PENNSYLVANIA CAPITOL GRAB

The Enormous Steal of That New Building Runs up to the Millions.

Pennsylvania's investigation of her magnificent new State Capitol is on, and the indications of graft in the $13,000,000 edifice are overpowering. The building was estimated to cost $4,000,000 but has cost more than three times that sum. Over $8,000,000 was spent alone in furnishing it. It stands as a gorgeous monument of fraud and mismanagement, more ornate than a Hindoo temple, more gaudy than a Russian cathedral, more barbaric in its ornamentation than a mosque and parts of it are as false as temporary show palace on an exposition midway.

It is crowded with bronze and mahogany paid for by the pound and yard. It is a dream of Babylonian prodigality. There are telephone booths that cost $3,000 each, paid for by the cubic yard including the air. Massive chandeliers weighing tons were paid for by the pound. Some fixtures cost $20,000 apiece. All bronzes cost the State $4.95 a pound. Here are some extravagant charges for "furnishings": Marble wainscoting, etc., $278,809; flues, fireplaces, etc., $21,237; hardwood parqueting flooring, $142,512; telephone wiring, $17,666; carved panels, etc., $889,978; thermostats, etc., $59,408.

Painting and decorating walls, $789,473; one firm offered to do it for $164,000.

Parquetry flooring, $1.12 per foot, it cost the contractor 67c a foot.

Mahogany rostrums, $800,000.

Governor Pennypacker, under whose administration this princely pile was built, defending the expenditure of twice the cost of the building alone for furnishings, said that the building commission had been moved by a desire for "results commensurate with the importance of the Commonwealth and creditable to its worthy people." At present the "worthy people" are kicking themselves hard over their importance.

Mr. M. F. S. Bowen, of Wayne, W. Va., writes: "I was a sufferer from kidney disease, so that at times I could not get out of bed, and when I did I could not stand straight. I took Foley's Kidney Cure. One dollar bottle and part of the second cure me entirely." Foley's Kidney Cure, wonders where others are total failures. W. M. Armstrong.

Runs Amuck.

Charles Smith, a Kentucky mountaineer, created a panic on a C. & O. train from Maysville to Newport last Friday. Smith drew a revolver and threatened to shoot up the train, passed a colored woman through two coaches. A brakeman fought with Smith, but the mountaineer used brass knuckles and nearly scalped the brakeman. Police men met the train at Newport and subdued Smith. They found a dirk, the gun and knucks on their prisoner.

RHEUMATISM MAKES LIFE MISERABLE.

A happy home is the most valuable possession that is within the reach of mankind, but you cannot enjoy its comforts if you are suffering from rheumatism. You throw aside business cares when you enter your home; and you can be relieved of those rheumatic pains also by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. One application will give you relief and its continued use for a short time will bring about a permanent cure. For sale by M. W. Armstrong at Olive Hill, Ky.

uniform Food Legislation.

Prospects are becoming more and more definite that the article is to include Kentucky, and that the next session of the Kentucky Legislature will be called on to pass a model law to be framed by a joint conference of State and Federal authorities.

CAUGHT COLD WHILE HUNTING A BRIBELAR.

Mr. Wm. Thos. Lanagan, provincial Constable at Chapeau, Ontario, says: "I caught a severe cold while hunting a burglar in the forest swamp last fall. Hearing of Chamberlain's cough remedy, I tried it, after using two small bottles, I was completely cured." This remedy is intended especially for coughs and colds. It will loosen and clear a severe cold in less time than any other treatment and is a favorite wherever its superior excellence has become known. For sale by M. W. Armstrong, Olive Hill, Ky.

Attempted Arson at Owingsville.

Thursday, at Owingsville, Wm. Duncan, of color, was going to work in passing the residence of Kate Kaufman, of color, saw the outside of the house in a blaze. "He raised the alarm and the fire was extinguished. The fire was caused by a man's work-in-jacket being saturated with coal oil and stuck into the planking of the house.

GRIP QUICKLY KNOCKED OUT.

"Some weeks ago during the severe winter weather both my wife and myself contracted severe colds which speedily developed into the worst kind of grippe with all its miserable symptoms," says Mr. J. S. Eggleston of Maple Landing, Iowa. "Knees and joints aching, muscles sore, head stopped up, eyes and nose running, with alternate spells of chills and fever. We began using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, adding the same with a double dose of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, and by its liberal use, soon completely knocked out the grip." Said by Dr. M. W. Armstrong, Olive Hill, Kentucky.

Wants Pardon.

DOINGS AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

Eighty Witnesses to be Examined in the Brownville Affair.

There are eighty witnesses on the list of those who will be examined by the Military Committee of the Senate investigating the Brownville affair. Others will of course be added and it looks as though the Committee would be in Washington all summer. Some time during the hot season the Committee will go in a body to Brownville to examine the spot where the shooting up occurred and if possible elicit the mass of contradictory and mystifying testimony that has thus far been produced. It is said that the Committee has now decided to carry out the examination in relays. That is, several of the Senators will remain in Washington on and have charge of the case while others go to their homes to attend to private business and erect any political fences that may have fallen down during the session. By taking turn about this way every man will have a chance to escape to his home for a little while without interruption of the proceedings.

It will be remembered that when President Roosevelt was awarded the Noble Peace Prize of forty thousand dollars last year, instead of accepting it for his own use he announced that he would give it toward the establishment of a National Bureau of Industrial Peace in which the representative of Labor and Capital might have a permanent organization for the adjustment of their differences and for the purpose of affecting a better relation and understanding. Five of the trustees of the organization, which is authorized by a special act of Congress, met in Washington this week for the purpose of perfecting the organization. While the amount now in hand is but forty thousand dollars it is the expectation that other contributions from are being solicited. Annual conferences in Washington have been arranged for in which the representatives of labor and capital will take part and arrangements are being made for the publication of the results of the conferences.

Glad Rags--In Trouble.

New Railroad.

The Kentucky Highlands Railroad Company, has been incorporated in the Department of State by filing articles setting forth that it has $250,000 capital stock, and proposes to build thirty miles of railroad between Frankfort and Versailles and Lexington.

Getting Religion at Hickman.

At a big revival meeting just closed at Hickman over three hundred conversions were made. Services were held in the Court house and business houses closed for services nearly every day.

ANNOUNCEMENT.
We are authorized to announce Hon. M. M. Redwine, of Elliott county, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Circuit Judge of the 32nd Judicial District of Kentucky at the primary to be held at each voting precinct Saturday, June 22, 1907, at 1 o'clock, p. m.

As long as the President insists on a "square deal," the financiers of Wall street can be expected to protest.

If the pictures of Sandy Hook are true to life, there will be mighty few places to dodge behind when the shooting begins.

After weeks of hard work the Nebraska Legislature has made a law prohibiting brewers and wholesale liquor dealers to own saloons. It may prohibit but it wont prevent.

The "dead ones" in Olive Hill are many and would be satisfied if the court house of Carter county was to be built in Sandy Hook. But the "live ones" are not satisfied, not by a dam sight.

If, as promoters of peace, the Interstate Commerce Commission arranges a settlement of the threatened railroad strike in the Northwest, they will have rendered a service both to labor and capital difficult to estimate.

Now that the woman in the case is dead, it is hoped the prison commissioners will have time to investigate the statements made in the letter of Mrs. Roach, who committed suicide in the Frankfort penitentiary.

Tweed in his palmiest days never conceived such a raid upon the public treasury as that conceived and executed by a coterie of politicians and contractors who secured a remarkable contract for the entire furnishing of the new Capitol building at Harrisburg, Pa.

An order has gone out that no more cigarette users will be employed by the Southern railroad, and that from the president down to the office boy all must give them up or leave the system. The rule will be as strictly enforced, it is said, as that relative to drinking or entering saloons.

The Fiscal Court has gone on record with a $20,000 additional debt saddled on the county. There is something rotten when officials will overlook the saving of $15,000 to the common people and tax payers. Here is the record:

Whereas the present court house of Carter county was built in the year 1840 out of brick manufactured near the town of Grayson when the population of the county was only a few thousand souls, and

Whereas, the population is now between 25,000 and 30,000 people with an increased business fairly proportioned to same the present building has become long since wholly out of proportion, inadequate and unfit and on account of the age and dilapidated and unfit condition of the old building it is injurious to public health and the safety and preservation of the public records of the people, and

Whereas, the old building cannot be substantially repaired and that said court house and clerks, offices having been in unsafe and unfit condition long before the present constitution of Kentucky was ratified and adopted;

Now in view of the above facts and on motion of A. J. Womach, a Justice of the Peace for Carter County, it is ordered by the court that a suitable court house be built, and that Winfield Scott, W. T. Womach, R. M. Bagby, Robert Davis and Geo. W. Armstrong be, and they are hereby appointed by this court, Building Commissioners for Carter County with full power and authority to contract and let and supervise the erection of a suitable court house containing clerks' offices and other offices for the various County officials sufficient to accommodate all said County officers of Carter county, to be built of proper and suitable material and in the public square now owned by Carter county in the town of Grayson, Kentucky, and at a cost not to exceed $30,500; said Commissioners shall perform their services free of pay or money consideration. Said Commissioners appeared and accepted said appointment on the terms above stated, to all of which the Confly Attorney objects and excepts.

IMMIGRANTS' OLD BEDDING.

Said to Be Sold to New York Dealers For Use in Their Trade.
New York dealers say that the luxurious divans of the rich are not infrequently constructed from materials which at one time formed part of the humble couches of immigrants from the region of the Baltic Sea.

A considerable part of the mattress stuffing used by manufacturers in New York consists of sea grass harvested on the shores of Barnegat Bay. Following big storms this variety of sea grass is found uprooted and driven close together in large masses. Men come from as far as Philadelphia to gather it.

The grass is spread on the beach, where it is cured very much as hay is, and after being baled is shipped to New York dealers, who sell it to furniture makers. The grass brings an average of $22 a ton and finds a market as far west as Denver. About 175 tons is received by the local market in a year and most of the stuff goes to make up the middle part of filling in mattresses for beds and divans.

For a long time the American grass had no competitor except from Canada. But of late another source of supply has been found.

A sea grass similar to that found on the coast of New Jersey is introduced on the shores of the Baltic Sea and is brought to this country in the bedding of the immigrants.

After sorting the sea grass the average sea grass is sold to small dealers and resold by them to the large dealers in New York for $15 a ton.

Many dealers at first refused to carry this sea grass, remembering its strange history and fearing infection, but competition overcame their scruples and they felt themselves obliged to handle the stuff. An average of 150 tons a year is now used by the New York trade and is made up into mattresses and upholstered chairs.

One New York firm which handles the Baltic grass received word recently from a Philadelphia firm that the grass shipped to it contained a very lively colony of fleas. The dealer wrote back that fleas were foreign to the nature of the grass and received the reply that there could be no doubt of that. Since the fleas had shown a marked desire to exchange their abiding place for the person of the buyer.

This incident caused an investigation, which brought to light the origin and history of the Baltic grass. The dealers say that the Baltic grass sold to them is not disinfected, being put in bales as it is taken from the immigrants' bunks and supplied to the trade, with any additions which it may have received on the passage over.—New York Sun.

The Rev. Placide Louis Chapelle, Roman Catholic Archbishop of New Orleans, who refused to leave his post of duty when the yellow fever epidemic broke out and died from the treacherous disease after a short illness.

State Without Divorce.
There are domestic tragedians in South Carolina; there is incompatibility; there is unhappiness in some families. But I believe the number of such beleaguered homes is fewer proportion to population than in any other State. There may be no means of clearly establishing that contention; it is one of the things on which neither the census nor the encyclopedias throw light, but the personal knowledge of many men of wide acquaintance should be accepted as the best evidence of its truth. The divorce courts in other States reveal a knowledge of many men of wide acquaintance should be accepted as the best evidence of its truth. DOLL AVERTED WAR.

Child's Plaything Had a Soothing Effect Upon Apache's Tribe.

A strange story is told of how a child's plaything once had a soothing influence upon a warlike Apache tribe, and was the means of averting a serious war. It happened when a Mr. Bourke was in Arizona with Ge. Crooke. The general was trying to put a band of Apache back on the reserve, but could not catch them without killing them, and that he did not want to do. One day his men captured a little Indian girl and took her to the fort. She was quiet all day, saying not a word, but her black beads of eyes watched everything. When night came, however, she broke down and sobbed just as any white child would have done.

They tried in vain to comfort her, and then Mr. Bourke had an idea. From the adjutant's wife he borrowed a pretty doll that belonged to her little daughter, and when the young Apache was made to understand that it was hers to keep, her sobs ceased and she fell asleep.

When morning came, the doll was still clasped in her arms, and with it all day, and apparently all thought of ever getting back to her tribe had long since passed.

Several days passed, and as no overtures about the return of the papers had been made by the tribe, which the doll still in her possession, back to her people.

Mr. Bourke had no idea of the effect his benevolent act would have upon the Indians. When the child reached them, with the pretty doll in his chubby hands, it made a great sensation among them, and later on its mother came back to the post with it.

She was kindly received, and hospitably treated, and through her the tribe was soon afterward persuaded to move back to the reserve.

Mrs. Robert Jordan died Monday at 2 o'clock, after an illness of nearly a year. Some months ago she was taken to the Robins Hospital at Salt Lick, for treatment, and was thought to be practically recovered, when she was removed to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson Scott, near Corey, where, after a few months hovering between life and death, she succumbed. A husband, two little daughters and a host of friends and relatives grieve her death.

That the freezing weather of the past two weeks has practically wiped out all the early fruit crop in this county and has seriously damaged all garden vegetables which had been planted as well as wheat and other farm crops is now almost a certainty. In many instances ice was found filling the cup of the fruit bushes, thus surrounding and killing the fruit. In many sections wheat had attained such a height that it had "jointed" and farmers say all such will be badly damaged. Wherever tobacco beds were left uncovered by canvas, the plants were killed. Garden truck of all kinds which was not protected was killed.

PERSONALITY OF A LEADER.

Timothy D. Sullivan Expresses His Views on the Subject.

"Any one may be a leader of men. There is no secret to the job and no trick of nature's doing. It only needs work, and lots of it."

"So says Timothy D. Sullivan, a leader of men, a famous hall director, leader, a leader in national affairs of large importance, a leader in legislation that affects millions of people, a leader in sport of more or less varied nature, a leader in public movements when the interests of his constituents or his associates are affected, a leader in many other things and altogether he stands out as conspicuously as a leader of men as any man who could be picked out of the public men of the present moment."

Born in poverty, schooled indifferently, at work as a newsboy, then in charge of a big newspaper delivery system, then an owner of many newspapers, into politics: first a district captain, then a deputy leader, then a district leader, then an Assembly man, then a State Senator, and next a Congressman.

All the time tending to growing personal business and to-day worth $75,000 from $1,000 to $1,000,000 (no one really knows).

Sullivan could at a pinch, according to a man who knows the pulse of New York, produce 15,000 people who would vote any ticket he asked them to vote without looking at it, and he could in twelve hours get 5,000 men to follow him on almost any proposition he were to advance.

They are guaranteed to be honestly made.

The prices are reasonable enough for anyone.

Over Three Million people are wearing them.

Timothy D. Sullivan.

"When you ask me what particular thing I owe any of the friends I've got I'll say it's work. All this talk about psychological power and personal magnetism over man is too business for pretty writing, but when you get down to brass tacks it's the work that does the business. What would Croker's personal magnetism have amounted to if he hadn't worked early and late? I know faro dealers that have more magnetism than all the leaders you ever knew, and they go on hustling for a living at it as a shift—and not always working steady at that—mostly because they don't know how, or won't work except at the thing that comes easiest to them."

"If a man sets out to do something or get somewhere he can bet that the only way to get there is to do it for him, and no one else can do it for him."

"Most men are lazy and do only what they have to do for their immediate comfort. Lots of men are unfortunately born without the ability to think for themselves, and other men for no known reason in the world, have to have some one to look to as a leader for them. Now, then, you start out with the idea that you'd like to be of some use in the world and begin by helping the fellow beside you, who is in trouble. That fellow may not be grateful to you, because he don't know how, but he'll remember you and when he's got to confide in some one, he'll probably turn to you, there you have some knowledge that you wouldn't have had, then you repeat the operation several times a day and before you know it you are getting the habit of being concerned about people's troubles."

"Most people are grateful and when you have shown a lot of people that it's no trouble to help them, they'll be pretty sure to want to help you."

"Then you see that a lot of people have a complaint against something, may be it's something you can fix. Well, if you're not too lazy to go and fix it and do somebody's going to say that it was a smart thing to do, it wasn't smart, it was only because you were willing to do the work and other people weren't."

"If a man asks you to do something, and you can't do it, don't let him laugh him out of it if you can, and if you can't do that, tell him why you can't and then take the trouble to prove it to him; he will be just as good a friend as ever, unless he's a natural born kicker."

"Some of the men in my district who never asked me for a thing in their careers told me they would never desert me as long as I was willing to listen to a 'kick.' And it's that way I find out what the most people want."

"The man who doesn't ask you for personal favors can afford to tell you the truth, and he usually does. The people who have to give their support don't do it because I have any wonderful magnetism; they do it because I am willing to try to do the things they want—but for one campaign, or one administration—but every day of every year, with the holidays included."

"And so after all there isn't much to it to be a leader."

"It's just plenty of work, keep your temper or throw it away, be on the level and don't put on airs, because God and the people hate a chesty man."

Bagging A Bear.

Grant! grant! grant! That was nothing to alarm a boy of twelve, although the half-gallon pils that swarmed the woods were dangerous enemies if one of their number happened to give out a signal of distress. They were all in good humor now, for the acorns were thick upon the ground. A plentiful crop of chestnuts caused equal rejoicing in the boy's heart. He had come a long way into the woods so that he might be behind the reach of general competition, and gather his nuts unmolested. He was out for the profit and consequently he struck for the best.

The bear and the bag. Grounds he knew of. What did it matter that he had so much farther to carry his load home? Chestnuts were $1.75 a bushel and Saturday came only three weeks. But when the sun was leaving the tree-tops above him and getting tangled up among those to the west, the boy began to realize that he had rather a large job on hand to take that two-bushel bag nearly full of nuts home before dark. In fact it seemed to be an actual impossibility, for he could not even lift the load. Loath to leave his hard day's work behind, he resorted in an absolute emergency to the only remedy for all difficulties, his pockets. He found there nothing more promising than a lot of stout lignin cord, and, rather as a last-ditch effort from any serious purpose, he began to knot this into a rude harness, one end of which he attached to the bag and the other, he held at the other end, he could not draw the bag any distance. Grant! grant! grant! It occurred to him that the pils were disappointing, and that he was afraid of something. So he was near him and the last of the night as it disappeared from sight in the woods was slipping in a twinkling pan. What did it mean? Grant! Grant! Just behind him; but this was one of the most terrible tones; it was not a pils. Turning hastily he saw a young bear, about two-thirds grown, looking curiously at him through the bushes. Some boys would have been terribly frightened; but this sturdy little fellow had it from the lips of old hunters that black bears are seldom dangerous unless threatened or very hungry; while a cub is about as good-natured and playful as a puppy. Perhaps the bear had had similar instructions in regard to boys. At least neither undertook to retreat, though neither ventured any closer. The bear was between the boy and his home; very likely the boy was between the bear and his.

His meetings of this sort become embarrassing and, to vary the situation, the boy finally did retreat a little way, although it took him farther back into the woods. The bear at once advanced, and the boy retreated farther. This brought the bear to where the bag of chestnuts stood, and, of an inquiring disposition, he sniffed over a few minutes, and then crept up to his paw to see if it were alive. It fell upon its side, and the bear retired, somewhat startled at this unexpected movement; but he finally returned and began a rough and tumble fight with his dumb adversary, as a kitten would attack a ball of yarn. Then he bounded away again.

Now, it so happened that in his anxiety he had got tangled in the string harness, so that when he sprang away the bag swung after him. Here was a pretty little of fish! Brunt gave another leap forward, then fairly turned tail and ran, as only a frightened bear can run, the bag in hot pursuit, and the boy in the rear of both. Neither the boy nor the bear stopped in which direction they were going until they dashed out of the woods into the meadow back of the boy's home. Just as they reached the edge the bear caught against a big tree with a bound that landed it upon the bear.

Brain resented this, or more likely, thinking that his time had come, he resolved to die fighting. For just one minute the air was full of bear, but the bear and chestnuts were a black streak into the woods above where the bear, at last freed from the strings, was making a happy homeward trip.

After he was gone, the boy came up and began to gather up the chestnuts that were spilled in the shock. By dark he had them all carried to the house, while the bear was probably at home recounting his curious adventure to his friends.

Jerry's Splendid System

Jerry came home from school full of a new idea. "The superintendent" came in our room to-day," he told his mother, and was talking about memories, and he said some one a long time ago invented leaving pieces to put things in, kind of like pigeon holes in father's desk; then, when you want anything out of them, you look in, and there you are. "Very good idea," said mother, "and you need something of the sort. Did you order the sugar and

He dashed off to school with his precious catalogue. "No," said Jerry blushing, "I forgot. You see, mother, the system hasn't started up yet."

"Well, you must go back now and get them," said his mother. "Before dinner" asked Jerry ruefully. "It will help you remember next time," said his mother. So Jerry stopping only to get Solomon's Red Tonic, ran back.

He stopped for the mail, though, and there he found a catalogue of school supplies for himself, and he studied, that so long that the first school bell rang before he started home. Then he went flying. On the way he met Mrs. Nelson. "Tell your father, Jerry, to come and see the baby this afternoon," she said. "He's very sick."

There was only one time for a very little dinner, and Jerry put Solomon's Red Tonic down in the library, that lead into his father's office. This was strictly forbidden, for Jerry's father was a specialist in nerve diseases, and Solomon's way of suddenly and quietly appearing on the floor, or trying to climb on a patient's lap, did not assist the owner of disordered nerves toward recovery.

But Jerry intended to get the tortoise after luncheon. Only, he forgot. He also forgot about Mrs. Nelson, and she was still for his father, which was in his overcoat pocket. He dashed off to school with his precious catalogue (which he remembered to take) in his hand, and was almost late.

Something, just as he was about to sit down, caused him to remember all three things at once, and he stood up in his seat frantically signaling to the teacher. "Well, Jerry?" she asked. Jerry "help" waited for permission, but rushed home.

A piercing shriek came from the library, just as he opened the door. A very little old woman was standing in her chair, her eyes shut and with her skirts gathered thickly around her, while Solomon paused in mid-wander in his act of climbing up in the chair where she stood.

"What's all this about?" asked his father sternly. "Oh, father," said Jerry, bringing the mail out of his pocket. "Here's Mrs. Nelson's baby—and great-aunt Susan was scared at Solomon."

"Solomon, indeed!" said great-aunt Susan, opening one eye. "The critter came walking up me in a way to scare the wits out of a graven image!" "The system isn't working yet, evidently," said his mother sternly, and trying not to laugh. Great-aunt Susan sat down and asked for explanations. "Humph!" she said at its conclusion. The best system I know of is to think of something and put some besides yourself!" And Jerry, after he had put Solomon in his room, as he dejectedly dashed back to school, was bound to admit that she was right.

Halfway through the lake. Right through Great Salt Lake to the Dead Sea of the new world runs a railroad. The actual length of this, the longest in the world, is 12 miles. It contains 200 miles, the longest single track 99 feet, and the longest spilled pipe 120 feet. The cost of constructing this wonderful piece of railroad was $5,000,000, and the time required to build it was three years. As a place in the best of the lake, thousands of cars of rock were employed without making the least impression in the way of foundation. In riding over this road—rich through the beautiful, sparkling salt Lake—one notices the absence of a dot of any kind, although the lake is over 100 miles in length and 70 miles across at its widest place, and one would think it afforded great attractions for the sailor or peasant. But the fact is, rowing or sailing is almost impossible on the waters of this Dead Sea, for it is so heavy with salt, that navigation—or even swimming—is slow and laborious, rendering therefore, little pleasure for the tourist. If one dips up a pail of water from Great Salt Lake and lets it stand in one can till the water evaporates there will be found one-third of a pail of salt. Hundreds of cottages ago the waters of this great body extended over the thousands of acres of land that surround it now in the form of dry desolate wastes on which nothing grows, for an animal vegetable or fowl life can exist on this one-time sea bed. Pleachants in the London zoological garden earn $4,000 a year by carrying visitors about.
