried," Dick said.

"Ariel's gone to the Vails', Dick, and Phil isn't back. Sam's!" Gail called. "Come out and say good-bye to Dick."

"I think we ought to kiss him good-bye on Christmas night!" Edith said giddily, in a rare mood of feeling.

"For answer his big-coated arm went about her, and he kissed her so heartily that she emerged breathless and protesting. Then it was Gail's turn.

The clean-shaven hard cheek was against her own, his tremendous grip lifted her, held her shoulders tight; she felt weak, helpless, she felt the deliciousness of that first kiss as if it were a draught of heavy wine. For an instant she was his, dazzled and ecstatic. Then panting, smothering, she was squarely on her feet again, still close to him.

"Well, Edith! The next time you have a bright idea you might take Dick and me into your counsel!"

"Don't worry—about anything that comes up. Gail," Dick was saying, rather confused and breathing himself, very big, very much the man. "I'll be back in a few days. Everything will come out all right."

He was gone. They heard the engine start in the yard, and laughed at each other as they wandered down to the kitchen.

Edith and Sam had tea and cold turkey, after all. But Gail, although she sat with them at the table, was feeling on finer food and could not touch their tangible island. Her mouth, her whole being, still pulsed to Dick's hand, definite kiss. How he had kissed her!

Typhoon and Floods Sweep Large Section of China

Nature was not done with China when great floods drowned thousands of the people of the Yangtze and the Yangtze rivers. In Fukien province, south of the mouth of the Yangtze, typhoon came bounding in off the South China sea recently. The great circular storm swept across the land, destroying the works of man and killing many. Just to be sure that the destruction was complete nature approached a second typhoon on the following day. After each storm came the rains flooding the streams and drowning thousands.

As usual in Chinese disasters poor communication facilities prevented accurate check on the damage. The center of the storm passed over Chanchow, north of Amor, but the damage was spread all through the province. Some 20,000,000 people are packed into the country, rendered impassible by the floods, fear was great that disease would become widespread, and as often happens in "lethal" areas, more lives than the fury of nature.

With the reports of the storms in China came the news that a typhoon had swept across northern and central Luzon, most northerly of the Philippine Islands. More than one hundred and twenty-five were dead, with thousands homeless, said Gov. Frank Murphy mobilized relief and Red Cross forces. Whether it was the same typhoon that struck in China was not known.

The typhoon that struck in the Far East is the same sort of a storm as the hurricanes so common off the United States. Both are the same, the only difference being in the local name of a particular kind of storm. The typhoon is essentially the same sort of storm except that it originates on the island.

The basis of the typhoon is the difference between heated and cool air. Hot air is lighter than cool air. Added to the fact that in air pressure is the fact that freely moving bodies in the northern hemisphere tend to deflect to the right of their course. This of course does not apply to mechanical contrivances, such as an automobile, but does apply to ocean currents and to the winds. For example, the trade winds from the Atlantic and Pacific ocean turn toward the right of their line of flow. While it cannot be seen, the wind does so in "China" in the southern hemisphere the deflection is to the left. Though this deflection is known there is no satisfactory explanation for it.

In the formation of a typhoon—or hurricane—a small island becomes heated under the rays of the sun. Since land absorbs heat more rapidly than water the island becomes hotter than the water which surrounds it. The column of air above the island is also heated by contact with and radiation from the land and becomes less dense, or lighter, than the air over the water.

Into the column of hot air, known as a low pressure center, the cooler and heavier air flows. Always the rushing air is deflected to the right of its course (in the northern hemisphere). The result is a circular whirling of the air about the low pressure area, causing a whirling column turning in a counterclockwise direction. As more and more air is drawn in, the flow into the low pressure area the speed and force of the whirl is increased.

To shift the picture to a larger scale the continent of Asia is much warmer than the oceans surrounding it during the summer time. Therefore there is a constant movement of air toward the land from the ocean. This landward rushing wind is known as a monsoon, but the low pressure area is so large over a continental mass that the whirling motion of the typhoon is not set up, the force of air movement being expended in attempting to reach the center of the continent.

The small circular air disturbance, or typhoon, is caught up in the landward rush of the monsoon, and is carried off. Due to the velocity it has gained it may continue to spin until it reaches the shore, as did the recent rim, accompanies the ramblings with a graphic description of the churning lava.

According to Doctor Jagger, if the great Empire State building were to be blown down from the floor of the pit its mooring mast would scarcely be at eye level at the crater's rim. The Bremen launched down Kilnaes' slope could be followed by the Europeans and a United States battleship, and all three would disappear from view.

One of the lava geyzers during the eruption is like an inverted Niagara falls, shooting into the air 300 feet. The surface of the molten lake which fills the bottom of the pit resembles a shatter-proof windshield which has been struck a terrific blow. Spattered lines, each red hot, run in all directions, join each other and spread out like a giant spider web, radiating from the giant fountain. Between the scariest cracks the lava has cooled and has turned a jet black. As the fountain plays waves as big as Watkili's largest rollers travel to the farthest corners of the pit. The movement is constant, never ceasing, and yet so safe that crowds rush to get a close-up view.
