MOREHEAD, Ky. --Two Morehead State University students participated last week in an Appalachia region poverty workshop at Cedar Lake Conference Center at Ripley, W. Va.

Representing Morehead were Elma Gillum, a sophomore elementary education major, and Darrel Rutherford, a junior sociology major.

Rutherford said the goal of the conference was to obtain a "long range commitment of students, professors and colleges to be of service to the community in which they reside."

The workshop attracted 100 students from Kentucky, Ohio, Georgia, Tennessee, North Carolina, West Virginia and Virginia. It was sponsored by West Virginia State College; Action for Appalachian Youth-Community Development, Inc., Appalachian Volunteers and the Johnson Foundation.

Representatives of the sponsoring agencies first explained the causes, signs and results of poverty; federal, state and private programs to relieve the effects of poverty, and political involvements in poverty areas.

Later, the students spent two days living with families in depressed areas near the conference site.

Miss Gillum and Rutherford visited "the Triangle," a coal mining camp near Charleston. There they observed living and working conditions in an area sometimes described as a "ghetto."

Following the field trip the students returned to the conference area to evaluate their experiences and to seek ways for students to assist in correcting conditions caused by poverty.

Miss Gillum said much of the discussion consisted of trying to answer the question: "What can I do to help alleviate the problems of these under-privileged people?"

Discussing phases of the poverty fight were Richard Slavin, assistant to West Virginia Governor Hulett C. Smith; Jack Yeager, dean of students at West Virginia State College; Jerry Fear, deputy director of AAY-CD; and Leslie Paffrath, president of Johnson Foundation, a Wisconsin non-profit educational foundation, endowed by S. C. Johnson and Son, Inc., of Racine.

Results of the workshop are being evaluated by a staff from sponsoring groups and will be sent to the participants and colleges and universities in the Appalachian region.

"DON GIOVANNI" SCHEDULED FOR JAN. 28
BY W M K Y - F M

Mozart's operatic masterpiece, "Don Giovanni,"^A will be heard during the season's ninth broadcast over WKY-FM. WKY-FM will broadcast the opera even though other daily broadcasts will not be heard due to vacation. Tune in time will be 2 p.m. ~~EST (New York time)~~ on Saturday, Jan. 28.

Heading the cast of singers will be the world renowned Australian soprano Joan Sutherland in the role of "Donna Anna,"^A Others in the cast are sopranos Pilar Lorengar and Laurel Hurley singing the roles of "Donna Elvira" and "Zerlina" respectively. Bass Cesare Siepi will portray the dashing, pleasure-bent "Don Giovanni,"^A Karl Boehm will conduct.

The single intermission between Acts I and II of "Don Giovanni" will bring opera listeners another edition of "Opera News on the Air" which will consist of a round-table discussion with a panel of experts answering questions from the radio audience about the art of singing.

In "Don Giovanni" Mozart composed some of his most delightful music. In the lively first act there are such favorites as the duet between Don Giovanni and Zerlina, "La ci darem la mano" (Thy little hand, love); Donna Anna's vengeance aria, "Or sai chi l'onore" (You know now for certain); the exuberant "Finch' han dal vino" (Song, wine and women) sung by Don Giovanni; Zerlina's ingratiating aria, "Fatti, batti, o bel Masetto" (Scold me, dear Masetto); and what is perhaps the most famous selection of all, the delightful minuet.

In Act II are such tuneful arias as the "Serenata" sung by the Don; "Vedrai carino, se sei buonino" (If you will promise not to mistrust me) sung by Zerlina; Don Ottavio's famous aria, "Il mio tesoro intanto" (Speak for me to my lady); and Donna Anna's magnificent aria, "Non mi dir" (Beloved mine, do not say).

Some of the most famous singers of all time have been heard in this opera. One of the best-known Don Giovannis of recent years was the late Ezio Pinza. John McCormack and Tito Schipa were noted for their portrayals of Don Ottavio, while Zerlina was a favorite with sopranos Adelina Patti and Geraldine Farrar.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Work began last Friday on a new $3 million Education and Graduate Studies Building at Morehead State University, raising to more than $13 million the amount of construction underway on the campus at the year's end.

The new building is located directly across University Boulevard from the new Administration Building in the center of the campus.

Designed by Lee Potter Smith and Associates, it features a nine-story tower located between Allie Young Hall, a women's residence, and Rader Hall, a classroom building. A six-story wing extends eastward from the tower and behind Rader Hall, and a two-story extension fronts the tower.

Contained in the building will be offices of the School of Education, classrooms, seminar rooms, a library, study cubicles, audio-visual laboratories, educational television studios, FM radio studios, the psychology laboratory and testing offices and laboratories.

Frank Messer and Sons, Inc., of Cincinnati was awarded a $2,692,800 contract for the general construction. Furnishings and fees are expected to raise the total cost to the $3 million figure.

The building is scheduled to be ready for use by May, 1968.

Seven other major construction projects were still in progress at Morehead at the end of the year. Including contract prices, they are:

A four-story addition to Lappin Science Hall, $1,915,000; Mignon Tower, a 300-bed women's residence Hall, $1,490,000; Alumni Tower and Dining Hall, a 384-bed men's residence hall, $2,670,000; 40 one-bedroom apartments for married students, $704,000; Health and Physical Education Classroom Building, $1,676,000; an addition to University Breckinridge School, $1,014,000, and expansion of campus utilities, $911,000.

Bids are scheduled to be opened Thursday in Frankfort on the first of another seven construction projects now in an advanced planning stage at Morehead. Bids are to be taken on a three-story Art Building planned for the south side of University Boulevard just east of the Administration Building. The architects have estimated the cost at $970,000.

Other construction on the drawing boards and planned for a start in 1967, include:

A dormitory for athletes, $425,000; an addition to the Doran Student House, $2,200,000; an addition to Baird Music Hall, $840,000; a 300-bed women's residence hall, $1,600,000; a 400-bed men's residence hall, $1,950,000, and an Alumni House, $200,000.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Jan. 20--Morehead State University President Adron Doran has been named as "Boss of the Year" by the Morehead Junior Chamber of Commerce.

He was presented the award at the Morehead chapter's first "Boss Night" dinner on Thursday.

The selection was based on Dr. Doran's service to the university, the community, the Jaycee chapter and the individual who nominated him.

Dr. Doran's activities were illustrated by color slides by Rondal Hart, Jaycee national director for Region 6 and Rowan County's Outstanding Young Man of 1966. Hart is assistant director of School Relations at Morehead State University.

The presentation showed some of the many new buildings erected at the University under Dr. Doran's leadership; the president conferring with alumni and counseling students; cheering the athletic teams, leading a graduating class, as a master of ceremonies at educational assemblies, in his office at work and at home with his wife and friends, participating in governmental affairs and offering university facilities for Jaycee events.

H. Wendell Ford, past Kentucky and National Jaycee president, told the Jaycees they are members of the age group to which nothing is considered impossible and who take an active part in local, state and national affairs.

Among Dr. Doran's achievements cited by Hart's letter of nomination were: service as president of the Kentucky Education Association, chairman of the legislative commission of the National Education Association, Kentucky representative on the Appalachian Regional Commission and membership on its education advisory committee and chairman of the Northeast Gateway Tourist Committee.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Jan. 23--Plans for additional construction this year were announced by President Adron Doran as Morehead State University broke ground here Monday for a new million dollar Art Building.

"Just as this ceremony symbolizes the start of construction, the new building is a symbol of the further growth at Morehead State University," Dr. Doran said in his opening remarks.

He told the crowd of some 200 gathered on the building site on University Boulevard of plans for an athletic dormitory, an addition to Baird Music Hall, an addition to Doran Student House, a new Alumni House, a men's residence hall and a women's residence hall.

He said that $7 million in new construction would start by mid-year, in addition to more than $14 million now underway.

The Art Building will consist of 36,200 square feet of floor space occupied by 10 studio classrooms, a three-level art gallery, a visual presentation room, and will be topped by an open sketching deck and two outside sculpture courts.

Work on the three-story brick and concrete structure will start immediately and scheduled to be complete by March, 1968. C. H. Jimison and Sons, Huntington, W. Va., were awarded a contract for $966,400 for general construction.

Taking part in the ground-breaking ceremony in addition to Dr. Doran were Felix Joyner, Kentucky Commissioner of Finance, State Senator Ed Kelley of Flemingsburg, Rowan County Representative Sherman Arnett, Dr. J. NATIONAL PHYSICS HONOR SOCIETY AT M.S.U. / SIGMA PI SIGMA

CHAPTER TO BE INSTALLED IN MARCH

Dr. William C. Simpson, Dean of the School of Sciences and Mathematics was notified Thursday (February 9) that the granting of a charter and installation of a chapter of Sigma Pi Sigma national honor society in physics has been approved for Morehead State University. The letter informing Dr. Simpson of this action came from Dr. Marsh W. White, National Executive Secretary of Sigma Pi Sigma.

Sigma Pi Sigma is the only national honor society for which high academic achievement in physics is prerequisite for membership. Its chapters are restricted to colleges and universities which offer a strong physics major. Students elected to membership must attain high standards of general scholarship, outstanding achievement in physics, and show promise of professional merit.

The Society is a member of the Association of College Honor Societies, is an affiliated society of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The chartering of this chapter is a recognition of the high standing of the physics department of M. S. U. This distinction comes along only as the result of the efforts of the entire physics faculty and the administration in bringing this department to its rating as one of the outstanding ones in the nation.

Tentative plans are being made to hold the formal installation, followed by a banquet for members and their wives, or dates, on March 20. Dr. White will be the senior installing officer and will be assisted by Dr. H. C. Jacobson, University of Tennessee; Dr. Richard Hanau, University of Kentucky; Dr. T. D. Strickler, Berea College; Dr. Vincent E. Parker, Oak Ridge National Laboratory; and Dr. Vernon Crawford, Georgia Tech.

A temporary slate of officers for the new chapter were elected this week. They are: Robert Patterson, President; Glen Cline, Vice President; Bill Bowers, Recording Secretary; and Richard Fogel, Treasurer. Other students who signed the petition for the chapter are: Andy Anderson, Robert Coleman, Robert Allen, Richard Emery, Roger Rowlett, Roger Baldrige, Tom Shumaker.

Qualified alumni physics majors are eligible to become charter members and are invited to contact Dr. Simpson for information.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University has been approved for a chapter of Sigma Pi Sigma, a national honor society in physics.

The Morehead chapter will receive its charter at a formal installation and banquet next month. The installation has been tentatively set for March 20.

Dr. William C. Simpson, dean of the School of Sciences and Mathematics at Morehead, said that Sigma Pi Sigma is the only national honor society for which high academic achievement in physics is a prerequisite for membership. Members must be upperclassmen ranked in the top third of their class academically, outstanding in physics and who show promise of professional merit.

Eleven eligible students signed the petition for membership, and three members of the faculty are already members of the society. An undetermined number of Morehead alumni are eligible on the basis of their undergraduate records.

Dean Simpson said the chartering of the chapter was a "recognition of the high standing of the physics department. This distinction comes only as the result of the efforts of the entire physics faculty and the administration in bringing this department to its rating as one of the outstanding ones in the nation."

Dr. Marsh W. White, national executive secretary of Sigma Pi Sigma, will present the charter and install its officers. He will be assisted by Dr. H. C. "IL TROVATORE" MAY BE HEARD ON MSU STATION

Giuseppe Verdi's four-act tragic opera, "Il Trovatore", will be presented by WMKY-FM over the Texaco-Metropolitan Opera Radio Network on Saturday afternoon starting at 2 p.m. EOP.

Taking principal roles in this popular Verdi work will be soprano Martina Arroyo as Leonora, mezzo-soprano Biserka Cvejic as Azucena, tenor Richard Tucker as Manrico, baritone Robert Merrill as Count di Luna, and bass Raymond Michalski as Ferrando. Francesco Molinari-Pradelli will conduct.

The first intermission "Opera News on the Air" will feature the noted opera author and critic William Weaver interviewing operatic personalities and critics attending the long-awaited revival of Verdi's eight opera "Alzira" at the Rome Opera just last week. The opera was unsuccessfully premiered in Naples in 1845.

Facing Quizmaster Edward Downes during Texaco's Opera Quiz in the second intermission will be a panel of noted conductors, including Antal Dorati, principal conductor of the Stockholm Philharmonic, and Julius Rudel, music director and conductor of the New York City Center Opera.

During the third intermission Francis Robinson will present another edition of his fascinating "Biographies in Music". This time the singer will be the noted Ukrainian bass Alexander Kipnis who now lives in New York. Mr. Kipnis will be present to relate some of the exciting moments in his distinguished operatic career.

Verdi's "Il Trovatore" (The Troubador) has been one of the most popular operas in the repertory since it was first produced on Jan. 19, 1853. Its Metropolitan Opera premiere took place on Nov. 26, 1883.

WMKY-FM TO CARRY OPERA LIVE

This Saturday will mark the fourteenth live broadcast of the Metropolitan Opera from New York City. "Die Zauberflote" (The Magic Flute), Mozart's delightful two-act opera, will be broadcast on Saturday starting at 2 P.M. over WMKY-FM, the Morehead State University Broadcasting Service.

In the cast will be soprano Judith Raskin as Pamina; soprano Roberta Peters as the Queen of the Night; tenor George Shirley as Tamino; baritone Theodor Uppman in the role of Papageno; and bass John Macurdy as Sarastro.

"The Magic Flute" (it is called "Die Zauberflote" in the current Metropolitan production since the opera is sung in the original German, whereas previously it had been given in English) had its first performance in Vienna in 1791 with Mozart himself conducting. Its American premiere (in English) took place at New York's Park Theater in 1833. It was first given by the Metropolitan Opera in 1900 with a cast that included Marcella Sembrich and Emma Eames.

Many critics have found in "Die Zauberflote" an interpretation of the mysteries of Freemasonry, of which Mozart and his librettist, Emanuel Schikaneder, were enrolled members. The Empress Maria Theresa, who actually used violence to break up Masonic gatherings, has been likened to the Queen of the Night in the opera. Tamino has been compared to the Emperor Joseph II who often acted in defense of the secret order. Spokesman for the Austrian people supposedly is Pamina.

rupted by chorales and arias which attempt to relate the events of the life of the present congregation.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--In celebration of the Easter season, the Morehead State University concert choir and orchestra will present Johann Sebastian Bach's "Passion According to St. John" on Sunday, March 19, at 3 p.m. in the Button Auditorium. The text is taken from Chapters 18 and 19 of the Gospel of John and reflective religious poetry of Bach's time.

John Atwood, assistant professor of voice, will perform as the tenor narrator of the events leading to the crucifixion and will be accompanied by the cello and organ. During the drama, other persons involved, such as Jesus and Pilate, are represented by recitative soloists.

The chorus performs the functions of reflecting on the course of events, and actively participates as the crowd of onlookers, soldiers, and others involved in the trials. From time to time the drama is interrupted by chorales and arias which attempt to relate the events to the life of the present congregation.

The intense and dramatic St. John Passion provides examples of Bach's genius for composition.

James Beane, assistant professor of music at Morehead, will conduct.

The performance is open to the public without charge.

Morehead Theatre of Morehead State University proudly presents as its third production of the 1966-67 season, Bad Seed, an adaptation of William March's novel by Maxwell Anderson.

The play will be presented March 13, 14, 16, 17, 18, 20, and 21, 1967, in the Little Theatre of the Combs Classroom Building at 8 p.m. Admission will be $1.00, and tickets may be purchased by writing for reservations to Morehead Theatre, Box 684, Morehead State University, Morehead, Kentucky.

The play is a literate study of the infantile infamy. It is a tense drama concerning the possibility that a mother can pass on to her child some mysterious heritage of her own. When Maxwell Anderson's Bad Seed was presented on Broadway in 1954, Brooks Atkinson, then critic for the New York Times, stated in his review: "Bad Seed is a perceptive drama that is interested in the frightful tragedy of a mother who takes the responsibility for her daughter's guilt, and tries desperately and selflessly to administer justice to everyone. It is a shattering story, largely because it involves such decent people."

The cast includes: Rhoda Penmark, Judy Fry; Lt. Col. Kenneth Penmark, Ronn Johnson; Christine Penmark, Norma Watts; Monica Breedlove, Jen Bohannon; Emory Wages, Carl Ratliff; Leroy, Bill Hammack; Miss Fern, Gayle Johnson; Reginald Tasker, Alan Tongret; Mrs. Daigle, Fannie Fried; Mr. Daigle, John Cannon; Messenger, George Spelvin; and Richard Bravo, Dennis Williams.

Bad Seed joins other notable plays by Maxwell Anderson such as Winterset, High Tor, and the Pulitzer Prize winning, Both Your Houses.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University wants to take part in Eastern Kentucky's war on poverty, President Adron Doran told agents of the Community Action Program meeting this week on the University campus.

"The people of the area are taking steps to eliminate the old slogan, 'Too poor to paint, and too proud to whitewash,' and the University wants to be involved with the Community Action agencies and the people of Kentucky in this effort," he said.

He said the agencies are teaching Kentucky people to use their resources and to use them well. He cited efforts to improve health, cure illness, poor housing, inadequate clothing, pollution, illiteracy and improper food.

President Doran told the 30 agency representatives that they have a challenging role in the elimination of the results of poverty in Eastern Kentucky. He said the federal Anti-Poverty Act and the Educational Opportunity Acts were strong weapons against poverty.

Miss Carte, research assistant at Morehead State University, explained the work of the "Upward Bound" program in preparing high school students for eventual university training.

Plans for two programs awaiting federal funds were revealed. John Duncan, assistant professor of sociology at Morehead, said a recreational program would be established in 18 counties, and Miss Mary Miller, component writer for the Northeast Kentucky Area Development Council, said a Leadership Workshop will be conducted at Morehead for Community Action personnel.

CAP members at the meeting included: Earl P. Martin, Virgil Osborne, Everett Horn Jr., Jim Blanton, Ann Blanton, Ida Eastburn and Douglas H. Morrison of the Big Sandy Council; Louise T. The Eastern Kentucky Cap Agency Meeting was held on the Morehead State University campus ~~on February 28~~ in the Doran Student House Cafeteria. There were approximately thirty community action agency personnel represented at the meeting. Mr. Dean Peters, Coordinator, Northeast Area Development Council presided at the meeting. The meeting opened with the invocation given by Mr. John Duncan, Morehead State University. Dr. Adron Doran, President, Morehead State University, spoke to the group concerning their challenging role in participating in the elimination of poverty in eastern Kentucky. Dr. Doran stressed the Poverty Act and the Educational Opportunity Act and its implications. Also, Dr. Doran related to the group the activities of the White House Conference which means that the people of eastern Kentucky are winning the war on poverty that has resulted in sickness, ill housing, health conditions, inadequate clothing, pollution, illiteracy, and under fed people. As Dr. Doran stated, the people of eastern Kentucky are taking steps to eliminate an old slogan of "Too poor to paint" and "Too proud to whitewash." The Community Action Agencies are teaching the Kentucky people to use their resources and to use them well. Likewise, the University wants to be involved with the Community Action Agencies and the people of Kentucky.

Two University staff members presented a brief summary of the federal programs being held on campus with the support of the Community Action Agencies. Miss Carole Carte, Research Assistant, reported the functions of the University and the Cap Agencies in working with Project UPWARD BOUND. Mr. John Duncan, Sociology Department, explained Title I, Higher Education Act, if funded will establish a recreational program in eighteen counties in eastern Kentucky.

Other University staff present were: Mr. Rex Chaney, Associate Professor, Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Department and Mr. Pete Verhoven, Instructor, Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Department. Miss Mary Miller, Component Writer, Northeast Area Development Council, presented a brief summary on Title I, Higher Education Act, if funded will provide funds for a Leadership Workshop to be held on campus for the Community Action personnel.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--The second annual Kentucky Guidance Personnel Conference will be held at Morehead State University on Friday, March 31.

Sessions will meet in the Home Economics Building from 8:45 a.m. to 4 p.m. The noon luncheon will be served at the Doran Student House.

Counselors, senior sponsors, counselor educators, and representatives of the state guidance personnel are expected to attend.

Dr. C. H. Patterson, chairman of the division of counseling and guidance at the University of Illinois, will discuss developments in counseling theory and techniques at the morning session. He has lengthy experience in counseling and is the author of seven textbooks and numerous articles in the field.

The afternoon session will be conducted by Dr. Fred Smith, associate professor of education at Louisiana State University. He is the author of several papers and is a nationally recognized authority in individual and group appraisal techniques.

Dr. Warren C. Lappin, vice president and dean of the faculty at Morehead State University, will speak on "Renaissance in Higher Education" at the luncheon. Dr. Lappin is a well-known and highly respected figure in higher education and his experience spans important developments in Kentucky.

"We anticipate that the program will provide a personally and professionally rewarding experience for those who serve Kentucky's youth," said Dr. Golden I. Langdon, director of guidance services at Morehead State and coordinator of the conference.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Mrs. Naomi Jean Armstrong, mezzo-soprano, will present a vocal recital Tuesday, March 21, at 7:30 p.m. in Baird Music Hall at Morehead State University.

She will be assisted by William Adams, pianist, and Mrs. Sarah Baird Fouse, flutist, in a program of sacred, traditional and modern selections.

Mrs. Armstrong is no stranger to Eastern Kentucky. For six years she taught vocal and general music while her husband, Smith Armstrong, was band director at Louisa. During this time the Armstrongs were frequent visitors to the Morehead campus.

A native of Rapid City, South Dakota, Mrs. Armstrong studied voice and received her A. B. degree from Sioux Falls College. She has done graduate work at Texas Christian, Maryland, Marshall, Indiana and Kentucky universities. Before coming to Kentucky, she performed as soloist in operas and oratorios in South Dakota, Texas and Washington D. C.

Mrs. Armstrong has been a frequent soloist with musical groups in Lexington, including the Lexington Singers, Lexington Philharmonic Orchestra, University Chorus, Women's Glee Club and Symphony. She has also appeared in several opera workshops and Guignol Theatre productions.

She received her master of music degree from the University of Kentucky and is now coordinator of student teaching in music at the university.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Dr. Norman Tant, director of instructional media at Morehead State University, has been invited to serve as a consultant on educational television and radio to the Department of Education of the Republic of the Philippines.

Dr. Tant, a survivor of the Bataan Death March and 42 months as a prisoner of war of the Japanese, will be in the Philippines April 3-17 participating in the commemoration of the 25th anniversary of the fall of Bataan and the infamous "death march" which followed.

Secretary Carlos P. Romulo wrote Dr. Tant when he learned that Dr. Tant would be in the Philippines:

"We welcome this opportunity to have you with us even for a limited time because we are sure that with your experience in instructional media, especially in educational TV, you will be of help to the Bureau of Public School which is presently undertaking some educational broadcast projects, both in radio and television."

Dr. Tant first went to the Philippines as a soldier with the 409th Signal Company, Aviation, at Nichols Field near Manila in July, 1941. He had at that time a bachelor's degree and one year of high school teaching experience. He visited the schools in his free time before the war began Dec. 7. En route back to the United States after a year as a prisoner of war coal miner in Japan, he spent three more weeks in the Philippines.

Following nine months of hospitalization after liberation at the end of World War II, Dr. Tant returned to high school teaching as he had decided during his prisoner days. After a year of teaching he returned to Peabody College and earned his M.A. degree in school administration and his doctorate in audio-visual education. He received the Ph.D. degree in 1952, the year he joined the Morehead faculty.

The schedule of activities by the 150 American veterans who will make the "Pilgrimage to the Philippines" in April, includes a visit to Corregidor, re-enactment of the surrender of Bataan, a ceremonial one-mile march along the actual "death march" route, a reception at President Marcos' presidential palace, ceremonies at the newly-completed memorial to the Filipino-American dead, and visits to former prison campsites.

President Marcos of the Republic of the Philippines is himself a survivor of the Bataan death march.

Dr. Tant stated the purposes of the trip, "This is a 'sentimental journey' for most of us. It took about 25 years for most of us to recover enough to want to go back to the scenes of battle and the horrors that followed.

"The stand we and our gallant Filipino comrades-in-arms made on Bataan and Corregidor kept Australia from being taken. We are going at our own expense, hoping in some small way to be ambassadors of good will in an effort to help rekindle the closeness that once existed to a much higher degree between the two countries. Peace is very important to those of us who knew war and its results intimately for so long a time."

Wives, children and close friends will accompany many of the "Battling Bastards of Bataan" on their trip. The entire group will fill three jetliners and total close to 400. Mrs. Tant, Mrs. Edith Crosley, Miss Betty Lane, and Dr. and Mrs. Everett D. Blair, all of Morehead, will accompany Dr. Tant on his "sentimental journey."

FOR RELEASE MARCH 23rd

This Saturday Giuseppe Verdi's ever-popular "La Traviata" will be broadcast over WMKY-FM, starting at 2 p.m.

Singing leading roles will be soprano Anna Moffo as Violetta, tenor Barry Morell as Alfredo, and baritone Robert Merrill as Germont. Georges Pretre, the noted French conductor, will be on the podium.

Verdi's "La Traviata" (or "The Lost One") has a libretto by Francesco Maria Piave and is based on Alexandre Dumas's "La dame aux camélias". The opera had its world premiere at the Teatro la Fenice in Venice on March 6, 1853, and its first performance in America took place on December 3, 1856, at New York's Academy of Music.

It is difficult to believe that an opera as popular as "La Traviata" is today should have been a failure when first presented. At its initial performance, the opera was violently rejected by the audience. "La Traviata last night was a fiasco," Verdi wrote a friend. "It is the fault mine or the singers? I don't know at all. Time will tell."

There are many familiar arias in the opera, among them the Brindisi in Act I, "Libiamo, libiamo"; Violetta's aria, "Ah, fors' e lui"; and her "Sempre libera". In Act II there is Germont's "Di Provenza il mar", and in Act IV Violetta's aria "Addio del passato" in which she bids the world goodbye. Equally familiar are the purely orchestral preludes to Acts I and IV.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--A machine for cutting metals by electricity, developed by a Morehead State University professor and a student for educational uses, is being manufactured for national distribution.

The process for which the machine was built is known as Electrical Discharge Machining. It uses controlled electric sparking to erode metals.

The EDM machine and process are the work of Clyde Hackler, assistant professor of industrial education, and Charles Schickner, one of his former students.

A prototype of the machine was built and the process developed three years ago in an independent studies program in Morehead's School of Applied Sciences and Technology.

Hackler and Schickner have been commissioned to conduct experiments on the machine and write technical manuals for the process.

Planned primarily as a teaching aid, EDM could be used in industry, Hackler said. Industrial machines using a similar principle sell at eight times the proposed $2,150 for the one developed at Morehead.

Most schools cannot afford the expensive industrial equipment and are unable to offer laboratory instruction in the basically simple type of operation, Hackler said.

Dr. C. Nelson Grote, dean of the school, said of the process, "It is complimentary to the students to become involved in developing equipment that reflects the new technologies."

The principle of EDM can be illustrated by results often obtained by home electricians, Hackler said. "Anyone who has shorted electrical wiring with a screwdriver has noticed the pits burned into the metal."

EDM uses the same principle, only the application of current is controlled and the burning removes only the unwanted metal. Sophisticated geometric patterns may be obtained by the process.

The Morehead prototype won the top student award at the Kentucky Industrial Arts Association convention at Louisville in 1965, and received wide acclaim at the American IAA convention last week at Philadelphia.

Representatives of the Varga Enterprises of Decatur, Ill., were impressed with the possibilities of EDM and agreed to develop and market it. Varga specializes in the manufacture of equipment for schools.

Schickner received his bachelor's degree from Morehead State and is now doing postgraduate work in vocational and technical education at the University of Illinois.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Evidence that man lived in Rowan County and established a form of civilization as many as 15,000 years ago has been uncovered by a team of scientists from Morehead State University.

The finding of stone spear points in the skeletal remains of animals known to be extinct that long ago has provided a means of dating man's presence here.

Making the study is a team directed by Richard G. Eversole, instructor of biology at Morehead State. A self-styled amateur at archeology, he leads the team on weekend digging excursions while teaching his regular classes during the week.

An exhibition of their findings will go on display this week. It will be open in the first floor lobby of Lappin Science Hall on Friday, March 24, and Saturday, March 25. Hours will be from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Friday, and from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday.

The group hopes to establish a permanent archeological museum at which the treasures they uncover can be made available for study by scientists and the general public.

Organized in February, 1966, with funds granted by the Faculty Research Committee at Morehead State, the archeological team made its first discovery a few weeks later on the farm of Ray Perry at Bangor.

Unearthed in a semi-cave at the base of a large limestone cliff were the skeletons of 10 adults and two infants together with numerous artifacts and possessions of the people who lived in this primitive setting.

These and other excavations revealed a great volume of evidence relating to life here in a period starting in the Third Century B. C.

Carbon tests on a piece of charcoal taken from a campfire showed the wood was 4,356 years old. Tests on human bones found in a crevice at the roof of one cave were dated back to 215 B. C.

Early observations gave no indications that primitive man had lived in the caves which were later used by white settlers as shelter for their cattle, Mr. Eversole said. However, test holes revealed numerous artifacts, and when layers of the floor were stripped away secrets of the past were uncovered.

As spades were pushed deeper and deeper into the powdery dirt new treasures came to light. The search continued downward to a depth of eight feet and the original floor was reached. More than 5,000 man hours were required to remove the mountain of earth.

The cave at Bangor yielded more than 3,000 arrow points, flint knives, scrapers, pottery fragments, tools, luxury items and other artifacts.

From their discoveries, the scientists have developed many theories of primitive life in the Rowan County area. Particularly helpful have been observations made on some of the human skulls.

One was so flattened on the right rear that two-thirds of the brain was compressed into the left side. Allen Lake, associate professor of biology, explained that the malformation probably was caused during infancy. It was a practice among some tribes to carry infants strapped to cradle boards. In this case, the child apparently carried its head to one side, and pressure forced the deformity.

The teeth of a young woman of 16 to 18 years were found heavily worn by some abrasive in the food (possibly sand in ground corn.) Otherwise her skull was found in almost perfect condition and with wisdom teeth uncut.

The oldest intact skull, dating from about 4,000 years ago, was massive and quite long. Another had an extra bone of the type found by anthropologists studying the Inca tribes.

The hardships of living in those early days are reflected in the skeletal remains. Dying young was the rule and few lived past 30 years.

Mr. Eversole said evidence indicated these primitives shared with our civilization some of the same concerns for living--adequate shelter from the weather and a good food and water supply.

archeological findings at morehead 3333333

They chose caves located well below the crests of the hills to break the winds, faced to the rising sun to keep their homes dry and near running streams for water and to be near game.

Mr. Eversole said the work of uncovering the story of early man needs to be accomplished while much evidence remains. Highway and dam construction and land use often bury traces of the early civilization before its location is known.

He pleaded with private collectors to take precautions while excavating "so 15,000 years of history is not destroyed." His plea was not for amateurs to give up their collections, but "a plea to increase knowledge by keeping records and asking for help when it is needed."

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Fifty-six youngsters in the University Breckinridge School this week began studying arithmetic by a new method that has overtones of the space age.

They are taking part in a computerized instruction program in arithmetic which originates at Stanford University in California and is carried across the country to their classroom by long distance telephone lines.

The program is part of a demonstration project worked out by the Central Midwestern Regional Laboratory in St. Louis, Stanford University, and Morehead State University, of which University Breckinridge School is a part.

The project is initiated under Title IV of the Federal Elementary and Secondary Education Act which provides for education research and research training. Chief Congressional sponsor of this concept has been Kentucky's Representative Carl D. Perkins, Chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

The demonstration program at Morehead will continue until the end of the school year. But beginning in the fall, other Kentucky elementary school children are expected to take part in the program. Equipment will be installed in schools in other eastern Kentucky counties, including some one-room schools.

The classroom equipment is a teletype machine linked by telephone to a computer on the Stanford University campus in Palo Alto, Calif.

As each student takes his turn at the teletype machine, he is directed to type his name and class number. From that point on, the pre-programmed machine gives him a series of practice drills in arithmetic. He works on one drill until he masters it, and then he moves up to another. An important aspect is that each child moves at his own speed through the lesson material and drills. At the end of the day, the machine types out for the teacher the points on which the pupil needs extra attention.

computerized teaching 2222222

While the primary computerized material comes from Stanford, it is also possible for the Morehead program to draw upon material programmed in computers in Santa Monica, California; Dartmouth University, and the University of Toronto.

Representative Perkins had this to say about the program:

"The benefits of individualized learning through computer system instruction are as important for the gifted child as they are for the slow child. The gifted no longer needs to be held back at some artificial 'average' pace. The slow child need not experience the frustration of trying to 'keep up' and even the so-called 'average' child has strengths and weaknesses that can only be dealt with by individualizing instruction."

The program in eastern Kentucky is made possible because a time differential of three hours permits use of the computer during the hours before California schools using the system open for classes.

Dr. Adron Doran said, "This innovation in education plus many others to come to Eastern Kentucky is a result of cooperative effort of Morehead State University, the Superintendents of the public schools involved in the Title III program, and the Central Midwestern Regional Education Laboratory."

A demonstration of the computer assisted instructional program is to be held for superintendents and other school personnel on Tuesday, March 21 at 9:30 a. m. in the University Breckinridge School. School superintendents and other school personnel are invited to attend this demonstration.

MOREHEAD, Ky. — The National Science Foundation has awarded Morehead State University a grant of $75,010 to finance the innovation of a model elementary science curriculum in eastern Kentucky schools, Morehead President Adron Doran has been informed.

The grant will be used to establish a pilot program in seven Floyd County elementary school centers. The teachers will be trained at Morehead State University during the summer of 1967 and will be provided with an in-service program and supervision during the following year.

The venture involves introducing "Science—A Process Approach" to teaching science in the elementary school. The approach is one of the most sophisticated methods thus far produced by the scientific community.

This elementary science curriculum in the schools will serve as a model for other schools to observe as a result of their participation in a larger U. S. Office of Education Title III project in an 18-county area of eastern Kentucky.

The American Association of the Advancement of Science has approved the teaching staff for the summer program and has cooperated in planning the project with Dr. Crayton Jackson of the School of Sciences and Mathematics at Morehead State University.

Thirty-six elementary teachers, three elementary principals and a science supervisor will be trained during the eight-week summer program.

This project will introduce the Process Approach in grades one through four during the 1967-68 school year and is planned to continue the following year and include grades five and six.

MOREHEAD, Ky., -----A program to provide trained teachers for a growing number of two-year colleges and other institutions of higher education has been adopted by Morehead State University.

The Board of Regents yesterday approved a curriculum leading to the new degree of Master of Higher Education as a means of helping relieve a shortage of trained college teachers.

Dr. Jarvis Hill, Dean of Graduate Programs at Morehead State, said the proposed curriculum would provide instruction in the goals and problems of higher education as well as strong training in the teaching fields.

Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State, said the University was uniquely qualified to offer the new program. The faculty has five members with doctor's degrees in higher education and two others are on leave working on doctorates in the field.

Higher education was one of three new curricula approved by the Regents. Four-year degree programs will be offered in earth science and geology and a two-year program in social work. Students will be able to earn a non-teaching bachelor of science degree with a major in geology.

The two-year program, leading to the Associate of Applied Arts degree, will train personnel to fill non-professional service positions with social work agencies.

The Board adopted a record budget of $10,557,831 for operating the University in the fiscal year starting July 1. The amount is 22.8 per cent greater than the $8,596,053 authorized for the current year.

About 65 per cent of the allocation of $7, 142, 381 approved for educational and general operations will be used for instructional and salaries and expenses. In 1966-67, $5, 929, 305 was spent for these services.

The Commonwealth of Kentucky is providing $4, 625, 000 for the current year, with the balance of the funds to come from student fees and auxiliary services. Last year the state allocated $3, 951, 155 to Morehead State.

In other action the Regents adopted the 1967-68 personnel roster, including 36 staff members for the summer term, and approved a life insurance program for full-time employees.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --University students will soon be able to study Kentucky state government at first hand, not on occasional one-day visits, but daily for a full seven months.

Morehead State University has joined with other state universities and Kentucky State College in the unique study of internship program known as "The Frankfort Semester."

Selected students will work each afternoon in a state agency at the Capitol after attending special morning classes in state government at Kentucky State College.

Starting this fall, each participating university will enroll two students and two alternates in the program. In succeeding semesters three will be selected from each university.

In the summer following their internship, the students will attend a class in Special Problems of Public Administration and write a research paper.

The faculty for the Frankfort Semester will include the staff of Kentucky State College and visiting lecturers from the administrative staff of the state government.

A stipend of $250 a month will be paid each student enrolled in the program.

The stated purpose of Frankfort Semester is "To provide orientation and unique educational experiences and special training, including that of research, for undergraduate students in the problems and administration of a state government, and to inspire intelligent and eager young men and women to seek challenging careers of public service at the state level."

Participants are not required but are encouraged to enter state employment after completing the course.

An institution becomes great because of the quality of the individuals in her "family," Morehead State University alumni have been told by Billy Joe Hall, a highway official and an alumnus and former faculty member.

He spoke at a breakfast meeting Friday to about 300 alumni and friends of the university who were attending the Kentucky Education Association convention at Louisville.

"If a small thing can be great, there is absolutely no reason that a large unit should not be just as great as the combination of the individual units as they multiply," he said.

Morehead State has "a much greater educational program than it did when I started as a freshman in 1954," he said in recounting the institution's growth in enrollment from 700 to 5,500.

"As we look to the day when our institution will have perhaps 10,000 students, we can look forward to even greater opportunities being provided for those who follow us in the halls on the Morehead campus."

Hall praised President Adron Doran, Vice President Warren C. Lappin and others responsible for the "outstanding job which was done during the transition from college to university."

"I have been extremely proud of the quality of the individuals who have been attracted to the Morehead faculty and staff. These individuals are complementing the many competent persons already on the faculty and staff to provide outstanding leadership in our family group. Obviously, the only way to have a quality institution is with quality people," he said.

Hall said the Morehead family consists of five groups: students, both off and on campus; alumni, graduates and other former students; the faculty; the administration, including those who serve at the state level up to the governor, and friends of the institution who do not fall into any of the previous categories.

Hall called on the alumni to become involved in the affairs of the university, and reminded them that "what happens to my alma mater happens to me."

He urged them to develop a sense of pride in the role Morehead State University plays in the overall development of Kentucky particularly in the educational improvement of the region it serves.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --More than 4,000 Morehead State University students and faculty members were told Thursday that honor is a display of the respect society feels for a person's character, position or achievement.

Dr. Norman Tant, Director of Instructional Media at Morehead, told the annual Honors Day gathering that "Honor is an intensely personal thing which can be conferred upon one only by someone else."

Speaking at the program which saw more than 500 Morehead students honored for high academic achievement, Dr. Tant said that honor is society's way of recognizing the individual.

Dr. Tant said the honored students were today's true non-conformists. He defined a non-conformist as one who dominates some phase of society while fulfilling some function in the life of the society.

A veteran of the Bataan Death March, Dr. Tant recently returned from the Philippines where he and others were honored for their service to that country in World War II.

Edward "Ted" Newcomb, a physical education major, was presented the new Man of the Year Award for the "best all-around male senior" based on scholarship and participation in extra-curricular activity.

Newcomb served as senior class president and past president of the Newman Club. He was a member of the track and cross country teams.

DR. LANGDON IS CONSULTANT
FOR INDIANA CONFERENCES

Dr. Golden I. Langdon, Morehead State University Director of Guidance Services, recently completed the first of a series of conferences sponsored by the Indiana State Department of Adult Basic Education. As lead consultant, Dr. Langdon was responsible for organizing the programs held at the Universities of Notre Dame and Purdue, and at Spring Mill Park. The initial series was designed to acquaint the 250 counselors who participated, with the place of counseling and guidance in programs for the under-educated adult. Dr. Langdon presented three papers (1) Counseling the Under-Educated Adult, (2) The Social-Psychological Sphere of the Under-Educated Adult, and (3) Informational Needs of the Under-Educated Adult.

Thirty of the participants will be selected to attend a one-week Inter-Current Workshop at Ball State University in June. Dr. Langdon will serve as consultant to the Workshop. The original group of counselors will again come together for a series of follow-up conferences in October and November and Dr. Langdon will serve as lead consultant.

According to Dr. Langdon this series of conferences marks a significant advance in offering services to the under-educated adult. This is a prototype program in that the approach is original and unique. It is anticipated that evaluations of the conferences will pave the way for program advances in other areas of the Country.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Morehead State University has taken steps to relieve a serious state and national shortage of trained personnel to supervise and direct public and private recreation.

Dr. Paul Ford Davis, Dean of the Undergraduate Programs, announced that a curriculum leading to the bachelor's degree in recreation will be offered starting next fall.

Graduates will be qualified to fill positions in state, national and voluntary service organizations which offer recreational programs, Dean Davis said.

Enrollees in the recreational program will complete seven semesters of intensive classroom study, then spend a "professional semester" on the job conducting a recreational program under supervision.

Dr. Davis said many recreational programs are being operated by unqualified personnel and plans have been dropped for others because of a lack of qualified staffs.

Five top positions in Kentucky state parks were filled last year with unqualified personnel, and most of the voluntary service organizations go outside the state to find leaders.

With one of the best enabling laws for the development, acquisition and operation of public recreation, Kentucky cities have not organized because of a shortage of trained personnel.

Dr. Davis said studies show that colleges are training less than one-sixth of the recreational leaders who will be needed in the next decade.

Some of the positions open to graduates of the program include:

Supervisors of municipal programs; directors of Boys' Clubs; executive directors of Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts; directors and field representatives for recreational opportunities 2222222

YMCA and YWCA; recreation directors and therapists in hospitals; school and private agency camp directors; service club directors, program directors with the armed forces; naturalists, planners and directors in state and federal parks; 4-H Club directors or rural recreation specialists; Christian education and recreation specialists and program directors or specialists in industry.

"Morehead State University is in an opportune position to develop a curriculum for the preparation of leaders for leisure which will meet the emerging demands of agencies of the Commonwealth and nation," said Dr. Davis.

A number of students enrolled in other programs will be eligible to transfer to the new recreational curriculum.

The program will be directed by Rex Chaney, who is working on his doctorate in recreation. Chaney is coach of the baseball team.

Specific objectives of the curriculum include: development of a sound philosophy of recreation and the ability to interpret it to others; focus attention on and heighten the personal qualities essential to recreation leaders; develop skills in activities; provide practical experience; train leaders to plan and carry out recreational services, and develop professional appreciation.

FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, MAY 28

MOREHEAD, Ky., May 28--Dr. Mary Northcutt, professor of education at Morehead State University and regional training director for Head Start, received the Alumni Association's Distinguished Faculty Award for 1967 at the annual Alumni Banquet last night.

A permanent plaque has been placed in the lobby of the Johnson Camden Library in honor of award recipients and a scholarship is awarded annually in the name of the distinguished professor. Dr. Northcutt will prepare a scholarly article for publication in the Morehead Alumnus and was awarded an engraved pen set last night.

The Alumni Association, in announcing the award, said, "Dr. Northcutt has greatly distinguished herself as a scholar, a teacher and a citizen. She has contributed much toward establishing the reputation for academic excellency which Morehead now enjoys."

The award was the fourth since the honor was established. Previous recipients were Dr. Wilhelm Exelbirt, professor of history, 1964; Dr. Margaret Heaslip, professor of biology, 1965; and Dr. J. E. Duncan, professor of music and Dean of the School of Humanities, 1966.

Approximately 500 graduates and friends of Morehead attended the annual gathering. Lucien Rice, president of the Alumni Association, reported on the campaign to raise funds for a campus Alumni House. President Adron Doran also spoke.

Outstanding Alumnus Awards were presented to two persons and Public Service Awards to three Morehead alumni who have distinguished themselves as public servants.

Presented Outstanding Alumnus Awards were Billy Joe Hall, executive assistant to the Kentucky highway commissioner and former Director of Alumni

MOREHEAD, Ky. -- Morehead State University has completed construction of an addition to its water processing plant which is expected to end a three-year water crisis on the campus and in the city.

Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State, announced completion of the $ 621,138 project in a letter to ~~Mayor William H. Layne~~ the city, which purchases its water from the University. His letter to Mayor William H. Layne said in part:

"Morehead State University has successfully completed the expansion of the water processing facilities on the campus and is prepared to furnish a reasonably adequate amount of filtered water to the City of Morehead."

The expanded university system is capable of cleaning and pumping more than two million gallons of water a day into lines on the Morehead State

~~The system in use for the past 17 years had a capacity of only~~
720,000 gallons a day if kept in operating ~~and~~ continuously. The first unit was built in 1936 to furnish water on campus when the student enrollment was ~~very~~ small. The capacity was ~~has~~ doubled in ~~the~~ 1950 when the university began to furnish water to the city.

With the rapid growth of the university and the city, consumption increased to 800,000 gallons a day, often reducing the amount kept in storage to the minimum required for emergencies. Only on weekends and holidays when large numbers of students were off-campus could the storage be increased.

The drain on the supply led to restrictions on the use of water by the university and city.

MOREHEAD, Ky. -- More than 250 educators from Northeast Kentucky are at Morehead State University this week preparing themselves to lead Head Start programs this summer in their home communities.

Administrators, teachers and teacher aides are undergoing an intensive course in dealing with deprived pre-school age children. Head Start prepares children for entry into the regular school program in the fall.

The educators, representing 22 school districts, are taught how to develop good social attitudes, overcome dietary problems, work with parents, and plan curricula and activities.

One of the unique features of the Morehead regional workshop is a demonstration of the results of Head Start training. The educators will observe two groups of children in their classroom activity.

One group will be composed of beginners, and the other will include a class of Head Start children combined with a kindergarten class at University Breckinridge School last year.

They will be able to see the progress made by the pre-school age children in attitudes and skills compared to the same qualities in the untrained group.

Morehead State University is operating the workshop under a contract with Volt Technical Corporation of Washington, D. C. The Morehead Head Start will be financed by a grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The educators heard Morehead President Adron Doran declare at an opening session that such programs as Head Start are the most significant developments for the future of education.

Dr. Doran said, "There is nothing more satisfying than the business of influencing the lives of people." He told them they should be proud of their part in taking deprived children and making them ready for their places in society.

MOREHEAD, Ky. -- Morehead State University's application for a Reserve Officer Training Corps unit has been reactivated by the Army and facilities for the unit were inspected Thursday.

The Army's decision on the application will be made by October 17, University officials were informed.

Consideration of Morehead's application was made possible by recent Congressional action permitting the establishment of 80 new ROTC units, Morehead President Adron Doran said.

Morehead facilities were inspected by Lt. Col. Thomas Harris, associate professor of military science at Eastern Kentucky State University.

He was assigned by the First Army to assist Morehead in filing its application and to conduct the inspection. Lt. Col. Harris briefed Morehead officials on the establishment and operation of an ROTC unit.

If the application is approved by the Army, a professor of military science will be assigned to the University next February to develop the curriculum, organize a staff and prepare the facilities. The program would then go into operation in the fall of 1968.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --A year-long program, designed to promote greater coordination of projects between agricultural and agriculture related agencies working in a five-county Northeastern Kentucky area, has been announced by Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University.

The counties involved will be Rowan, Bath, Montgomery, Menifee and Morgan, and the agencies, generally, will be:

Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, Division of Forestry of Kentucky, Farmers Home Administration, U. S. D. A. Forest Service, Soil Conservation Service and Vocational Agricultural Education offices.

An action-oriented program, aimed at encouraging these agencies to unite their forces for the initiation and development of the agricultural projects most needed in the area, has been established.

Two Morehead State University staff members will spend half time on the program, working with these and similar agencies in an attempt to coordinate their efforts for the promotion of the most needed and specific projects in the area. These staff members are:

Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, head of the Agriculture Department, and Robert H. Wolfe, assistant professor of agriculture and former Rowan County Agent.

By working with the agencies involved, Dr. Derrickson and Mr. Wolfe will seek to determine the most favorable or promising agricultural opportunities in each county and help provide the leadership for the promotion and development of the most appropriate project through the combined efforts of the federal and state agencies.

They also will organize and conduct special classes in communities where such action is needed. The duration and subject matter of these classes will depend upon the specific needs of the area.

A native of Eastern Kentucky, Dr. Derrickson has eight years' experience as superintendent of Robinson Agricultural Substation, a branch of the University of Kentucky, and four years with the Kentucky Agriculture Extension Service. He has been with the University 2 1/2 years.

Mr. Wolfe is a native of Manchester, Ky., and a graduate of Berea College and Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He was with the Kentucky Agriculture Extension Service for more than nine years before joining the University.

Scheduled to start July 1, the program will be financed by an $18,093.00 grant, of which $13,540.50 is being provided from federal funds under provisions of Title I of the Higher Education Act of 1965. The remaining $4,552.50 is being made available by the University.

MOREHEAD, Ky. -- More and better organized community recreation in a six-county Northeastern Kentucky area is the objective of a year-long stimulation and development program to be launched July 1 by Morehead State University.

The counties at which the program will be directed are Boyd, Elliott, Johnson, Mason, Pike and Rowan.

In charge of the program are two Morehead University staff members: Rex Chaney, assistant professor of recreation, and John R. Duncan, Jr., assistant professor of sociology.

Chaney and Duncan have been assigned to research the recreational needs in the selected areas and arrive at specific recommendations which could lead to the establishment of an organized, workable recreation program in each of the communities.

To do this, they first will solicit the interest and cooperation of the key leaders in the selected communities -- the mayor, school superintendent, city councilmen, public officials, leaders of civic groups and others.

These leaders will be asked to recommend other individuals in the community who can be helpful in the support of such a program, and from these two groups a planning committee will be formed to work with the Morehead consultants in making their study and recommendation.

At a later date, the recommendations derived will be presented to these same community leaders at which time such matters as recreation legislation, organizational steps, sources of assistance and finance, leadership sources and methods of motivating the populace will be discussed.

In June, 1968, following the smaller community meetings, a three-day culminating conference will be held at Morehead State University at which time state and federal recreation leaders will participate.

More than 40 Eastern Kentucky principals, science teachers and consultants are attending.

The project, the first of its kind ever conducted in the United States, involves teacher preparation in a brand new, highly advanced method of teaching science in the elementary school.

It involves a major leap from the almost complete lack of modern science found in present-day rural programs to one of the most sophisticated programs produced to date by the scientific community.

The process, developed by the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the National Science Foundation, has been pioneered in a few metropolitan areas, but this is the first time it has been introduced into a rural educational program.

In charge of the project is Dr. Crayton T. Jackson of the Morehead School of Sciences and Mathematics. Dr. Edgar McCullough, professor of geology at the University of Arizona, Tucson, is head teacher and co-director.

Three outstanding and experienced instructors have been brought to Morehead to lead the discussions. They are: Mrs. Alice Moses, supervising teacher at the University of Chicago; Mrs. Joyce Switzer of the Monmouth, Ill. public schools, and Morgan Tarrt of the Tucson public schools.

Led by Frank Stewart, Floyd County science consultant, 37 teachers and two principals from that county make up the majority of the project participants. Others include:

James Brammer, Rowan County Schools; Wilburn Goble, head teacher, Martin County Schools; Phillip Salisbury, Carter County; James R. Jones, Magoffin County, and Russell James of the Paintsville City Schools System.

The new teaching method will be launched this fall in seven of Floyd County's 20 elementary schools in the first through the fourth grades. In 1968, grades five and six will be added.

These schools will serve as models of a good science program in action and will play important roles in a larger project involving an 18-county area in Eastern Kentucky. Not only will the participating teachers implement an improved science program in their schools, but also will be used to train others in the larger project.

"This program conservatively is 10 to 20 years ahead of anything in use today," Morehead President Adron Doran said in greeting the participants. "It can well be one of the most significant forward steps ever taken in science education in Kentucky's school systems.

"We at Morehead are privileged to provide the facilities and the leadership for this project and for the other educational institutions and groups in Kentucky -- as well as the nation -- in taking the steps necessary to provide this advanced method of teaching science on the elementary level to the rural areas of our nation."

The project closes August 11.

MOREHEAD, KY. -- More and better organized community recreation in a six-county Northeastern Kentucky area is the objective of a year-long stimulation and development program to be launched July 1 by Morehead State University.

The counties at which the program will be directed are Boyd, Elliot, Johnson, Mason, Pike and Rowan.

In charge of the program are two Morehead University staff members: Rex Chaney, assistant professor of recreation, and John R. Duncan, Jr., assistant professor of sociology.

Chaney and Duncan have been assigned to research the recreational needs in the selected areas and arrive at specific recommendations which could lead to the establishment of an organized, workable recreation program in each of the communities.

To do this, they first will solicit the interest and cooperation of the key leaders in the selected communities -- the mayor, school superintendent, city councilmen, public officials, leaders of civic groups and others.

These leaders will be asked to recommend other individuals in the community who can be helpful in the support of such a program, and from these two groups a planning committee will be formed to work with the Morehead consultants in making their study and recommendation.

At a later date, the recommendations derived will be presented to these same community leaders at which time such matters as recreation legislation, organizational steps, sources of assistance and finance, leadership sources and methods of motivating the populace will be discussed.

In June, 1968, following the smaller community meetings, a three-day culminating conference will be held at Morehead State University at which time state and federal recreation leaders will participate.

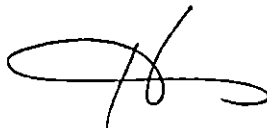

The 12-month study is being financed by a total grant of $25,746.00, of which $19,310.00 is being provided under provisions of Title I of the Higher Education Act of 1965. The remaining $6,436.00 is being provided by Morehead State University.

MOREHEAD, Ky. -- More than 100 superintendents, principals and teachers from West Virginia, Southern Ohio and Eastern Kentucky schools attended the second annual Linguistics Conference held this week at Morehead State University.

Following a welcoming address by Dr. Adron Doran, President of the University, Edward B. Jenkinson, Director of the Curriculum Center at Indiana University, was the featured speaker at a summer student body convocation opening the Conference. His topic was: "The Process of Discovery in the English Class."

The Conference was led by Dr. Lewis W. Barnes of the University's School of Humanities and in conjunction with the Division of School Relations.

The purpose of the Conference is to acquaint those attending with the latest developments in the teaching and application of applied linguistics.

Others on the program in addition to Mr. Jenkinson and Dr. Barnes, who discussed, "Linguistics in Greater-Than-Sentence Units", included:

Dr. Gary Harmon, Chairman of the Division of Languages and Literature, who discussed, "Sociolinguistics," Dr. Charles Pelfrey, professor of English, who spoke on "The Question of Usage as Structured within Linguistics," and Victor Venettozzi, associate professor of English, whose topic was, "Composition Through Linguistics." Dr. Ruth Barnes also participated, presenting special comments and observations on the Conference at the concluding luncheon meeting.

A third Conference is scheduled for next spring on the Morehead campus, although the exact date has not yet been announced.

The Conference is the continuation of a Morehead State University program started 15 months ago by the English faculty in the School of Humanities and during which time a Master's Degree program in English has been developed along with two additional undergraduate majors.

In conjunction with the Division of School Relations, Dr. Barnes has taught eight extension courses in linguistics for graduate credit, one of which was televised over WSAZ-TV, Huntington, W. Va. This fall extension courses will be offered at Covington and Martin.

Beginning September 18, Dr. Barnes also will teach a course in Grammar and Composition over WFPK-TV-UHF, Channel 15, Louisville. Included will be 45 presentations, each 30 minutes in length, and the course will run for 15 weeks. Three semester hours of credit at both the graduate and undergraduate level will be awarded.

More than 150 people in the Louisville and Southern Indiana area already have expressed an interest in the televised program this fall.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --Twelve business education teachers from Kentucky and Ohio schools are attending a two-week Machine Shorthand Workshop at Morehead State University.

Four hours of classwork and practical application is being devoted daily to mastering the operation of the shorthand machine and to the techniques applicable to teaching its use in the classroom.

Attending the Morehead Workshop from Kentucky schools are: Mrs. Leon Winburn, Stanton; Mrs. Joan Darnall, Miss Linda Kelley and Mrs. Cinda Todd, Flemingsburg; Mrs. Constance McVoy, Paducah; and Mrs. Peggy Spradlin, Mrs. Gail Ousley, Mrs. Carole McDaniel and Mrs. Carole Pierce, Morehead.

From Ohio schools are Mrs. Helen Johnson, Middletown, and Miss Mary Lou Keller and Miss Linda Keller of Corning.

Dr. William Keller and Dr. Robert Motley of the Morehead Business Education Department are conducting the workshop, one of 30 being held on university and college campuses across the country this summer.

Present University plans call for a similar workshop to be held on the Morehead campus every other summer in the future. A course in machine shorthand also will be offered Morehead University students, beginning September, 1968, to provide them with a choice between the generally-used Gregg method and the increasingly popular machine method.

The workshop will end June 30.

MOREHEAD, Ky. — One hundred eager high school seniors-to-be began this week an intensive summer's study to prepare themselves for enrollment next year in college.

They are participating in Morehead State University's second annual Upward Bound program.

Sponsored by Morehead and the U. S. Office of Economic Opportunity, the program offers academic and cultural training to better prepare students for campus living.

The enrollees were greeted on their arrival Wednesday by Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University, and Dr. Thomas Billings, Deputy Director of Upward Bound from the OEO in Washington, D. C.

The students will be on campus seven weeks, June 14-August 1. They will be invited back during the next school year to special events.

They come from seven Eastern Kentucky counties: Bath, Boyd, Elliott, Johnson, Magoffin, Mason and Morgan. They were selected on the recommendation of their superintendents, principals, guidance counselors, public assistance officers and Community Action Agencies.

The program includes classes in various academic subjects, field trips, seminars, physical training and practical experiences in laboratories.

The academic curriculum includes required courses in science and mathematics; English, speech and social studies; and physical education and health. In addition each enrollee chooses an elective course from the applied arts or the fine arts.

The cultural training includes group recreation, seminars, a talent show, and field trips to the State Capitol at Frankfort, an opera performance, and the outdoor drama "The Book of Job" at Pineville.

Training is conducted by members of the University faculty and secondary teachers from the school systems from which the students come. Morehead students serve as tutor-counselors and in the dormitories.

Upward Bound students are housed in two air-conditioned residence halls. The boys are assigned to Waterfield Hall and the girls live in Fields Hall. Members of the staff live in the dormitories to be available to assist the trainees.

Each trainee is given a medical examination, dental care, a chest x-ray and provided with accident insurance. The cost of the services is financed by a $130,000 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The students attend class from 8:40 a.m. through 5 p.m. daily. They also attend evening seminars through Thursday. Friday night is reserved for recreation and the field trips are scheduled for Saturday evenings. Participants are encouraged to attend church services on Sunday.

Thirteen students are attending morning classes in English and American History at University Breckinridge School and taking part in Upward Bound programs in the afternoon and weekends.

Some of the mathematics classes make use of the computer system at Breckinridge School for instruction. Lessons are sent from a computer at Palo Alto, California, to a teletype machine at Breckinridge. The system was installed this spring by Central Midwestern Regional Educational Laboratories at St. Louis for use in Eastern Kentucky.

In addition to the classroom studies, the students will also engage in practical laboratory experiments. Speech students will write and produce a radio show "Upward Bound Upbeat" on the campus radio station WMKY-FM. Science students will conduct weather surveys and prepare weather reports for the radio.

Activities in the Upward Bound are closely supervised by the staff. Students are required to be in their dormitory rooms at specified hours each night. During the week, the hour between 9:30 and 10:30 p.m. is set aside for study.

The program is under the direction of Dr. Morris Norfleet, Director of Research and Development at Morehead; Jack Webb, academic director, and Miss Carole Carte, administrative director.

MEMORANDUM

To: Superintendents, Principals, Supervisors, Counselors and Teachers

From: Adron Doran, President
Monroe Wicker, Director, Division of School Relations
Morehead State University

Date: May 15, 1967

We are drafting final plans for a Conference on Education to be held on the campus of Morehead State University on Friday, July 21, 1967. We think this will be one of the most significant conferences which we will hold during the 1967 summer session and one of the most outstanding conferences we have ever held on our campus.

The Honorable Harold Howe, II, United States Commissioner of Education, will be our featured speaker. It is so seldom that we have an opportunity to have a person of Dr. Howe's ability and position to visit with us in Eastern Kentucky. We think he will provide a great opportunity for all of us to discuss with him some of the critical problems facing education in America and in our region.

The persons who attend the conference will register in the Lobby of Button Auditorium from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m. , EST. Commissioner Howe will speak at a general assembly at 11 a. m. in Button Auditorium. We will hold a luncheon in the Cafeteria of the Doran Student House at 12:30 for all the visitors who attend the conference. At the luncheon we will request Commissioner Howe to conduct a discussion period at which the participants will have the opportunity to raise questions. Following the luncheon we will arrange for the various groups to meet separately for whatever discussion or business each group may desire.

We are anxious to have the largest group at this conference which we can possibly assemble from all over Kentucky.

Mark your calendar now for Friday, July 21, 1967!

MOREHEAD, KY. -- Two seniors, Barry Lynn Phillips of Grahn, Ky., and Leo A. Marcum, Morehead, have been named the first Morehead State University students to attend the newly-established Frankfort Semester in the Kentucky state capitol this fall, Dr. R. H. Playforth, Dean of the School of Social Science, has announced.

Phillips, son of Mrs. Kathleen B. Phillips, Rantoul, Ill., is majoring in Political Science and has maintained virtually an "A" average since transferring to Morehead from the University of Illinois in the fall of 1965.

Marcum, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Marcum of Beauty, Ky., in Martin County, has a double major -- Political Science and Economics and Sociology. An outstanding student, he has maintained an "A" average since coming to Morehead in 1965 from Lee's Junior College at Jackson, Ky.

The Frankfort Semester is a seven-month academic and practical experience program in state government and public administration for selected students in social sciences at Kentucky's four new state universities--Morehead, Murray, Western and Eastern--and Kentucky State College at Frankfort.

The program, designed to encourage outstanding young men and women to seek challenging careers of public service at the state government level, is divided into daily classroom and practical work assignments.

A total of 16 semester hours of credit is scheduled in the classroom in courses including Public Personnel Administration, Public Finance, Kentucky Government and Constitution, Legislative Process and Special Problems in Public Administration.

The faculty for the Frankfort Semester will include visiting lecturers from state government agencies, staff members of Kentucky State College and other authorities in their respective fields.

Although the Frankfort Semester appointees will pay their own tuition, each will receive $250 per month from a special state fund during the seven months of the program.

Young Phillips and Marcum will spend their fall 1967 semester in Frankfort, before returning to the Morehead campus next spring for their graduation semester, after which they will again go to Frankfort for their seminars in state government and will be assigned to a state agency for their practical experience during the summer.

Next spring, three students will be selected from each of the cooperating institutions to participate in the program.

A suggested introduction for Dr. Adron Doran, President
Morehead State University

Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University, is a man whose devotion and untiring efforts to educational causes have earned for him a beloved spot in the hearts of his fellow Kentuckians.

The popular educator, who received the "Distinguished Kentuckian Award" from Governor Edward T. Breathitt in 1966, has been president of Morehead State since 1954. During that period it has shown a phenomenal growth equalled by few institutions of higher learning in the United States

- . . . it advanced from college to university status
- . . . the enrollment has increased ninefold
- . . . over 30 major structures have been added, and with the buildings now under construction and in the planning stage, total over $4,000,000 in construction since 1954
- . . . the faculty has grown from 46 to 220
- . . . the academic program has been greatly strengthened and broadened.

Dr. Doran has served as president of two different district education associations in Kentucky and as president of the Kentucky Education Association. He is currently a member of the Advisory Committee on Education to the Appalachian Commission, the National Education Association Legislative Commission and has led Morehead State into involvement with regional development.

A native of Graves County, Kentucky, he was a teacher, coach and principal in Western Kentucky for 15 years, and served as a member of the House of Representatives for four terms. He was Speaker of the House in 1950.

Dr. Doran holds the AB and MA degrees from Murray State University and the EdD degree from the University of Kentucky. He is married to the former Mignon McClain of Sedalia — a charming lady who is extremely active on the Morehead campus and who served a two-year term as president of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs.

PREHISTORIC MAN UNEARTHED IN ROWAN COUNTY

During February of 1966 an archeological survey team was organized on the campus of Morehead State University under the direction of Richard G. Eversole Instructor of Biology; The members of this organization felt that there was a need to uncover and preserve the prehistoric accounts of Rowan County by establishing an Archeological Museum. They further believed that the museum and all information pertaining to prehistoric man which could be collected should be made available to the general public. In March of 1966, with financial support obtained from the Faculty Research Committee of Morehead State University the project was soon started.

A few weeks after the actual field work began, the remains of prehistoric man was unearthed on the property of Ray Perry at Bangor, Rowan County, Kentucky. The skeletal remains of ten adults and two infants were found in a semi-cave located at the base of a large sandstone cliff. Numerous artifacts and possessions of the people who had lived in this primitive setting were also found.

From the very beginning the shelters proved to be unique. Pioneers had used the caves as shelters for their cattle and first observations gave little indication that early man had ever been in the vicinity. However, test holes revealed numerous artifacts, and when layers of the entire floor were stripped away, secrets of the past were uncovered. Deeper and deeper into the powdery dirt the spade was pushed and each time the dirt was turned some new treasure was found. The search continued downward to a depth of eight feet and then the original floor was reached. Over 5,000 man hours were required to remove such a quantity of dirt, but the time was well spent and the reward great. Over three thousand arrowpoints, flint knives, scraper, pottery fragments, tools luxury items and other artifacts were removed along with the twelve skeletons.

Unfortunately, when the finds are removed from the earth, the job has just begun. In order to reconstruct the story of the past, months of tedious laboratory work must be completed before accurate conclusions can be formed. However, some conclusions have been made and the unique finds follow.

Bone and Charcoal Samples Dated.

Human bone and charcoal samples from campfires were sent to one of the Nations leading laboratories for dating. The first sample sent to Geochron Laboratories, Inc. of Cambridge, Mass., was that of a man found in a crevice located in the roof of the cave. The results of their test revealed that the man had lived in Rowan County 2165 years ago or 215 B.C. The second sample was a piece of charcoal taken from a campfire which was in close association with other artifacts. The results received from Geochron indicated that the wood material was 4,356 years old.

Unique Skeletal Features =by Allen Lake

There are a number of unique features of the skulls that have been recovered. The oldest skull that is largely intact dates from about 4000 years ago. It is massive in terms of bone construction and quite long. The term for long headedness is dolichocephaly. This skull is strikingly dolichocephalic with a cephalic index of 73. (80 is the point of comparison)

One skull fragment was especially unusual in that besides having one extra bone in the back of the head, another bone was divided by a suture making actually two extra bones. The extra bone is called an "Inca" bone because it has been noted by anthropologists working with the remains of the ancient Incas found this anomaly so frequently. The second extra bone is due to a failure in fusing of one of the parts of the occipital bones. Ordinarily the union of these parts occur before birth and so this variation resulted from a prenatal disturbance. None of the other skulls brought in showed any similar variations.

A third skull showed another variation in that the back right side of the skull was so flattened that two-thirds of the brain volume were contained in the left side of the skull. Some Indians cultures made it a practice to carry infants in cradleboards. If the head was strapped in, flattening occurred both in front due to the ever-present strap and in back due to the pressure of the head against the cradle-board. In this case the flattening is only in the back and only on one side of the back. This deformity was then probably due to a cradle-board restriction even more primitive than those having the head strapped in place. The child apparently held its head to one side habitually and carried through life the resultant malformation.

Still another skull belonged to a young woman of 16 to 18 years of age. The formation of this skull was perfect, but even at this age her teeth had been worn heavily by some abrasive in the food (possibly sand in ground corn). This young lady still had her wisdom teeth in an uncut condition.

Dying young was the rule rather than the exception in this primitive world. "Old" men or women display the hardship of their lives in their skeletal remains, but few lived past their thirtieth summer. Life was hard in those days.

Other Interesting Artifacts

A few projectile points and other crude tools have been unearthed which are characteristic of those made by the earliest man in North America. A few of the pieces show the great craftsmanship of their maker and in many ways create a mental picture of the people who lived as early as 13,000 B.C.

In order for the public to view the remains and artifacts of Rowan County's first settlers, a display has been assembled on the first floor of Lappin Hall on the campus of Morehead State University. The display has been arranged in a manner so that a story is told about the men who lived here so very long ago. The general public may view the exhibit on Friday March 24, from 8:00 AM to 8:00 PM and on Saturday, March 25 from 8:00 AM to 6:00 PM. Someone will be present at all times to answer any question pertaining to the display.

An Archeological Society of Morehead State University is now being formed and it is the desire of the members that archeological interest will be stimulated in Rowan County. Interested parties are encouraged to seek membership, and the present members are at this time making a plea to all amateur collectors to co-operate in keeping records on their finds. They would also like to encourage all amateurs to take all precautions while excavating so that 15,000 years of history is not destroyed. This is not a plea for amateurs to give up their collections, but a plea to increase knowledge by keeping records and asking for help when it is needed.

At this time the survey team would like to extend their appreciation to Mr. Ray Perry and the many other wonderful people who have so graciously rendered their services in making this work a success. Come in and see the display on March the 24 and 25. We will be more than glad to explain the results of our findings to each of you personally . .

ADDRESS BY BILLY JOE HALL
EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT TO COMMISSIONER
DEPARTMENT OF HIGHWAYS
MOREHEAD STATE UNIVERSITY BREAKFAST
LOUISVILLE - BROWN HOTEL
FRIDAY, April 14, 1967

When I was asked whether I would consider speaking on this occasion, I immediately began wondering what I would talk about. You might expect me to talk about highways- since that is the area in which I now work, or, at this particular season, if you knew my connections, you might expect me to talk a little politics. I feel sure that I could say a few words about either or both of these subjects; however, I am going to talk a few minutes to you about another subject which is vitally important to me, and, I hope, is just as important to you.

If I chose a topic for these few remarks to you, I would call it: A QUALITY UNIVERSITY - - A FAMILY OBJECTIVE. Perhaps this seems a little strange at the outset, but I hope as I continue you will begin to catch a little of the spirit in which I present these remarks.

(Similarity to Pastor's Sermon)
I believe that an individual - regardless of who he is or where he is going, or perhaps more importantly - where he has been - should consider himself a part of a family. This, of course, has two distinct applications - the earthly, physical family into which he is born, and the true alma mater (L. fostering mother) which is applied to the college or university which he has attended. For the purpose of our discussion this morning, I will talk about the latter application.

The true college or university family involves five distinct groups: (1) the students, both on and off the campus, (2) the alumni, graduates and other former students, (3) the faculty, (4) the administration, which in our case includes those who serve at the state level up to and including, the Governor of the Commonwealth, and (5) friends of the institution who do not fall in the other categories. When we consider that our family is this large, it is a bit startling at first. However, I do not believe we can have the true picture of our situation - and certainly we cannot see our own individual responsibilities until we put Morehead State University into this broad and far-reaching perspective.

In this first year of Morehead State University as a university, I believe it behooves us to take a long hard look at an idea which has been present in our society for many years. There are those who would have us believe that we cannot have quality and quantity at the same time. This idea is, quite obviously, an erroneous one. If a small thing can be great, there is absolutely no reason that a large unit should not be just as great as the ^{combination} of the individual units ^{as they} ~~are combined~~ and multiply. Morehead State University - with its tremendous growth in the past thirteen years from 700 students to 5,500 students - now provides a much greater education ²¹ program than it did when I started as a freshman in 1954. As we look to the day when our institution will have perhaps 10,000 students, we can look forward to ^{even} greater opportunities being provided ^{for} to those who follow us in the halls on the Morehead campus.

At this point, I would like to pause a moment to salute President Doran, Dean Lappin, and all the others responsible for the outstanding job which was done during the transition from College to University. I have been extremely proud of the quality of the individuals who have been attracted to the Morehead faculty and staff since I left there almost four years ago. These individuals are complementing the many competent persons already on the faculty and staff to provide outstanding leadership in our family group. Obviously, the only way to have a quality institution is with quality people.

Let me part from this line of thought for a moment to suggest an item which I judge to be most important. It is hard for us to admit it sometimes but our own ideas are ~~now~~ always best. It is natural for us to think that what we believe is right. Let me suggest that in any family situation we may not agree with all the decisions which are made but, if we are among the loyal family members, we certainly won't "quit the family" because of the decision. The administration of any education^{a/} institution is confronted daily with important decisions and it is our responsibility as alumni, as faculty, and as friends, to support these decisions.

A simple illustration of this is found in the athletic program. The mere fact that I recommend an athlete to one of the coaches on the Morehead staff does not make that person capable of playing varsity ball in the Ohio Valley Conference. On the other hand - if I have recommended a prospective ball player - and he is ~~now~~ given a scholarship at Morehead - this does not give me reason to sever my relationship with the institution. You don't have to look very deeply into the situation to see immediately that there are not enough scholarships available to pass out among the hundreds of alumni.

A good guideline for us to follow is that maximum effort by each family member is essential to the realization of the objective and one cannot function properly without the loyal support of the others.

In any gathering where alumni are together, there is no substitute for the truth that "what happens to my alma mater happens to me." The successes or failures of Morehead State University affect each of us regardless of our connection with the institution. You have heard many times the statement that students can transfer, faculty members can go to new jobs, but the degrees we have earned will always be from Morehead State. The image of Morehead State University is, in a very real sense, our own image. We must see that it continues to improve and gain strength in the days ahead.

We must develop a sense of pride in Morehead State University - particularly in the role it is playing in the overall development of Kentucky, and, even more specifically, in the part it is playing in the educational improvement of the region it serves. This pride must be fostered by acts of loyalty which we can accomplish at every opportunity - and - these opportunities are both frequent and numerous - if we are ready for them.

One might compare his loyalty to his alma mater to his loyalty to his own family after marriage. The alarming thing, however, is the number of persons who are taken over by their in-laws. It appears that too many colleges and university graduates have forsaken their own alma maters to transfer their loyalties to an adopted family. You and I need to convince our friends that our loyalties belong with Morehead State University.

Let me suggest a few characteristics which we should attempt to develop as we consider our relationships to Morehead State University.

(1) A sense of pride - we have scores of reasons to be proud of Morehead State University. Let's continue to look for achievement of our institution.

(2) A sense of belonging - every one of us is a definite part of the total University family. If we consider our "family membership" we will want to participate in its activities.

(3) A sense of loyalty - as we learned in our first patriotic lessons - and perhaps you, as I, learned in Boy Scouts - there is no substitute for loyalty.

(4) A sense of understanding - this involves our attempts to see the other side(s) of any activity with which the University may be involved.

(5) A sense of responsibility - the continued progress of our University will increasingly depend on our assuming our proper roles as family members.

(6) A willingness to contribute - many programs of the Alumni Association are dependent upon our support in a tangible way. I would particularly urge your support of the Alumni House project and the Scholarship program. You should also attend family reunions.

(7) A willingness to be known as a family member - if you check with my associates in Frankfort, I believe, they would recognize me, perhaps more than in any other way as a former Morehead student and staff member.

I was visiting the headquarters of a particular Candidate for Governor and one of the campaign leaders was making a telephone call to Murray.

Morehead Breakfast 000000

She turned and asked "Billy Joe, is it all right for me to call Murray?" My reply was that it was permissible "this year." You can see the point - I am recognized as a disciple of Morehead State University. I hope you are too!

I heard a story recently which I believe is an appropriate conclusion to my remarks, and I shall share it with you. It seems that the barnyard food supply was getting scarce and a chicken and a pig decided that they must leave in search of food. They traveled down the road - and after several hours' search - they were getting desperate. The chicken said to the pig, "I know what we can do, we can have ham and eggs." The pig thought for a minute and then replied, "That might be ok with you, only laying a couple of eggs." "But," he continued, "for me that would mean total commitment."

I am sure President Doran - or no other person at Morehead - expects this drastic kind of "total commitment" but I hope you will join me in a renewed dedication to assist in any way possible in the forwarding of "a quality University."

WMKY-FM PRODUCES MSU IN REVIEW

President and Mrs. Adorn Doran confer with director Gene Clark just prior to air time when WMKY-FM presented MSU IN REVIEW, a recap of the events and scenes, in sound, of the fall semester at Moorehead State University.

Radio Station WMKY-FM presented a recap of the outstanding events and scenes, in sound, which occurred on the Moorehead State University campus during the fall semester of 1966-67.

Four full hours were packed with memories of the semester. Some of the highlights were: a four minute review of the Morehead-Eastern Kentucky State University football game giving the Eagles the championship spot in the Ohio Valley Conference, a look at the rapid construction on the campus and a spot check of the Homecoming activities.

The broadcast was a combined effort of three classes at Morehead: Radio Production-Director, Radio Announcing and Radio Workshop. Gary Yarus, Program Director, served as moderator, thus supplying the tying link to each segment.

A total of 188 hours were spent on engineering, production, announcing, directing and promoting the program.

Several remote locations were set up on the campus for each segment, including one at the President's Home. Dr. and Mrs. Adorn Doran gave a complete summary of the semester, recalling the awards and accomplishments of the university.

Another special broadcast was Registration Central. During registration for the second semester, remote units broadcast up-to-the-minute reports of class changes, procedures for payment of fees, purchase of books and other registration information from a position overlooking the registration area.

"WHAT IS HONOR?"

HONORS DAY ADDRESS, MAY 18, 1967

By Norman Tant

President Doran, Members of the Faculty, Students, Guests of the University, I consider it an honor to have been asked to deliver the Honors Day address. Recent events in my own life have caused me to reflect upon the meaning of the word honor. During the next quarter of an hour I want to share with you my thinking and one or two pertinent experiences which acted as the catalytic agent for these thoughts.

Running through the dictionary definitions of the word honor are such words as great regard, dignity, distinction, treat with respect, reputation, integrity. A brief and very lucid definition reads: "Honor means respect felt or shown in acknowledgement of a person's high character or position or in appreciation of something he has done with high courage or ability."

If one thinks about these descriptive phrases a bit, it becomes clear that honor is an intensely personal thing which can be conferred upon him only by someone else. Any attempt to confer an honor upon one's self rarely fools anyone. The pompous dictators who award themselves high military decorations which ordinarily carry with them great honor are privately jeered and laughed at while lower ranking men who have earned the awards under difficult conditions are admired and respected.

Honor, then, is a sort of psychic interplay between the individual man and his environing society. I say "environing society" so as to make clear that the society which enters into this psychic interplay may be any group in which a person happens to find himself, not just his own immediate social grouping such as a club, school, community, state or even his own nation.

An individual to whom unusual respect or recognition is extended is an ascendant individual, one who dominates society while fulfilling a function in the life of that society. In this context, as stated by Dr. E. A. Ross, one of the founding fathers of American sociology, the individual can and does contribute to social order just as society contributes to the individual.

Last month I had a rare privilege. I went back half-way across the world to visit an area in the Philippine Islands where I acquired many of the most vivid memories of my life--Bataan and the route of what is now known as the Bataan Death March.

I first went to Manila 26 years ago next month aboard the ocean liner President Taft as a volunteer $21.00 a month private in the Army of the United States. To my very great astonishment I saw that self-same President Taft riding at anchor in Manila Bay last month, looking exactly as I remembered she looked 26 years ago. It was almost as if I had accidentally gotten into the Time Tunnel of television fame. But that was about the only thing that was the same.

Along with a great many Filipinos and Americans I retraced the long narrow road we walked 25 year ago. The emotional impact was far greater than I had anticipated. Many strong men wept that day, but not so much from the memories that flooded back when we recognized particular places along the road--here on this bridge I saved my buddy Glenn Rial's life--there, in that bend, a quick shove from some fellow saved my life--in that patched up cathedral, gutted by fire and bombs then, I got to stop a few minutes and eat a few bites of rice, the first food in seven-days--down yonder around that bend is approximately where I stepped on a dead man in the dark the first time in my life--those memories did not upset me, for I saw so much death in the camp which lay at the end of the march that the dead out-numbered the living within four months and death became the normal state of man.

The emotions that rose within me came from seeing countless thousands of people of another nation, another race, another culture lining the road waving their own flag and the Stars and Stripes, greeting us with a continuous ear-splitting roll of cheers and showering us with flower petals. When our buses stopped at significant points and towns, and I stepped off into the milling throngs to exchange our mutual sign of the V and the cry "Victory, Joe!" I was so moved that I could not even think to take a picture of the sight. When a local band would greet us with "God Bless America," and Filipinos and Americans joined together singing that grand old song it aroused feelings which I cannot describe. These people were honoring my country and my flag. You cannot know how important that flag is until you have been stripped of its protection, deprived of every right and decency and forced to live on a level more brutal and degrading than a slave's for 3½ years. Those who make headlines by desecrating and dishonoring the flag should have to live awhile without its protection. It would be an enlightening experience. These people along the road were honoring me also as a participant in a historic event of a quarter of a century ago which was at once a military defeat and a victory in that the resistance of a relatively insignificant force of men fighting on 12 ounces of food a day in the jungles of Bataan for over three months had wrecked the entire timetable of the Japanese Empire for conquering all of Southeast Asia, and saved Australia as the springboard for eventual victory in the Pacific for our side.

The formal parades, speeches, banquets, invitations to dinners and all the rest that came after, satisfying though they were, could not equal the esteem and respect given by the people along that route, for they were all evidences of honor spontaneously and freely extended to me and my comrades-in-arms, both living and dead. It was a deeply satisfying experience, for I have in common with all mankind of all times the need for expressions of approval and respect. The person who says he doesn't need them is seriously warped, or he is lying.

These experiences also brought forcibly home to me that honor is society's manner of recognizing the individual. Periodically this is done ceremonially as a means of rewarding the individual and at the same time offering an incentive to other members of the group to strive harder in acceptable patterns in order to achieve the satisfying approval the group gives a noteworthy individual.

We hear much today of the individual's rights, prerogatives, liberties and privileges. It appears to me as I survey the contemporary scene that many of the more notorious ones who demand their rights and privileges with great insistence, and go to nauseous lengths trying to get what they think they ought to have, that they have not learned some fundamental facts. For every right there is a responsibility; for every privilege there is a price to pay; for every liberty there is an obligation. The other side of the coin of freedom is responsibility. It has ever been thus, and I have no doubt that it will continue to be so.

The silly, sick and sickening fringe groups who profess to be nonconformists--their idea of individualism--are the most rigidly conformist the world has ever seen, for these erstwhile nonconformists are so rigid in their conformity to their nonconformist patterns that should one of these nonconformists fail to conform with their groups' ideas of nonconformity they would be expelled for failing to conform! The pitiful thing about them is that they have adopted ^{pseudo-}~~the~~ raiments of nonconformity while not seeing that true nonconformity and individualism run much deeper than a beard, long hair, ratty clothing and smelly armpits. Superiority ~~is~~ in the many fields of intellectual and social achievement is true nonconformity and individualism.

I pity the misguided ones who have taken a very small molehill of experience and understanding and magnified it into a mountain of conceit and presumptuousness. Their vaunted individualism is directed toward dishonor and disrespect. These, too, can be achieved and once achieved they are ^{difficult} ~~hard~~ to discard.

We are here today in a ceremonial recognition of individuals who have dominated some segment of our University society while fulfilling a function in the life of this society. Here, then, are the true nonconformists and individualists among us. I salute you, one and all!
