MAYOR LAPPIN'S PROCLAMATION

Apology to the People of Morehead

The flood of July 26 was the greatest tragedy ever experienced by this community. The losses sustained in this flood were great. However, sympathy is not enough. We have a problem of relief to be faced. A large amount of property was destroyed, but much more remains to be done.

We are fortunate in having on hand the American Red Cross, an experienced relief agency with a large staff of capable and dedicated workers in Morehead and the general public with their

The mass funeral services held at Bomar Chapel for the 25 persons drowned in the flood were attended by hundreds of people from all parts of Kentucky.

HUNDREDS MADE HOMELESS BY CLOUDBURST-WEDNESDAY MORNING

Death and destruction came to Rowan county early Wednesday morning when a heavy, destructive wall of water spawned out the lives of 25 persons, made hundred homeless and destroyed 2 million dollars worth of property.

Since no other persons have been reported as missing in the county, it is being assumed that the number of dead is complete.

The flash flood, caused by a cloud burst near the Carter county line, came down the Washaway Creek, a small creek which feeds into the river at Bevin's, and swept away the houses in the vicinity.

Many were caught in their claymound houses like rats in a trap, others took to the trees. A few were able to save their families. Many were not.

The roar of the torrent, the screams of the doomed and the terror-stricken voices from the darkness will be forever remembered by those who were in the scene.

Flood Causes Problem Beyond Immediate Relief

The Louisville Times has written an op-ed editorial stating the fact that the recent flood "reflects conditions, which, possibly might be remedied, to serious danger of immediate relief." We agree with them.

The Louisville Times editorial stated:

In this metropolitan area with a population of about half a million, less than half a dozen persons were drowned when the Ohio flooded, many thousands of acres covered with water, thousands of homes have been destroyed and it was necessary to remove nearly half of the population from their homes.

In two counties in Eastern Kentucky, combined population about $4,000, between 180 and 150 persons, apparently, were drowned between midnight and daylight by floods caused by local rains.

The flood was destructive, the Louisville Times said, and not only constitutes a tragedy in the list of brigades of disasters, but also points to the need of immediate relief.

EYE-WITNESS ACCOUNT RELATED OF FLOOD’S DESPERATE BY STANLEY K. EVerson

By STANLEY K. EVerson

The Morehead Independent Reporter

"Make it Sunday, butlet, street, flood, needy and people are poorly. They're food, only food."

It was my last day, Mrs. Sue Putnam, my editor, asked me if the flood was a bad one. She thought it was the best one she'd ever seen.

I put up and quickly dressed in the black. The sky was clear. It seemed I was thinking, but when I looked out the window I realized that the sound I heard was a far away traffic noise. I saw the water on the Railroad Street.

I went over to the window and saw the men working on the street. The water was high across the street and as far as I could see towards West Morehead.

At the water's edge men cried, "Get out, a boat is coming." The boat was a tugboat of the George's bar, a large boat with a large boom on it. The George's bar was a large boat with a large boom on it. The George's bar was a large boat with a large boom on it. The George's bar was a large boat with a large boom on it.

I asked the operator for Lehigh to go down the street a few doors down, Gladie Halden said.

I went back down the street front on Casey Avenue. I met Joe Johnson, the bartender, and he had been working in the street for a day, waiting for a boat to come in. Waiting for a boat to come in. Waiting for a boat to come in.

The boat came in, and I got on. We rode about a mile, then we were met by a boat on the railroad tracks. We were taken to the railroad tracks.

The boat was a tugboat of the George's bar, a large boat with a large boom on it. The George's bar was a large boat with a large boom on it. The George's bar was a large boat with a large boom on it. The George's bar was a large boat with a large boom on it.
