Nearly 200 Historical Markers Placed On Kentucky Highways

Markers noting points of interest from Kentucky's historical past have been placed along the State's highways and byways at the rate of 30 a month during the past year and a half.

The Kentucky Historical Society, located in the Old State House at Frankfort, noted in its 1962-63 fiscal report that by the end of this year 181 markers will have been erected, since June, 1962. The number more than doubles those already standing.

Col. George M. Chinn, director of the Society, added that inscriptions for 80 other markers have been prepared and 136 suggestions from county chairmen have been received for additional markers.

A new Kentucky Historical Highway Marker Program was started in March 1962, Chinn said. There were then 172 markers in the state. A 15-member organization, headed by W. A. Wentworth, Frankfort, chairman, was developed to carry out the program at that time. The organization, which includes 115 county chairmen who recommend sites, has seen to the placement of the markers on the highways.

The average cost of markers placed or ordered since June 1962 is about $25, Wentworth said. Many of the new markers are cast and erected by the State Department of Highways, laboratory at the University of Kentucky. The Highway Department has given "substantial assistance" in putting up all the markers, Wentworth said.

At least one historical marker is now located in all but four of the state's 120 counties.

"Every county has sites which are deserving of recognition," Wentworth said, "and it has been our desire to make a start in all counties."

Markers were dispersed more widely under the new program in order to have them in as many counties as possible, he pointed out. Markers have been added in 30 counties which had none prior to 1962.

The greatest number of new markers placed in any one county is seven, erected in Jefferson, bringing the total there to 19. Four new markers were located in Franklin County and three were placed in 14 other counties.

Fayette County has the largest number of markers—both old and new—with a total of 23. Only one was added under the new program.

The subjects commemorated by markers range from the Air Force Furnace, on U.S. 431 near Drakeboro in Mulesburg County to the Zachary Taylor Birthplace, 42 in Louisville.

Many of the markers reflect Kentucky's place in the Revolutionary War. War of 1812 and the Civil War, with battles, skirmishes, camps and retreats pointed out.

Nearly 20 markers stand on the spot where county courthouses have burned.

Others are dedicated to famous men who figured in Kentucky's past. The actions of John Edin Morgan, the daring Civil War General, merit at least 18 markers, while others commemorate homes or deeds of such men as Abraham Lincoln, Daniel Boone, George Rogers Clark, Henry Clay, Jefferson Davis and (a more recent prominent figure) Alan W. Barclay.

Beef Stew Poured In Instant Coffee Is Vile Tasting Stuff

By Clemmie Hollen

George Lee Deaton's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Fotts, Chelyarville, Ohio were visiting with him a few days. Mrs. Fotts fetched on a few jars of beef stew for all to eat.

George Lee keeps his cream for his coffee in a certain place in his kitchen cabinet. Mrs. Fotts moved the milk. She placed a jar of beef stew in the milk's place.

George Lee told us, "That there beef stew poured in a cup of instant coffee is the worst tasting stuff ever was."

Jim Cundiff plans to use the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Everybody around him soilbanked their corn ground. No corn around but his own. Crows, warblers, and bugs have practically destroyed Jim's corn crop. No other corn crops for these crows, warblers, and bugs to roaste among. The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture should be held responsible. It is their fault.

Right near Jim's home there ain't no corn a growing a tall hardly. Jim killed two crows in the big road. He told us these crows were so pure they could scarcely get around. He ain't never seen nothing to beat it. A few more years of Soil Banking and they ain't going to be no birds, warblers, nor humans a existing around and about here.

We think Jim has a good case against them governments and we hose he wins a hunnert or more dollars.

Jim Creech said, "You'd better quit with that there corn and run up to the store. I seed a strange man go by wearing the biggest colored glasses ever was and the run not even skinting. Guess he was one of them Relief fellers fetching us in some good things." I quit work right at once and headed for the Williba store. I was nearly here it was Junior Roosevelt a coming into Eastern Kentucky with a load of Oil Taint Oil and Mission Hat clothes and things like that for us people. Thought he might aim to leave us supplies at the store.

But it weren't Junior. It was Joe Creason who writes pieces for the Courier-Journal. Joe didn't fetch us pore nothing. Joe were a right jolly kind of a feller and he weren't as ugly as we expected him to be and not very old either. He's got a long road ahead of him before he can draw Social Maturity. Joe laughs real good and he was very agreeable on the acts of Congress an other things we discussed. We hardly ever get to talk with a agreeable person.

Mr. Creason drove that little car of a looking thing right up that big Parkway road what Breathin' or somebody built over yanner across from Devil's Creek someplace. He told us it were a real nice big road and would no doubt enrich us pore within the next future. Still us pore don't have much faith in that big Parkway road. We can't get over there to it and they ain't no need of a us going over there to it noway. We ain't a going no place. We ar told that that big road don't lead to no Relief Houses or things like that. It's for rich people to ride on what ain't a going no place.

Anyway Joe told us he would try to pick up some stuff out there in Louisiana to send in to us. Maybe we can make it until Junior and Bert get organized.

THE BEST KIND Many a man tries to make time with a girl who has no glass figure.

Home For Educational TV

PROPOSED HEADQUARTERS for the Kentucky Authority for Educational Television is shown in this architect's sketch. It is planned for University of Kentucky-owned property at 156-166 Virginia Avenue, near the main campus in Lexington. Construction may start early next year. The one-story structure will house the Authority's main administrative offices and central production facilities. Preliminary plans have been approved by the Kentucky Department of Finance. Architects are Louis and Henry Louisville. Until the Lexington facility is completed, programs will be beamed from Jefferson County's educational station near Louisville.

Oak Wilt Decline Noted By Forestry Division Report

The number of Kentucky oak trees infested with oak wilt disease has dropped by more than half in the past year, State Conservation Commissioner J. O. Matlick has announced.

A report prepared by his department's Forestry Division showed only 275 new willing trees found in the state during 1963, as compared with 568 in 1962. All were cut down and chemically treated to kill disease-carrying agents.

The number has been declining with regularity since 1960 when a peak total of close to 800 were found, Matlick said. Oak wilt attacks and kills all types of oaks, Kentucky's largest-volume commercial timber. There is no cure for it, other than cutting down the infected tree and treating the stump and the felled tree so the disease will not spread further.

WITHOUT FINESSE The talkative person usually lacks two times of thinking twice before speaking.

Dr. Hollie Sharp Is Named As Secretary Of S.B.E.A.

Dr. Hollie Sharp, associate professor of commerce, was elected secretary of the Southern Business Education Association at a meeting of the two-state regional business education association in Little Rock, Arkansas, recently.

The theme of the convention was "Current Developments in Business Education." Such issues as the new Vocational Education Act of 1963 and its effect on business education; the evolving business education curriculum in the secondary schools; Russian education and its forces; and trends in electronic data processing instruction were discussed.

While attending the meeting, Dr. Sharp visited with Bill Day, who received his M. A. in education from Morehead State College in June 1963. Day, who served as graduate assistant to the Division of Applied Arts last year, is presently teaching at Brevard Junior College in Cocoa, Florida, as instructor of accounting and business administration.

He was elected as vice-chairman of the bookkeeping and accounting section of the association. This association represents the business teachers who are members of the National Business Education Association, who are located in twelve Southeastern states.

Sharp discussed with Bill Day, who received his M. A. in education from Morehead State College in June 1963. Day, who served as graduate assistant to the Division of Applied Arts last year, is presently teaching at Brevard Junior College in Cocoa, Florida, as instructor of accounting and business administration.

A HOPE FOR 1964

So we think that time may be better expressed by a closed circle that has no beginning and no ending. And the thought comes that New Year's Day is only an arbitrary point of division of time fixed by agreement of those who make and follow a calendar. To be realized is that there is no break in time, that time has always been and will be forever. The change is in you and me. We are living now and there will never dawn a day in the future when we shall not be living somewhere, in weal or woe, through all time. Between the point at which we entered time and this present how many changes have come to us, they will come again and again and we shall be wearing out, but time will sweep on in its relentless way. And the day will come when the places that know us now will know us no more. But we shall be living still. Where we shall be living will depend upon how we are living now.

THE Golden Years

A COUPLE RETIRED EARLY - AND MAKE LIFE SING

"I AM SORRY, but if there are any mistakes in this story I have told you, you will have to correct them yourself. I am retired and don't have the time."

And with that, a couple who retired early and found life good turned back to their dream home near Astoria, Wash. to go elk hunting.

The story the wife told me comes name is Mrs. Opal Lee Webb - comes at a fitting time. Because with the approach of every New Year there are couples by the thousands who wish and wonder and try to decide whether THIS will be the year when finally they give up the job and go out to enjoy the living before it is too late.

The Webbs had been in the Armed Services. For years they had been stationed over half the world. Came the time when they could retire, at a financial loss, to be sure, and they took it.

"This was in April, 1962," Mrs. Webb said. "Our problem was to determine where we would settle down. We toured the country twice, just looking it took a lot of time and money. But we had to be sure."

"What we wanted was a comfortable place in the country, though my husband drew nothing of farm life. We wanted a place to hunt and fish and rear our 12-year-old daughter. (Their only other child, a daughter, is married.)"

The Webbs found their spot, 17 miles east of Astoria, a couple of miles from the Columbia River

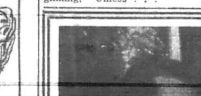

Rev. ROBERT H. HARPER NEW YEAR

FROM THE BEGINNING men have had their symbols to express their experiences or stand for the things about them. Their symbols have also stood for their dreams and aspirations. The hour glass, which was used as a measure of time may be a very poor symbol of all time. What is one hour compared to all the hours to be? And what is one year compared to all eternity?

JUST A THOUGHT: Sometimes, after we have gone a bit out of the way to help others, we make the discovery that we have in reality helped ourselves just as much.

So we think that time may be better expressed by a closed circle that has no beginning and no ending. And the thought comes that New Year's Day is only an arbitrary point of division of time fixed by agreement of those who make and follow a calendar. To be realized is that there is no break in time, that time has always been and will be forever. The change is in you and me. We are living now and there will never dawn a day in the future when we shall not be living somewhere, in weal or woe, through all time. And the day will come when the places that know us now will know us no more. But we shall be living still. Where we shall be living will depend upon how we are living now.

HOW ABOUT THESE? Postal authorities say we should report any threatening letters we receive. It is wondered if this applies to letters from creditors beginning, "Unless..."

for the FAMILY MANAGER

ITEM: Hats, shoes, undergarments—even furniture upholstery—may soon be made of a synthetic piece of cotton fabric that has been permanently molded into shape. The new process which makes this possible comes from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Its advantages are several. For example, molding the fibers of women's fabric shoes would eliminate tiny folds. Moldable fabrics would cut costs in producing upholstered sofas and chairs.

ITEM: If you plan to store what is left of a turkey, remove any stuffing remaining in the body and neck cavities of the roast turkey. Then store the stuffing and the turkey meat separately in the freezer.

ITEM: An all-purpose or a heavy-duty synthetic detergent means it has a builder added to it. The builder improves cleaning and helps to soften water. The detergent may be liquid or granular, high or low sudsing, and is designed for the family laundry.

ITEM: Little or no odor is one sign of good-quality frozen fish. Fish should be sold frozen and there should be no brownish tint or other discoloration. If buying fillets or steaks, choose those wrapped in a moisture-vapor-proof material.

Claig Sprout . . . And His Friend, TIMOTHY TUGMUTTON

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

I been busy killing hogs and trying to gather up some figures for my 1963 income tax report and ain't had time to make my annual predictions on the New Year. There's safe to put things for 1964 in a nutshell, and perfect taxes will edge up a bit, the cost of living climb a little, and our foreign aid friends will report prompt and often at the give-away table.

Us small farmers and ranchers has to get our income tax report in by February 15, two months ahead of everybody else and I always start on mine the day after Christmas.

Hog killing is easy to handle, but on account of the expert system I use for keeping books, my tax reporting is a complicated operation.

As perfection agin fire and theft, I keep my records scattered around pritty good. Ferlizzer expenses I wrote down on the barn door, fer instant, and I always put a few expense items on the silo and the hen house wall. My old lady keeps the cash-received fingers in her Sunday pocketbook. By the time I git 'em all rounded up and ready for scientific tabulation, February is about come and gone. All my life, Mister Editor, I been running a dollar short and a day behind and it ain't no different with my income tax report.

And speaking of such matters, I see by the papers where this feller that runs the U. S. Internal Revenue Service in Washington is overloved with joy on account of the fine record he had boys had fer 1963. He has announced our country in 1963 "set a new world record in tax collections, the Federal tax collections amounting to 106 billion dollars." He goes on to say "This is the greatest amount of taxes ever collected by any country in one year in the history of the world."

As a taxpayer, Mister Editor, I'm mighty proud of this wonderful achievement by our Government. It's grand and glorious news and I'm shore you and your subscribers will join me in getting jubiliant about the matter.

Actual the figgers might run a little higher if it wasn't for some mistakes them boys make oect in while. Fer instant, I see where the school board at Rochelle Park in New Jersey got a income tax refund fer $10,500 from the Internal Revenue office in Birmingham, Alabama. They wrote the Birmingham office and told 'em that schools didn't pay no income tax and what was they to with the check? The Birmingham office with 'em to take the matter up with the District Director of Internal Revenue in Rochelle Park. They wasn't nothing by that name there and in the papers, the school board was still holding the check.

I think I'll mail my 1963 taxes to Birmingham. I might git 'em back.

Yours truly,
 Claig Sprout
 and Timothy Tugmutton

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK

The Civil War in Kentucky

By Joe Jordan
 (Ky. Civil War Commission)

One hundred years ago this week Gov. Thomas E. Bramlette, whose efforts to suppress guerrilla bands that were terrorizing the citizens had met with little success, issued a proclamation ordering reprisals against Confederate sympathizers residing in the vicinity in which guerrilla outrages were committed.

The governor requested "the various military commanders in the state, in every instance where a loyal citizen is taken off by a band of guerrillas, to immediately arrest at least five of the most prominent and active rebel sympathizers in the vicinity of such outrages for every loyal man taken by guerrillas, and that such should be held as hostages for the safe and speedy return of the loyal citizens where there are distoyal relatives of guerrillas; they should be the chief sufferers. Let them learn that if they refuse to exert themselves actively for the assistance and protection of the loyal, they must expect to reap the just fruits of their complicity with the enemies of our state and our people."

The Lexington Observer & Reporter, after quoting from Gov. Bramlette's proclamation, commented that it was the duty of the governor to "take care." It said he should have proceeded against the guerrillas who had violated the law, and not against innocent persons who happened to be living in the vicinity. "The proclamation," it said, "defegates an assumed absolute power over the personal liberty of citizens to irresponsible military officers, and leaves them to select their victims; it provides no term of trial, requires no proof of guilt, indicates no redress nor relief, establishes no safeguards against personal vindictiveness and petty tyranny."

Gov. Bramlette did seem to assume that the guerrillas were Confederate, in that he seemed to think they might release their prisoners rather than permit Southern sympathizers to remain in the hands of the Union soldiers who had seized them. The newspapers of the time — and only Union newspapers were being published in Kentucky 100 years ago — did not confirm such an assumption. In reporting guerrilla outrages, the newspapers often emphasized that Confederate sympathizers, as well as citizens who were loyal to the Federal government, had been victims of the outrages. It was generally believed that the guerrilla bands were made up of deserters from both armies, besides some criminals who had not seen military service on either side.

"The number of cavalry horses destroyed by our army will strike everybody with astonishment," the Louisville Journal reported. "A remount for the whole service once in two months is the rate at which our horses are being used up, by want of skill and often culpable neglect of the animals. According to official reports, $3,000 will be needed for the coming year if the evil remains unchecked."

Farm Bureau Hits Record In Membership

By Nevis Bennett
The American Farm Bureau set an all-time high in membership in 1963. The total for 1963 reached 1,628,225 farm families. The high was a net gain of 20,790 over the previous year and a gain of 5,073 over the previous high of 1,607,432 set in 1953. Eleven state Farm Bureaus and the Southern Region set an all-time high in membership. Kentucky's membership year ended with an increase of 1,000 families over 1962. To date, figures show that 74,023 farm families now belong to Farm Bureaus. Twenty-four states, including Puerto Rico, and the Southern Region attained their membership quota for 1963. Thirty-three states recorded a gain over their 1962 membership.

Officials in Farm Bureau feel real optimistic about increased numbers joining Farm Bureaus in 1964. Many on the national level feel that results of the Wheat Referendum held earlier in the year gave more strength to the organization than any one other thing FB has favored in many years. In Kentucky officials of FB are delighted that farmers have again this year expressed great confidence in FB by rejoining the organization. Jack Welch, president, Kentucky Farm Bureau, is urging every county leader to get started on building the organization's membership now. He says that it is important that leaders in the counties get all our membership early and work on other important programs the remainder of the year. "We want every rural and farm family in Kentucky to join with us in 1964 in building an organization that will be effective. It is only through a strong, dedicated membership that we will prosper in the difficult years ahead," Welch says.

She Can't 'Go' Without Younger Sisters

By C. D. Smith

THE WEEK'S LETTER: "I feel, probably, that you are old enough to go to some places, such as a movie, and properly look after your two younger sisters. They do not want to let you go to movies by yourself, or with only the company of children your own age. Confusing? Not really. Your parents feel that you are old enough to accept responsibility—that of "looking after" your sisters. They feel that this responsibility is good for you. Should they permit you to go places alone, or with others your own age, they would be "worrying" about you the whole time you were gone. When you take the younger sisters with you, they feel secure—they know your sense of responsibility will direct you there and see to it that you—and they—return home promptly. The simple truth of the matter is that being an older sister carries responsibility with it. And, contrary to what is the belief of many teenagers—"growing up" means continually taking on more and more responsibilities. However, when you grow older, you will discover that the responsibility of "taking the kids" will fall to the next sister in line. Your own freedom will grow with the years—and with your maturity and sense of responsibility. If you have a teenage problem you want to discuss, or an opportunity to share, address your letter to FUR and ADULT TEENAGE COMMITTEE AND FUTURE PLAN SERVICE, FRANKFORT, KY.

7,000 More Children Included In Federal-State Hot Lunch Plan

Hot lunches for an additional 7,000 Eastern Kentucky school children is a larger number in anyone's kitchen but local, state and Federal officials are hoping to reach this goal by February.

Some 30 counties have already been contacted and demonstration of the program have been given in Floyd, Martin, Magoffin, Knox, Rockcastle, McCreary, Laurel, and Morgan counties.

C. E. Bevin, head of the school lunch program in the Kentucky Department of Education, said his staff and officials from the U. S. Department of Agriculture and Health, Education and Welfare will revisit the counties after the Christmas holidays.

Most of the new participation is in one- and two-room schoolhouses where hunger, along with inadequate heating, light and sanitary facilities, helps distract the brightest of students. Introduction of the program is also expected to increase daily average attendance, Bevin said.

Special assistance for the program—food items and a maximum reimbursement of 15 cents per lunch—will come from Federal sources. State agencies are administering the program and will distribute food items from central warehouses.

Local communities are being asked to help secure stoves, refrigerators, hot plates and other necessary equipment. Parents and other volunteers will prepare the lunches in most cases.

Cooking equipment plus jeeps and trucks for delivering food are being sought by the State Education Department's surplus property division. The Kentucky Electric Cooperative Corporation has contributed 13 two-burner hotplates and 30 galvanized cookers to the effort.

Federal reimbursement funds will be spent locally to buy vegetables, fruit, milk and bread for the program. Canned meats and other high-protein foods will be provided by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, according to Earl R. Butler, head of U. S. D. A.'s food distribution for school lunches.

Canned pork, chicken, chopped meat, butter, cheese and peanut butter have already been shipped to schools, Butler said.

Butler and Bevin covered four Eastern Kentucky counties last week while a similar team demonstrated the program for four other counties. In each one a typical menu of pork and gravy, green beans, peach halves, bread, butter and milk was prepared by school lunch supervisors from the State Division Mrs. Georgia Armet, who supervises lunch in 20 Eastern counties from her headquarters in West Liberty, accompanied Bevin and Butler.

Butler pointed out that about 75 percent of the lunch foodstuffs will be purchased from local jobbers and suppliers. Purchases will be made in bulk by the county boards of education.

The arrangement for maximum reimbursement of 15 cents per lunch was set up in 1961 and 3,000 Eastern Kentucky youngsters are already benefitting from it. Bevin said Floyd County already has 70 schools under the program, for example. These schools will now receive the canned meats, butter and other items from the U. S. D. A. Four additional Floyd County schools entered the program before recessing for the holidays, he said.

Children whose families can afford to contribute to the program pay a small amount, usually about 10 cents. In Floyd County, the percentage of children contributing to the program ranges from about 60 percent in the fall down to 35 percent later in the school year.

Butler commented that the program is designed to offer Kentucky's parents the same program that they have when they eventually consolidate into larger facilities.

Floyd County has consolidated some 30 schools in the past three years and 15 to 18 more will be replaced by the new Middle Creek Elementary School next fall.

Accelerated efforts to extend the program are part of the special winter-relief effort for Eastern Kentucky, launched during the administration of former Gov. John F. Kennedy. Health care, vocational training and other programs are also involved in the effort, which recently received firm backing from President Lyndon B. Johnson.

four times as much as the Federal funds.

Vocational education does two things at the same time by helping communities solve both their educational and unemployment problems. At least 60,000 Kentuckians now are taking advantage of some part of the program, according to Hilton.

In addition to the money for training, more than $4.5 million in capital construction funds and bonds have been used in the building of seven new schools for additions to ones already in use.

A $1 million building has been completed at Covington and $500,000 additions at Paintsville and Paducah. A new building is to open Jan. 1 at Madisonville, with an extension at Morgantfield. Schools at Somerset and in Jefferson County are to open Sept. 1, 1964. Another is under construction at Harlan, and two more are in the planning stage at Ashland and Hazard.

New Training Program To Aid 3,926 Persons In East Kentucky

"A vast new job training program," costing $8,754,000, was announced by Gov. Edward T. Breathitt last week. 44 Eastern Kentucky counties eligible for federal aid through the President's Appalachian Regional Commission.

The program, largest ever conducted under the federal Manpower Development and Training Act, will provide training in some 50 occupations for 3,926 persons. They will receive allowances (totaling $5,692,000) while taking courses averaging 44 weeks.

Total cost of the program will be met by the federal government. First classes will begin about Jan. 20.

Gov. Breathitt, in announcing the program, said:

"Nothing is more important to Eastern Kentucky and to Kentucky's future than is educational training. By 1975, the demand for an unskilled laborer will be practically nil. Those who are not technically or academically trained can expect to find themselves at the bottom of the jobless heap.

"That is why we must put our full efforts into improving the educational standards, not only in Eastern Kentucky, but throughout the Commonwealth. We are entering a fast-moving age of automation. To reach our full economic potential we must prepare our citizens for the day of reckoning with the labor market.

"This far-reaching undertaking not only will enable the trainees to be employable in trades and skills that will benefit them and their communities in future months and years. It also will provide a modest living for them while they are in training."

Ivan A. Nittington, undersecretary of health, education and welfare, who was introduced by Breathitt at a news conference called to announce the program, termed it "a project that will have a direct effect on Kentucky's economy."

Main roads toward a long-range solution of the problem of poverty are training and education," Nittington said, "and the project you are announcing today can play an important role in our effort to turn workers—idle through no fault of their own—into productive contributors to society."

The governor expressed thanks to President Lyndon B. Johnson and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., chairman of the President's Appalachian Commission, for their interest and recognition of Eastern Kentucky's problems. Breathitt also commended Congressman Carl Perkins, Hindman, for his work as "a constant and strong supporter of job training and other Eastern Kentucky projects."

Breathitt said that because of the urgency of the economic situation in the six-county area and the desperate need for job training, the requirement of the Manpower Training and Development Act that jobs be available for the trainees before the start of training has been waived.

State Department of Economic Security officials believe, however, that employment for the re-audier will be available elsewhere in Kentucky.

The 44 Eastern Kentucky counties eligible for the job training program are:

Breathitt commended the State Departments of Economic Security and Education for their efforts in helping to develop the program.

The federal government will pay the State $2,831,000 for conducting the training and finance purchase of some $300,000 worth of equipment for the vocational schools.

Most of the courses will be given in State vocational schools.
