FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Morehead, Ky., July 1--Applications for the Cumberland Forest Music Camp on the Morehead State University campus, August 14-27, have passed the 500 mark.

Dr. J. E. Duncan, Director of the widely recognized camp which will include a faculty of over 50 of the nation's top musicians, said today that some scholarships are still available, especially for string instrumentalists, and that there is ample room for numerous additional applicants.

Young musicians from throughout the nation will attend the two-week camp which was formerly the Gunnison Music Camp, Gunnison, Colorado.

The widely-renowned faculty, most of whom have played with major symphony orchestras, will be available for group and individual instruction.

Dr. Duncan announced today that two new aspects have been added to the camp. One of the nation's leading ballet and modern dance instructors, Don Durand, University of Minnesota, has been added to the faculty to teach artistry in majorette and drum major procedures and Jack Dunham, president of a west coast recording company, has been added to the faculty to discuss recording techniques.

Associate directors of the camp are: Fred J. Marzan, director of bands at Morehead, and William J. Bell, the "Dean" of tuba players and a member of the Indiana University music faculty.

Among the faculty are: the Lenox String Quartet; Guy Harrison, Director of the Oklahoma City Symphony, who will direct the orchestra program at the camp; Dr. Robert Hawkins, formerly director of the Gunnison Music Camp; Vaclav Nelhybel, formerly assistant director of the Czech Philharmonic Orchestra; Ray Still, first oboist with the Chicago Symphony; Milan Yancich, head of the Brass and Woodwind Chamber Music Department at Eastman School of Music; Dr. Thomas Beversdorf, head of the Brass Faculty at Indiana University; Vincent Dinino, director of the University of Texas Long Horn Band and Al Wright, Director of the Purdue University Band.

Tuition for the two-week camp is $150, which includes all costs excluding private lessons. The camp is open to junior and senior high school students as well as for undergraduate and graduate college students.

Dr. Duncan said the campus curriculum would include: private and class instruction; participation in marching and concert bands, orchestras and stage bands; and classes in music theory, music literature, conducting composition and techniques.

The famed Lenox String Quartet will perform in concert twice during the camp as will various individuals serving on the faculty. Several premieres of new works will be heard during the camp, said Dr. Duncan, including original compositions by Vaclav Nelhybel.

Concerts will include: small ensembles, the Directors band, student orchestras, student bands and a concert by the honors band.

Another new aspect of the camp is a harp section made up of some of the leading young harpists in the nation working with Margaret B. White, a faculty member at Indiana University.

Interested persons should contact Dr. J. E. Duncan, Director, Cumberland Forest Music Camp, Morehead State University, Morehead, Ky.

All participants in the camp will reside in university residence halls and eat in the Doran Student House cafeteria.

Other members of the faculty include: Edwin D. Baker, director of the jazz program at Indiana University; Howard Hill, director of orchestra at Morehead; Robert Cole, flutist, University of Wisconsin School of Music; Harry Houdeshel, flutist in the American Woodwind Quintet, Indiana University; James Martin, flute and theory instructor, Morehead; Fred Wilkins, former flute instructor at Julliard School of Music; John Wummer, former flutist with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and Nestor Koval, instructor of clarinet and saxophone at Duquesne University.

Other faculty members include: Don McCathren, director of bands at Duquesne University; Dr. John Mohler, clarinetist in the University of Michigan Woodwind Quintet; Bernard Portnoy, instructor of clarinet at the Julliard School of Music; Harry Schmidt, woodwind instructor at Florida State University; Dr. Eugene Rousseau, saxophone instructor at Indiana University; Leonard Sharrow, bassoon professor at Indiana University; John R. Barrows, horn instructor at the University of Wisconsin and Carl Robert Schiebler, horn instructor and artist in residence at Webster College, St. Louis.

Also serving on the faculty are: Bernard Adelstein, trumpet instructor at the Cleveland Institute; Louis Davidson, trumpet instructor, Indiana University; Herbert C. Mueller, trumpet instructor, Indiana University; Lewis Van Haney, trombone instructor, Indiana University; Donald Kneeburg, trombone instructor, Indiana University; Earle Louder, euphonium instructor with the U. S. Navy Band; George Gaber, chairman of the percussion department at Indiana University and Margaret B. White, harp soloist and a member of the Indiana University music faculty.

Morehead, Ky., July 13--Dr. Kenneth Dawson has been named Dean of the School of Education at Morehead State University, President Adron Doran announced today.

Dr. Dawson, currently Executive Secretary of the American Industrial Arts Association of the National Education Association, Washington, will assume his duties September 1.

The 39-year-old native of Newark, Ohio, has travelled extensively speaking to state, national and international groups during his five years with the NEA and has published numerous articles in professional publications:

"Kenneth Dawson is one of the outstanding young educators in America," said President Doran, "and we feel extremely fortunate to have a man of his qualifications heading the new School of Education."

Dr. Dawson received the BS degree from Virginia Polytechnic Institute, the MA degree from the University of Virginia and the PhD degree from the University of Maryland.

He has taught in the public schools of Maryland and Virginia, was a graduate assistant at the University of Maryland and was an assistant professor at Virginia Polytechnic Institute from 1956 to 1958.

He served in the U. S. Army and in 1963 was a consultant to a Red Cross team in Liberia.

Dr. Dawson is listed in Who's Who in American Education and is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, Iota Lambda Sigma, Epsilon Pi Tau and NEA. He is married and has two children.

Morehead, Ky., July 14--Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University, will serve as a panelist at President Johnson's national planning conference on education of the disadvantaged, July 18-20, in Washington, D. C.

President Johnson said the conference will "provide a working environment for exchanging ideas and exploring new methods of educating the children of poverty."

Dr. Doran will serve on a panel discussing the mobilizing of resources and has been asked to make a presentation at one of the sessions. He will also prepare a paper concerning promising developments and concepts at the conclusion of the conference.

Dr. Doran, immediate past-chairman of the NEA Legislative Commission, was invited by Harold Howe II, U. S. Commissioner of Education and is the only Kentuckian serving as a panelist. Four other Kentuckians will be invited to attend the three-day conference by Dr. Harry Sparks, State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Howe pointed out that information about effective programs under Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 will be more widely disseminated and the discussion sessions will be focused on services to the most needy children.

"It is indeed a great honor to be selected as a panelist at President Johnson's national planning conference on education of the disadvantaged," said Dr. Doran.

Morehead, Ky., Aug. 19--What brings a student musician 2,000 miles from his home to the hills of Eastern Kentucky?

For Robin Colby of Riverside, California, it was an opportunity to study the French horn under one of the nation's masters of the instrument.

Robin, who hopes later to teach her favorite instrument, is one of the 250 students enrolled for two weeks of intensive training at the first Cumberland Forest Music Camp at Morehead State University.

Her teacher is John R. Barrows, horn instructor at the University of Wisconsin, one of the 40 distinguished musicians making up the camp's faculty.

He has performed as horn player and soloist with the Minneapolis Symphony, the Radio City Music Hall Orchestra, New York City Ballet Orchestra, the San Diego Symphony, the NBC Symphony, and many others. He has composed a number of works in all media.

Miss Colby decided to attend the camp when she heard that Barrows was on the faculty. She had learned of his reputation from Ralph Pyle, her music teacher at La Sierra College in Riverside, where she is a senior music major.

Her flight schedule disrupted by the plane mechanics strike, Robin arrived in Morehead by bus at 3:30 a.m.

Equally as far from home to attend the camp is a Canadian musician, Elaine Smith, who registered from North Vancouver, British Columbia. She also came more than 2,000 miles to the camp.

Joining her in giving the encampment an international flavor is David C. Warne of Oshawa, Ontario. He is a percussion student at the University of Indiana.

Proving that the Camp is not a regional event, the enrollment includes students from most of the 48 continental states. The largest contingent is from Indiana, with heavy enrollment also from Tennessee and Georgia.

The Cumberland Camp was organized this year by Dr. J. E. Duncan, Dean of the School of Humanities at Morehead, after it was learned that the famed Gunnison Music Camp at Gunnison, Colorado, was closing.

Many of the Gunnison faculty were retained in the Cumberland Camp and additional master teachers added to the staff.

"The purpose of the Camp is to give students a chance to study intensively under skilled masters," Dr. Duncan explained.

The faculty sees the Camp as an opportunity for young musicians to learn from experienced performers. The faculty is a unique collection of the best at their own instruments and equals or surpasses the talent in the major orchestras. All have played in or soloed with leading musical groups.

"The faculty's job is to inspire the students and show them how music should be played," said Leonard Sharrow, bassoon instructor from Indiana University. "They won't go out of camp with perfect technique, but they will have a goal to reach for."

A great amount of work is concentrated in the two weeks of the encampment. Classes start at 7 a.m. and run to 5 p.m. Sandwiched between classes are rehearsals by the various student bands and orchestras, and private lesson sessions.

Almost every evening one or more of the bands presents a concert. One night it will be a band composed of the high school students, another will feature college musicians, and another will offer the faculty.

The faculty concerts, most of them open to the public, give the students a chance to hear a unique collection of the world's best at their instrument. Most faculty concerts offer works by such names as Beethoven, Stravinsky and other masters. But each program offers works written by some of the faculty themselves.

Many of the campers combine class work with private lessons and playing in one or more of the student bands.

One of these is Gwen Wood of Brooksville, Ky. She has a full program including lessons in theory and composition, private clarinet lessons, and plays in the "honors" band.

"I am simply amazed at the quality of the faculty and the amount of work they put us through," said the blonde Morehead University sophomore.

Others find the experience they gain playing under the direction of outstanding teachers and performers is the more valuable part of the encampment for them.

Miss Colby is one of these. She has completed most of the course work in college and finds most of it would be repetitious here. She concentrates on private lessons from Barrows and plays French horn in the Chamber Orchestra, the Concert Band, and the Woodwind Quintet.

Dan Korzep of Martinsburg, West Virginia, studies theory and composition and plays baritone horn in the Concert Band. "They work us hard, but we learn in a short while work what we couldn't get at home," he said. He plays in the Martinsburg High School band at home.

"The Cumberland Camp has every chance to be successful as the staff gains experience," was the assessment given by faculty members Vincent DiNino and Guy Fraser Harrison, both formerly with Gunnison. DiNino is director of the famed University of Texas Longhorn Bands, and Harrison is director of the Oklahoma City Symphony.

MOREHEAD, KY., Sept. 15--The freshman class at Morehead State University this fall has a unique mother and daughter combination.

Mrs. Iva Hendricks and her daughter Jan enrolled together this week for their first university classes. They are from the Mays Lick community in Mason County near Maysville.

A petite brunette of 37, Mrs. Hendricks had been a housewife and mother since her high school graduation in 1946.

"I decided to return to school now that my three daughters are nearly grown," she said of her decision to enter Morehead along with her oldest daughter.

Already taller than her mother, Jan is a 1966 honor graduate of Mason County High School.

Morehead President Adron Doran said the mother-daughter team in the freshman class is unique. He recalled other cases in which parents and their children were enrolled at the same time, but on different academic levels.

Mrs. Hendricks will commute daily from her home about 33 miles northwest of the Morehead campus. She wants to be with her younger daughters, one in Mason County High School and the other enrolled in the elementary school at Lewisburg.

Jan will reside on the Morehead campus in Allie Young Hall with about 260 other freshmen co-eds.

Although they will study on the same level academically, the mother and daughter have different scholastic interests.

Mrs. Hendricks will prepare for a career as a business teacher at the junior high school level. She is majoring in education with a concentration in business administration.

Jan, on the other hand, is interested more in mathematics. She was a member of the Mathematics Club and Beta Club in high school, and won a Beta Club scholarship.

The husband and father of the freshman co-eds is the Rev. Paul C. Hendricks, pastor of the Mill Creek Christian Church. Mr. Lewis graduated last June from the Lexington Theological Seminary.

Mrs. Hendricks expects some problems from returning to academic life after 20 years with classmates in another generation; however, she expressed confidence in her ability to adjust. Jan is looking forward expectantly to college and dormitory living.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 3--Enrollment at Morehead State University for the 1966-67 fall semester climbed to an all-time high of 5,485 on-campus students.

The new enrollment is 17.5 per cent higher than the 4,668 for the same period a year ago. Neither figure includes extension or off-campus enrollment.

The 817 increase was attributed by President Adron Doran mainly to the acquisition of transfer students, many from community junior colleges. Two-thirds of the 300 undergraduate transfers entered with sophomore or above standing, and three-fourths of them were Kentucky residents.

The freshman class of 2,032 is only six more than the 2,026 first year students in the 1965-66 fall term. Only 30 per cent of the freshmen are from out of state compared with the 35 per cent of last year.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --Daniel Pinkham, a leading American composer, has been selected as guest conductor for the seventh annual High School Choral Festival to be held at Morehead State University.

Student singers from Kentucky and neighboring states will be on the Morehead campus, Dec. 9-11, rehearsing and presenting the festival concert.

Pinkham has served on the faculty of Harvard University and the New England Conservatory of Music. He frequently performs as organ soloist and as conductor of choral and orchestral ensembles in addition to his achievements as a composer.

He holds degrees from Harvard and has studied with Walter Piston, Aaron Copland, Wanda Landowska, E. Power Biggs, Arthur Honneger and Samuel Barber.

Coordinator of the festival is James Ross Beane, associate professor of music at Morehead.

Four regional rehearsals directed by Morehead music faculty members will be arranged in areas convenient to the high schools planning to attend.

FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, OCT. 23

MOREHEAD, Ky. --Closed-circuit television is being used at Morehead State University to more effectively use the skills of the faculty and to improve the quality of instruction in English composition.

Easily operated "TeleMation" equipment enables one highly-trained teacher in a central studio to instruct 150 freshmen meeting in three classrooms. A team of four teachers conducts three sessions for a total of 450 students. Graduate assistants check class rolls and perform other "housekeeping" duties.

Without the television system a well-trained teacher would have to be assigned to each of the 18 class sections required to instruct the same number of students in groups of 25 each.

The equipment layout, largely planned and selected by Dr. Norman Tant, Director of Instructional Media, is so designed that it can be operated by the instructor. No technical assistants are needed at the control panel.

The system employs two cameras. A front view camera is focused on the instructor at his desk in the control room and an overhead camera is focused on teaching materials on the top of the desk.

The instructor obtains personal contact with his students by projecting his own image on the screen while talking to his class. A simple switching arrangement allow him to focus the camera on himself.

By switching to the overhead camera he presents already-prepared materials from slides, transparencies, handwritten notes, pages from books, drawings, or other visual matter before him. Two monitors at the front of the "TeleLectern" allow him to choose the view he wants to project.

On the other end of the complex cable the students view the presentation on 23-inch video monitors in the classrooms. The high-resolution viewers are rated at almost three times the clarity of the best broadcast receivers.

To avoid one-way communication and to encourage student participation in the lessons, the system has a telephone connection between the instructor's booth and the classroom.

The instructors question students over the television and receive their answers by telephone. Also, the students in the classroom can ask questions by way of the telephone. When a student picks up one of seven telephones in the classroom a light at the control panel tells the instructor that a student's question is forthcoming. Students in all the rooms can hear both sides of the telephone dialogue between the student and the instructor on camera.

"This approach to teaching English composition will increase the effectiveness of the instruction and the contact between students and instructors," says Dr. Gary Harmon, chairman of the Division of Languages and Literature. He also sees it as a means of reducing the cost of instruction with fewer teachers needed for large groups.

Dr. Lewis Barnes, a member of the composition teaching team, is one of several Morehead teachers with a background in broadcast television teaching.

While simple to operate, the Morehead classroom television system is a complex of sight and sound transmission and receiving equipment. The electronic components are of the most advanced design and quality.

More than a year was spent in planning the involved electronic and academic aspects of the venture. No other college or university was found using television in the manner envisioned by Morehead, and the system had to be developed here.

University Breckinridge stayed within striking distance until the final seconds before bowing 74-69 to Prichard High of Grayson last Tuesday in Button Auditorium.

The Eaglets pulled to within two points with 15 seconds to go, but missed on a bonus free throw and were unable to control the ball. They had lost leading rebounder Steve Lewis earlier in the period and with him their board strength.

A cold first half was the undoing of the Blue and Gold. They were unable to keep up the hot pace they set in their opening victory and managed only 28 per cent from the field in the first half against Prichard.

Before bowing out on fouls Lewis collected 17 points and 10 rebounds for the Eaglets. Bobby Johnson had 15, Alan Hackney 13 and Martin Proudfoot 12. Jim Justice of Prichard was high man in the game with 25 points.

The loss evened the Breckinridge record at 1-1 as they prepare for a game Tuesday with Tollesboro at home. Following the Thanksgiving break they resume play against Boyd County at Ashland on Nov. 29.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 30--Upgrading of music literature used in Kentucky high schools is one of the goals of the seventh annual High School Choral Festival to be held next weekend at Morehead State University.

"Emphasis has been placed on the literature to be performed rather than the singing technique," said James Beane, Festival director and associate-professor of music at Morehead.

The Festival Chorus will perform a program of rarely-heard selections in a public concert at 3 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 11, as a climax to the three-day Festival.

Daniel Pinkham, a leading composer, director and organ soloist, will be the guest conductor. He has received numerous fellowships and has taught music at Harvard University and the New England Conservatory of Music. Some of his compositions are included on the Festival repertoir.

All of the concert numbers are considered much more difficult, Beane said, than those usually performed by high school choruses. The esoteric selections were made to persuade the musicians to reach out for higher goals than usual, he said. Participating schools have been rehearsing the selections for two months.

The program includes: "Festival Magnificat" and "Wedding Cantata" both by Pinkham; "Wie schon leuchtet der Morgenstern" by Praetorius; "Nowell sing we: Nova, nova" arranged by Stevens; "There is no rose" by Hughes; "O Magnum Mysterium" by Shaw, and "In Eccelsis" by Gabrieli.

Chorus members were chosen by the schools they represent. They will audition as separate groups and by sections Friday morning when they arrive. Mr. Pinkham will conduct rehearsals for the complete chorus starting Friday afternoon.

chorus festival 2222222

Besides their rehearsals and concert, the high school singers will hear performances Friday and Saturday nights by Morehead State University musical groups.

Beane said the use of a guest conductor and concerts by older more advanced students was unique in state high school choral festivals.

The University Chamber Singers will present an 8 p. m. concert Friday of rarely-performed choral numbers. The group is composed of carefully selected upperclassmen. On the same program, the University Concert Choir will be heard in Kubik's "First Choral Suti Suite" and "The Christmas Oratorio" by Schutz.

At Saturday night's concert the University Chorus will sing selections from Bach's motet, "Jesu, Priceless Treasure," and other Christmas numbers. The University Opera Workshop will perform the folk opera, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," based on the Mark Twain short story.

All the concerts will be held in Button Auditorium and will be open to the public. There is no admission charge.

MOREHEAD Ky., Nov. 30--When Dennis Scifres, a junior at University Breckinridge School at Morehead State University, is not using his voice he lets his golf clubs talk for him. But this past week he spoke aloud.

While his fellow students were taking a Thanksgiving holiday, the dark-haired youth was participating in the National Invitational Forensic Tournament at Boston College.

Dennis won second place in Oral Interpretation in competition with 500 other students from 85 high schools across the country.

After five rounds of reading, Dennis was tied with a speaker from Iona Preparatory School of New York. Finally, the championship was awarded to the Iona contestant on the basis of two percentage points difference in their scores, and Dennis received the runner-up trophy.

Dennis has shown versatility on the speaker's stand and has been a winner in every meet he has entered this year. He won first prize in prose interpretation and second in poetry in a tournament at Paris, Ky.; first in poetry at Clarksville, Tenn.; second in prose at Elizabethtown, and second in prose at the Harrison County tournament.

He is also a consistent winner on the golf course. For the past two years he has been the champion in the Morehead Junior Chamber of Commerce junior tournament, and this year represented Morehead in the state Jaycee tournament. He won the Ponderosa tournament for junior golfers at Ashland this summer.

An avid linksman, he has expressed an ambition to become a professional golfer.

MOREHEAD, KY., Nov. 30--Kentucky school systems are better able to compete these days for teachers being graduated from Morehead State University, but are they also recruiting the graduates with the top academic records?

The answer seems to be yes, according to a survey released by the Education News Service for the Kentucky Education Association committee for the study of the foundation program.

Based on incomplete data relating to the June, 1966 graduating class, the survey showed that the grade point average was almost equal between those taking teaching positions in Kentucky and those going out of state.

On the 4-point grading system--in which A is 4, B is 3, C is 2--those remaining in Kentucky has a 2.65 average, and those taking out of state posts had a 2.68 average.

Information supplied to the KEA study committee was based upon 198 out of 353 teacher graduates.

The survey also revealed that about one-third of the Morehead teacher graduates were non-residents of Kentucky at the time that they began their senior year. Of the 353 graduates, 104 came to Morehead from other states.

Kentucky school systems were able to hold most of the Kentuckians in the state. Of the 97 Kentuckians in the class, 90 remained in the state to teach.

Ohio recruited the largest number--59 of the group taking positions in the other states.

The committee was formed by the KEA in 1964 to make a study-in-depth of the state's foundation program for education and to recommend changes. Its full report will be made in January.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 6--The door bursts open and a beaming child bounces into the classroom enthusiastically chanting, "Here I am! Here I am!" And so he is, for another day of activity, fun and learning in the Morehead State University pre-school class.

His activities are a part of a unique pre-school program which is an outstanding example of coordinating educational efforts. The program combines the University Breckinridge kindergarten and the University's Head Start class.

Every effort has been made, according to Reedus Back, director of University Breckinridge, to insure that children in both groups receive the same training so that they will enroll in school with equal educational experiences.

The combination of classes, conceived by President Adron Doran, enables children to learn to associate at an early age with those on other economic and social levels. Since they must meet in public schools and later life, educators feel, earlier association will provide greater benefits.

The only differences between the groups will be based on the individual needs of the children, according to Reedus Back, director of University Breckinridge school.

A $14,924 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity will provide such help for Head Start enrollees as: a well-planned and nutritious lunch; complete medical and dental screening and necessary treatment; transportation to and from school and insurance.

Back said these services are felt necessary to the well-being of all children. Fifteen of the 50 children enrolled are eligible for the benefits.

The Child Development Program operates with two three-hour sessions daily. Classes are conducted by a team composed of Mrs. Joann Setser, teacher in the Head Start program, and Mrs. Elizabeth Anderson of the University Breckinridge faculty.

Assisting them are a mother aide and a student teacher from the Morehead University's School of Education. Mrs. Setser, the aide and a secretary are paid from the OEO grant.

Parents are encouraged to visit the center and to participate in the Pre-School Parent Organization. Visitors may view the class at any time from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. through a one-way window.

Now being conducted in the University Home Economics Building, the Program will soon be moved into a new addition to University Breckinridge School which is nearing completion.

An informal assessment of the program by parents and staff indicates an unqualified success and a hope that other classes of the type will be formed throughout Eastern Kentucky. President Doran enthusiastically cites it as an exciting and promising contribution to early childhood education.

The project is co-directed by Mr. Back, Dr. Mary Northcutt, and Dr. Morris Norfleet, director of Research and Program Development.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 12--The bustling Morehead State University campus will sink into a state of slumber next week as the nearly 6,000 students and faculty begin their annual Christmas vacation.

Classes end at noon Saturday and will resume at 8 a. m. Tuesday, Jan. 3.

The mass exodus will begin Friday when most students end their school week and begin scattering to all parts of Kentucky and the nation. Friday night and Saturday morning classes will be held as usual.

Administrative offices will remain open through Tuesday, Dec. 20. They will be closed between Wednesday and the next Wednesday, Dec. 28, when they will reopen for normal business. They will again be closed Monday, Jan. 2, for the New Year's holiday.

The holiday season for the faculty will begin tomorrow with the annual Christmas dinner given by President and Mrs. Adron Doran at 6 p. m. in the Student House.

Vacations will be delayed for the basketball team and its coaches. The Eagles will play in two tournaments during the holidays.

Morehead will meet Tennessee Tech at 7 p. m. Monday, Dec. 19, in the Ohio Valley Conference tournament at Louisville's Convention Center.

Preceding the game alumni, students and friends of Morehead will attend a banquet sponsored by the Alumni Association in the Flag Room of the nearby Kentucky Hotel.

After a brief vacation the team will resume preparations for its appearance in the Louisiana Classic tournament at Shreveport Dec. 29-30.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 29--Mountain balads will be sung here Thursday by John Jacob Niles in the manner in which they were performed by singers long before the modern craze in folk music developed.

The recital will be presented at 8 p. m. in Button Auditorium at Morehead State University. It is a feature of the Northeast Kentucky Celebrity Series.

A native of Jefferson County and now a resident of Lexington, Niles is generally regarded as the dean of American balladeers, because of his singing, his collections and his compositions of folk songs.

The 74-year-old performer sings in a high, clear tenor and accompanies himself on the dulcimer, a guitar-like instrument which he made himself.

His repertoire includes selections from his collections and his own compositions in the folk-manner: "Black Is My True Love's Hair," "I Wonder As I Wander," "Go Way from My Window," and others.

Niles developed his interest in folk tunes as a young man. While traveling through Eastern Kentucky mountains as an adding machine repairman in the early 1900's, he collected ballads he heard sung there. He used a musical shorthand he developed to record the tunes and words.

After service in the Air Force in World War I, Niles studied music in Paris and Lyons, France, then specialized in voice and composition at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music.
