W. P. WITHERS.

walls surrendered. The family of his grandfather, who was a Miss Ferri Temple, were the descendants of Sir William Temple, a distinguished English politician, after whom General Wither's was named. General Wither's was stationed at Baton College, Harrold, Kentucky, and was the highest honor in his class. He was selected for the cadet school, and in 1861, at the age of twenty, was admitted to the United States Military Academy at West Point. He was a brilliant student, and soon attained a position in the class. In his junior year, he was elected to the presidency of the class, and was a member of the basketball team.

The sketch of General Wither's life is a brief one, but it is a true one. He was a man of simple tastes, and of unpretentious manners. He was a soldier of the old school, and a man of honor. He was beloved by all who knew him, and was respected by all who met him. He was a man of the people, and was always ready to help those in need. He was a true friend, and was always ready to give a helping hand. He was a man of the people, and was always ready to help those in need. He was a true friend, and was always ready to give a helping hand.
