On the landing of the stairs she paused, no slipping back the rings of her own scanty filled purse, she glanced at the three gold plars, which formed its entire contents. She had thought the sum absolutely needed for the purchase of gloves and slippers, ab-fore making her appearance at Mr., Thorne's party: but, with a half suite, she motived to herselft. The gloves must wait till some other times, and entered the kitchen.

"Mrs. Emmons," she remarked, as she put and the suite of the dollars in the nor woman's hand.

The woman rose silently, but the expression of patient sorrow on her sale face struck Evely painfully, and, following her to the door, absenked her address.

"Paradies Square, No. 10," was the reply, and, noting it down on her levery fablets, the meetioner went up stairs.
