From the Let ure Hour.
A Child's Address to the Nuow.
In flakes of feathers white,
It is falling no gentle and slow;
O, pleasant to me it the sight
Of the silently falling snow?
Snow, now, now?
The fall of the feather's snow?

The fall of the feathery assow!
The secth is if a correct love day
With a mustle of railout above;
And It parties and shilous in the ray.
First paint of guideling news!
The practing and gleening news!
It covers the solth from the could.
We would you think, Ittle Ells, it's a!
And when it cames down on the world,
It is only a worn cast of sow!
The current warm cast of the ray.

From my window the snow birds I see:
They hop and they flit as they go;
And they goe k of a lesson to m-.
While they feed in the brautiful snow!
Snow, snow, snow?
Happy birds, that delight in the snow!

The trees have a burden of white.
They stretched out their branches, I kee
And filled their great arms in the night,
To play in the sanb-arms with snow!
Snow, snow, snow!
The trees with their branches all curling snow!

snow!.
It shalles with the heath of spring!
And down in the river shall flow!
And the summer opin shall bring
Bright flowers of the alivery snow!
Stripht flowers of the alivery snow!
Bright flowers shall spring on the grave of the snow!
