THE IRVY IN THE DUNGEON.

The Irvy in a dungeon grave, Dusted by rain, and covered by frost,
Its path leading only to a tomb.

There moisture fell and cold dew,
And through the darkest grating light There fell a shadow from the sky.

It shone upon the grateful floor In silent gladness evermore.

The Irvy felt a tremor thro' it Through all its fibres to the root;
He felt the light, it saw the ray.

It strove to blossom into day,
It grew, it crept, it pushed, it clomb—Till he had reached the darkness here.

But he did not know, thank God! it night,
The goodness and the joy of light,
His clinging roots grew deep and strong,
Its stem expanded firm and long,
And in the currents of the air Its tender branches softened this.

It reached the beam—it thrilled, it curled,
It traced the warmth that shored the world;
It rose toward the dunes and grass,
It looked upon the sun and stars.

It felt the life of bursting spring,
It heard the happy splash of rain,
It caught the breath of morn and eve,
And wooed the swallow to its leaves.

By vines and dew and sunshine fed,
Over the drier wall it grew;
And in the dew-drops hanging free,
It grew into a steadfast tree.

Upon that solitary place,
By vines and dew and sunshine fed,
The setting light became its guest,
And sang its praises from its breast.

Would it know the moral of the rhyme?
Behold the heavenly light and climb,
To every dungeon comes a ray Of God's beneficent day.

THE WEEKLY
W. T. HANLY, Publisher.
MONTICELLO, N.Y.
FRIDAY, SEPTE 29, 1865.

...ing of the national sentiment at ...sionally be found; but the care of not ...for their eyes will find the solemn echoes of the returning sea of peace.

A Strange Accutal - Murder Just
...ed by Justice, but by chance.
One of the most important and ...murders it has ever known or let as a journalist to chronicle, was committed at Henderson, Ky., on Monday morning last.

Let the heart of this whole people ... in glad anthems of praise and thanksgiving to the Great Deposer of events, who hath brought light out of darkness and set the long of peace on the arch of the smoldering sky that so long hung over this people. In memory of the precious blood that cries from the ground, let the national flag be covered with the robes of penitence and bow itself in humiliation before the fearful chastisements that the hand of the Lord of Hosts hath laid upon His people in this great upheaval for good, and let us not condemn it. Now that it is over, let our hearts be calmed, appeased, and enlightened. Let us forgive the wrath of this great struggle and hope that the result will be a better country and a better people. From its terrible fields, let us hope that a great, will come for the people and the masses of civilization flow westward until the "Great Redoubt" is forgotten in the spreading and expanding greatness of the American Republic.

Unconstitutional

Judge Apperson, at the August term of the Montgomery Circuit Court, in the case of Henry P. Reid vs. the Kentucky Stage Company, decided the "Act of Congress approved March 3d, 1865," freeing the wives and children of negro-colored soldiers, to be unconstitutional.

The suit was brought by Mr. Reid against the Stage Company for damages alleged to have been sustained by him, because said Stage Company, as alleged, had permitted six of his negroes to ride as passengers on their coach on the Lexington road without written authority from him, and by said act of said company said slaves had escaped from him.

The events of the past five years have
... of such a tremendous character that we could hardly comprehend them. Living in the midst of history of great deeds and great actions, we could hardly realize that we were a part of them. We have not
... the beginning, the progress and end of the greatest war the world has ever seen.
We have seen a large and powerful people of the American Union secede from the union, take arms, equip fleets, and prepare the apparatus of formidable war.
We have seen their civil government at work with its endless and complicated machinery and men of acknowledged ability and astuteness governing the helm of affairs. We have seen three States under a common spirit resist with a
... less heavy and heroic effort, the
... of the other States to reduce them to obedience and to break the power of their armies. On the part of the Federal Government we have seen such a display of energy, will and courage-of all elements and materials of triumph
... the elements of the world, and ... haled them to say over the guilty ... of fraternal war. We have seen, on both sides of this unhappy struggle,
men who will fill a large space in the pages of history; statesmen who rival Tully and Pitt, and warriors standing close by the side of Napoleon and Wellington.
We have, as well as the passions of the hour would allow, watched the progress of the struggle and noted the mighty changes that have been wrought and that are ... accomplished. We have seen this civil war brought to a close-the military power of the South broken and dispersed, and the authority and supremacy of the Federal Government restored and re-established over the borders of Tennessee to the States washed by the Gulf from the
... of Florida to the furthest limit of the
... point.

The great weight that rested solely on
... was removed. The national storm
... the nation's hands; and the world, the passed away-the dread vision of blood-red battles close no more before our eyes.
We have freely, "Error, alarm, and ... and resolute are passing away, and converted ... into a quiet laugh on firm and ... foundations. Peace, white-robed and ... with heavenly light, has spread her wings over this land yet with brothers' blood. Peace, like an angel-visitor, has hovered at the hearts of men and ... of the world, that with the angry passions of men, that clear away the obscure mists of conflict and leads the deep wounds of protracted war, has com... a thrill of rejoicing through the national ... Peace, that quickens industry and
... and widens commercial enterprise, that enriches capital and opens new channels of wealth, has raised her potent arm and ... it over the raging waters and said
"Be still." In the deep gloom of the dark days, we watched and prayed for peace;
... whose heart now is so cold that does not warm with new life as this heavenly ... sheds the loving beams of love and good will throughout the uttermost
... of this lately perished and estranged
... of States? In the train of peace, ... in the train of the myriads of
... and millions that march nation
... and progress forth. They will learn ... of wisdom from the sanguinary ... upon which they have fallen. They will draw sight to one another in brotherly ... In the smiling sunshine of re-... cultivate the virtues of ... and forbearance. As the retreat-

fairs. We have seen three States under a common spirit resist with a
... less heavy and heroic effort, the
... of the other States to reduce them
their armies. On the part of the Federal Government we have seen such a display

on both sides of this unhappy struggle,
men who will fill a large space in the pages
and Pitt, and warriors standing close
by the side of Napoleon and Wellington.
We have, as well as the passions of the
of the struggle and noted the mighty changes
that have been wrought and that are
civil war brought to a close-the military
power of the South broken and dispersed,
and the authority and supremacy of the Federal Government restored and re-established
... of Florida to the furthest limit of the
... point.

that we were a part of them. We have not
of the greatest war the world has ever seen.
We have seen a large and powerful
prepare the apparatus of formidable war.

On Thursday morning of last week, the wife of William (Clough) Clark, Bath county, Ky., was the scene of one of those horrible and bloody tragedies that are of late becoming so frequent, the particulars of which are as follows:

There is a gang of twenty-two outlaws, counterfeiters and robbers, under the leadership of the Uniontown brat, Geo. Carter county desperado—whose headquarters are among the highlands of Bath, Fleming and Carter, and whose headquarters are in Wyoming. They have confederated, undoubtedly, among the citizens, who give them warning when they force their way on them, thereby rendering all attempts to capture them utterly futile.

On Thursday the N. Y. Cirrus was sent to Scotland at Wyoming, and Dr. H. H. Starn, Sheriff of Bath, and Deputy Masson, his Deputy, suspecting that some of the gang would be on hand at the show, started for the Mouth of State with the intention of arresting them. Their suspicions proved to be correct, and they succeeded in "blagging" LEANOR ADAMS, JOHN KESTER and JOHN PINNAC. A few minutes after the arrest of these parties, GEORGE TERRY, was shot through the heart by Jas. V. ...

On Saturday evening, in the tent belonging to a side show traveling with the N. Y. Cirrus, a couple of representatives from the rural district engaged in a theatrical exhibition, which was in a rough-pitched light. Flows were raised like hail upon each other heads—crimson furrows manifested their faces—eyes suddenly put on mourning—the air was filled with water from dangled noses—and outside flew about thick as leaves that strew the brooks in Vallombrosa.
