CAPTAIN S. G. RENDER OF STATE ACTUARIAL BUREAU SPENDS DAYS INSTRUCTING FIRE DEPARTMENT

At the invitation of the city officials, Captain S. G. Render, Fire Department Instructor for the Kentucky Actuarial Bureau, is spending a few days with the Morehead fire department, giving them lectures and teaching them modern fire prevention and fire fighting methods.

This training service is furnished gratis by the Kentucky Actuarial Bureau and it is given solely in the interest of helping improve our limited fire protection facilities and in reducing fire hazards.

In the course of his visit he made several very practical suggestions with reference to fire safety in this community.

One of the most important is that the fire department members should make regular and frequent inspection of the principal mercantile, school and public buildings in the interest of making suggestions as to the removal of fire hazards, and to familiarize the firemen with existing building construction, location of stairways, water shafts, etc. which information would be invaluable to the department when called out to extinguish fires in such buildings.

Due to the fact that about 70 percent of the damage a fire is due to smoke and water, it was recommended that six 12 by 18 ft. water proof covers be added to the local equipment and used at fires in covering furniture, stocks of goods and the like, to save them from damage by water. Several small 1-2 inch hose lines with 1-2 inch shutoff nozzles were also suggested to more efficiently handle fires in dwelling house property.

In connection with Captain Render's inspection of the mercantile district, it was pointed out that our building and fire prevention ordinances should be materially improved and better enforcement and education promoted in the interest of removing such fire hazards as burn-in trash fires, trash and rubbish, cheap lamp cord and other amateur wiring, chimneys built on wood joists and brackets, open fire holes, greasy rags, defective stoves, smoke pipes placed closer than 18 inches from wood, no metal under stoves to protect floors from radiated heat, and a number of other things.

Many such hazards as the above

Dean Vaughan's Father Improved

W. J. Vaughan, father of Dean W. J. Vaughan of the Morehead State Teachers College, who was stricken with apoplexy and partial paralysis while at Somerset last Tuesday, is reported to be somewhat improved and hopes are now entertained that he will recover. Mr. Vaughan who is one of the most prominent Sunday School workers in the state, being Field Secretary of the Kentucky Sunday School Association, is well known in practically every community in Kentucky.

Mr. Vaughan was stricken while in active discharge of his duties at Somerset, Ky. He has been in failing health for several years but has refused to give up his work which he has carried on for the past 27 years without interruption.

Mr. Vaughan is particularly well known here in Rowan county, where his son is a prominent student where he himself has a host of personal friends made through his contacts during the annual Surday school conventions which he instituted here. His home is near Louisa, Kentucky.

Other children of Mr. Vaughan, in addition to Dean Vaughan are Nannie Lee Vaughan, a teacher at Ravenscroft, Edgar Vaughan, at Waverly, Vincent, a student at Georgetown College; and Georgia Frances, a student at Georgetown High School.

Good Picture On At Trimble

A distinctive comedy note is maintained throughout "Careless Lady" which opens Sunday at the Trimble Theatre in Mt. Sterling. This film elicits continuous gurgles of mirth from the spectators and proves one of the most entertaining productions of recent months.

The plot is simple and so deftly handled as to make it quite real at all times. The heroine, discouraged by the lack of appreciation shown her by her small town boy friends, decides to go abroad and acquire a fascinating French polish. She also takes the notion of posing as a married woman, after an experienced friend convinces her that wives have a much better time in Paris than maidens.

Unfortunately, the matrimonial alias she selects brings her an utterly unwanted husband, who is intrigued by her having calmly adopted his name and who battles valiantly and amusingly to protect that name from various adventures. Her frantic return to her home town is followed by the news of her marriage as well as by the arrival of her persistent spouse, who by this time wants her to take his name in a more conventional and legal fashion.

Joan Bennett is completely charming as the heroine. John Boles is an ideal husband for her and sings a very effective and tuneful number.

"Don" Battson Has Bad Week

Donald Battson son of Mr. and Mrs. Hartley Battson "enjoyed" a week of mishaps last week that he can fall in the lily pond at the state teachers college, and ended Friday when he had a pea extracted from his nose.

Don went to visit some little friends and stopped at the lily pond to give his dog a drink. Wink didn't want a drink so Don stepped in the water. He fell in over his head. But with rare presence of mind he felt around on the bottom and found a rock on which he perched, holding on to the rock ledge and called for help. Fortunately, Duval Payne and a Jackson boy were playing in the yard and heard Don call. They rescued him and took him home. He suffered nothing more than a thorough soaking.

The following day Don tried his hand at putting a pea up his nose, and was so successful that it was necessary to have the doctor remove it. The pea was lodged against the optic nerve and had caused considerable pain.

HOLCOMB FUNERAL HOME TO CONFINE

According to an announcement in this issue of the News, the Holcomb funeral, which until the time of his death was owned and managed by Everett Holcomb, will be continued under the same name, the management passing to E. A. Holcomb who has taken charge and is ready to serve you at all times. Mr. Holcomb is the nephew of Everett Holcomb and the son of W. E. Holcomb, undertaker.

Mr. and Mrs. Holcomb have moved to Morehead and have taken charge of the business which will continue to occupy the Riley residence on West Main Street.

Three Schools Receive High Rankings

Schools of Rowan county are being standardized rapidly, according to the rules laid down by the County Board of Education last fall and accepted by the State Education Department. Three schools in each division, the one roomed school, the two roomed school and the three roomed school, represented by Mrs. Muri Gregory, Little Perry and the Elliottville school have been selected as the best and most representative schools in their classes according to these standards. The Little Perry School, a two roomed school taught by Mabel Kelley and Imogene Hogg carried off the honors in that division, scoring 1000 points on the score card. The one roomed school taught by Mrs. Muri Gregory also scored 1000. The three roomed Elliottville school scored 1016 in that class and was selected as the model school of the county on that record.

Teachers in the Elliottville school are John Bailey, principal, Mrs. Mary Hogg who took the place left vacant by Mrs. Pearl Brown, and Mrs. Beulah Williams.

There was so little difference in the accomplishments of the three schools that it could scarcely be mentioned the Elliottville school winning the distinction of being selected as the model school of the county by a margin of a few points.

Hi School Play To Be Presented

While the date has not yet been set for the annual senior class play of the Morehead Public School, the work of preparing the play for presentation goes merrily on. "After You I'm Next" is the title, and it will be just as good as it sounds, according to those who are in it. The cast of characters, most of whom have already thrilled and delighted Morehead audiences are assurance that the play will reach a high standard of excellence and will appeal to the discriminating theatre goer public.

All of which may be so much applesauce, but, anyway—

"After you I'm Next." The plot of the play hinges on the attempts of an author to obtain publicity for a new play. To do this he calls in

Health Department To Be Carried On

At the meeting of the Rowan County Fiscal Court held last week by a unanimous vote of the magistrates, the County Health Department under the direction of Dr. T. A. E. Evans was continued for the coming year, and Dr. Evans was complimented for the manner in which he has handled the work and the things he has accomplished during the few months the department has been in existence.

The county pays $500.00 toward the upkeep of the department, the balance of the expense amounting to approximately $5,000 being carried by the state and national governments. Dr. Evans appeared before the court and gave them a brief outline of the work that had been done in the past few months and of the work that is planned for the next year.

Telephone Truck Stolen Recovered

Worse, apparently, than a small pox epidemic, which can be controlled by vaccination is the epidemic of automobile stealing which is developing in Morehead. This week reporters are busy checking up on thefts and attempted thefts of cars.

The most recent thefts and attempt at theft occurred Monday and Tuesday night, Monday night the telephone truck belonging to the Kentucky Telephone Company was stolen from its parking place at the Blaine corner on Fairbanks Avenue, and Tuesday night two would-be thieves attempted to steal the telephone truck belonging to the company only by the fact that he had locked the ignition and also heard the thieves.

The truck was parked at the corner of Fairbanks Avenue when stolen. Mr. Carr had parked the truck and gone to the garage. He was gone about fifteen minutes and on his return found the truck had disappeared. According to reports the truck stopped at Myrtle's Tea Room

Sheriff Makes Final Settlement

Sheriff Dan Parker and the Rowan Fiscal Court met Tuesday morning to complete the final settlement for taxes for the year. The meeting was a continuance of that adjourned from last week.

Mr. Parker expressed himself as being well pleased with the manner in which Rowan counties have met their taxes during this year, when other counties, according to reports have been experiencing extreme difficulty in making collections.

Taxes collected this year, according to Mr. Parker will run a scant $5,000 less than last year which proved to be a banner year for collections. The total amount of the tax collected this year for all purposes was $66,990.39 which was divided among the General Fund, the Road Fund, the County School Fund and the Consolidated School Fund.

Each fund is naturally proportionately short as compared with the last year fund, but by comparison with other counties the difference is slight.

In the final settlement effected Tuesday, Sheriff Parker turned over to county and school officials the following amounts to the total of $66,990.39:

General Fund	$19,568.44
Road Fund	$14,384.80
Co. School Fund	$29,088.46
Consol. School Fund	$3,648.69

The above sum does not include the state tax which will boost the total of taxes collected in this county by several thousand additional dollars.

Fred M. Vinson To Be On Air

Next Monday evening, April 25, at 7:30 Eastern Standard time, the Honorable Fred M. Vinson member of the Ways and Means Committee of the House, and representative for the Ninth Kentucky District, will go on the air over the Alexandria Station WJWS, located at Mt. Vernon Hills Virginia.

The subject of Mr. Vinson's address will be "A Balanced Budget with special reference to Tobacco." Mr. Vinson was a member of the Subcommittee of the House Ways and Means Committee which prepared the substitute tax bill after the defeat of the sales tax, and he will bring to your attention, in estimated details of this important task. This will give an opportunity for Mr. Vinson's friends in Kentucky, and other tobacco growing states, to hear about the new tax bill and the defeat in the house of the proposed increase upon tobacco.

As WJWS is one of the most powerful stations in the United States, Mr. Vinson's voice will be heard throughout the entire country.

Miss Lucille Caudill was shopping in Lexington Saturday.

REPUBLICANS MEET AT 1:00 SATURDAY

We are calling our readers particular attention to an error in the notice that appeared last week relative to the call for the Republican County Convention which will be held next Saturday at the court held next Saturday. The announcement stated that the meeting would be called at 10:00 o'clock a. m. Saturday. The hour should have been 1:00 o'clock p. m.

A large crowd is expected to attend, as delegates will be selected at the Saturday meeting to attend the district meeting scheduled to be held in Mt. Sterling next Tuesday.

Sunday, May 1 will be the last day in the lives of the children of Rowan county, especially to those children, rapidly increasing in number, who will be labeled on that day as Rowan County's contribution to Blue Ribbon Children. For on Sunday, May 1, these children will be awarded their Blue Ribbons as having reached the standard of perfection physically which entitles the youngsters to proudly exhibit their badge that says to the world, "I am physically perfect."

The County Health Department, under the direction and supervision of Dr. T. A. E. Evans and the County Health nurse, Miss Gladda Florence have been working continuously to build up a large number of children to the point where they are Blue Ribbon Children. If anyone thinks that is not work and not worthwhile work, at that they may be interested in knowing that at the time they started the campaign of correcting defects in the children of Rowan county several months ago, there were only three Blue Ribbon children in the entire county. When you go further and remember that there are upward of 2,500 children in the schools of Rowan county, it is easily seen that the percentage of perfect children is so small as to be almost nothing. Naturally some had only minor defects, which were easily remedied. Others took longer and required more attention.

But each examination proved the interest both the boys and girls were taking in being physically perfect children, physically. The result is that through the close cooperation of the children, parents and the County Health Department, the county had last week a total of 46 Blue Ribbons to the children who program May 1. In other words, the percentage of Blue Ribbon children has increased from three to 46, or 1,500 percent. It will be further increased in the next few weeks, according to Dr. Evans.

While plans are not yet completed, it is hoped to be able to hold

"Freaks" Feature At Cozy Theatre

A strange plot of mystery, love and retention in a circus' world, fantastic people and situations that would do credit to the bizarre mind of an Edgar Allan Poe; and an amazing romance among a people apart from the rest of humanity, figure in "Freaks" which makes the attraction at the Cozy Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday, April 27 and 28.

Its principal actors include the buxomest people ever assembled, freaks who have never been seen on the screen before, such as the man with half a torso, the Armless Wonder, the Living Skeleton, Siamese Twins and the fantastic Pig Head People. These odd monstrosities play people in support of Wallace Ford, Lella Hyman, Olga Bacchus, Roscoe Arles, Henry Victor and Harry Earle, the midget who scored in "The Unholy Three."

The picture is based on Tod Robbins' story, "Spurs" and centers on the crafty scheme of a leopards' partner to poison her husband, a mid get, whom she has married solely for his money. She is aided in the dastardly plan by her lover who is the Strong Man in the showbooth. The pair, however, overlook the strange bond that unites the freaks and when the plot is discovered, they become the victims of a horrific revenge. Underlying the story is the appalling romance of Wallace Ford and Lella Hyman as the respective clown and seal trainer of the troupe.

Under Frozen Skies

The room was silent. In the glance of the girl as she watched Jim's eyes blacken with anger, was amusement and approval.

With a swift movement the enraged Paradis jerked his hand back to his belt; but the squat Renack's fingers gripped his arm. The working features of LeBlond reflected his warring emotion. He had also flared his sense of gratitude and his loyalty to Paradis stole for mastery as he looked in to the cold eyes which had challenged his. Then he found his voice.

"You have insulted us here, in your own house," he burst out. "We want no hospitality from you." Then as if ashamed, went on: "Oh, I'm grateful—I know what I owe you; but we'll bid you good night. Come, Aureole!"

His answer from the girl was contemptuous laughter. "Oh, you men are so funny—so funny!" she cried. "So ridiculous! Because Mr. Stuart knocks down our Paul Paradis, and Paul fills your ears with a fool idea of word not being sent that ten miles against that wind and sea, you forget that I'd be down there with the fish tonight if it hadn't been for Omar and Mr. Stuart. Pah! You men are all fools!"

She was serious now, her scornful gaze overpowering her father's uneasy eyes. In frank admiration Stuart watched her, as she waited for him to speak, as she waited for her to thank you for what you are, for her," said LeBlond at length, turning defeated from the accusing eyes of his daughter. Come, Aureole!"

"So you think, because of the hurt feelings of your pretty Paul, I'll spend the night in front of a fire, with my back against a tree," she replied. "Well I will not!"

Over the bold features of LeBlond crept an expression of helplessness and impotence. It was patent to Stuart that this trader, whose energy and determination were bywords in the fur trade, was not the master of the girl who now faced him.

"I shall accept Mr. Stuart's hospitality," she continued. "As for you men here, you can stay and help old Sarah the cook, guard the sacred honor of your precious daughter—or you can leave her to Sarah and go sit by your fire. I stay here. Do you understand English, Monsieur LeBlond?"

In the end, LeBlond and his daughter passed the night in the quarters of Stuart, while the indignant Sarah tossed through sleepless hours outraged by the thought that her roof over her should shelter the enemy who had boasted that the wolves should soon howl in the deserted clearing of Sunset House.

CHAPTER II
Six years before, when the boat brigade of the North West Trading Company, in command of the partners, Louis LeBlond, had passed through Lake Expance on the trail to Mitawagangama, the Ojibwas, who were camped at Pelican portage, were greatly excited. Turning into the Hudson Bay company, had been greatly excited. Turning into the camp, LeBlond's head voyager, Blacchup, LeBlond's head voyager, Jules Renault had announced in the native tongue that a trading station was to be built on the great Lake of the Sand Beaches two hundred miles north. Never again need they take the long trail south to Lake Expance, but in the next long snows would find a warm welcome—New Years feast and the best of trade goods ready for exchange for their furs at the new post.

In three years LeBlond had made of the company. He no longer could be ignored. He must follow and fight his way for the trade. But on the word of hardheaded Andrew Christie of the lake Expance inspector of a territory larger than an eastern state, the man who could now take a share of the trade from the firmly entrenched LeBlond, would need a particularly strong head, boundless nerve and the tenacity of the heaver. Such a man, Christie told his superiors at Winnipeg, he believed was now at God's Lake in with a fine reputation for ability and judgment in dealing with the Indians.

In two months a mail canoe brought Jim Stuart orders from Winnipeg to report to Christie at Lake Expance. A month later, with Omar Boisvert and a gang of men Stuart had cleared the forest and was peeling the logs for Sunset house. The following three years had been for Stuart a well nigh hopeless struggle for a foothold in the trade for his rival possessed the handling the Indians, backed by an experience of thirty years.

As he lay on his back in the trade house after leaving Omar LeBlond and her father in possession of his traversed the hours since mid-afternoon. THE FUNCTIONS OF THE PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE

Discussing yesterday the misconception, apparently obtaining among large elements of the population, of the functions and duties of the Public Health Nurse, Miss Margaret L. East, Director of the Bureau of Public Health Nursing of the State Board of Health said: "This is not altogether surprising. Public health nursing as an integral part of organized public health work is a comparatively recent development. Only within the last few decades has the Public Health Nurse as such been known, even in the larger cities. In the smaller towns and counties, her appearance is still more recent; while in not a few rural districts she is as yet almost unknown. The natural result is that large classes of the people, particularly in the rural sections are still unable to visualize the nurse other than as one who tends the sick and helpless and whose sole functions and duties are to care for the bodily needs of her patient.

"In reality and in practice, the Public Health Nurse is both a teacher and a nurse. Her functions are primarily educational and preventive; her main objective is to promote community health by promoting family and personal health. Her duties, broadly speaking, may be classed under two main heads, educational and preventive, though the two are so inter-related that it is practically impossible to draw any definite dividing line between them. Educational, however, is placed first because it is education upon which prevention has to depend, in great degree, for the ultimate measure of its success.

"So far as the work of the public health nurse as a member of the staff of a Full-Time County health unit, any current phase of this is but incidental to her educational and preventive activities. As an integral part of whole-time local health administration, she is concerned with the health of the individual chiefly as the health of the individual affects the health of the community. She is not expected to do bedside nursing except as a means of demonstrating to those in the home how properly to care for the sick in the home or how to protect the health of the other members of the family against the ill members or member. The practice of nursing in the ordinary sense of the term is no more a proper province of the local full-time health unit than the practice of medicine in a proper province of the Director of such a unit.

"It is her educational capacity that the public health nurse functions most effectively as a constructive force in bettering community, family and personal health. In this aspect of her work, she performs the part of what has been aptly termed "Health Counselor" in the home and in the school for social organizations and for group associations of many and various kinds. Armed alike with scientific knowledge relating to health and with special training in how to give it intelligently and practical application, she is constantly passing this knowledge on to individuals, families, groups and the community as large through home visits, through class demonstrations, through lectures and other similar means. She seeks to uproot the habits, some of them deeply ingrained, that make for unhealthfulness and to cultivate in their stead habits that make for healthfulness; she explains and demonstrates the principles of personal and community hygiene and helps to apply them in personal and community living; she teaches the importance of early pre-natal care for expectant mothers and of systematic medical supervision for babies and growing children; she urges periodic and thorough medical examinations by competent members of the medical profession as the one means of detecting disease in its incipency and then the prompt correction of all defects discovered; she stresses the danger of self medication and the importance of consulting a physician upon the first sign of illness. In short she is constantly striving to develop health consciousness in the individual and in the community and so to build up an ideal in both.

"The preventive activities of the Public Health Nurse have to do not only with the prevention and control of communicable diseases, though the part she has to play in regard thereto constitutes one of the most important of the many duties devolving upon her. These include the stimulation of acceptance of protective measures against diphtheria, diphteria, smallpox, scarlet fever, typhoid fever and other communicable diseases; assistance in actual immunization against these diseases; assistance in holding child health conferences; the finding of undiagnosed cases of tuberculosis; assistance in supervising the health of expectant mothers; assistance in supervising the health of babies, preschool children and children in the schools; assistance in finding the physical defects of children diagnosed and corrected; assistance in improving sanitary conditions of homes and schools. These and many other preventive activities are a part of the daily routine.

"For the proper discharge of these manifold and varied duties a special sized preparatory training is certainly necessary to point out, as needed. While graduation in the courses ordinarily required for the registered nurse constitutes an essential ground work, this in itself is by no means sufficient. Public health nursing, in its relation to whole-time local health administration, is a specialty whose practice bears little similarity to the care of individual patients. It approaches diseases and environmental conditions from entirely different angles and so goes far outside and beyond the things taught the ordinarily trained graduate. In Kentucky the Public Health Nurse on the staff of a whole-time local health unit must be a graduate nurse, registered in this state, and must have had practical experience in Public Health Nursing or special training. "There are 110 public health nurses attached to the 80 fulltime county health units in Kentucky. The headquarters staff of the State Board of Health consists of a Director of the Bureau of Public Health Nursing and one Field Supervisor, four public health field nurses attached to the Bureau of public health field nurse with the Bureau of Venereal Diseases and one public health field nurse with the Bureau of Thachoma.

 are now lying dormant in our mercantile district, says Captain Render and are a menace to life and property and are principally the cause of fire insurance rates being higher in many instances than they would be if a little care were exercised and the danger removed.
 It was also reported that numerous fire extinguishers that have been placed in buildings for first aid fire protection are in need of repairs and recharging.
 For many of these various types of extinguishers directions on their recommended recharging once each year and that they be hung in a conspicuous place for quick use in case of an emergency.
 In any small community, the cost of maintaining a powerful fire department at the expense of the taxpayer is prohibitive, due to the limited amount of taxable wealth, therefore, from necessity, it is highly important, says Captain Render, that our efforts be directed toward common sense fire prevention methods, in the proper care of our property which in many instances hold the lives of our loved ones, our business, our jobs and those of our fellow citizens.
 The price of safety, he adds, is to be on the alert for fire hazards and to remove them, as an ounce of fire prevention is worth a ton of water.

 making a total of $175,262 income as compared with $281,000 appropriation made in the budget but which was cut off by Governor Laffoon's veto. This represents a decrease of approximately 37 percent, officials are considering a number of plans tending to meet the reduction in income for the next two years. Among them is the certainty of a letting in building although at least two new buildings are needed. The plans, however are as yet not definite enough to take form. Some of the things being considered are a reduction in teachers salaries, and the elimination of certain departments.
 The matter of final decision as to the method pursued naturally rests with the Board of Regents, who are expected to meet in the near future for action.

CARS STOLEN

 east of Morehead for gas. Noticing the telephone sign on the car, the owner of the room asked where the gas tank was and the thieves, apparently not knowing said they had enough gas anyway and rushed away. A call from Gates notified local authorities that the truck had past that place. Officers were notified at Olive Hill and Grayson. The thief and car were picked up on the other side of Grayson. On Tuesday morning local officers returned the thief to Morehead where he is being held awaiting examining trial. When searched officers found he carried both a revolver and a knife.
 Mr. Perry's car although no stolen enjoyed a narrow escape. Only the fact that the ignition had been locked and the key removed saved it. Mr. Perry heard suspicious noises in the rear of the garage and went to investigate. He found two men in the car attempting to start it. On hearing Mr. Perry yell at them they jumped from the car and ran. Later the same two men were seen looking in cars down both sides of the street apparently hoping to find one in which the key had been left.
 A rather amusing incident followed in the wake of the thefts. W. K. McCullough saw some man drive off in Harry Goldberg's car and knew from the way he handled it that it was not Harry. He rushed in and told Goldberg that someone had stolen his car. Harry naturally became all hot and bothered and negotiating with Caskeys, his car dashed down to Caskey's to get a taxi to give chase. While he was driven back up the street and calmly parked, and who should get out but Chief of Police John Adams. Evidently, the tale came in the fact that the Chief had borrowed Fazio Holbrook's car which is a twin sister to the Goldberg equipage.
