SURE VICTORY IS PREDICTED BY KAVANAUGH

Republican Nominee For Lieutenant-Governor Brands Chandler As Untruthful

OTHER SPEAKERS HEARD HERE

"Jefferson County will go 15,000 for the Republican ticket, the Democratic majority in the first and second districts will be negligible, and the Blue Grass will give Swope 10,000 or more majority," Judge J. J. Kavanaugh, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor on the Republican ticket, declared at a Republican rally in the courthouse here this week.

"There is a new day dawning in Kentucky," Judge Kavanaugh said. "The people are sick and tired of party politics, and of 60 cents of every dollar paid in taxes going into the pockets of some road contractor or public official."

"Mr. Chandler said at Central City that Swope had entered into a conspiracy with certain Democrats to have him elected Governor and to defeat the rest of the Republican ticket," Kavanaugh said. "These charges are totally untrue, and if Mr. Chandler held the office he seeks in such high esteem he would refrain from making such untruthful and slanderous statements for which there is no foundation or fact. Kavanaugh said the entire Republican ticket was going in by an overwhelming majority."

"Why they brought Jim Farley clear from Hawaii down to Louisville to tell the people here they should vote Jim Farley may know something about the East Side or West Side of New York or about the State of Kentucky or about the good people of Kentucky know how to vote, and Jim Farley don't know anything about existing conditions in this state," the speaker declared.

Judge Kavanaugh said that all King Swope asked the voter to do was to read Swope's opening address and Chandler's opening address, compare the record of the 2 men, and let your conscience be your guide.

Mrs. Edwin Morrow Horgan, the first speaker on the program, was introduced by Elwood Allen, president of the local Young Republican Club. Mrs. Morrow criticized the Democratic party as a blot on Kentucky and for the salvation of the state, she pleaded for the abolition of party politics, saying that the Democrats had put them in politics after her father had taken them out when he was Governor. Dr. W. J. Moore, of Richmond, G. O. P. candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, outlined the plans in the educational platform of the party. Mrs. Ethel Elington, Republican nominee for Senator from 31st District, introduced Judge Kavanaugh.

LAFFOON SENDS STATE TROOPS TO HALDEMAN

Grand Plant Of Kentucky Fire Brick Company As Work Resumed This Week

WILL REMAIN INDEFINITELY, SAID

National guards moved into Rowan County yesterday for the third time in less than a year, as 2 truckloads under the command of Lieut. Carl D. Norman of Frankfort, came into Haldeman, where the Kentucky Fire Brick Company resumed work after a 5 months' strike.

The request for the troops was made by Circuit Judge D. B. Caudill, Commonwealth Attorney W. C. Hamblin, County Judge C. E. Jennings, County Attorney W. E. Proctor and Sheriff Mort May. This is the same group that asked the Governor to send troops to Clearfield when the Lee-Clay Products Company resumed work a month ago.

The National guards are assisted by county parkmen, Judge Jennings said.

The Kentucky Fire Brick Company started taking on employees this morning. The initial group is being used to clear the brick kilns and the plant. Manufacturing will not begin until the latter part of the week.

The guards moved in here, secretly and took possession almost unopposed. It marked the second time that troops have been called at Haldeman. Almost a fear ago they took command at another strike at the same place.

Officials here did not know how long the troops will be at Haldeman. However, the Sheriff said there had been promising in and around the Kentucky Fire Brick Company for the past two months, and that they would be glad to see the men back.

Head of Marlow Smith, a non-union worker, whose body was found on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway tracks near Haldeman.

Among 100 county patrolmen and company guards have been stationed at the Haldeman plant during the strike.

At Clearfield, the Lee-Clay Products Company is working peacefully, with differences between the company and the brick union apparently settled. Troops were withdrawn there after the agreement had been effected.

The brick and tile manufacturing plants in this county have been the scene of strikes and some strife during the past year. At one time it was thought the differences had been settled, but strikes were still being held at the plants. The day before the walkout was to have occurred at Haldeman, the company announced it had closed down.

Young Democrats Plan Precinct Organization

The Young Men's Democratic Club, in session at the courthouse Tuesday evening, made plans for the organizing of the work in every precinct in the county. Chairman V. D. "Mike" Flood appointed committees and various individuals to organize each precinct and select a captain and lieutenant of that precinct.

The following duties were set up for each member of the club:

1. Contact each voter in your precinct.
2. Impress them with the importance of voting.
3. Advocate the importance of

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Mussolini at the Phone Who is the Man? No Fear in Vatican City A Shot at a Bird

Something new in war is Mussolini sitting in his office at the Palazzo Venezia in Rome talking on a short-wave radio telephone with Gen. Emilio de Bono, his commander in chief in Ethiopia. Mussolini should have been photographed as he received the message. "We have just taken Addis Ababa where 8,000 of our colonial troops, 6,000 of our Italian troops, were killed 40 years ago, and Italy humiliated."

That was a proud moment in Mussolini's life. After Mussolini gets the news by radio-telephone he telephones it to the Italian king's summer residence.

For a change from war, consider this incident. Before the entrance to the "Recess club" frequented by Wall Street's "Who's Who," stood George C. H. H. banker, Matthew S. Sloan, who used to run New York's electric light and now runs the "Katy" railroad, a learned friend of Mr. Sloan's and this writer.

Mr. Sloan said, with finality that marks greatness, "The man mentioning the name of a well-known Republican candidate, will be elected in 1936." Your narrator rebuked the first man pointing to Wall Street, dressed, well-dressed, asked him "Who is Mr. Blank?" mentioning the name of Mr. Sloan's candidate.

"Never heard of him, don't know who he is 'Who is he?'" the pedantic replied and went on. Of life ten, nine would have said, similarly, "Never heard of him," but all ten would have heard of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Republicans must take somebody whose name is known if they can find him falling that they would well to select him now and see to it that his name is known before election day comes around.

Despite possibilities of widespread bombing of cities if "that war in Europe" should come, Vatican City, ruled by the pope, does not consider anti-aircraft defense necessary. Observator Romano, representing the Vatican, denies reports that shelters against air raids would be provided in Vatican City.

"The Holy Father has reason to be grateful that the dome of St. Peter's, regardless of whatever the occasion might be, is the inevitable symbol, firstly, because of the celestial protection of the Prince of Apostles, for whom the dome is the sacred sign and symbol, and because in many places so clearly the holy place, respected and venerated during the most obscure centuries."

"That the magnificent building erected by Michelangelo, with his priceless statues and paintings within it, would be respected by even the most barbarous invader seems certain."

Little things start big things. Doctor Potter, formerly professor of political science in the University of Wisconsin, one of an international committee of four that tried to settle a quarrel between Italy and Ethiopia in 1934, says that Italy and Greece are preparing for complaint against Ethiopia, and that a soldier's casual shot at a bird probably caused the present trouble.

Mr. Joseph R. Uihlein, an able citizen of Milwaukee, who takes information with him on his travels and is therefore able to bring information back, returns from England with the impression that, despite greatly improved conditions in Britain, English and other Europeans are expecting something unpleasant to happen. What it is, where it will start, what will cause it, nobody is prepared to say, but there is a feeling of apprehension, a vague anticipation of some catastrophic event.

The President assures the nation that on this occasion America will not meddle with what does not concern it. What will the United States do about selling food to Italy, if through "sanctions," the League of Nations tries to starve out the Italians, as Germany was starved?

If a chain is no stronger than its weakest link the chain that makes up the human race is not making up.

Authorities in Java report fifty natives of New Guinea, including seven children, arrested as "rebels."

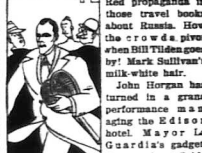

Mussolini spoke to twenty million Italians gathered in the Piazza Venezia squares, and to the people of the world. You could not mistake the meaning of that voice.

Newspaper men, gathered near the radio, said: "His voice made the shivers run up and down our backs, although we could not understand a word of it." Shivers run up and down our backs those backs.

EVERYDAY NEW YORK

BY G. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK—Thoughts while strolling: Nicholas Murray Butler could walk on in any day as a capitalist without a make-up. Slick Red propaganda in those travel books about Russia.

How the crowd is a pivot when Bill Tilden goes by! Mark Sullivan's milk-white hair! John Horgan has turned in a grand performance as a grand performer in a grand hotel, the Edison Hotel. Mayor La Guardia's gadabouting. Cable from Hansen Swaffer. O. O. McIntyre is a newspaperman in Lochely, Fire-shire, Scotland. No one packs so much excitement in his voice as Glen McColgan's thrilling race.

Look alike: Sinclair Lewis and John Buchan, English author. For a different sort of evening: A round of Chinatown with Andy May Wong. Or a swing of the bars with Charles MacArthur and Gene Fowler. Not many can write about things in sapid, Tokyo and San Francisco. F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Memory: The old-fashioned night-shirt with starched bosom and collar in a German linen wardrobe. A good looking actor for his years: Bert Lyell. The crowds that circle around Ethel Waters's spiffy limousine at the Waldorf Astoria. She's the biggest Negro ex-actor since Bert Williams.

Over-rated best seller: Ellen Glasgow's "Spans of Time." Hendrik Van Loon's "The Story of the World." A sly old "Vanity lady": Cobina Wright. Constant dinner companions: Joseph P. Kennedy and Herbert Swope. Time for some food for the street. These restaurants demanding full dress.

I cannot pass that barn-like restaurant on the corner of 42nd Street, "incidently," without dawdling before the window for a few peeks. Last evening an intruder peeked was swarming, in the dining room, over the diners, hanging by her chin, then her toes and blowing kisses. It has become the midnight haunt of sports writers and a favorite midnight snack place of Floyd Gibbons before he sailed for the wars.

Tearing up the street car tracks along Madison Avenue has given an appearance of amazing width to that thoroughfare and also ballooned it as a shopping center. It is filled with run-down Paris stretches in dazzling decors of chromium and mirror. There are Ches This and Maison That, single-named designer experiment, the official tenant having swirled around the corner in a fresh troop of delicatessen splendor. The wheel chair aims secker also has taken his stand on the curb of the entrance along with the grinning black-amor starter and his "Reuben's-that's all!" Indeed about the only Reuben's in the city is the Reuben's of George Jessel and his whackin', black cheroot.

The famous old Reuben from-midnight-to-dawn stand on Madison Avenue has been de-decorated for another restaurant experiment. The official tenant having swirled around the corner in a fresh troop of delicatessen splendor.

The wheel chair aims secker also has taken his stand on the curb of the entrance along with the grinning black-amor starter and his "Reuben's-that's all!" Indeed about the only Reuben's in the city is the Reuben's of George Jessel and his whackin', black cheroot.

Tacked in a niche of West Street's roaring water front is the alliterative appeal of "Biscuit Bill Bollivar's," a haven for seaman who crave a delicacy and a warm drink. The sign of sea-farers often drop in for local color. Conrad visited it. "Biscuit Bill" is reminded of the eponym R. L. T. extenuated from comparative oblivion: "Bum the Baker of Baraboo." Bum was a real figure in the life of Ringling brothers' famous home town in Wisconsin.

Artistic temperament note: Leon Gordon, the painter, looked out a bedroom window of his Connecticut home recently on one of those mornings when the world seemed dour. In his dour he decided a nearby hill deposited the vista. He grumbled and brooded all day. So much so next morning a foot of storm sleet was piled up. And the hill was chug, chug, chugged to oblivion.

Not even Casper Milquetoast is more of a push-over for slogans than I. But those hospitals for pinched shoes that herald "Limp in, Limp out" are waiting by the wayside. Every time I pass one I hang around to see a limper or leaper. So far: "Nary one, nary way!"

He was a pink checked type done up in woolsens and dragged along by a nurse far more interested in the young man at her side. Her dress she showed rumpled and full. Finally with legs apart and in admirable belligerency he screamed: "Doth dabit, where we goin'?"

Floyd Gibbons ADVENTURERS' CLUB Hello, Everybody!

"Battle for Life" BY FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter.

WELL, I hope you boys and girls know how to handle a pair of chop sticks, because today we're going to China. We're going with the United States marine corps, but don't think that's going to be any special protection, because China's a big country, and Shanghai is a big city. And the marines can't be everywhere. To tell you the bare and unvarnished truth about it, they don't even do a very good job of protecting Marv W. Atchison, who tells me about it. And Marv, I'll have you know, was one of their own boys—of Marine himself.

All his life, Marv Atchison had wanted to look over China. Maybe he had that idea in the back of his mind when he joined the Marine corps.

Well, if he did, the Marines sure did right by him, because they took him there and gave him plenty of chances to see all to watch the doggone country.

Marv Wanted to See China—and Did! And if Marv saw just a little more of China—well—that was his own mistake and not any fault of the outfit.

Marv was on the U. S. S. Marblehead, one of Uncle Sam's 7,500-ton cruisers, when orders came to get out on the water and do a bit of sailing.

The Marblehead hit several ports in the West Indies, went through the Panama canal to Hawaii, and then to Marv's entire satisfaction, continued on across the Pacific, bound for China.

Most of the men aboard had never seen China, and like Marv, were all eager to set foot on shore. Marv and a shipmate were among the first to get shore life.

They piled into a sampan and headed for the docks of the International settlement, and the first thing they saw on those docks were about a hundred rickshaws, all lined up waiting for them.

Marv and his shipmate each grabbed themselves a rickshaw and started to ride around. Everything was all right until they decided to leave the International settlement and go over into the native section of the city. Then, someone or other, the two rickshaws got separated and Marv lost his buddy.

With his pal gone, Marv's first thought was to get back to the International settlement. He had heard stories of the things that happened to lone Marines prowling around in Chinese cities.

It's Not Easy to Make a Chinaman Understand. He tried to make his rickshaw coile understand what he wanted, but the coile, although he had comprehended all the other orders that had been given to him, suddenly decided that he didn't know what Marv was talking about. Marv had to yell pretty loud, and shake his fist a couple of times before the coile was convinced that the doggoned wouldn't work.

Then he said, "He go back," and headed for the International settlement. Marv watched the coile pretty closely on the way back—determined that if there was going to be any monkey business, he was going to know about it first.

But the coile didn't try any tricks until they were safely back in the International settlement. Then, suddenly, he turned the rickshaw into a dark alley. Marv tensed his body and got ready for a scrap, but he was wholly unprepared for what happened next.

The Chinaman, raising the handles of the rickshaw high in the air, dumped him out backward onto the ground. Marv landed on the back of his head, and for a minute the blow sort of stunned him. Then, before he could get to his feet again, the coile hit out a war whoop, and striking, yellow-faced figure came pouring into that alley from all directions.

It was a situation which, to Marv's mind, called for football tactics. He made a flying tackle for the nearest pair of the assailants, and they went down. Life Is Cheap and Murder Easy in China.

But at the same time, Marv felt the weight of a dozen others as they piled on top of him, kicking, scratching, clawing.

Flat on the ground, held down by the weight of 10 or 15 Chinese, Marv couldn't move. He felt hands reaching into his pockets—searching for his money—but he couldn't do a thing about it.

At last he felt a skinny twig grating in the right pocket—coming out with his money. What would those babies do now? Would they leave him alone, now that they had what they wanted?

Or would they kill him, to keep him quiet, or—well—just on general principles. But what those coiles would have done is a question that was never answered. For suddenly the Chinese were on their feet again, scrambling for the nearest exit.

A Sikh policeman—one of the guardians of the law in the International settlement—had appeared at the mouth of the alley, slashing right and left with his wooden truncheon.

The Sikh had caught one of the coiles, and Marv, his clothes almost torn off his back, returned to his ship, his head full of good advice about watching your step with Shanghai rickshaw coolies.

Albanians Oldest People in Southeastern Europe The Albanians are an old people, the oldest it is said in southeastern Europe. Their ancestors occupied the country along the eastern shore of the Adriatic, called Illyrium by the Romans and Epirus by the Greeks, before the beginnings of Rome or Greece; and although in the succeeding centuries they have at different times been subject to the Macedonians, Romans, Goths, Slavs, Normans, Venetians and finally the Turks, they have on account of their strong nationalistic character been able to maintain themselves practically unmixed with other peoples.

About the most that can be said, notes a writer in the New York Herald Tribune, is that their various overlords have never, through the long few words to their otherwise unique language. Like the Scotch and the Welsh, their mountain homes defied complete subjugation.

While the Albanians are one of the oldest of European peoples, they are also one of the most primitive. Their selection arrested their development centuries ago with the result that their mode of living more resembles that of medieval than modern times. The interaction of society is almost that of feudal Europe, the large landlords exercising great power within their own domain and collectively being the governing force in the country. The principal occupation is stock raising. Agriculture, where it exists at all, is performed in the crudest manner. Nor has any advantage been taken of a climate where many fruits, including mulberries and grapes, could be grown.

CARE IN CHOOSING BOOKS FOR CHILD HAS ITS REWARD

The story of Abraham Lincoln and his struggle for education gives the cue to Alms E. Jones' article, "Satisfy Your Child's Book Hunger," in Hygiene.

"Books are to the mind what sunshine is to the body," implies that just as the well cared for child receives daily sun exposure as an aid to physical growth, so also should he receive early "exposure" to illustrations, rhymes and stories, which constitute aids to mental and emotional growth.

Very early the child needs to establish right attitudes toward books. By the time a child is fifteen or eighteen months old he can easily learn to handle a book without tearing the pages, if the paper is strong and the pages are not too large. Young children who are not yet able to read enjoy picture books or picture-story books.

Though considerable emphasis is placed on the importance of children of school age reading for themselves and in quantity this should not be interpreted as a reason for ending the reading or story-telling hour of parents and other adults. Through such means the young boy or girl may be stimulated to more difficult reading or new subjects for the parent or adult may interpret through voice or explanation much that would otherwise be lost on the child who does not read easily.

There is permanent value as well as present pleasure in the story hour. The general characteristics of a good book include large clear type, an uncluttered, well-paragraphed page, a pleasing appearance, a lively tale and a well-sustained reader interest.

One of the many safety measures to be installed on the gigantic San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge is a group of five huge bells, one for each tower and the central anchorage. The bells, largest ever made in western America, have been undergoing tests in a San Francisco foundry for tone and carrying power. Workmen with sledge-hammers are seen pounding them. Each bell is of a different pitch and when installed they will resound over the bay like giant chimes.

Morehead's New President

A survey of the qualifications and achievements of Prof. Harvey A. Babb, new president of the Morehead State Teachers College, shows that the Board of Regents did not act unwisely in making their selection.

Prof. Babb is an experienced man—one who has secured his training in actual matter-of-fact dealing with educational problems. His successful leadership of the Mt. Sterling school system for 14 years is a marked qualification in itself. In this era it is rare indeed that a man holds the "principlality" of one school system for so many years for there are always those who attempt to wreck that which some man or group of men have constructively set up. Mr. Babb's guidance of the Mt. Sterling school system is recognized as one of the best in this state.

The new president of the Morehead State Teachers College will come here with an almost total lack of adversity from those with whom he will work and guide. He is respected as a leader in education and it is safe to say that he will apply the principles of his background and knowledge toward a constructive and far-reaching program that will reflect credit upon the great institution which will depend on him for its policy and forward steps. The Board of Regents is to be commended and Prof. Babb is to be complimented. Time will unfold the far-reaching policies and plans of Morehead College's new president.

Speaking from a knowledge of newspaper work and the advertising business, I have one suggestion to make to the new president. That is the advertising of the Morehead State Teachers College. It seems to us that this great institution has been somewhat slack in the past in portraying before the people of the Commonwealth through newspapers and many other mediums the hundreds of advantages which this school has over any college in the state.

Morehead welcomes Prof. Babb, and a spirit of cooperation will prevail between the "old" faculty, students and countless friends.

Morehead College Building Program

December will see the first ground broke for the new $255,000 Science Building and the $181,000 dormitory at the Morehead State Teachers College, both provided for and made possible through WPA loans. The expenditure of this huge sum of money is bound to make itself felt in the uplifting of business conditions in Morehead and vicinity. At some time it will relieve crowded conditions at the college, but also in Morehead where there is really insufficient rental space for college students and faculty members.

The Board of Regents are actively in securing the appropriations. Four thousands of dollars, a fourth or more of the total received is a direct gift from the government. The balance is paid over a long period of years at a low rate of interest. Morehead has perhaps the best equipped college in Kentucky. Its steady growth has demanded more buildings and the Regents did well in securing WPA grants.

JESSE WILLIAMS MAKES RACE FOR EDUCATION BOARD

TO THE VOTERS OF ROWAN COUNTY

I am making the race for membership on the Rowan County Board of Education this fall and wish to take this opportunity to give my platform and the things for which I stand and for which I will work, if elected.

I am absolutely opposed to consolidation of schools in Rowan County and believe in keeping the schools close to the children will be of best interest to all concerned.

I stand for the strictest economy in operating the schools and will work to keep the school system on a sound economic basis.

I believe the school children of Rowan County are entitled to as good instruction as can be secured for them and that teachers should be selected purely upon their qualifications and merits.

I am running an independent race and am signed with no political faction. If you believe I would serve you well as your board member, I will appreciate your vote and support.

As far as she can remember, Kitty Vane had been in love with Alvin Trent who, with his aunt and cousin, Gerald Stinson, grew up in a neighboring home in a lovely corner of rural England. But it is Gerald who has always been in love with Kitty.

The war takes both boys to the front. Home on leave, Alan tells Kitty he loves her. Their ecstatic plan to marry the following day is shattered by sudden word from headquarters cancelling all leaves. Kitty goes with Alan to a little inn at Folkstone. They swear the marriage vows to each other and try desperately to forget that these few hours together may be their last. Next morning Alan heads back to the trenches.

Gerald overhears the vicious Lawrence Bidley, who chanced to meet Alan at the inn, taunt him about his "escape." Believing Alan has been untrue to Kitty, Gerald, his superior, refuses him leave to return and marry her.

Gerald is wounded and Alan is believed killed.

The war over, we pick up Alan in a training school for maimed soldiers. He is blind and unwilling to return to be a burden for Kitty.

Sir George Barton, an official of the institution, persuades him to go to her, but he loses his nerve en route and instead alights at a village some miles beyond. Here he achieves considerable success as a writer of children's stories.

One day while he and Barton are fishing a woman member of the hunting party is thrown from her horse and stunned. She is Kitty Vane, who Alan has learned, is now engaged to Gerald.

Alan rushes away unseen and noting his painful reactions to her name, Barton phones Gerald and tells him where to find Alan.

Alan plays his part so well when Gerald and Kitty arrive that they fail to realize he is blind. His seeming aloofness and coldness wound Kitty to the heart, but before she leaves she tells him she still loves him and always will. Meanwhile, Gerald who had been watching from a window outside, realizations and points out the truth to Kitty. In a moment she is back in Alan's arms and they close, hungrily about her.

Few, if any theatres in the country have better short subjects than the college.

TO THE VOTERS OF ROWAN COUNTY

I desire to announce to the voters of this county that I am a candidate for member of the Rowan Co. Board of Education. I am a native born subject to the will of the voters of the county at the general election to be held Tuesday, Nov. 5th.

I have been a resident of this county all my life.

I received my education in the public schools of this county and the old Morehead Normal School, and taught in the public schools in this county for 13 years, and believe I understand and am able to deal with the problems of the public schools of this county.

I am in favor of any move for the betterment of conditions for our children and their teachers. I do not favor the consolidation of the public schools in this county, as I do not believe it practical nor economically sound.

Am in favor of most rigid economy consistent with the proper maintenance of the highest standards of education in this county.

Very truly yours,
HERBERT BRADLEY.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

U. S. RECOGNIZES KENTUCKY LEADER

The Extension Service Review official publication of the United States Department of Agriculture, recently published a story and picture of Uncle Eddie Jordan, 75-year-old 4-H club leader in Graves county, Kentucky. For 10 years Mr. Jordan has directed a club of 12 to 20 boys in 4-H club activities, including showing dairy cattle at the Purchase Dairy show and stock judging at the Kentucky State Fair.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Alfred Eisen and Clarence Nordwick of Campbell county, gave a

Holstein calf and a Jersey calf to 4-H club members scoring highest in showing those breeds at the county fair. Roy Prim of Alexandria and Mildred Dudge of Ft. Thomas won the awards.

Hopkins county could have a yearly income from dairying approximating $1,280,000, in the opinion of a representative of the U. C. Milk Company of Madisonville. He advises having 10,000 purebred and high grade cows to supply milk companies and cheese factories.

Both county farmers report getting better hay and a ton an acre more of it, on 140 acres where good seed and lime were used. Trumbo Snedegar sold 600 bushels of seed for planting next spring. More now ing machines were sold than in any year since 1928.

Twenty-four Fleming county farmers cooperated in growing tomatoes shipped them to the Kentucky Canning Company at Paris by truck for 4 1-2 cents a bushel transportation cost. They believe the project will pay through having a better product and making marketing plans in advance.

Handicraft work is being revived by Harlan county homemakers, who are making stools, chairs, baskets, and quilts. Native sheep's wool is used for sweaters along with vegetable dyed yarns. At a tri-state fair held recently, the homemakers showed how modern women could excel in the old fireside crafts.

That a good herd of cows, well cared for, is a paying proposition is shown by the records of 21 cows tested by the Mason County Dairy Herd Improvement Association for one year. They averaged 318 pounds of butterfat per cow, and brought $55 profit each above feed cost.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Moses Aikin, of Green county, bought 15 good grade ewes and a purebred Southdown ram last month. One hundred eighty-five jars of fruits, vegetables, meats, pickles, preserves and jellies were exhibited by Garrard county 4-H club girls.

Five hundred capons are being raised by 11 Carter county farmers for sale in January on an eastern market.

Twenty-eight purebred rams were bought by Henderson county farmers to improve their flocks.

The late potato crop of Casey county is the largest and best farmers here had for several years.

J. O. Venn, of Meade county, harvested 300 bushels of peaches from what was considered a worthless orchard two years ago.

Laure county's trend toward more and better livestock was shown by an exhibit of calves, cows, mares and colts.

Grapes saved from black rot by spraying are being sold in Lee county for $1.25 a bushel.

Charles Moody, a Henry county 4-H club member, won $183 at the district fair at Lexington.

George Midden of Harrison county bought ewes in Canada to start a registered flock.

T. C. Hall of Powell county sold seven head of sheep for $9.55 and 11 head for $9.30.

Korean Leopolda furnished most of the pasture last month in Boyd county.

ITALY BRANDED AS GUILTY BY LEAGUE

GENEVA — The council of the League of Nations solemnly pronounced Italy's war against Ethiopia "an act of war against all other members of the league" today and thus made sanctions against the Fascist state compulsory.

It was the first time in league history that a great power thus resigned was found guilty of war in violation of the covenant.

The council approved a report of a committee of six holding that Italy disregarded Article XII of the covenant by proceeding to war against Ethiopia without waiting three months for arbitration by the league.

Informed sources in Rome said Italy was willing to pay through economic sanctions the price of her African campaign and that she would not leave the league.

Article XVI of the league provides that members shall undertake to protect a violator of the covenant to "the severance of trade or financial relations" between their nations and nations of the covenant breaking state.

There is also an optional provision for the employment of armed force against a violator of the covenant. There was little likelihood it would be applied except as a last resort.

Whitesville Boy Wins $100 Prize On Temperance Essay

LOUISVILLE, KY. — (SPECIAL) — Morton J. Holbrook, Jr., a young Kentucky University graduate, and son of Mr. M. J. Holbrook, President of the Bank of Whitesville, Whitesville, Ky., has just been adjudged the winner of the First Prize of $100.00 in the State-wide temperance essay contest sponsored and conducted by the Kentucky Repeal & Regulation League, Louisville, for the best essay on temperance.

The Judges were Hon. F. M. Sackett, former United States Senator from Kentucky and later

Morton Holbrook, Jr.

U. S. Ambassador to Germany, Louisville; Judge Ira D. Smith, Judge of the Circuit Court of the Third Judicial District, Hopkinsville; and former U. S. Senator, George B. Martin, of Calletsburg.

The other Prize Winners were: 2nd Prize, $50.00, Barbara Lucille Scott, Frankfort; 3rd Prize $10.00, Violet Alford Korthage, Shively; 4th Prize $5.00, Helen Reichenbach, Anchorage; 5th Prize $3.00, Robert Scifres, Louisville; 6th Prize $5.00, Russell Lowell Hall, Kite.

In his winning essay young Holbrook takes the position that it is high time for him in the entrance of his twenty-first year this month, to establish certain ideas for his productive years by the choice and possession of definite ideals before formulating any set rules of conduct; that it is his right to live as pleasantly as possible, and likewise help his neighbor to live. "To fulfill these desires," writes young Holbrook, "I must have useful work and enjoy pleasures that are neither harmful to myself nor to others; I must respect the rights of my fellow-man. Between the extremes of indulgence and abstinence, it is possible to map out a course adequately fitted for the achievements of such ends. That course is temperance. It is self-control, sobriety, tolerance and moderation — the means by which a man remains master of his emotions and director of his thoughts. It empowers him to weigh the pleasures of man against resultant pain. It gives wisdom's way to man's reason. If I remain sober in drink, in power and in work, I shall always be able to see and to weigh without bias and act without prejudice. Temperance is akin to tolerance. The temperate man is tolerant. Without tolerance, civilization languishes and dies, crucified by bigots. It is a liveable philosophy, an ideal which may be accepted without the sacrifice of joys that make life vibrant and tasteful."

The full text of young Holbrook's essay will be mailed free of cost to anyone writing the Kentucky Repeal & Regulation League, Louisville, Ky.

BRECKINRIDGE HAS NO GRID GAME THIS WEEK

MOREHEAD HIGH LOSES PLACE IN CONFERENCE

The Morehead High School Vikings have lost their place in the eastern Kentucky Conference.

Sandy Conference was postponed in the Eagle loop, Russell dropped out of the conference 2 years ago, but decided to return to Eagle play this year.

WOODSON DALE OUT FOR REST OF '35 SEASON

McKechine Also Lost To Team For Game At Union Saturday; Eagles Underdogs

UNION IMPROVED THIS YEAR

Woodson Dale, quarterback on the Morehead College varsity, has been lost to the team for the balance of the season.

Dale, wrenched his shoulder in the Georgetown game, and the injury is more serious than was at first supposed.

McKechine, a first string end, is also laid up, and will not participate in the Union game at Barbourville Saturday.

Considerable shifting of the Morehead lineup is evident before the Union go. The Eagles are off to a bad start, and the injuries to Dale and McKechine does not portend any better showing for them against Union.

Union will rule heavy favorites to win the game, and in all probability will win in Saturday's battle. The Union team has defeated Morehead the past 2 years, and apparently revenge is not the lot of the Teachers this year.

Freshman Coach Bill Scroggins who scouted Union in their openen battle, reported their considerable strength since the same team that defeated Morehead last year.

"M" Club Banquet To Be Feature Of Homecoming At Morehead College; Other Features Planned

One of the outstanding affairs of the Homecoming of Morehead State Teachers College will be the annual banquet of the "Alumni M Club" to be held at the Midland Trail Hotel on Friday night before the homecoming game with Eastern.

will be preceded by an amateur radio hour open to the public for a small admission at the College Theatre on the campus, in the town and from nearby towns have already signified their intentions to compete.

All of the former letter men will be introduced to members of the varsity football squad and they will attend the banquet hour in a body. After which the varsity will go into seclusion until game time Saturday and the old players will gather at the Midland Trail Hotel for their last session of renewing gridiron seasons of the post and toast to the successes that will come.

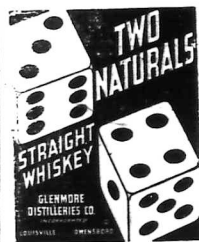

Mr. Martindale states that all of the business houses that will be decorated for the Homecoming football game of Morehead Teachers College, and that he will take time off and have his feet under the banquet table of the Alumni M Club.

PLATFORM

—OF—

Mrs. Ethel Ellington

Republican Nominee

—FOR—

State Senator

"Conservative, Constructive and Commonsense"

NOVEMBER 5, 1935

Mrs. Ethel Ellington is the Republican nominee for State Senator from the 31st Senatorial District of Kentucky, counties of Bath, Fleming, Mason, Menifee, Powell and Rowan.

Mrs. Ellington is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Hillman, of Ashland, Ky. Her father, Dr. Hillman, is a well-known physician, who has practiced in a number of the counties of Eastern Kentucky, having at one time resided at Poplar Plains, Fleming county. She is the wife of Dr. A. F. Ellington, Morehead, Ky.

Mrs. Ellington's early education was obtained in the old Morehead Normal School (before it became the present Teachers College) at Eastern State Teachers' College, Richmond, Ky.; at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. She holds an A. B. degree and at the present time is completing her thesis for her M. A. degree at the University of Kentucky. She is also a graduate of the Bowling Green Business University, Bowling Green, Ky. Mrs. Ellington is a teacher by profession, having taught thirteen years in the Ashland Senior High School, Ashland. She has also had practical experience in the business field of banking and accounting.

Mrs. Ellington has been active in club work, being a member of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs; a former member of the Business and Professional Woman's Club. She has found time to be active in P.-T. A. and K. E. A. work; is a church member and has consistently lent her support to social and educational work of many kinds.

Mrs. Ellington is the type of individual who is capable, progressive and energetic, and can be trusted to maintain the high standards and ideals necessary to perpetuate the prosperity of Kentucky.

Following is her Platform, which is CONSERVATIVE, CONSTRUCTIVE AND COMMONSENSE:

PLATFORM

1. I stand for drastic and severe curtailment of the gross and extravagant expenditures of this administration. The heavy burden on the tax-ridden citizens of this State can be lightened only by sane and commonsense budgetary control. I heartily favor the policy of keeping the expenditures of the State within its income.

2. I stand for the discontinuance of the Sales Tax. It is fundamentally an unequal and unfair tax. It is not based on the principle of ability to pay, which should be the first consideration in any tax or revenue measure.

3. I pledge to the schools and teachers my efforts for: Adequate financial support for the schools and teachers of Kentucky. Retainment of the present $12.00 per capita with an increase when financial condition of State warrants such increase; establishment of a retirement system for the teachers of the State. I pledge my efforts also for the higher institutions of learning in the State; that is, the Teachers' College, University and like institutions.

4. I favor a reduction of the State gasoline and automobile tax.

5. I favor the continuance of the building of good roads; especially the rural roads from farm to market. I stand for a transformation of the State Highway Department from a corrupt and vicious political machine to an efficient road-building organization. This can be done only by the able administration of the department, by qualified engineers, and making public the operations of this department by frequent audits.

6. I favor a reform of our out-moded penal system; to be brought about by the establishment of self-supporting prison farms. These will be of incalculable value in the rehabilitation and reform of the inmates.

7. I stand for old age pensions.

8. I heartily and sincerely favor any legislation which will promote the welfare and well-being of our soldiers and ex-service men.

9. I believe: That the greatest welfare of all the people is, or ought to be, the end of all government; that equal and exact justice to all should be the keynote.

FRESHMEN AND GEORGETOWN TIE AT 6 TO 6

A ground gaining and accurate passing attack met a sure footed running system at Jayne Stadium Friday afternoon and they emerged all even as the Morehead and Georgetown College Freshmen tied at 6-6.

Morehead's line held Georgetown to a scant 7 yards gain, during the losses, during the entire game. The Baby Bengals picked up 137 yards through the air however, which made the game just about even in first downs, score and yardage. Morehead made 37 yards through the air and 131 from scrimmage.

A passing attack, with Allen doing the passing and Georgetown's captain Sheaffer the receiving, the visitors marched 60 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter. Fifty-nine of those yards gain it was through the air, and it was clinched with a 12 yard pass, Allen to Sheaffer for a touchdown. The kick for the extra point hit the cross bar and bounded back.

Morehead drove to the 18 yard line the second quarter, but the half stopped them.

The Eagles scored in the middle of the third quarter. A fifteen yard run by Lowman, and 10 and 8 yard gallops by Hoffstetter advanced it from midfield within scoring distance. Hoffstetter passed to Norman in the end zone for the score. Norman caught that pass while prone on the ground where he had slipped. Lowman attempted to buck the line for the extra point but failed to convert.

Norman was easily the outstanding player for Morehead, although Lowman and Reynolds contributed more than their share of the gained yardage. Hoffstetter turned in a good game at fullback. Horton, a Mc Sterling boy, was a necessity to the visitors, continually breaking through to smother the interference or the runner.

Georgetown's passing attack featured the afternoon, and Allen to Sheaffer was a combination that

CHAPTER XI—Continued

A young woman in a furred coat splattered lightly with rain, with a small hat drawn down over drifting slyaway golden hair. Ariel, Dick stood, stricken, motionless for a moment. Then Ariel came, with a bright light across the kitchen, and flung her arms tightly about Gail.

"Oh, my darling—my darling!" Gail whispered, her wet cheek against Ariel's wet cheek. "You're back!"

"Gail!" Ariel sobbed.

"Oh, dearest—dearest!"

There was no bitterness, no memory now. It was Ariel the adored young one, here against her heart again, living, loving, sorry, eager to be forgiven; there was nothing in Gail's feeling but one great ache of joy and pain and love.

"Gail, I've wanted you so!"

"And I you!"

They drew apart, hands linked, and looked at each other.

"You look—older, Ariel. You—I hardly know you!"

The exquisite transparent skin flushed; Ariel shrank in the old indifferent way.

"Oh, well—"

"Oh, well, naturally!" Gail finished it for her with a laugh.

Ariel saw the basket and the baby; she gave Gail a frightened glance.

"Gail!"

"Oh, no, no. That's Phil's baby, Lily's baby."

Ariel's proud mouth curled in the old haughty way.

"I heard he had married her," she said, dispirited. "That horrible Wilber" in an impatient tone. Suddenly they were back in their old relationship, and there was proof in the voice in which Gail said:

"Be careful, Ariel! She isn't here, but Phil may be any minute."

"They're living here?"

"They have been, from the first."

"But this is our house!" Ariel exclaimed, head in air.

"Oh, Ariel, dear—" Gail pleaded, patiently.

"Do you mean to tell me that Joe Cass divorced wife—"

"Joe Cass died, Ariel. And they were here," Gail said, as the other voice stopped on an indignant note—"they were here when Edith and I were born here, ever since, as I added, after another pause.

"I see," Ariel said, in a gentle, low voice. The old haughty, boyish voice, and the old persistent look in the hazel eyes—now they brought back the days of long ago!

"Is Dick with you, Ariel?"

"Dick? Oh, yes! He's coming in with the bags."

"And are you going to stay in Clipperville?"

"Are you?—Oh, heavens, no!" Ariel said expressively.

"But are you happy, darling?"

"Nothing to call it, Ariel. I'm colorless," Ariel answered drily. Something seemed to shiver in Gail's heart at the tone.

"Can we announce your marriage now, Ariel?"

Instead of answering Ariel fastened bright curious eyes on her sister.

"Do you mean to say that nobody's ever suspected?"

"Nobody."

"Oh, come now, Gail!"

"Well, it surprises me. Of course I told Lily. But she never told even her mother. And people have all taken it for granted that you were down in Los Angeles with Aunt Annie Raleigh's family. Anyway, if anyone has ever connected your name with Dick Stebbins I never heard it. His mother never did. Or if she did she was as dumb as I was about it."

"I've often wondered," Ariel said, listening attentively. "Not," she added, with her own little favorite air of arrogance—"not that it made any difference to me! But I've often wondered what the old ladies in town were thinking about."

There was a moment's silence, for Gail sensed something unexpressed in her sister's tone and waited, puzzled, for an explanation.

"I'm terribly glad—" Ariel began hesitatingly. "Gail!" she added, suddenly, on a more definite note. "I've got to tell you something—something to surprise you."

"You must have known that there was something funny about all this!" she interrupted the pause to ask irrelevantly.

There was a sound behind Gail at the kitchen doorway. She turned and noted Dick Stebbins.

Bigger, browner, with more of that sweet, honest, kindly air than ever. Some quality, reliable, trustworthy, she interrupted the pause to emanate from there was infinite strength for Gail in the mere touch of his big hand. He kissed her, very simply, very warmly, beyond her to Ariel. Gail, blue-eyed, tawny of hair, her thick eyebrows drawn together questioningly, her sagging eyes and the disciplined wide mouth accenting her feeling of bewilderment and non-comprehension, sent her glance from one face to the other.

"Had your talk?" Dick asked, and the remembered voice sent waves of thrilling weakness and joy and pain through Gail's whole being.

"Not yet," Ariel said. "Tell her the truth, Dick."

Dick had brought two rain-spattered suitcases into the kitchen. Now Ariel glanced from them to her sister's face.

"First," she said, "you can put me up, Gail?"

"Put you up?" Gail echoed, in an almost shocked tone. "But, darling, this is home! Papa's old room is the guest room, anyway. You and Dick can have the guest room all to yourselves."

"I'd rather double up with you," Ariel said, without embarrassment, but with an appealing little touch of shyness.

"Well—" Gail colored to her forehead, laughing again, and sending Dick an apologetic glance. "If you don't mind," she said, "of course we have to talk all night."

"There's a man in town I have to see, anyway," Dick answered immediately.

"But not tonight!"

"Well, I thought I'd go down to the Empire and telephone him, anyway."

"That's all right," Dick explained.

"Oh, yes, I know him. Mrs. Cantora's father. But he's quite sick, Dick—meant to see me yesterday in the library. He's in the hospital."

"I know he is. But you see," Dick persisted uncomfortably, with a red face, "it'll be better for me to be at the hotel, because then if he gets better—we've been working on this case together—"

"But, my dear," Gail said in her big sisterly tone, "you can't go to the Empire, and leave Ariel here! You know what Clipperville is; there's no night life in the town. What does the illness of a casual stranger like Mr. Wiloughby matter?"

There was a pause. Then Ariel, balanced on the edge of the kitchen table in the old fashion, said explanatorily, "Mr. Wiloughby and Dick have been working on this case together. And if he goes to London, Dick'll probably go, too."

"But let me—before the others come in—before anything else," Gail said, "you're going to announce your marriage now, aren't you?" Something rowed. "I just went out—saw—about him!" she said.

"Did he know it?"

"Wait," Ariel panted. "Do you remember a Saturday," she began again suddenly—"a Saturday when you were going over to Los Gatos with Van, and your sort of—sort of maneuvered to get away from the library?"

Remember it! How often, with shame and regret, Gail had remembered that old unbridled juggling with business and home obligations, just to get free for those exciting, unsatisfying week-ends with Van!

"Yes, I remember. It was hot. And you came down to the car and said good-by to us."

"Well, while you were in the house he kissed me," Ariel said.

The indignant color blazed in Gail's face.

"He didn't!"

"Oh, indeed he did." Ariel defended for a second, and then added, "I made him."

"Oh, darling, darling, if I'd only known! For I was getting so tired of the whole thing then. You could have had him! You could have gone to Los Gatos!"

"Well, anyway," Ariel said, with Gail paused, "he said to me, 'What chance did Monte tonight? Some of the fellows said if I'm going over to Del Monte late, for the golf.' I said there was no chance at all, and you came out with your coat."

"I remember! I went back for my coat."

"Well, anyway, it was very hot and stupid, and Dorothy Camp, Larry, and Buddy Hirsch came round and asked me to go over to somebody's yacht in Santa Cruz. So I left a note for Edie, and went out with them."

"Do you remember," she went on, thinking it out, "that after we'd had lunch we passed a sign that said 'Del Monte 35 Miles' and the boys teased me to go down there for a summer and dance? I thought of Van then—I knew he'd be there."

"And such a funny feeling came over me, Gail. It was just as if—I knew, it was just as if I knew that I was going to Monterey all the rest would happen."

"Well, we went down there, and we got rooms in a small hotel in Monterey. Buddy and Larry drank too much, and that made us mad, and we didn't quite know what to do. But about ten o'clock, when we were all over at Monte, I left the others and went to the desk and asked if Mr. Van Murchison was there. The man said yes, that he had just registered."

"I telephoned upstairs to his room, and said, 'Well, I'm here.'"

"He was awfully nice, and said he was coming down to dinner. But when he came down Buddy was acting so badly that I was terribly embarrassed, and Dot and Larry had disappeared. Van was wonderful. He said I must go to the hotel and lock my door, and go straight home the next day, and give persons like Buddy and Larry a wide berth in future."

She was silent awhile. "I really loved him," she added the words thoughtfully, as if thinking aloud.

"He said he would take me to Monterey, Gail, only a mile away. But first we went out past the Presidio to Cypress Point, and we parked the car and went down to the shore and we engaged. Van told me he loved me, and I said that I loved him, and we were engaged. There's—there's a no other excuse for it, Gail."

"Except," she said, in a dead silence, "that we'd both been drinking—not too much, but enough to make everything seem unreal—oh, not that I thought at all, I thought that nothing mattered! Anything was better than being an old maid, like the Foster girls."

"You and Edith never knew that, did you?"

"Knew it!" Gail said, on a breath of agony.

"Yes. But—but I wasn't eighteen!" Ariel said, in her hoarse, appealing voice.

"You weren't eighteen," Gail said heavily, swallowing with a stiff throat, "but you knew better than that."

The other girl seemed to wilt suddenly. She looked away.

"Oh, yes, I knew better than that. A girl is born knowing better than that!" she concluded dully.

"And you despise Lily?" Gail muttered, trembling.

The resentful color stung in Ariel's face.

"She's common," she said quickly.

"But she didn't do what you did!" Gail wanted to say. No, no. No. She was silent.

"I'm sorry!" Ariel said then impatiently, in the tone she always used when it was too late. "It's a kind of myself! But—but it happens all the time," she added resentfully, "and girls get away with it."

"Ariel! Don't talk that way," Gail commanded, with an angry flash of blue eyes.

"It's true," Ariel murmured, subdued.

"You didn't," Gail began, thinking—"you didn't marry Dick Stebbins that Christmas, not telling him?"

"No," Ariel said, with an indignant look.

"He knew?"

"Everything!"

"And loved you in spite of it?"

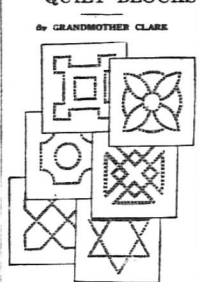

"He got me out of it," Ariel said.

"And did you stop caring for Van afterward?"

"You don't understand," Ariel said. "Dick and I never were married. We weren't married now! For nearly three years I've been married to Van. That's the marriage we're going to announce!" Gail stared at her, stricken dumb.

"You and Van Murchison married!" she said with confusion.

World's Most Famous Babies Eat Oatmeal

The Dionne Quintuplets, wards of the King, eat the same cereal that is eaten by millions of babies who don't get their names in the papers—out of the care of the Quintas. And these experts, their scientific knowledge endorsing the instinctive choice of mothers the world over, have chosen oatmeal for the cereal of the famous five.

Oatmeal, eminent medical authorities agree, has an abundance of everything a child's cereal should have—body-building minerals, muscle-building protein, and the supremely important Vitamin B, for keeping fit.

Food science says that Vitamin B is the best safeguard against those dangerous enemies of childhood—neuritis, constipation, and poor appetite due to lack of that vitamin in the diet.

Stop on White

From now on a white case is a stop signal in Memphis, Tenn., and motorists seeing one at an intersection must stop until cars and trucks get across the street. Only blind persons may carry the white case. It's a new ordinance.

Outside Influence

There is a spark of something in a bad boy that no kind of conventional parental training can take out. Don't always blame parents.

TORPID

Usually the man who never has anything to say has nothing to think. He's torpid.

odd in their silence bewildered her, and she turned sharply to Ariel.

"Aren't you going to announce it even now?" she demanded.

"Immediately," Ariel agreed briefly.

"Well, then! Surely Dick ought to say next!" Gail exclaimed, her face look moved from face to face. "There isn't any trouble?" she asked quickly.

"No, dear, there's no trouble," Dick said, smiling. "You have your talk, and I'll be back. Of course I want to see Phil. You don't know what it is to get home. I can't wait to start talking."

When the kitchen door was shut and the car in the side yard had chugged away, Gail turned toward Ariel.

"What's queer?" she asked.

"Nothing's queer," Ariel said in her proud, faintly hoarse voice. "But your cramping me and Dick into one room was rather funny," she said slowly, "because we aren't married, not the way you think—not any more. We never cared for each other—that way."

"You and Dick Stebbins aren't married?"

"I said we weren't, Gail."

"Then—then—" Gail stopped short when it was too late. "It's a kind of myself! But—but it happens all the time," she added resentfully, "and girls get away with it."

SWEET USES OF ADVERSITY

Sweet are the uses of adversity, which, like a toad, ugly and venomous, wears yet a precious jewel in its head.

NO UPSETS

The proper treatment for a bilious child

A cleansing dose today: a smaller quantity tomorrow: in each case, small amounts need no help at all.

ANY mother knows the reason why when her child stops playing, eats little, is hard to manage, complains, and why he may be nervous, is the trouble with the bowels.

The ordinary laxative, of even clearest strength, destroys all hopes of restoring regularity.

A liquid laxative is the answer. The secret of all your worries over constipation. A liquid can be swallowed. The dose can be varied, and it is not so messy as any soap or soap. Just reduce the dose each time, until the bowels are moving of their own accord and need no aid.

This treatment will succeed with any child and with any adult.

Doctors use a liquid laxative. Hospitals use the liquid form. If it is best for their use, it is best for your use. The liquid laxative, the generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist has it.

Million For Ounce potassium is valued at about a million dollars per ounce.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Cremonium. Cremonium is a powerful cough suppressant, and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Cremonium. It is the only medicine that acts on the trouble at its source to relieve and prevent the cough and chest inflammation because as the germ-borne phlegm is loosened and expelled from the throat, other remedies have failed. Don't be discouraged, your cough is sufficient to give Cremonium and to relieve your misery if you are not satisfied, ask the pharmacist for the very best bottle (the Cremonium right now. Ads.)

FORMER INDEPENDENT EDITOR GOES TO FLEMINGSBURG PAPER

Charlie Adams, former editor of the Morehead Independent, and one of the founders of the publication, has taken a position with the Times-Democrat at Flemingsburg. This publication extends to him sincere wishes for success at his new position.

Mr. T. J. Johnson, of Bowling Green, Ky., has been employed to replace Mr Adams at the Independent.

REPUBLICAN NEWS

Conducted Weekly

Judge King Swope, of Lexington, the nominee for Governor, has a decisive advantage over the Democratic nominee, for those who demand economy, efficiency and reform—a housecleaning—at Frankfort. His record is unblemished, and in importance far overshadows that of the Democratic leader in matters of public service. Judge Swope is a jurist with an enviable record; he is admittedly the friend of labor, of the farmer, the soldier, of every class desiring clear, progressive handling of the affairs of the state.

No able man, either Democrat or Republican, has ever been presented for the important office of Lieutenant Governor than Judge J. J. Kavanaugh, of Louisville.

The Democratic ticket, driven to desperation in its attempt to bamboozle the voters, is treating Kentucky to a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde act. While Mr. Chandler delivers frenzied orations against the sales tax his running mate for Lieutenant Governor, Keene Johnson, slyly winks the other eye and assures the sales tax advocates everything will be given away for our side? If you only elect me and Happy?"

Out of all this Ben Johnsonian camouflage and deception emerges the undeniable fact, that: Mr. Chandler, himself, was one of the original sales tax advocates; Keene Johnson, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, is and always has been an irreconcilable sales tax supporter;

King Swope, the Republican nominee virtually eliminates the sales tax as an issue with the plainly open statement, "if I am elected governor and the legislature reenacts the sales tax, I will veto it."

Kentucky Democrats, in an effort to swing the votes of people on relief in the Democratic party this fall, have adapted a Santa Claus role in an effort to foster the belief that the money which feeds those on relief is Democratic money, and that out of gratitude to "the hand that feeds them" the vote on relief should vote the party ticket.

The Santa Claus role of the Democrats, however, is nothing more or less than an illusion, a clever trick of political magicians to garner more votes. As a matter of fact, relief money is neither Democratic nor Republican money, it is money collected from all the people of the State by various taxes that provide for relief.

People on relief owe no gratitude to Democrats, and despite rumors which have been freely circulated their relief status will not be affected if they vote any way they see fit. The statement of George H. Goodman, Work Progress Administrator for Kentucky, bears this out. "People on relief in this state can vote any way they see fit without the least fear of losing their relief status," declares Mr. Goodman. He further adds that he has received instructions from President Roosevelt to see that no politics are played in the distribution of relief.

Any attempt to intimidate voters on relief will be dealt with in the Federal courts. It brought to attention of the proper authorities.

The 1935 Emergency Appropriation Act, under which relief agencies are operating says specifically, "That political intimidation of employees and workers and misrepresentation by persons in this connection, can and will be proceeded against in the Federal courts."

The advertising appearing this week in a local newspaper showing President Roosevelt pictured with "Happy" Chandler and the statements incident to same, constitute a most reprehensible attempt to influence the voters by attempting to insinuate that the taxpayers money is Democrat money, and that Santa Claus is dual in the person of President Roosevelt and Happy Chandler. The statements made therein appears to be a flagrant violation of the laws as mentioned above and due attention is being called to their display to the proper authorities in Washington. We cannot believe that such an advertisement was conceived at Washington.

Cigarettes give a lot of pleasure to a lot of people.

More cigarettes are smoked today because more people know about them—they are better advertised. But the main reason for the increase is that they are made better—made of better tobaccos; then again the tobaccos are blended—a blend of Domestic and Turkish tobaccos. Chesterfield is made of mild, ripe tobaccos. Everything that science knows about is used in making it a milder and better-tasting cigarette. We believe you will enjoy them.
