THE MELANCHOLY DAYS

Everybody kicks about the weather, but as Mark Twain so sagaciously observed, nothing is ever done about it. Nothing, that is, except to inflat upon the strangely submissive male sex the order to don straw hats on May 15, and to take 'em off on September 15.

The old thing that the salesman said would last a lifetime because it was a Panama has come through another season's hard campaigning. It has got flappy at the brim again, and there are stains upon it.

Along about the middle of July, the thing was such a public nuisance that the neighbors began to talk, and your wife sneaked it off one Saturday afternoon and had it cleaned and blocked for you.

But such operations work no permanent good. A straw hat leaves dirt about as much as a small boy loves it. The day after it was cleaned it blew off, and the neighbors began talking again. This time you were adamant, or at least what you said sounded as if it were spelled something like that. You were going to wear that hat all season. So the goodly wife got out an evil-smelling bottle of straw hat cleaner, confiscated your tooth brush and gave the hat a going over.

So you forgot it. You forgot that the neighbors snickered when you passed by their porches of an evening. You forgot that when you hung your hat up in a public place other people snatched their noses from the books as if afraid you were going to attempt a switch. The leather band was just becoming set to your head, and the hat was comfortable.

While! Off comes your hat! Not a custom, convention, tradition. You resolve firmly to wear your hat a day beyond that arbitrary date, September 15. But at the last minute your nerve fails, and you rush to a furnishings store, and they throw out 67 hats that you don't like, and you pick up the one you tried on first and buy...

Back away the panamas and the leghorns, the bankos and the senets. The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year. You are doomed to go once more thru the process of breaking in a hat.

NOT INTENTIONALLY

We did not intentionally leave out the news item last week about the Fiscal court voting to call an election to be held in connection with the regular election November 8, to vote a 20 cent road tax on each $100 of property assessed.

We are not averse to all improvements. We are in favor of the tax, and if it will make roads better we will be trying to pay our tax as long as others do. We simply forgot the item last week, and we are glad that the absence was noticed. It shows us our paper is carefully read by some of our subscribers anyway.

Speaking of subscribers reminds us that our list still grows as you know we have made no effort to collect either new or old subscribers, but they come anyway and we are always thankful for them.

Good Samaritan Hospital Lexington, Kentucky September 2, 1927
The Mountain scorchers:

I guess you have been wondering why you never get the Sandy Hook news, and I am anxious myself to hear from Sandy Hook and dear old Elliott. I have been here in the hospital since August 15, have undergone one small operation, August 21, and am sitting up again for the last two days, but will have to have another operation shortly, when my strength will admit.

As I have no news I will tell you about myself, uninteresting subject or rather the things and people I have seen since I have been here. I, together with my niece, Miss Anna Jane Day of Morehead, my son, Bill Young, and baby girl, Lucy Beth, left Sandy Hook August 29th, rode horse-back across country to Morehead, making the trip in something over six hours. I stopped with my sister, Mrs. May W. Day until the 15th. While there many former residents of Elliott county, came to see me. Mrs. T. N. Fannin and Mrs. Mollie Smith, of Phoenix, Arizona, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Evans, Mrs. Finland Hackney, Mrs. J. A. Bays and a number of others I once knew.

When I reached Lexington my cousin, Mrs. A. M. Lyon, of Frankfort, met me at the depot and took me out to the Good Samaritan Hospital. There we met Dr. Banks, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, at Frankfort. They went up to the room assigned me, number 220 on the second floor, where the white capped nurses received me kindly and I was soon resting, my tired and aching limbs in one of the snowy beds that have been such a boon to so many. Dr. Kavanaugh was assigned my doctor at the time.

There at a few days I met Mr. Alfred Combs, president and general manager, and I wish I could describe this grand old man to you all. He is 82 years old, or young rather, for he does not look nor act it by 30 years. I am glad to tell our mountain boys about this man, who by a clean, active life, with strong integrity of purpose, coupled with a kind Christian heart and industry, has climbed to the top in all his undertakings. He is also president of the Combs Lumber Co., run exclusively by him and his six sons. The Combs honor-built homes are synonyms of their work.

He was born and reared in Breathitt county, a few miles from Jackson. He never, however, partook of all those bloody foods; he worked on the farm as a boy and was a country school teacher, surveyor, later a timber man where he amassed the fortune he does so much good with, a Methodist and a Mason, is active, energetic, kind and eyesight as untrammeled as our world-weary men of forty.

Since I have seen this wonderful man of his age, I have been thinking of our own boys and girls, how they are all so anxious to get away from our little county of Elliott, which nestles as it does in the lap of nature with the purest Anglo-Saxon blood in the world in their veins; there is not a colored person or foreigner in our county and I have been thinking as I see more of the outside world and its products that our boys and girls have never realized what a privilege it was for them to be cradled among those Eastern Kentucky hills with their summits pointing skyward to the prince "Emmanuel land." How, if they have the right kind of ambition in them against these, wrestle with and overcome the obstacles for an education and any one can that wants to. They are only getting the training they need to fit them for the great battlefield of life, where every one worth while, either man or woman, is a soldier for right and for right.

Since I have been here, Dr. and Mrs. A. M. Lyon, of Frankfort, where he is superintendent of the Feeble-Minded Institution, have been to see me a number of times, bringing flowers. Mrs. Drew Evans, of Morehead, came in also with beautiful flowers. Brother Greer, Presiding Elder of the Methodist church, has been to see me twice, bringing his wife this afternoon.

King Mrs. Little Bell, of Ashland, and her daughter, Mrs. Roy Grayson, of Nicholasville.

Walter Mobley, Henry Stevens, and Sam Stevens, of Sandy Hook, are here now. They are getting along fine.

I have received much kindness from Miss Lake Johnson, superintendent, also Miss Iry Clayton Piercalk head nurse on second floor and many others I would like to mention along time.

A Restaurant on Wheels

It is not only in the big and essential things of service, such as modern locomotives, comfortable coaches and well-balanced tracks, that the Railroads are meeting their obligations to the traveling public. In the lesser things, too, those that add to the pleasure and well-being of their patrons, such as chair and dining cars, the Carriers are just as responsive to their opportunities.

On the Chesapeake and Ohio a dining car service is maintained which compares favorably with that of the best hotels and restaurants. The cars themselves are of late and pleasing design, with harmonious coloring and decoration—fit settings for delicious meals. The food furnished is the best that money can buy—fresh meats and fowls, seasonal fruits and vegetables, dainty salads and desserts—all served promptly and in an attractive and tempting manner.

Expert supervision is kept over the dining car service and experienced buyers go into the markets to procure supplies that will appeal to the appetites of the most fastidious. Skilled cooks prepare savory dishes that are fine examples of the culinary art.

The Chesapeake and Ohio offers its dining car and buffet service with entire confidence that the high plane on which it is maintained will add greatly to the physical pleasure and contentment of those who travel along its lines.

New Health And Happiness Insurance!

There is nothing new about this insurance but women are just beginning to take advantage of it.

They have learned that a cheerful and willing servant is always at their demand to do their biggest and smallest job for only a few cents an hour IF their home is properly wired and equipped with electrical appliances.

They refuse to have their time valued at one or two cents an hour—and to have their health and happiness ruined by doing tiresome household drudgery.

Their time can be spent in making the home more cheerful, in training the children properly and in enjoying a little recreation themselves.
