Morehead, Ky.---"I suddenly realized that there was a job to be done if I wanted more out of life than merely existing, and I believe I'm starting that job now by getting an education," said blonde Patricia Wolf, a pretty ¹⁷⁻~~seventeen~~-year-old freshman at Morehead State College.

Patricia is one of over 200 freshmen from Kentucky and neighboring states who ~~are~~ will complete their first college experience on August 7. ~~They are~~ while participating in a unique special summer program for freshmen^{sen} at Morehead State College.

The students, ~~most~~ ^{have} who just graduated from high school this spring, are participating in a program designed for students who graduated in the lower one-half of their senior classes.

A recent ruling by the Morehead Board of Regents requires all out-of-state students who are not in the upper one-half of their graduating classes to attend the special program and make not less than a "C" on six hours of academic work before being admitted in the fall. Kentucky residents are also eligible to participate.

A native of McKeesport, Penn., Miss Wolf said she felt the program was "wonderful."

"I am happy I decided to come this summer," she said. "The assistance the professors and other students have given me has helped me gain confidence in my ability to do college work and gain a better understanding of college life."

Echoing her sentiments, three of her classmates further praised the program and the experiences they have had this summer.

Joseph Hilliard, Duke Center, Penn., added that one of the ~~the~~ greatest advantages of the program was that it helped relieve a great deal of the apprehension he ~~had~~ had about entering college.

"That's right," said Wade Yehowine, Jr., a native of Cincinnati, Ohio. "This session has helped all of us gain ~~the~~ confidence. We are all in the same situation now, and if we ~~came~~ ^{had first come} in the fall, I think we would all feel a little inferior."

"If I had known what it was going to be like, I would have come to Morehead this summer whether I had to or not. I think we all would have," he added.

Patricia added that she felt the attitude of the teachers was amazing. "They've been so friendly and helpful, I just ~~can't~~ believe it," she said.

"We all thought it was going to be harder than it has," said Roy Radcliffe, Long Island, New York. "It isn't really as bad as we thought it would be, especially with the help we have had."

"Of course, you have to do the actual work yourself," said Hilliard. "If all you want is to have a good time, you will, but you won't get anything out of the classes and won't last long. That's not what we're here for."

Hilliard summed up the sentiments of the group when he said, "We all realize that we are here under the condition that we must study, and we are. I just hope I feel the same way four years from now that I do at this moment - happy and confident."

All freshmen participating in the program are enrolled in English 101 and special remedial English classes are also available. A second course was selected by the student, with the consent of the Dean of the College and an adviser.

The participants were given a college qualifying test, English placement test and ~~xxx~~ reading test and each student was assigned an adviser.

"These students are being exposed to college life for the first time," commented Roger L. Wilson, Dean of Students at Morehead, "and we are attempting to provide an atmosphere conducive to learning so they may do their very best in an effort to meet the requirements for enrolling in the fall."

Students are enrolled from 15 states with Ohio providing the largest number.

FOR RELEASE FRIDAY, AUGUST 4

Morehead, Ky., Aug. 4--Mrs. Richard Applegate and Mrs. Peter McNeill were among 241 summer graduates of Morehead State College who rather uneventfully received degrees at commencement exercises last night.

But for these two residents of Flemingsburg, last night was far from uneventful as the two became one of the few mother--daughter combinations to graduate from Morehead at the same time.

The 58-year-old Mrs. Applegate received the AB degree in elementary education while her 34-year-old daughter was awarded the AB degree in public school music.

Mrs. Applegate, who has raised a family of five, graduated from high school in 1924 and taught in Fleming County for three years. She then took on the task of raising a ~~large~~ family, farming and at one time was a rural mail carrier.

Then eight years ago she resumed her teaching career and enrolled as a freshman at Morehead State College. By attending night and Saturday classes and enrolling in each summer term, she has accumulated the necessary requirements for graduation while teaching the fifth and sixth grades at Mt. Carmel school in Fleming County.

"It has been a long, hard pull," she said, "but I would not trade my experiences for anything. I have enjoyed it thoroughly."

She added, "My training has been so inspirational that I plan to do graduate work in special education to enable me to work with retarded children."

FOR RELEASE FRIDAY, AUGUST 4

Morehead, Ky., August 4--Mrs. Richard Applegate and Mrs. Peter McNeill were among 241 summer graduates of Morehead State College who rather uneventfully received degrees at commencement exercises last night.

But for these two residents of Flemingsburg, last night was far from uneventful as the two became one of the few mother--daughter combinations to graduate from Morehead at the same time.

The 58-year-old Mrs. Applegate received the AB degree in elementary education while her 34-year-old daughter was awarded the AB degree in public school music.

Mrs. Applegate, who has raised a family of five, graduated from high school in 1924 and taught in Fleming County for three years. She then took on the task of raising a family, farming and at one time was a rural mail carrier.

Then eight years ago she resumed her teaching career and enrolled as a freshman at Morehead State College. By attending night and Saturday classes and enrolling in each summer term, she has accumulated the necessary requirements for graduation while teaching the fifth and sixth grades at Mt. Carmel school in Fleming County.

"It has been a long, hard pull," she said, "but I would not trade my experiences for anything. I have enjoyed it thoroughly."

She added, "My training has been so inspirational that I plan to do graduate work in special education to enable me to work with retarded children."

Mrs. McNeill, her husband, and four children live on a farm in Fleming County and she too hopes to do graduate work in the days ahead.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Morehead, Ky., Aug. 6--Willard M. Horsley, who graduated from Morehead State College Thursday evening, has proved that it's never too late to earn your first college degree.

At 67, Horsley is one of the oldest persons to ever receive a degree at Morehead but he is far from the oldest in looking toward the future.

"I've shown some of the youngsters of 50 or so what they can do if they will just try," said the energetic father of nine who lives in Garrison in Lewis County.

Horsley taught in Lewis and Greenup counties between the ages of 20 and 30 and then went into farming, steel work and lumbering. At the age of 50, he went back into teaching.

In 1956, he enrolled at Morehead State College and has attended summer schools and evening classes since that time after a limited amount of formal training at the Grayson Normal School in 1918.

"You know," he said, "I came to Morehead for a regional meeting back in 1956 and enjoyed it so that I decided to enroll here. And I've enjoyed every minute of it although I'm certainly happy to have my diploma."

Horsley, who was born in 1897, was awarded the AB degree in elementary education along with 241 others.

Now he plans to return to the McKell Elementary School in Greenup County where he has taught for the past few years and will teach for three more years before the mandatory retirement age of 70.

When asked why he worked so hard to earn his degree just three years before retirement, Horsely said, "It's a matter of pride as well as wanting to become better prepared to teach the youngsters I will come into contact with during the next three years. "

"I sincerely feel that what little contribution I am making to the youngsters in our school will be greater as a result of my academic training, " he added.

After retirement, his plans are indefinite but the Morehead State College professors who have worked with him wouldn't be too surprised if he returned to work on his MA degree. Because Willard M. Horsley isn't an ordinary man.

Speaking before a crowd of over 3,000, he said, "As our country stands at the crossroads of destiny, it would seem absurd for the most highly educated people among the citizenry to abstain from the making of decisions.

"If we do abstain, there are plenty of others who are willing and happy to make our decisions for us," added the Breathitt County High School teacher. "Remember, it wasn't the educators who made the important decisions in Russia, China and Cuba."

Speaking in the Morehead Fieldhouse, he said that the teachers of America hold the destiny of the country in their hands.

"More than ever before we must teach children the true meaning of the beautiful words we write in textbooks and carve on marble," he said. "And we must teach them not to parrot these words back to us but to live by them."

Morehead, Ky., Aug. 14--Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State College, will appear before the Committee on Resolutions of the 1964 Democratic National Convention.

Representing the National Education Association, Dr. Doran will discuss the NEA's views regarding the educational needs in the United States at a 2:30 meeting in Washington on Tuesday, August 18.

Dr. Doran, who is a member of the 11-man NEA Legislative Commission, will tell the committee on resolutions that the immediate priority legislative objective in the field of education should be general Federal support for public elementary and secondary education.

Dr. Doran is also expected to discuss the NEA's proposal that a broader federal tax base be secured to meet the urgent needs of American public elementary and secondary education.

Tuesday's appearance before the Committee on Resolutions will be Dr. Doran's second appearance in recent months as the representative of NEA. In April, he appeared before the subcommittee of the committee on education and labor in the House of Representatives.

The Kentucky educator will be speaking for the more than 903,000 members of the NEA throughout the United States.

FOR RELEASE AT 2:30 p.m., TUESDAY, AUGUST 18

PLEASE NOTE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 18--"The most important area of endeavor in any 'war on Poverty' should be a 'war on ignorance' through education," Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State College, said here today.

Addressing the Committee on Resolutions of the 1964 Democratic National Convention, Dr. Doran said, "The National Education Association believes that the immediate priority legislative objective in the field of education should be general Federal support for public elementary and secondary education."

Dr. Doran, who is a member of the 11-man NEA legislative commission, appeared today before the Committee on Resolutions as the official representative of NEA with its more than 903,000 members.

The Kentucky educator said, "Because the tax resources of our States and localities are already strained to the limit and because this Nation is now faced with critical shortages of qualified teachers and educational facilities, the NEA urges that every effort be made to secure legislation utilizing the broader federal tax base to meet the urgent needs of American public elementary and secondary education."

Dr. Doran commended recent Congresses for several landmark achievements in education, including the National Defense Education Act, aid for academic facilities in higher education, vocational education, manpower development and training, educational television, the education provisions of the recently passed anti-poverty program and other categorical aids.

Doran address 2222222

The additional support for public elementary and secondary education should "take the form of direct Federal grants to the States for the purposes they deem most pressing--for school construction, teachers' salaries, for a combination of these, or for other operational purposes," he said.

He added that such Federal support should assure that the control of the program of education remains with the States and localities and that the States and localities continue to accelerate their financial support efforts.

Dr. Doran, who in April represented NEA before a subcommittee of the House Committee on Education, added, "In the area of educational and economic opportunity, the NEA opposes tax credits, deductions or other tax allowances for certain college expenses."

"Tax allowances for college expenses have great deficiencies as either a tax measure or an education measure," he said. "The NEA's principal objection to tax allowances is that a deduction or credit for college expenses, regardless of its form will not give relief where it is most needed and therefore will not expand educational opportunity."

Dr. Doran pointed out that nontaxable persons and taxpayers with insufficient tax liability to take full advantage of the tax allowance would obtain little or no benefit and large families with low income would receive little or no benefit.

"Families of fairly substantial means, who would send their children to college in any event, would get the most relief," he said.

He added that the NEA feels the best approach to aiding low-income families is through direct scholarships and loans to the most needy and promising students--not through tax allowances.

The educational FM station will have the power of ten watts and its broadcasting coverage will include only the campus and immediate area.

Don Holloway, assistant professor of speech and director of the station, said the station will have five basic program divisions: news, education, music, sports and special events which will include convocation speeches, guest lectures, concert performances and guest interviews.

"We are now conferring with the Federal Communications Commission for call letters, frequency allocation and a broadcasting license," said Holloway, "and we hope to go on the air in March or April."

The transmitter will be located on the fourth floor of the Combs Classroom Building with the single ring antenna located on the roof of the building.

The station will be equipped with a Gates presidential model console, a dual channel console which will permit station personnel to control one program on the air and a second in rehearsal at the same time, two 16-inch turntables, a cartridge tape recorder and two rack-mount tape recorders.

Morehead, Ky., Dec. 2--Lucien Rice, a 1956 graduate of Morehead State College has been selected from among 3,800 men enrolled as career Scouters as the one man who best typifies the characteristics of a professional Scouter.

Rice, a district Scout executive in Cincinnati, will be honored on the national level for his Scouting work and a feature story will appear in February's edition of Boy's Life, the official Boy Scout monthly magazine.

Lucien's parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rice of Morehead. His father has served as Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds at Morehead State College since 1932 and his mother has been a member of the College home economics staff for 25 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Rice have been active in Scouting for 20 years and they interested Lucien at the age of nine to begin Scouting and advance through to the rank of Eagle with Silver Palm.

"My courses and extra-curricular activities at Morehead State College have been invaluable in my Scouting career," Lucien said, "because they helped me learn to live and work with people. I like people and Scouting is people."

Lucien began his professional career in Scouting in 1959 as a member of the professional staff at Lexington. He attended the 45-day National Scouting Training School in Mendham, New Jersey, and after a fruitful four years with the Kentucky Blue Grass Council he accepted his present position at Cincinnati.

Morehead, Ky. --A fossilized Stigmarian root system over 235 million years old was recently discovered and assembled for display at Morehead State College.

First located by James R. Chaplin, assistant professor of geology, and Allen Lake, assistant professor of biology, on a field trip in Elliott County, the root system weighs over one ton.

It is now displayed on the first floor of Lappin Science Hall at Morehead State College.

"This particular root system," said Chaplin, "is assigned to the subterranean organs of the giant scale trees and closely allied plants that inhabited the coal forests of Eastern Kentucky during the geological period of time called the Pennsylvania Period, approximately 235 million years ago."

Chaplin said that Eastern Kentucky, during the time the root system was alive, was a low lying region and subject to periodic floodings by marine seas and, probably as a result of land subsidence, several feet of mud accumulated, resulting in the death of the huge trees of the region.

"When this happened," he said, "the remaining stumps and 'root' systems eventually decayed but not until the surrounding matrix had been partially consolidated and the pith cavities were then partially filled with mud. This resulted in partial casts of the original stems and roots."

"After later accumulation of sediment, the region was then uplifted, resulting in a lowering of the sea level and the formation of the current land surface. Finally, through the curiosity of man, the remnants of the long-buried forests were revealed," said Chaplin.

The root system on display at Morehead took over a year and a half to assemble and is one of few on display in the nation. Numerous students aided in the assembly of the system. "We stongly believe that further excavation and field work will reveal an entire Pennsylvanian fossil forest in this region, perhaps comparable to the only one in existence today, which is located in Victoria Park, Glasgow, Scotland, " said Chaplin.

Chaplin, who earned the BS degree from Cornell College and the MS from the University of Houston, has been at Morehead State College since 1961. Lake, who holds degrees from Edinboro State Teachers College and the University of Buffalo, has been at Morehead State College since 1957.

Morehead, Ky., Dec. 9 -- Beginning college students throughout the nation are having difficulty mastering the English language but those at Morehead State College find added incentive to learn from a unique member of the freshman English faculty.

Dr. M. K. Thomas, a 32-year-old native of Kerala State, India, is an authority on the English language and teaches the subject as an assistant professor.

His native tongue is Malayalan but he has devoted the major part of his academic life studying and teaching English. He studied English in his homeland from grades 5-11 and throughout high school his instructors taught in English.

"I found the language very difficult," Dr. Thomas said, "and this difficulty challenged me to make English my speciality. I must admit that I sometimes have difficulty with Malayalan. Although I do make an effort to read considerably in my native language, I have found that I 'think' in English."

Dr. Thomas, who is seriously considering working toward his Ph.D in English, holds a number of earned degrees. His first was the bachelor of arts from St. Berchman's College in India where he majored in social science and English.

After teaching English in an Indian high school, he earned the graduate of theology diploma and the bachelor of divinity degree from Indian institutions. Dr. Thomas spent the period from 1956-59 teaching English to earn money to come to the United States.

He earned the master of theology from Princeton in 1960 and came to Morehead State College the following year to work on the master of arts degree in education which he completed in 1961.

At Morehead, Dr. Thomas served as a graduate assistant in the English department. "It was because of the friendliness of my faculty acquaintances and the student body that I returned to Morehead," he recalled.

Between the period of time as a student and member of the faculty at Morehead, Dr. Thomas attended the University of Tulsa, Oklahoma, where he received the master of arts in English and the doctorate in education.

Throughout his academic training, Dr. Thomas has distinguished himself as a scholar. He compiled a 3.8 overall average out of a possible 4.0 on the doctorate level.

After a period of teaching and additional graduate work in the United States, Dr. Thomas plans to return to India to teach in a church-related college and establish a home-school for needy Indian children.

"I have learned a great deal from the American people and I think I can teach my people much in addition to the English language," he said. "Americans work hard and want to get things done -- they want to get things moving."

Morehead, Ky. ---A new maintenance and operations building is currently under construction at Morehead State College and should be ready for occupancy by June.

W. H. Rice, Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds at Morehead, said the new service building will more than quintuple the existing space allotted the current maintenance building.

"The new structure will encompass over 16,000 square feet, while our current facilities are only 3,000 square feet in area," he said.

Completion of the new service building will allow the maintenance department of the college to be entirely centralized. An arrangement which, according to Rice, will allow the department to handle and distribute all incoming materials to the college, with the exception of cafeteria and bookstore supplies.

The building, which will be a rigid frame steel structure, encased in brick, will cost over $200,000 to build. It will replace the old maintenance building built in 1949.

Designed similar to the maintenance building at William's College in Williamstown, Mass., the new structure will include a storeroom area, office area, carpenter shop, automotive shop, loading dock area, electrical and mechanical shop, ground shop and an incoming materials area.

The building is on the former location of the baseball field. The baseball field has been moved to the $600,000 Breathitt Sports Center.
