MOREHEAD, Ky., July 1 -- A $32,000 grant effective August 1, has been awarded to Morehead State University by the National Science Foundation to finance a two-year geological research study of the North and South Carolina seaboard, Dr. W. C. Simpson, dean of the School of Sciences and Mathematics at the University, has announced.

In charge of the study will be Dr. Jules R. DuBar, chairman of the department of geoscience at the University and a nationally recognized authority on the area to be studied.

He will be assisted by Harry Hoge, an instructor in geology at Morehead. Hoge will be in charge of the analysis of sediments periodically collected during the study, which will be headquartered at the University.

Purpose of the study is to determine as precisely as possible the land mass changes which have taken place over the past 10 to 20 million years along the inner coastal plain and to combine the results of the study with those obtained in detailed studies already made of the adjacent outer coastal plain, Dr. Simpson said.

It is expected that the knowledge gained will be useful in bringing about a more meaningful correlation of pre-historic events along the Atlantic Coast from Long Island to South Florida.

Dr. DuBar is co-editor with Dr. Robert Q. Oaks, Jr., Utah State University, of a symposium entitled, "Post-Miocene Stratigraphy of the Central and Southern Atlantic Coastal Plain."

A number of geologists across the country also are coordinating their studies on the coastal area and will contribute chapters to the DuBar-Oaks symposium. At present, these number 22, representing 15 universities, one private research institution, two industrial firms, two state and two federal agencies and four countries.

The study involves the south flank of the Cape Fear Arch in North and South Carolina.

The area is bounded by the Lumber-Little Pee Dee River Valley on the southeast, by the Orangeburg Scarp on the northwest and by the northwest-southeast trending lines passing near to Lumberton, N. C., on the northeast, and a few miles southwest of Florence, S. C., on the southwest.

The surface geology will be mapped, land mass changes studied, the nature and degree of weathering and erosion noted and all significant outcrops examined in detail, Dr. DuBar said.

Surface mapping will be supplemented by detailed close-spaced cross-sections and a regularly located grid of power auger and rotary drill holes from which samples of the earth's strata will be obtained. The holes to be drilled will number between 350 and 500.

Close-spaced drilling and sampling has proved to be the only firm basis for establishing a three-dimensional concept of stratal units and their relationships with topography, Dr. DuBar said.

It also will provide for the drilling of 350 to 500 holes from which the samples of the earth's strata will be obtained.

"This is a tremendous opportunity for national recognition for Morehead State University in the field of geoscience," Dr. Simpson said.

"In Dr. DuBar we have a project director who has won national recognition for the work he already has done in the coastal areas, and this grant provides an unusual opportunity for a number of our science students to obtain valuable field experience in their area of study."

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 1) -- Emery Smith, for the past four years director of the Baptist Student Union near the Morehead State University campus, has been named associate director of student work for the Kentucky Baptist Convention, Louisville.

Smith, who came to Morehead from Louisiana College, Pineville, La., will have special responsibilities in the development of the Baptist study ministries at the state's newly-established Community Colleges in his new position.

He and his family will make their home in Louisville.

No announcement has been made regarding his successor in the Morehead campus work.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 3) -- One teacher has retired and two others will retire at the end of the summer semester at University Breckinridge School on the Morehead State University campus. Together, they represent more than 44 years of teaching at the school.

Retiring at the end of the spring term was Miss Era Mae Smelley, for 20 years a fifth grade teacher at Breckinridge.

Scheduled to retire at the end of the summer term are Mrs. Stellarose M. Stewart, a third grade teacher at Breckinridge for eight years, and Mrs. Mary Anderson, who taught fourth grade for 16 years.

A native of Nacogdoches, Tex., Miss Smelley came to Morehead in 1948 from Stephen F. Austin State College, Nacogdoches. Prior to that she had taught at Mississippi State College, Starksville, and Northeast Louisiana State College, Monroe, in addition to the public schools at Lufkin and Livingston, Tex.

She plans to return to Nacogdoches, the home of her family for seven generations, "to redecorate the home place and to rekindle a lot of old friendships." She also plans to continue her hobbies of oil painting, china painting and ceramics.

Ill health is forcing Mrs. Stewart to retire. A native of Ashland, she received her A. B. Degree from Morehead in 1937 and a master's degree in elementary education from the University of Kentucky in 1951.

Prior to coming to Morehead, Mrs. Stewart, whose husband, Dr. Lawrence R. Stewart, is a professor of education at the University, taught at the old Means Elementary School in Ashland. It is now a part of the Crabbee Elementary School.

A native of Irvine in Estill County, Mrs. Anderson has been at Breckinridge for 16 years.

Mrs. Anderson received her bachelor's degree in 1937 at Illinois State University, Normal, Ill., and a master's degree in elementary education and supervision in 1944 from Columbia University in New York.

three teachers retire at university breckinridge 2222222

She plans to continue to live in Morehead following her retirement when she isn't touring the United States. Her travel plans also include a trip to Hawaii. "I've always wanted to see Hawaii," she said.

All three teachers can look back on years of tremendous and significant changes at the Morehead laboratory school, changes which have seen materialize such advancements in classroom teaching as computer assisted instruction, the new "modern math" techniques and the teaching of science in the early grades.

"The children today are doing much more advanced work in the early grades than was the case 16 years ago when I started," Mrs. Anderson said.

In addition to their classroom work at Breckinridge, all three have been instrumental in the training of hundreds of student teachers at the University, working with from three to 15 per semester over the years. "Today they're scattered all over the United States," Miss Smelley said proudly. "Every now and then I'll hear from one of them."

MOREHEAD, Ky., July 5--Mrs. Stella Mae Petrie, for the past four years an administrative assistant in the Kentucky Public Information Department, Frankfort, has joined the staff of Roger Wilson, vice-president for student affairs at Morehead State University.

A native of Bardwell in Carlisle County, western Kentucky, Mrs. Petrie also served as an official hostess for the Commonwealth during the Breathitt administration. Previously, she was associated with the Investors' Heritage Insurance Company in Frankfort.

Mrs. Petrie attended Murray State University and Kentucky State College and is a past editor of the Carlisle County News, Bardwell.

At Morehead, she will be associated with Miss Anna Mae Riggle, associate dean of students, and responsible for many of the arrangements for student and faculty receptions as well as other major campus activities.

MOREHEAD, Ky., July 8--The second of three band concerts scheduled for the Morehead State University campus this summer will be presented Thursday, July 11, at 7 p. m. on the front plaza of Baird Music Hall.

The band is composed of 45 members attending the Advance Conducting and School Band Literature class at the university for the summer term. All are band directors or music teachers on campus for the summer doing graduate work.

Conducting the concerts are Dr. Robert Hawkins, director of bands at the university, and Earle Louder, who recently joined the Morehead music faculty after 12 years as head of the brass department of the United States Navy Band, Washington.

Three guest conductors will participate in the July 11 concert along with two soloists. The guest conductors are: Gary Dean, band director at Fleming County High School, Flemingsburg; Walt Bergman, director of the Bridge (Oregon) High School band, and Gene Hemminger, instrumental instructor in the Maysville local school at Zanesville, Ohio.

Appearing as soloists will be Dinah Hawkins, senior clarinet student at the university, and Robert Schietroma, a percussion instructor at Morehead.

In the event of inclement weather, the concert will be presented in Baird Music Hall, Dr. Hawkins said.

The public is invited to attend.

MOREHEAD, Ky., July 8 -- Jody Evans, a lanky 18-year-old from Mt. Sterling, has captured the first annual Morehead State University Invitational golf tournament at the University Golf Course.

Evans, displaying amazing accuracy with his irons, won the championship Sunday with an eight-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to defeat Gary Arnold, a 6-foot-5, 200-pounder from Clearwater, Fla., one up.

The two, obviously weary from semi-final matches in the morning, waged a see-saw battle over the 70-par, 18-hole route in the finals of the championship flight.

The Mt. Sterling youngster, winner of two consecutive regional high school championships before graduating this spring, grabbed the lead with a par on the 410-yard 17th when Arnold muffed a second shot from the rough.

Moments later, however, Evans saw this advantage vanish as he hit two tee shots out of bounds on the 125-yard par 3 eighth. He conceded the hole, evening the match for the third time, as Arnold hit his tee shot to within 10 feet of the pin for an easy par. This set the stage for the dramatic finish.

Off the tee on 18, Arnold's drive was 260 yards down the middle while Evans pulled his into the rough on the left some 220 yards out.

Evans, hitting a wood from the higher grass, left himself with a 125-yard third shot to the green, while Arnold sent another of his booming woods to within 20 yards of the pin and just short of the green on the 520-yard hole.

It was here that Evans' blazing accuracy with his irons paid off for him as he hit his approach to within eight feet of the flag.

Arnold's pitch shot, moments later, failed to grab and rolled 15 feet past the pin. The Floridan then missed his putt coming back, while Evans, with the coolness of a touring pro, sank his for the match and the initial tournament championship.

En route to the championship, Evans, who qualified for the championship flight with a 73, defeated Chick Saunders, Paintsville, 5 and 4 in the first round, and Orville (Whitey) Conley, Paintsville, one up in 19 holes in the second round.

Earlier in the day Sunday, he won over Rick Bradley, Morehead, 5 and 4 for the final berth.

Arnold shot his way into the finals by defeating Dennis Scifres, Vanceburg, 2 and 1 in the first round, and Nelson Gullett, Paintsville, 4 and 3 before ousting Grover Carrington, Mt. Sterling, in a semi-final match Sunday morning 5 and 4.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe A. Evans, Jr., Mt. Sterling, Evans plans to enroll at the University of Mississippi in the fall.

Arnold, the fifth ranked Junior College player in the nation, recently graduated from St. Petersburg (Fla.) Junior College. He was a member of the St. Petersburg team which won the national junior college championship at Roswell, N. M., last month.

Scifres, a recent graduate of University Breckinridge School on the Morehead campus, won the consolation flight with a one-up victory over Wayne Martin, Winchester, in 20 holes.

Martin, a member of the University's golf team until his graduation in May, missed a three-foot putt on the 20th green, while Scifres parred the 315-yard hole to win the match.

Mike Brown, defensive backfield football coach at the University, won the second flight with a 4 and 2 victory over Richard Hamm, Hanover, Pa.

Don Miller, Morehead, defeated Ed Knox, Morehead, 7 and 6, for the top honors in the third flight, and Mickey Wells, Morehead, defeated Jim Letcher, Carlisle, 2 and 1 for the fourth flight championship.

Medalist honors in the qualifying rounds for the tournament were shared by Jim Caudill, Morehead, and Arch Williams, West Palm Beach, Fla., with two-over-par 72's. Caudill was eliminated by Carrington in the quarter-finals 6 and 5, while Williams was bumped by young Bradley 7 and 5 in the first round.

MOREHEAD, Ky., July 8--Keith Huffman, for 21 years a member of the music faculty at Morehead State University, will present a viola recital at the University's Baird Music Hall Thursday, July 18, at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Karl Payne will be the accompanist for the program, which will include music by Bach, Leclair, Schumann and Cooley.

A graduate of the Army Music School, Washington, Mr. Huffman has appeared frequently in Morehead as a soloist and as a member of various string groups. During World War II he directed an Air Force band at bases in Maine and Newfoundland.

Following his military service, he received his master's degree at the University of Iowa, where he specialized in the viola. He has played with symphony orchestras in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Kokomo, Ind., and with the Kryl Symphony Orchestra in Chicago.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 8) -- A $25,102 federal grant has been awarded Morehead State University for the purchase of new books and materials for the university's Johnson Camden Library.

Jack Ellis, recently-appointed director of the library, said the funds will be provided through the College Library Resources Program under provisions of Title II of the Higher Education Act of 1965. They will be used to increase the number of volumes in the general collection as well as in the special areas of technology, adult education and teaching materials, he said.

Increased demands for volumes in these areas have resulted from the University's involvement in three separate projects--the Appalachian Technical Institute, the Eastern Kentucky Education Development Corporation and the Appalachian Adult Basic Education Demonstration Center.

The Appalachian Technical Institute is to be established within the University and will offer an associate of applied science degree. Instruction will be provided in the technical areas of nursing, x-ray technology, commercial photography, welding technology, horticulture, computer technology, interior decorating and construction.

The Eastern Kentucky Education Development Corporation (EKEDC) is a program designed to furnish teaching materials to 35 local school districts. The corporation also furnishes personnel to distribute materials to the public school teachers and to demonstrate their most effective use.

The University library also is actively involved in providing service for the Appalachian Adult Basic Education Demonstration Center, which serves an eight-state area and is headquartered on the campus.

The agency's objective is to develop educational materials and technology for the under-educated adults within its area.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 9) -- A $22,482.80 cooperative grant has been awarded to Morehead State University and Pikeville College by Educational Projects, Inc., to finance a supplementary training program for Head Start personnel.

The program, according to Dr. Mary Northcutt, professor of education at the University and regional training officer in the Head Start project, is designed to increase the academic achievement of teachers and teacher-aides participating in regional Head Start programs.

Under provisions of the project, the only one of its kind in the Office of Economic Opportunity's multi-state Region Two, Morehead is conducting two classes for Eastern Kentucky participants.

One class offers undergraduate credit for non-degree people and is taught by Mrs. Bernice Jackson. Dr. Northcutt teaches a second class which offers graduate credit to qualified students.

Pikeville College is helping to meet the needs of Pike County by permitting each participant to enroll in a class of their choice geared to the needs of the pre-school child.

Approximately 75 people are participating in each of the two centers. The project is scheduled to continue through the fall semester.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 15)--More than 300 music directors, teachers and students are expected to attend the third annual Cumberland Forest Music Camp at Morehead State University August 6-18.

This represents an increase of more than 100 percent over the number of participants at last year's camp.

A project of the University's music department, the camp attracts those who seek to develop their musical skills during a period of concentrated study under leadership and supervision of a distinguished and experienced faculty, including a number of nationally-known musical personalities.

Dr. Robert Hawkins, conductor of bands at Morehead and for many years director of the famed Gunnison Music Camp at Western State College, Gunnison, Colo., is the camp director.

Initiated by Dr. J. E. Duncan, dean of the School of Humanities at Morehead, the camp is a successor to the Gunnison camp.

Unlike a regular school curriculum, the camp offers only music training. Students have no other courses for which to prepare, and concentrate solely on their music.

They work long hours and under strict supervision from challenging instructors such as A. R. Casavant, director of the famous Chattanooga (Tenn.) High School band. A specialist in marching band techniques, Casavant has written a number of books on the subject and scores of bands across a 10-state area of the South follow his style of marching.

Another is Clarence Sawhill, director of bands at the University of California at Los Angeles and one of the most widely-traveled and best known conductors of music festivals in the country.

Twirler and majorette aspirants attending the camp will have the opportunity to study and practice under the supervision of Joyce Rice, Earlham, Iowa, four times Iowa state twirling champion and in 1959 national twirling champion. She is a graduate of Iowa State University.

Among the other leading conductors, composers, teachers and performers who make up the camp's guest faculty this year are:

Robert Nagel, Yale University School of Music and founder and director of the New York brass quintet; Al. G. Wright, director of bands at Purdue University; Robert Tucci, who plays first tuba in the U. S. Army Field Band and formerly with the Vienna (Austria) Philharmonic Orchestra; John Baldwin, instructor of percussion at Michigan State University.

Also, Lewis Van Haney, trombone instructor, Indiana University; Bernard Portnoy, teacher of clarinet at the Juilliard School of Music and recording artist with Victor, Columbia and MGM Records as well as in television and motion picture productions; Eugene Rousseau, saxophone instructor and chairman of the woodwind department at Indiana University.

Jerry Sirucek, oboe teacher, Indiana University, and oboist with the American Woodwind Quintet; Margaret White, instructor of harp, Indiana University and featured harpist with the American Symphony Orchestra League; John Wummer, flute teacher at Mannes College and the Manhattan School of Music, New York, and Milan Yancich, chairman of the Woodwind and Brass Ensembles Department, Eastman School of Music, Rochester.

Three newly-appointed members of the Morehead music department faculty also will join 11 others as members of the camp faculty. These are:

Douglas Engelhardt, newly-appointed orchestra director and who will join the Morehead staff this fall. He comes from Rapid City, S. D., where he was supervisor of music education in the public schools.

Earle Louder, for 12 years Euphonium Soloist with the United States Navy Band, Washington, D. C., and Eugene Norden, instructor of saxophone at MSU and formerly a high school band director at Delta, Colo.

In addition, the wind and percussion staff of the Morehead music department will teach and conduct. These include:

James Martin, Joseph Martin, William Bigham, Frederick Mueller, John Stetler, David Bushouse, Eugene Deaton and Robert Schietroma. Larry Keenan will perform as guest pianist, and Charles Lee, drum major of the Morehead marching band, will instruct in his area.

The camp enrollment, Dr. Hawkins said, includes students at all levels of training and experience, adding, "We offer a full range of activities so that students of all levels, from junior high school to the graduate student, may find work sufficiently challenging to project their musical abilities."

Classes will start at 7:30 a. m. and run throughout the day. Rehearsals, concerts and recitals will take up most of the evening hours.

A typical student's day will include private lessons in some cases, classes in theory, composition, conducting, arranging, composing and musical literature, as well as participation in rehearsals for concerts in ensembles or in full concert band.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 16)--Every young person should make up his or her mind what they want to do in life, then bear down hard to reach that objective, Dr. Thomas Billings, national director of the Upward Bound program of the Office of Economic Opportunity, Washington, said Saturday night at Morehead State University.

Speaking before more than 300 participants in Upward Bound programs at Morehead, Berea College and Kentucky State College, and their tutor-counselors, Dr. Billings went on to say that once a young person makes this decision they "should not let anything or anyone keep them from becoming what will make them feel real, live and useful."

Upward Bound is a pre-college preparatory program designed to motivate young people from low-income backgrounds and inadequate secondary school preparation toward higher education.

Supported by the Office of Economic Opportunity, the Morehead program is serving 130 high school students in eight Eastern Kentucky counties--Bath, Boyd, Elliott, Greenup, Johnson, Magoffin, Mason and Morgan.

There are 285 Upward Bound programs in operation across the United States today, said the director, who directed one of the earliest Upward Bound pilot projects in western Washington before going to the nation's capital.

"Involved in these programs," he said, "are more than 24,000 young people, of whom 10,000 graduated recently from high school and 7,500 of whom will enter college this fall.

"Last year, more than 5,000 of our Upward Bound students entered college," he reported, "enrolling in 577 different colleges and universities.

director of upward bound at msu 2222222

"A survey of these students at the semester break in January revealed 92 percent were still enrolled and that 77 percent were in good scholastic standing," he added.

The ultimate purpose of the program, he emphasized, is to train the brainpower and talents of young people.

"This is not a revolutionary movement," he said. "It is built on the principal that a person with brains will be more valuable to society if trained to do something worthwhile.

"Ignorance is acrippler," he said, adding that "there is only one thing that will eliminate it and that is knowledge.

"With the proper use of knowledge, the 21st Century can be beautiful, or it won't be at all," he said.

The national director's comments climaxed the first day of an Upward Bound visitation weekend, at which participants of the Berea and Kentucky State programs were guests of the Morehead group.

A talent show was presented Saturday afternoon and another Sunday afternoon for visiting parents and friends. A dance also was held Saturday night for the youngsters.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 17)--It took a total of 52 years to get them, but Mrs. Fenton Simpkins, 84, her daughter, Mrs. Iva Trimble, and her granddaughter, Mrs. Janet Spencer, all Montgomery County school teachers, soon will hold degrees from Morehead State University.

Although this is an educational feat in itself, the most significant aspect of the careers of these ladies is the fact that all were married and either had their families started or grown before ever enrolling in college.

Mrs. Spencer expects to receive her degree in elementary education August 1 after working for it off and on since 1958. Her mother, Mrs. Trimble, received hers in 1962, some 28 years after starting on it, while the grandmother, Mrs. Simpkins, who "retired" in 1954 after 41 years in the classroom, earned hers in 1942 after 10 years of study.

The wife of Elbert Spencer, a Montgomery County farmer, Mrs. Spencer is the mother of four children, whose ages range from 6 to 14.

Married while still in high school, she had three of their children before she started taking Morehead correspondence courses in 1958.

During the summer terms and the three full semesters she attended the University, she commuted from her home at Levee, near the Powell County line, to her classes, a round-trip distance of 90 miles. During two of those three full-time semesters, she was an honor student.

For the past two years she has been teaching in special education at the Mapleton Elementary school in Montgomery County.

The youngest of Mrs. Simpkins' six children, Mrs. Trimble first started to Morehead in 1932 along with her mother, the two of them living in an apartment near the campus.

three generations graduate from morehead 2222222

She had completed only one semester of work when she left school to marry Rucker Trimble. A well-known Montgomery County farmer today, he also operates stockyards in Mt. Sterling and Morehead.

Before she had returned to Morehead to get her degree in 1962 through correspondence courses and summer work, 28 years had passed and Mrs. Trimble's four children were all grown.

After having started her teaching career in 1956 at the Camargo Elementary School in Montgomery County, she currently is working toward a certificate in TMR at the University of Kentucky, and expects to teach in a new unit for exceptional children in the county this fall.

The matriarch of the clan, however, is Mrs. Simpkins.

Alert and spry at 84, she delights in looking back over her four decades of teaching most of which was spent in one-room, Montgomery County schools.

She first started in 1913 at the Cook's Branch school after successfully completing a state certificate examination. Her salary was $37.50 per month.

This was the first of several one-room schools in which she taught for the next 20 years before starting her 10 years of work toward a degree at Morehead in 1932.

"We taught all eight grades in those one room schools," she recalls, with a chuckle, "and I walked six miles round trip to school every day after first getting up and cooking breakfast for the family.

"Often when heavy snow fell, my father would hitch a log to a horse and drag a path in the snow for me to follow.

"We teachers also had to build our own fires in the pot bellied stove which was our only source of heat. This, too, meant getting to school well before the children arrived."

three generations graduate from morehead 3333333

Another early day teacher responsibility, Mrs. Simpkins remembers, was to oil the floor of the classroom. "This took several days of our own time without pay before school started," she says, "but the school folks did furnish the oil."

Mrs. Simpkins taught all six of her children through the first eight grades, and saw four of them become teachers. Three of her 17 grandchildren are teaching today. One, Miss Irene Centers, is teaching in New York City and holds a master's degree from Columbia University. There are also 34 great-grandchildren.

Are school children more difficult to control today than they used to be?

Very definitely, Mrs. Simpkins says. "In the early days," she recalls, "parents didn't mind you paddling their children when they misbehaved. In fact, many of them told me to give them a licking at school if I thought they deserved it and they'd get another when they got home.

"That's not true any more. Lick one of them today and you not only have the parents after you but the entire school board as well.

"You had to lick one or two of them every now and then to let the others know you meant business," she added. "I guess you'd say we believed you had to lick 'em to 'larn 'em, as some of the old timers used to say."

"I'll never forget mother on one of those paddlings," Mrs. Trimble spoke up. "Three of the boys--pretty good sized ones too--had waded out into the creek to get away from her after she had gone for a switch.

"This didn't stop her, though. She just waded out there and got them. I can still see her coming out of that stream as wet as a rained-on chicken and flogging the daylights out of those boys with a branch."

Although retired for 14 years, Mrs. Simpkins is still in demand as a substitute teacher in Montgomery County and fills in as many days as the state permits each year.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 18)--Morehead State University has been awarded a $50,754 federal grant to help finance a 21-county, year-long project designed to discover and identify young people of exceptional ability but lacking the financial resources to continue their education beyond the high school level.

An additional $7,030 is being provided by the university.

The purpose of the project, entitled "Operation Talent Search," is to encourage these young people, beginning at the junior high school level, to complete their secondary school work and to seek a college education.

Directing the project will be Frank Sandage, graduate school instructor in psychology. Sandage, who came to Morehead at the beginning of the summer term from the University of Kentucky where he has been a doctoral student and an instructor in psychology, is a native of Tell City, Ind.

He received his bachelor of arts degree in 1964 at Southeastern Louisiana College at Hammond and his master's degree from San Diego State in California. He assumed his project responsibilities July 1.

Sandage will coordinate the project with the academic interests of the young people "discovered" as well as with the influence and support of local resources in the 21-county Eastern Kentucky area.

The counties involved are: Bath, Boyd, Breathitt, Carter, Elliott, Fleming, Floyd, Greenup, Johnson, Knott, Lawrence, Lewis, Magoffin, Martin, Mason, Menifee, Montgomery, Morgan, Pike, Rowan and Wolfe.

Working with the project leaders in each county will be a local "discovery committee," made up of community leaders in school or school-related areas.

"Our objective," Sandage said, "is to identify the unusually talented young people in Eastern Kentucky who need financial assistance with which to continue their education but who are likely to fail to get it, for example, because of a failure to meet existing standards of reading skill.

"Others may fail because of a lack of available funds as the result of family income being too low or because of inadequate motivation.

"Still others may fail," he said, "because of a failure to apply for assistance because of a sense of false pride, or because they do not know what funds are available or where and how they could apply for them.

"There also are cases where exceptional children are prevented from continuing their education because of parental resistance to their going on to college.

"These are the types of youngsters we will seek to locate and help," he added.

MOREHEAD, Kentucky, (July 18)--Having been the only boy in most of his classes for the past three years at Morehead State University doesn't seem to have affected Tony Fisher, 21, in the least.

He has been too busy working toward the University's first bachelor of science degree in food service administration to notice his enviable situation. Besides, he's married.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Fisher, 8411 Mayfair Drive, Cincinnati, Tony will be a senior at Morehead in the fall. He expects to be the first Morehead graduate to receive the new degree since the former two-year food service administration program was expanded into a fully-accredited, four-year offering in the School of Applied Sciences and Technology.

Tony also is in the army.

Applying last November for admittance to the Army's Student Dietitian Program, he has been accepted, and on July 9 was enlisted as a private in the reserves at the Armed Forces Entrance Examination Station in Cincinnati.

As such, he automatically became a member of the Student Detachment Unit at Fort Meade, Md., a unit made up of student dietitians and student nurses across the United States.

Having been accepted by the Army, he will receive $250 per month plus free medical service and Post Exchange privileges at military installations while completing his senior year at Morehead. His only obligation to the Army will be to maintain his 3.00 scholastic standing of the possible 4.00.

Upon graduation next spring, Fisher automatically will be commissioned a second lieutenant in the Army and will go on active duty for four years as a medical specialist.

He also will begin a required one year of dietitian internship at a military hospital, being assigned to one of four in the country--Brooke General at San Antonio, Tex., Fitzsimmons at Denver, Letterman at San Francisco, and Walter Reed in Washington.

"I've asked to be sent to Letterman," he said, "but you never know."

As an intern, he will work under the supervision of the hospital's dietitian and in all phases of food service administration in the installation.

Upon completion of this year's internship, he hopes to receive his license and to be classified as a full-fledged dietitian.

A graduate of Woodward High School, Cincinnati, Tony is married to the former Barbara Holcomb of Fairfield, Ohio. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Holcomb, 6120 Ross Road, Fairfield, she is a senior at Morehead, majoring in business education. They met while students at Morehead and have been married a year.

Since most of his work naturally falls in the Home Economics area, he has been the only boy in many of his classes. One semester, he was the only male in a class with 99 girls.

"It has been like that since I've been at Morehead," he said with a smile, "and it's something to get used to."

Since coming to Morehead, Tony has learned to cook just about anything you'd want to eat and in many different variations.

He also has become proficient in the operation of the quantity cooking equipment in the university kitchens.

He also handles much of the preparation and serving of food at Baptist Student Union functions on the campus and helps with the food service at special events held at either of the University's two cafeterias.

As versatile as he is, there's one thing Tony does not do--cook at home.

"That's Barbara's domain," he added, diplomatically. "I relax and enjoy what she comes up with."

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 18) -- Four guest conductors and two soloists will be featured in the third and final concert given by a 45-piece band made up of members of a summer term Advanced Conducting and School Band Literature class at Morehead State University.

The concert, beginning at 7 p.m., will be presented Thursday, July 25, on the plaza in front of the Baird Music Hall on the Morehead campus.

Of the guest conductors, two are graduate students, and two are faculty members. The graduate students are Grady Weisbrod, Cedaridge, Colo., who soon will join the Sixth Army Band at San Francisco, and Susan Mullins, music director of the Boyd County schools, Ashland.

James Martin and David Bushouse, Morehead music faculty members and assistant conductors of the University's marching band, are the guest faculty conductors.

Soloists will be Robert Schietroma, an instructor in percussion at the University, and Earle Louder, who joined the Morehead music faculty recently after 12 years as head of the band department of the United States Navy Band, Washington. Louder will perform on the euphonium.

Also appearing at the concert as a featured twirler will be Deliah Hawkins, a member of "The Eaglettes," a line of 24 majorettes who perform with the marching band.

All members of the band are high school band directors or music teachers on campus for the summer doing graduate work.

The public is invited to attend the concert, which will be given in the Baird Music Hall auditorium in the event of rain.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 18)--A new program, leading to the Master of Business Education degree, has been announced by Dr. C. Nelson Grote, dean of the School of Applied Sciences and Technology at Morehead State University.

The program, which became effective in early June with the opening of the summer term, permits Kentucky teachers of business education to earn Standard Certification and allows students from other areas to broaden their knowledge and experience in the business education area, Dr. Grote said.

The degree program is open to majors or minors in business education or business administration. "The course work is flexible enough," the dean said, "to permit the student's program to be built around the needs of the individual.

"The curriculum especially will be helpful to business administration majors seeking to prepare themselves for teaching on the junior or senior college levels," he added.

Fourteen semester hours are required with 16 semester hours selected to fit the student's background or future career plans.

Dean Grote also announced that graduate assistantships are available for students who wish to work toward the new degree. An assistantship stipend of $2,200 per year will be paid, he said, and students selected are charged the regular Kentucky resident registration and incidental fees.

Dr. Ardyce Lightner, associate professor of business at Morehead, has been appointed coordinator of the school's Graduate Business Education Program. Inquiries regarding the new graduate degree should be directed to Dr. Lightner.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 22)--Eleven concerts will be presented during the third annual Cumberland Forest Music Camp, scheduled for August 6-18 on the campus of Morehead State University.

More than 300 music directors, teachers and students are expected to attend the camp for the purpose of developing their musical skills during a period of concentrated study under the supervision of a distinguished faculty, including a number of nationally-known musical personalities.

All concerts will be open to the public, and all evening concerts will start at 7:30 p. m. in Baird Music Hall, said Dr. Robert Hawkins, director.

The first concert, featuring soloists and ensembles, will be held Thursday, August 8. The following night, the symphony band, made up of students of college level, will perform under the direction of Dr. Clarence Sawhill, director of bands at the University of California at Los Angeles.

The Directors' Band, made up of graduate students and faculty, will perform Saturday night, August 10, with Dr. Hawkins, who is director of bands at Morehead, conducting.

Two bands made up of high school students will perform Monday night, August 12. These will be directed by Dr. Sawhill and Al G. Wright, director of bands at Purdue University.

Student and faculty solo and ensemble concerts are scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, August 13-14 before the symphony and directors' bands perform a second time on Thursday and Friday evenings, respectively.

Larry Keenan, a member of the University's piano faculty, will be a featured soloist in the Friday concert, performing Saint-Saens' Second Piano Concerto with the band's accompaniment.

Three concerts are planned for Saturday, August 17, as the camp nears its close. At 2 p. m., a student ensemble concert will be presented. At 3:30 p. m., three stage bands will perform with Gene Deaton and Bob Schietroma of the Morehead music faculty doing the conducting.

The final concert will be one by a band made up of both junior and senior high school students. It will start at 7:30 p. m. with Dr. Sawhill and Wright doing the conducting.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 22)--Four registered Angus heifers have been presented to Morehead State University for use as breeding stock on the University's newly-acquired farm on the Flemingsburg Road.

The animals, all open heifers, were presented to Dr. Adron Doran, president of the University, Saturday, July 20, at the second annual picnic of the Ohio Valley Angus Association at Stonecroft Farm, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tietig, near Georgetown, Ohio.

One heifer, Stonecroft Evening Erica II, was presented by the Tietigs, who develop breeding stock from their 63-head Angus herd on the 275-acre Stonecroft Farm.

Another was presented by Long Branch Farms, Goshen, Ohio, owned by Neil McElroy, secretary of defense during the Eisenhower Administration, while a third was presented by Black Bird Farm, owned by Dr. Ballard Morgan, Olive Hill, who is secretary of the association.

The fourth was presented by Frank Bauman, Blue Creek, Ohio, president of the association, on behalf of the 50 members of the group.

In accepting the animals, all of which will be bred this fall, Dr. Doran said:

"We will be feeding animals on our new farm for the purpose of developing practices and gaining practical experience in animal agriculture which will help us show the people of our region that they can supplement their income on the type of hillside farms that we have in Eastern Kentucky through livestock.

"As a university, we firmly believe that we can make a great contribution to the motivation of the people of Appalachia toward a higher level of income and productivity through agriculture," he said, "and we are very pleased that this association has included us in its efforts to help small farmers."

(more)

Negotiations for the purchase of the 204-acre farm by the University are in the final stages. It has been operated by L. H. Fraley as a tobacco-livestock farm, and has a 4-acre tobacco base.

Long-range University plans call for its use as an agriculture laboratory for student training and for practical research and demonstrations for farmers of the region served by the institution.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 23)--Sixty students and 10 high school teachers, representing 14 Eastern Kentucky school districts, are participating in a five-week workshop at Morehead State University designed to prepare them for the establishment of drama groups in their own communities.

The workshop, part of a year-long Communicative Arts Demonstration Training Project, will end August 16.

The initial participating districts include Ashland Independent, Bath County, Carter County, Fairview Independent, Floyd County, Holy Family of Ashland, Martin County, Pike County, Russell City Schools, Greenup Independent and University Breckinridge School on the Morehead campus.

Upward Bound students from Boyd and Elliott Counties also are involved.

Four plays and one radio drama are scheduled to be produced by the group, ranging from Brandon Thomas' farce, "Charlie's Aunt," to Eugene Ionesco's absurd drama, "The Bald Soprano." Productions also are scheduled to be staged in Ashland and Pikeville during the final week of the workshop.

Director and field coordinator of the project is Bill Tillett, a native of Lincoln County and who recently received a master's degree from Indiana University.

A graduate of Campbellsville College, Tillett, in addition to directing the workshop, will do follow-up work in the local school districts during the 1968-69 school year.

The project, according to Tillett, is the only one of its kind in the United States in which students and teachers study and work side by side in the planning and production of plays.

Its program is planned to provide participants with the full range of drama activity, including set and costume design as well as various methods of directing.

Harlan Hamm, director of drama and speech at Breckinridge School, is the liaison man between the University and the project director.

Financed by a $50,000 federal grant, the project is under the direction of the Eastern Kentucky Educational Development Corporation, formed in 1965 by Eastern Kentucky school superintendents as a cooperative regional approach to bring about creative educational programs.

Twenty counties, including 35 school districts, currently are participating in the establishment of local program.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 23) -- The "Curious Savage," a three-act comedy, will be presented by the drama department of the Upward Bound project at Morehead State University July 30-31.

The production will be staged in the Little Theater of the Combs Classroom Building at the University, and curtain time is 8 p.m.

The "Curious Savage" deals with a family by the name of Savage who commit the mother to a mental institution. Through her eyes, the audience is shown that many times patients in mental institutions are more healthy and sane than many of the people in the "outside world."

Amusing situations result when the various "patients" make their entrances and contribute to the production.

Playing the role of Mrs. Savage will be Frances Howland of Holmesville, Ohio, and a sophomore at the University. Other members of the cast include:

Edna Gordon, Susanne Brookins and Diana Poe, all of Mason County; Debbie Tarter, Nancy; Herbert Riddle and Harold Bailey, Bath County; Greg Crowe, Boyd County; Frances Williams, Ashland; Juanita Blair and Billy Howard, Johnson County, and Gary Adkins, Jackie Bays, Diana Church, Ellen Farley and Violet Sigler, all of Greenup County.

Reservations for the play may be made by contacting Harlan Hamm, University Breckinridge School, Morehead State University. The phone number is Area Code 606, 784-4181, Ext. 268.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 23)--Dr. Carl M. Hill, since 1962 president of Kentucky State College, Frankfort, will deliver the summer Commencement address at Morehead State University August 1.

A total of 307 candidates are expected to receive degrees at the exercises to be held in the Laughlin Fieldhouse at 8:00 p. m. The academic procession will form in front of Baird Music Hall, beginning at 7:30 p. m.

The degrees expected to be conferred include one associate of applied science; 153 bachelor of arts; six bachelor of music education; 10 bachelor of business administration and 48 bachelor of science.

There are 89 candidates for the master's degree: three master of arts; three master of science; two master of music; 80 master of arts in education, and one master of higher education degree.

Final examinations for all degree candidates will be given Monday, July 29. Final exams for all other students enrolled for the summer term at the University are scheduled for Friday, August 2, the final day of the session.

A native of Norfolk, Va., Dr. Hill's career has included service as a high school science teacher, college professor, faculty dean, and college president.

He has published 52 research papers in national scientific journals, has co-authored a college textbook and a workbook, and authored a laboratory manual in college chemistry.

In addition, he has supervised and developed research projects sponsored by the Tennessee Valley Authority, Research Corporation of New York, the U. S. Air Force Research Command and the National Science Foundation.

In 1962, Dr. Hill received the Manufacturing Chemists' Association Award for Excellence in College Chemistry Teaching. A member of the South Frankfort Presbyterian Church, U. S., he also is a member of the Board of World Missions of The Presbyterian Church, U. S.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 25) -- Twenty-seven Eastern Kentucky elementary school teachers are attending a five-day workshop at Morehead State University learning to use long-distance telephone lines and teletype machines to teach arithmetic in their classrooms.

For all or part of the past year, students in the first six grades of 10 schools in the Morehead area have been "stretching their minds" through the new computer assisted arithmetic instruction program, originating at Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif.

A proposal, submitted by the Eastern Kentucky Educational Development Corporation, calling not only for continuation of the program but also its expansion, has been made to federal educational officials in Washington.

Approval of the proposal will enable terminals to be placed in additional Eastern Kentucky schools and involving approximately 2,100 additional students in a 20-county area.

Plans call for the installation of from one to five teletypes in each of the schools to provide the students with daily exercises in arithmetic fundamentals from California across the continent by long-distance telephone through the computers at Morehead's University Breckinridge School.

The teachers attending the workshop are being trained in the operation and care of the equipment and are being familiarized with the new technique and its affect on the teacher, student, parents and the community.

Under the direction of Dr. Leonard Burkett, a professor of education at Morehead and educational coordinator of the computer project, the counties participating are:

Bracken, Robertson, Mason, Fleming, Lewis, Montgomery, Bath, Rowan, Carter, Greenup, Menifee, Elliott, Boyd, Morgan, Lawrence, Magoffin, Johnson, Martin, Floyd and Pike.

Assisting with the workshop are Louis Smith, project director with the Central Midwestern Regional Educational Laboratory, St. Louis; Paul Pholand, research associate at Washington University, St. Louis, and Max Jerman, research associate in the Institute for Mathematical Studies in the Social Sciences, Stanford University.

The workshop will close July 26.

MOREHEAD, Ky., July 27--Over 75 leaders in business, industry and education will gather on the Morehead State University campus Tuesday, July 30, for a meeting of the Committee on Education in Kentucky Appalachia.

Participants will discuss and make recommendations on economic, educational, and sociological problems in Eastern Kentucky. Featured speakers will include: former governor Edward T. Breathitt; John Whisman, States' Regional Representative, Appalachian Regional Commission, Washington; Charles Foltz, Executive Director of the Education Advisory Committee, Appalachian Regional Commission, Washington; and Frank Groschelle, Administrator, Kentucky Program Development Office, Frankfort.

Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University and a member of the Advisory Committee on Education to the Appalachian Regional Commission, will preside at the meeting which begins at 10:00 a. m. in Alumni Tower. Whisman will speak on the "Concept of the Appalachian Compact," followed by Foltz whose address is entitled "Education in Appalachia." Groschelle will discuss "Community Development in Kentucky Appalachia."

Former governor Breathitt will speak at the 12:30 luncheon on "Potential for Rural Growth in Appalachia of Kentucky." The conference will conclude with a discussion of needs and problems and recommendations for a plan of action.

SPECIAL TO THE SOMERSET COMMONWEALTH-JOURNAL

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 29) -- "The schools of Eastern Kentucky are on the threshold of a major breakthrough in educational advancement because of their willingness to accept and to put into operation many of the new and often revolutionary ideas brought to them through Title III programs."

This is a firm conviction of Dr. Morris Norfleet, newly-appointed vice-president for research and development at Morehead State University.

"The realization of this goal is limited only by the imagination, creativity and the desire to help on the part of those involved in the research and development of the type of programs needed to discover, develop and utilize the talents of young people, particularly those in Appalachia," he said.

Dr. Norfleet, a native of Pulaski County, is firmly convinced that quality instruction should be the primary objective of any college or university as well as any secondary or elementary school system. He views people in positions such as his as charged with the responsibility of pointing the way to this proficiency.

"The role of the university is to be of service to its region in helping people identify and solve problems through the application of theory to the practical situation," he said.

"And since the administration of higher education is becoming so complex, it is essential that those in positions of decision-makers have access to more and more information upon which to base sound, effective action.

"This is the area in which those involved in program research and development can be of tremendous service to administrators as well as faculty," he went on.

"Our job is one of service, and anything we can do to help teachers on all levels of education to do a better job is what we seek to determine and do."

Named to his new position by the University's Board of Regents May 1, Dr. Norfleet grew up on a farm near Norfleet, Ky., named for his great-great-grandfather.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hewey Norfleet, still live on and farm the 80-acre home place. In addition, his father also operates a grocery and a feed and farm supply business.

After graduating from high school at Nancy, Dr. Norfleet earned a bachelor of science degree at the University of Kentucky, finishing in 1952. He received his master's at Purdue University in 1957 and his doctorate at the same institution in 1962.

His 16 years in education also include three years with the Indiana Farm Bureau, first as an educational assistant and later as a market research analyst.

While working on his doctor's degree at Purdue, he served as an instructor in education with the University, working with teachers and administrators in an 8-county area to improve and develop new instructional programs.

Dr. Norfleet came to Morehead in 1962 as director of student teaching, a position he held for three years. During this time, he helped establish a complete off-campus student teaching program and spent most of his time teaching guidance and education courses.

In 1965, he was named director of research and development and began devoting virtually every waking hour to campus and regional educational problems and opportunities.

When he isn't flying to Washington, Atlanta or to any one of a dozen educational or governmental centers seeking to initiate, develop and put into operation new programs designed to fit not only the University's facilities and faculty but the educational needs of Eastern Kentucky, he is at his desk from 7:30 a.m. until late afternoon during the school year.

It is seldom a day passes without him taking part in an educationally-oriented luncheon, or attending a dinner conference with visitors, faculty or staff members.

Dinner at home with his wife, the former Loistene Tarter also from Norfleet, and their son, Douglas Lee, 5, is a rare occasion. Even then, he finds it necessary to spend two to three hours in the den reading the mountain of national and regional educational periodicals which accumulate on his desk.

To get away from it all occasionally and to "recharge his batteries," Dr. Norfleet loves to hunt and fish. He goes regularly to his father's farm to hunt quail with boyhood friends and to fish in Lake Cumberland.

Dr. Leonard Burkett, a professor of education at Morehead, is one of these and is a hunting and fishing companion of many years' standing.

In great demand as a speaker for teacher and educational groups as well as high school Commencement exercises, Dr. Norfleet has written numerous articles related to his field.

One, "The Student Teacher and the Guidance Viewpoint," was published nationally in "The Student Counselor." Another, "The Computer and the Student," an article dealing with the computer assisted program which Morehead is pioneering, appeared in the February, 1968, issue of the National Education Association Journal.

Although one of the busiest men on the Morehead campus, Dr. Norfleet still manages time for church and civic activities.

He is a member of the board of deacons at the First Baptist Church in Morehead as well as superintendent of its young people's Sunday School department and teacher of a class of young married couples. He also is a faculty advisor to the Baptist Student Center near the campus.

He also has served as president of the Kentucky chapter of the Association of Student Teaching and holds membership in more than a dozen state and national educational groups.

Last spring he not only was a member of Gov. Louie B. Nunn's Efficiency Task Force but was a member of its 10-man steering committee, helping to direct a study of all functions of state government in an effort to develop greater efficiency at all levels of operation.

"You know," he said, gazing from his third floor Administration Building office across the city of Morehead to the green-cloaked hills beyond, "there's no limit to the things we could do in education if we didn't have to sleep---and had the money."

SPECIAL TO: LEXINGTON HERALD
Back-to-school issue

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 29)--Morehead State University will open its 46th year September 14 with an expected record enrollment of more than 6,500 students.

Part-time students for night and Saturday classes will open the fall registration on that date with enrollment of full-time students scheduled to start Tuesday morning, September 17, at which time seniors and graduate students will register.

Juniors and sophomores will register during the afternoon of September 17, continuing through noon of the following day, after which freshmen will be registered.

Classes for the fall term of the 1968-69 school year will start Friday, September 20. Monday, September 23, is the final day to register for a full academic schedule.

There are five Schools within the multi-purpose, state-supported University: Applied Sciences and Technology; Education; Humanities; Sciences and Mathematics; and Social Sciences. The AB and BS degrees are offered in many fields, while various graduate programs lead to the master's degree.

The graduate degrees offered by the University are:

The Master of Arts in Education and the Master of Higher Education; Master of Arts with emphasis in English or history; Master of Science with emphasis in biology or chemistry; Master of Music and Master of Music Education, and, recently, the Master of Business Education.

A Master of Arts degree program with emphasis in psychology has been approved and will be offered for the first time during the summer of 1969.

A joint doctoral program between Morehead State University and the University of Kentucky also is available.

President of the University is Dr. Adron Doran, a native West Kentuckian and a former speaker of the Kentucky House of Representatives. Dr. Doran holds BS and MA degrees from Murray State University and a Doctor of Education degree from the University of Kentucky.

A past chairman of the National Education Association Legislative Commission and a member of the Advisory Committee on Education to the Appalachian Commission, Dr. Doran was named "Kentuckian of the Year" by the Kentucky Press Association in 1959, and in 1966 was presented with the "Distinguished Kentuckian Award" by former Gov. Edward T. Breathitt.

Currently, Dr. Doran is serving as one of 15 members named last fall by President Lyndon B. Johnson to the National Advisory Council on Education Professions Development.

The physical facilities at Morehead are splendid. More than 50 major structures dot the 455-acre campus, reflecting an investment of more than $55,000,000 in the youth of Kentucky since 1954. A $15,000,000 expansion program currently is near the halfway point.

Five new buildings were completed last year. The most spectacular of these is Mignon Tower, a 16-story, cylindrical structure which dominates the campus.

The Tower also is the central unit of Mignon Complex, four residence halls for women named for Mrs. Mignon Doran, wife of the President and home to 1,180 coeds.

The other newly-completed buildings are: Alumni Tower, a 10-story residence hall for men; a new 40-unit apartment building for married students; a 132-man athletic dormitory for all scholarship athletes, and a $1,676,000 building to house the physical education program.

The new health building features an activities room of more than 20,000 square feet of floor space and large enough for four basketball games to be played simultaneously on regulation-size courts.

Two other major building projects were completed this spring, while five others are still under construction with two scheduled for completion within the next few weeks.

Completed in time for use during the spring semester was an addition to Lappin Science Hall, more than doubling the size of that building, which houses the School of Sciences and Mathematics.

Completed recently was the $1,200,000 Claypool-Young Art Building, the only one of its kind on a Kentucky college or university campus devoted exclusively to the teaching of modern methods of art instruction and providing sound, basic experiences for students naturally gifted in the visual arts.

Rapidly nearing completion and expected to be ready for use this fall is the 9-story Professional Education-Graduate Studies Building costing an estimated $3,005,000, and a $1,289,000 addition to Baird Music Hall.

Three other major construction projects, representing an additional $6,375,000 building program, have been started within the past three months.

These are:

A $2,200,000 expansion program at the Doran Student House in the heart of the campus and two residence halls.

A 19-story, 512-bed men's residence hall, the first of a planned complex of four, is well underway on the site of the University's old tennis courts. Twelve new tennis courts are nearing completion near the athletic dormitory at Breathitt Sports Center.

The new dormitory, the eighth for men on the Morehead campus, is expected to cost $2,760,246, and is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1969.

The new residence hall for women, 10 stories in height and housing 400 coeds, also was started recently across a valley just north of Mignon Complex. Access to a rear parking lot will be provided by a ground-level, drive-through lobby area. It also is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1969.

The University not only continues to expand its physical facilities, increase its student population and attract a distinguished faculty, but continues to develop an outstanding academic program.

The Board of Regents recently created the Morehead Community college to develop experiences to serve students in counties adjoining Rowan County who desire training in terminal programs.

It is against this background that the University's newly-established Department of Military Science also will become operational with the fall 1968 semester.

More than 1,000 freshmen and an estimated 75 sophomores and juniors are expected to participate in the new Reserve Officers Training Program this fall.

Lieutenant Colonel Thomas A. Harris, a veteran of 26 years with the Army, has been named head of the new department, the first in the history of the university.

Eventually, the new department will be housed in Button Auditorium and Gymnasium, for 38 years the scene of historic Morehead State University basketball games, concerts and social events.

The building soon will undergo an extensive remodeling program to make it ready for the cadets, and including an eight-point rifle range, armory, uniform storage facilities, classrooms and staff offices, all air-conditioned.

An outdoor drill area also has been carved out of the mountainside within 150 yards of the building, while formal parades and exercises are expected to be held at the University's Breathitt Sports Center on the eastern end of the campus.

With its ROTC program now approved, Morehead becomes the last of Kentucky's tax-supported institutions to offer a Reserve Officers Training Corps program.

Morehead State University also owns and operates its own golf course. This nine-hole course is located four miles from the campus and is used for golf classes and by the golf team. Students, faculty, staff and their families, alumni and friends are eligible to use the course upon payment of prescribed fees.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (July 29)--Thirty-five sophomores and juniors from Kentucky high schools are expected to attend an 11-day Communications Institute at Morehead State University, beginning August 6.

The purpose of the institute, which is sponsored by the University in cooperation with the Kentucky Broadcasters Association, is to provide participants with the realistic aspects of broadcasting and to help develop the talents of those interested in broadcasting as a career.

Instruction will be offered in three areas--drama, forensics and radio and television. Classes will be conducted from 8 a. m. until 8:30 p. m. with instruction covering such subjects as production, directing, announcing, and news casting for both radio and television.

Jack Wilson, assistant professor of speech at Morehead, is the coordinator for the institute.

In charge of the forensic division will be Mrs. G. C. Webb, an assistant professor of speech, and directing the drama activities will be Marvin J. Phillips, an associate professor of dramatic arts. James Uszler, instructor of radio and TV, is in charge of the radio and television instruction. All are members of the University faculty.

Eight guest lecturers from the staffs of KBA member stations also are scheduled to participate. They are:

Al Temple, Bowling Green, executive secretary of the KBA; Al Bryan, news director, WKLO, Louisville; David Carter, Carter Advertising Agency, Ashland; and Walter Windsor, WKYT-TV, Lexington.

Also, Ray Holbrook, president of the KBA, WHIR, Danville; J. T. Whitlock, WLBN, Lebanon; J. B. Brawley, Campbellsville, and Drew Von Bergen, United Press International, Louisville.

This is the first institute of its type to be conducted under sponsorship of the KBA, which has made available $300 in scholarships for qualified students wishing to attend.

Each participant is being sponsored by member stations in the KBA, which also has made available $300 in scholarships for qualified students wishing to attend. Two participants also are being sponsored by the Upward Bound program at the University.

The $85 registration fee charged will cover the student's housing, meals and materials cost for the period of the institute.

MOREHEAD, KY., July 30 -- Speakers at a meeting of the Committee on Education in Kentucky Appalachia at Morehead State University this week unanimously called for greater participation by the people of Appalachia in the decision-making process.

Over 75 leaders in business, industry and education heard former governor Edward T. Breathitt, Jr., who is now Director of the Institute on Rural America, say "The prevailing system of development programs, in which project categories are developed at the top and sent down, is not engaging the full potential of local leadership and initiative. Much thought is now being devoted to changing this system to reverse the flow of program ideas and plans."

John Whisman, States' Regional Representative, Appalachian Regional Commission, Washington, told the gathering that "We have to change. Our people must become the technicians. The outside technician cannot bring about significant change without the use of our people in Appalachia."

The five priorities of the Education Advisory Committee of the Appalachian Regional Commission were spelled out by Charles Foltz, Executive Director, Washington. The priorities are: (1) Bringing about greater cooperation and sharing between local school units and between colleges and universities and secondary and elementary education; (2) Focusing greater attention on vocational and technical education with emphasis on the training of teachers and counselors in these areas; (3) Developing a formalized approach in grades seven to nine which would more clearly define various occupations; (4) Developing early childhood education beginning at age three; and (5) Working toward the training of more teachers and personnel for the school systems of Appalachia with the goal of developing greater holding power in the region.

Frank Groschelle, Administrator, Kentucky Program Development Office, Frankfort, pledged the full support of his office on behalf of the efforts of the Committee on Education in Kentucky Appalachia.

SPECIAL TO: The Louisville Times
The Jefferson Reporter

Dr. Raymond R. Hornback, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Hornback, 4600 Walden Drive, has been named Vice President for University Affairs at Morehead State University.

A 1952 graduate of Southern High School, Dr. Hornback completed work on the doctorate in higher education at Indiana University in June. He earned the AB and MA degrees from the University of Kentucky.

The 34-year-old native of Louisville went to Morehead in 1956 as Director of Publicity and Publications and was named Public Relations Director in 1959. Following a year's leave of absence during which time he earned the MA degree, he was named Assistant to the President for Public Affairs in 1962.

During the past two years he has been on the Indiana University campus in Bloomington where he held a graduate assistantship the first year and an Indiana University fellowship the second year. He was chairman of the Student Association of Higher Education and assisted with the Workshop on Information and Development.

"Ray has exhibited a high degree of dedication and competence," said Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University since 1954, "and we know his contributions to Morehead State University and higher education in Kentucky will be great as we face the many problems of the future."

Dr. Hornback comes from a family of Jefferson County educators. His mother taught at the Okolona Elementary School until her retirement last year and his father taught at Okolona High School in the 1930's and early 1940's and taught at the University of Louisville University College until his retirement last year.

Dr. Hornback responded to the challenging new position by saying, "Problems in higher education are becoming more complex with the passage of each day. But this is an exciting field of endeavor and I look forward to the challenges which lie ahead. "

Dr. Hornback is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, Phi Kappa Tau, Sigma Delta Chi, Lamp and Cross, and served as Public Relations Chairman of the Kentucky-West Virginia District of Optimist International. He has worked as a staff writer for the Associated Press and is active in the affairs of the American College Public Relations Association.

His doctoral dissertation at Indiana University was a study of "Policy Boards of Public, State-Supported Institutions of Higher Education" in the United States.

He is married to the former Betty J. Collins of Mason County.

FOR RELEASE THURSDAY, AUGUST 1

MOREHEAD, KY., August 1 -- Morehead State University has three new vice presidents. Named recently to top posts by the Board of Regents were: Dr. Raymond R. Hornback, Vice President for University Affairs; Dr. Morris L. Norfleet, Vice President for Research and Development; and Roger L. Wilson, Vice President for Student Affairs.

The three new appointments bring to four the number of vice presidents at the university. Dr. Warren C. Lappin was named the university's first vice president, Vice President for Academic Affairs, in 1966.

"Dr. Hornback, Dr. Norfleet, and Mr. Wilson have a combined total of 33 years experience with Morehead State University," said President Adron Doran, "and have exhibited a high degree of dedication and competence. Their contributions to Morehead State University and higher education in Kentucky will be great as we face the problems of the future."

Dr. Hornback has just returned to the Morehead campus after an absence of two years during which he completed the doctorate in higher education at Indiana University. He earned the AB and MA degrees from the University of Kentucky.

The 34-year-old native of Louisville came to Morehead in 1956 as Director of Publicity and Publications and was named Public Relations Director in 1959. Following a year's leave of absence during which he earned the MA degree, he was named Assistant to the President for Public Affairs in 1962.

While at Indiana University, Dr. Hornback held a graduate assistantship and an I. U. Fellowship, was Chairman of the Student Association of Higher Education, and assisted with the Workshop on Information and Development.

His doctoral dissertation at I.U. was a study of "Policy Boards of Public, State-Supported Institutions of Higher Education" in the United States.

Dr. Hornback is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, Phi Kappa Tau, Sigma Delta Chi, Lamp and Cross, and served as Public Relations Chairman of the Kentucky-West Virginia District of Optimist International. He has worked as a staff writer for the Associated Press and is active in the affairs of the American College Public Relations Association.

He is married to the former Betty J. Collins of Mason County.

A native of Pulaski County, Dr. Norfleet came to Morehead in 1962 as an associate professor in education and Director of Student Teaching. In 1965, he was named a professor in education and appointed Director of Research and Program Development.

Dr. Norfleet received his BS degree from the University of Kentucky in 1952 and his MS in education from Purdue University in 1957. He earned the doctorate in education at Purdue in 1962.

His 16 years in education started in 1952 at Spiceland, Ind., where he taught science in the public schools for six years. His experience also includes three years with the Indiana Farm Bureau, first as an assistant in education in the public relations department and later as a market research analyst.

He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, American Vocational Association, the National and Kentucky Education Associations, American Education Research Association, Kentucky Science and Technology Commission and the American Association of Higher Education.

He has served as president of the Kentucky chapter of the Association of Student Teaching. Last spring, he was a member of Gov. Louie B. Nunn's Efficiency Task Force, a group of state leaders asked by the governor to study all functions of state government in an effort to develop greater efficiency at all levels of operation.

Mrs. Norfleet is the former Loistene Tarter of Pulaski County. They have one son, Douglas Lee, 5.

Wilson came to Morehead in 1953 as Dean of Students and associate professor of education. Previously, he was principal of the Jenkins High School.

In 1966, he was named Director of Student Affairs at Morehead and given the responsibility for all non-academic student affairs.

A native of Richmond, Wilson graduated from Eastern Kentucky University in 1936 with an AB degree and received his MA from the University of Kentucky in 1947. He also has done doctoral study at U.K.

Wilson Hall, a 100-room men's residence hall at Morehead, was named in his honor, and he is widely-known in Central Kentucky for his ability as a trainer and exhibitor of saddle horses for showing.

Wilson also holds memberships in the Kentucky and National Education Associations, Phi Delta Kappa and the American College Personnel Association.

Mrs. Wilson is the former Lela Cullis of Lexington, and they have two children, Roger, Jr., a junior at the University of Kentucky, and Martha Jane, a student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

MOREHEAD, KY., August 6 -- Over 350 music directors, teachers and students have registered for the third annual Cumberland Forest Music Camp at Morehead State University which began Tuesday (August 6).

A total of 187 cities from 34 states are represented at the camp, according to Camp Notes, the camp's daily newsletter.

The camp opened Monday with registration and a get-acquainted party on the Mignon Terrace. The first of 11 scheduled concerts will be presented tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 in Baird Music Hall. All concerts are free and open to the public, said Dr. Robert Hawkins, camp director.

Tonight's concert will feature concerts and ensembles, while tomorrow night a symphony band, composed of college-level students, will perform under the direction of Dr. Clarence Sawhill, director of bands at the University of California at Los Angeles.

The directors' band, which is composed of faculty and graduate students, will perform Saturday night under the direction of Dr. Hawkins, who is director of bands at Morehead State.

Two bands made up of high school students will perform Monday night. These bands will be directed by Dr. Sawhill and A. G. Wright, director of bands at Purdue University.

Student and faculty solo and concert ensembles are scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday nights, and symphony and directors' bands perform again on Thursday and Friday.

All concerts are scheduled to start at 7:30 p.m. in Baird Music Hall and are free to the public.

MOREHEAD, KY., Aug. 8 -- A nine-member committee of the faculty of Morehead State University has reported that the academic freedom of two former faculty members was not violated because of non-reappointment.

The report was made after the committee, which was elected by the total faculty, heard complaints from Dr. Robert L. Arends, Associate Professor of English, and Kenneth G. Vance, teacher in journalism and employee in public information, that their academic rights to re-appointment had been violated.

Dr. Arends and Vance appeared before the committee on July 17 and 19 to present their cases.

The proceedings by the faculty committee were suggested by the American Association of University Professors after Dr. Arends and Vance had filed charges with the AAUP that their academic freedom had been violated. In accordance with AAUP suggestions, the nine-member committee was elected by the total faculty to conduct the hearings.

Copies of the report of the committee have been filed with the General Secretary of the AAUP and will be presented to the Morehead State University Board of Regents.

MOREHEAD, KY., Aug. 9, -- Thirty-nine high school students from Kentucky, Indiana, and Ohio are enrolled in the first High School Communications Institute being held at Morehead State University August 6-17.

The students are attending classes in three different areas: forensics, drama, and radio-television. Eighteen students are enrolled in the forensics section, 13 are taking radio-television classes, and eight are attending drama classes.

Forensics students, under the direction of Mrs. G. C. Webb, assistant professor of speech at Morehead, are preparing for the debate topic, "Resolved: that the United States should establish a system of compulsory service for all citizens."

Drama students will work on the fundamentals of drama and present some one-act plays, according to Jack E. Wilson, institute director. Marvin Philips, associate professor of dramatic art at MSU, is teaching the drama class.

James Uszler of MSU is teaching the radio-television students, who are taping commercials and using the WMKY-FM radio station as a laboratory. The class will tour the WBLG-TV studios in Lexington Saturday.

Guest speakers at the institute include: Al Temple, Bowling Green, executive secretary of the Kentucky Broadcasters Association, who spoke to the students Thursday. J. B. Crawley, Campbellsville, representing WMSK, WCND, and WPTN, will address the group Monday. On Tuesday, Allen Bryan, news director of WKLO in Louisville, is scheduled to speak.

A demonstration featuring talents learned during the institute will be presented Saturday, August 17, at 1:00 p.m. in Button Auditorium.

Three students from Louisville are attending the institute on scholarships from the Kentucky Broadcasters Association. They are David Hines, Durrett High School; Mark Pfeiffer, Shawnee High School; and Ray Luoma, Du Pont Manual High School.

SPECIAL TO:

FOR RELEASE SUNDAY, AUGUST 11.

MOREHEAD, KY., Aug. 11 -- "The hills are alive with the sound of music" this week at Morehead State University.

Over 330 students, teachers and directors of music are attending the third annual Cumberland Forest Music Camp here, representing 34 states and 187 cities.

The camp enrollment, which has more than doubled since last year, includes students at all levels of training and experience, said Dr. Robert Hawkins, camp director.

"We offer a full range of activities so that students of all levels, from junior high school to the graduate student, may find work sufficiently challenging to project their musical abilities," Dr. Hawkins added.

"The enrollees are very talented youngsters who have settled down to work very quickly and are very interested," said Dr. Glenn Fulbright, head of the Music Department at Morehead. "Enthusiasm of both students and faculty is high. We expect some outstanding concerts from the bands."

This year, for the first time, the camp has a baton twirling class conducted by a professional twirler, Mrs. Joyce Ross, who has recently returned from a six months tour with the Harlem Globetrotters basketball team.

Mrs. Ross, who won the National Baton Twirling Championship in 1959 and attended Iowa State University on a full scholarship, teaches baton and dance to 26 girls from 7:30 a.m. until 5:00 p.m. each day. Her students range in age from 10 years to college-level majorettes.

"I'm pleasantly surprised that the girls seem to be so exact," said Mrs. Ross, who performs under her maiden name of Joyce Rice. "Even in this hot sun, the girls are almost always in unison." She explained that each girl receives a minimum of four hours instruction daily. The classes are small enough that each girl receives a lot of individual instruction, she said.

During the 10-day camp the girls will learn about 20 short routines or "series," Mrs. Ross said. "I concentrate on teaching personality projection, posture, and developing confidence. Confidence is a very important requisite for a twirler's success."

Another unique opportunity available at the camp is the option to take harp lessons from Mrs. Margaret White of Indiana University. One veteran harp player is Adrien Dansker, a high-school senior from Bloomington, Ind., who has played the harp for seven years. She began harp lessons because she was tired of piano lessons and her parents wanted her to continue music lessons. She is a regular pupil of Mrs. White.

The camp harp class of 26 students includes five boys. The students range in age from 10 years through college level. The younger members play troubadour harps which cost approximately $500. Concert harps, the larger models, cost from $3,000 to $5,000.

Students can accomplish more in the 10-day camp session than they can during a regular school semester, Mrs. White said, due to the intensive training offered.

Eleven concerts are scheduled during the camp, which runs through Aug. 18. All concerts will be open to the public, starting at 7:30 p.m. in Baird Music Hall.

Two high-school student bands will perform tomorrow night. These will be directed by Dr. Clarence Sawhill, director of bands at the University of California at Los Angeles, and Al Wright, director of bands at Purdue University.

Three concerts are scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 17, as the camp nears its close. At 2:00 p.m., a student ensemble concert will be presented. Three stage bands, conducted by Gene Deaton and Bob Schietroma of the MSU faculty, will perform at 3:30 p.m.

The final concert will be given by a band composed of junior-high and high-school students. It will start at 7:30 p.m. with Dr. Sawhill and Wright conducting.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (August 13) -- The "Knob Tigers" are on the prowl at Morehead State University this week.

Eighty "Knob Tigers," as participants in the annual Kentucky Dance Institute refer to themselves, are on campus for a week of dancing and fun.

The name "Knob Tigers" originated from a story told several years ago by Miss Shirley Durham of 4540 Southern Parkway, Louisville, co-director of the Institute. "I was telling tales to scare the Yankees, and a story about a knob tiger just slipped out of my mouth," she said. Since that day some 12 years ago, the group has called itself the "Knob Tigers."

One feature of the camp is "Knob Tiger Night," when persons attending the institute for the first time are initiated into the order of "Knob Tigers." The new initiates have to drink tiger milk and pet a tiger, Miss Durham claimed.

The Institute, which is now in its 15th year, has a relaxed and friendly atmosphere. "The friendliness which prevails at the institute causes people to want to come back," said Miss Durham, who has been with the Institute since its beginning.

Other veteran instructors include M. G. Karsner, of the Western Kentucky University Physical Education Department, co-director of the institute, who has been attending the institute for 14 years. Another 14-year veteran of the institute is Vyts Beliajus, Denver, Colorado, editor of Viltis, a folklore magazine. Beliajus specializes in international dances.

Stu Shacklette of 1121 Christland Avenue, Louisville, has participated in the Institute for eight years. His specialty is square dance calling and he gets plenty of practice, calling an average of six square dances a week during the school year. He supervises five square dance clubs in the Louisville area.

Huig Hofman, a retired school administrator from Belgium, is a special guest instructor at the institute this year. Hofman, who organized a youth organization to promote folk dancing in his native country, is making his third appearance at the Institute. He teaches North European dances, and he also makes his own records, which are imported to dance clubs in the United States.

"I wanted to return to the Kentucky Dance Institute because it is so friendly here, and every one makes me feel right at home," Hofman said. When he is not teaching, he is dancing or planning a new dance to teach the others.

One "celebrity" attending the Institute is Darrell Green, who will appear in four NBC-TV specials next fall with the B Ward Dancers. Green, a native of Montgomery, Ala., will appear in the dancing chorus on shows starring Andy Williams, Glen Campbell, and Nancy Sinatra.

The Institute is not restricted to any single age group. The group ranges in age from nine-year-old Cece Meyers of Southampton, Pa., to 73-year-old Mrs. Elizabeth Bennett of Burlington, N. C.

The returnee rate is extremely high at the camp, Miss Durham said. She estimated that about two-thirds of the participants return to the Institute each year.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (August 13) -- "I believe that my first duty is to be a mother," said Mrs. Joyce Ross, a professional twirler who is teaching at the Cumberland Forest Music Camp at Morehead State University, as she played with her two-year-old daughter, Rhonda.

Mrs. Ross, who was National Baton Twirling Champion in 1959 and attended Iowa State University on a full scholarship, has been teaching baton and dance to 26 girls at the camp. She teaches from 7:00 a. m. until 5:30 each day, but she takes time to eat each meal with Rhonda.

"I had rather be on tour than to teach because I can be with Rhonda more that way. When we are on tour, I can be with her all the time except when I'm doing my 10-minute act," Mrs. Ross said.

Mrs. Ross, who performs under her maiden name of Joyce Rice, and Rhonda recently returned from a six months tour with the Harlem Globetrotters basketball team. She performed throughout the United States, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand.

Her husband was unable to make the trip because he raises beef cattle in Earlham, Iowa. "We don't mind being apart so much. Our marriage is actually strengthened some by it," Mrs. Ross said.

She plans to continue her twirling career for "a few more years or until another baby comes along." She performed at a state fair only three weeks before Rhonda was born.

"I'm glad that we live on a farm," Mrs. Ross said, "because the children will have greater freedom in growing up. Since we live near where I grew up, I'm not going to force Rhonda to learn to twirl because of the pressure that would be placed on her since I was a champion."

She said that she is surprised at the enthusiasm shown by the girls at the Cumberland Forest Music Camp. "Even in the hot sun, the girls always seem to be in unison," she said.

During the two-week camp, the girls will learn about 20 short routines or "series." Each girl receives a minimum of four hours instruction daily, Mrs. Ross said. "I concentrate on teaching personality projection, posture and developing confidence. Confidence is very important for a twirler's success."

MOREHEAD, Ky., (August 15) -- A national Commissioner of Education, who has also served as governor, lives in Morehead.

She is Sheryl Binion, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Binion, who has recently returned from a trip to Girls' Nation in Washington, D. C. While attending Girls' Nation, which is the national version of Girls' State, Sheryl was appointed national Commissioner of Education.

"I thought about running for President but 42 other girls had the same idea," she said.

Two girls from each state except Alaska and Louisiana plus two girls from Washington, D. C., attended the week-long meeting sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary. Susan Knight of LaCenter was Kentucky's other representative.

On Monday, July 29, the girls heard Mrs. Dorothy Goodright, chairman of the Federation of Republican Women, and Mrs. Dorothy Bush, National Secretary of the Democratic Party, explain the role of women in politics.

That night at a patio party, representatives for each political candidate for U. S. President talked with the girls. Sheryl was particularly impressed with Julie Nixon, Mike McCarthy, and David Eisenhower.

Tuesday the girls toured the various monuments in Washington. On Wednesday, the girls toured the Senate and House of Representatives. Sheryl met Congressman Carl Perkins of Kentucky, Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho. The girls also toured the Supreme Court Building.

Dean Rusk told the group of 98 girls Thursday that the nation had learned from World War II but would not from World War III. The girls also met with Mrs. Clark Clifford, wife of the Secretary of Defense, and Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Strickland.

On Friday, the girls toured the White House. Commencement ceremonies were held Friday night in the Georgetown University square.

"The trip was a unique experience, a real opportunity," said Sheryl, who is governor of Kentucky Girls' State. "It's nice to know that I'll know at least two girls in almost every state now. It's sad that every girl doesn't get the chance to go."

"The outstanding factor of Girls' Nation is that there was no trace of apathy among the girls," Sheryl said.

Sheryl is impressed by two bills passed by the Kentucky Girls' State at their June meeting in Frankfort. The girls passed a bill calling for a crime commission board to combat crime by stressing worthwhile activities for teenagers.

Another bill provided that aid to unwed mothers would be discontinued if they had more than one child.

"It makes me feel good that girls still think of worthwhile things instead of protesting and demonstrating," Sheryl said.

Sheryl will be a senior at University Breckinridge School at Morehead State University this fall.

MOREHEAD, KY., August 15, 1968 -- A total of 132 different courses will be offered for part-time students in Saturday and evening classes this fall at Morehead State University.

Registration for these students is scheduled for Saturday, Sept. 14, from 8 a.m. until noon in the Laughlin Health Building at the University.

Part-time students also may register at the first meeting of the classes in which they wish to enroll, according to Monroe Wicker, Director of School Relations. Full-time students who plan to enroll for these courses may do so on the regular registration day, he said, and students holding a baccalaureate degree must be admitted to graduate study before enrolling.

The advance registration is being held to give the part-time students a better selection of classes, and enrollment in the evening and Saturday classes will be accepted through Monday, Sept. 30, although many of the classes could be closed by that time.

Listed below are the classes offered and the hours of credit given for each course:

MOREHEAD, Ky., (August 16) -- Eighty-one persons from 14 states and Belgium participated in the 15th annual Kentucky Dance Institute held at Morehead State University August 12-17.

"The program is devised to meet the needs and interests of all, regardless of experience, including folk and square dancers, folk dance leaders, square dance callers, recreation leaders and teachers of all grade levels," said Miss Shirley Durham, Louisville, co-director of the Institute.

The curriculum included folk dancing and square dancing for both experienced and inexperienced dancers; round dancing and international folk dancing for couples; contra dancing; dancing fundamentals; square dance calling; and discussions on programming and leadership.

Staff members for the institute were: Miss Durham; M. G. Karsner, co-director of the Institute, Physical Education Department, Western Kentucky University; Vyts Beliajus, Denver, Colo., editor of Viltis, a folklore magazine; Stuart Shacklette, a square dance caller from Louisville; and Huig Hofman, a retired school administrator from Belgium.

Hofman, who founded a youth organization to promote folk dancing in his native country, was a special guest instructor at the Institute. It was his third visit to the Institute. He makes folk dance records which are imported to dance clubs in the United States.

One "celebrity" who attended the institute was Darrell Green, who will appear in four NBC-TV specials next fall with the B Ward Dancers. Green, a native of Montgomery, Ala., will appear in the dancing chorus on shows starring Andy Williams, Glen Campbell, and Nancy Sinatra.

MOREHEAD, Ky., August 22--Many young singing groups sing only for money, but the Upbeats from Morehead State University are singing for a worthy cause.

The eight-member group, which was formed during the summer school Upward Bound program at Morehead, has recently recorded its first record album. Profits from the four-song album, which is simply called "The Upbeats," will go into a scholarship fund for the Upward Bound program at Morehead State.

The songs on the album were written by Lisa Palas, Richmond, who will be a freshman at Morehead this fall. She has written over 100 songs in her lifetime.

Included on the album, which will sell for $1.00, are "The Upward Bound Song," "World of Love," "Some Day," and "So Many Times."

The other seven Upbeats participated in the Upward Bound program, either as students or tutor counselors. Lydia Lewis and Calvin Settles of Maysville were tutor counselors, while Diana Berry, Kathy Haley, Charles Corde, and Arud Hall, all of Maysville, and Joan Barber of West Liberty were students.

The group originated as a music class under Gene Deaton, MSU assistant professor of music. The five Upward Bound students were pupils in the class, and Miss Lewis was the class's tutor counselor. Miss Lewis asked her friend Settles to sing with the group, and the group selected Miss Palas to play the piano for them.

The group performed at service clubs and banquets this summer, and they will continue to sing together this fall when they all return to campus.

Jack Webb, director of the MSU Upward Bound program, said that the group sounds a lot like the New Christy Minstrels. Webb praised the group highly, saying that the purpose of the Upward Bound program is to "pull yourself up."

He said he believed that the Upbeats have done just that.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 6--An enrollment of about 6,300 students is expected when registration begins Saturday, Sept. 14, at Morehead State University.

Registration for part-time students taking night and Saturday classes will be from 8:00 a. m. until noon on Sept. 14.

Freshman and transfer students begin orientation sessions on Monday, Sept. 16.

On Tuesday, Sept. 17, registration for full-time students begin. Seniors and graduate students will register in the morning, and juniors and seniors register that afternoon.

Sophomores and juniors will continue to register on Sept. 18, and freshman registration will begin that afternoon. Freshman registration will continue on Sept. 19.

All registration activities will be conducted in the Laughlin Health Building.

The final day to register for a full class load is Monday, Sept. 23. Classes are scheduled to begin Sept. 20.

Registration fees are $100.00 for full-time in-state students and $350.00 for full-time out-of-state students. There is also a $20.00 incidental fee.

The registration fee for undergraduate students who are Kentucky residents and enrolled for less than 12 hours of work is $9.00 per hour. This fee is $30.00 per semester hour for out-of-state students.

The fee for graduate students from Kentucky who are enrolled for less than nine hours of work is $12.00 per semester hour. This fee for out-of-state students is $40.00 an hour.

The estimated 6,300 enrollment represents a slight increase over last fall's enrollment of 6,140. A total of 5,484 students were registered for the 1966 fall semester.

Included in the anticipated enrollment are over 1,850 new students, who are incoming freshmen or students who have transferred from other institutions. As of Sept. 1, 1,847 of these students had been approved for admission to the University. Still more students are expected to be approved for admission before registration begins.

Of these new students, 1,403, or 75.9 per cent, are Kentucky residents, and 444, or 24.1 per cent, are from out of state. This figure does not include the 372 new freshmen and transfer students who enrolled for the 1968 summer session.

Eighty-seven per cent of the new students will reside in campus housing, said Bill Pierce, director of admissions.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 6--An interdisciplinary approach to the identification and proper recognition of ethnic and minority group contributions to culture and knowledge will be stressed during the upcoming academic year at Morehead State University.

Dr. Roscoe Playforth, Dean of the School of Social Sciences, said today that the Deans of the University's five Schools have agreed "that our faculties have in general done a splendid job in treating ethnic and minority group contributions to our total social, economic, and cultural development."

"But we also feel," said Dr. Playforth, "that there may have been some areas of omission and we plan to ask our faculties to take a continuing critical look at current course offerings with the thought of revising courses where changes are needed."

The Social Sciences dean said there is currently a study being made to determine if a course or courses should be developed in Afro-American history, Afro-American culture, or conceivably an integrated sequence of courses involving several disciplines.

"In the past we have felt it best not to isolate courses involving specific ethnic or minority groups," Dr. Playforth said, "and the recent National Conference of Academic Deans indicated that a majority of those schools represented were following the interdisciplinary approach to dealing with the historical contributions of minorities in our society. This does not mean that specific courses will not be offered should there be a proven need and enough students desire such courses."

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 10--Thirteen educators attended a workshop at Morehead State University, Sept. 6-7, to plan an in-service program on development of behavioral objectives in science curricula to be presented at Breathitt County High School in Jackson.

The educators are consultants to the ES '70 program, a cooperative local-state-federal program for the development of a new comprehensive secondary school curriculum which will provide an individualized education for each student. The consultants are from Morehead State University, Eastern Kentucky University, and University of Kentucky.

Featured speaker at the meeting was William Ryan, executive coordinator of the ES '70 program.

The group will be working with the faculty of Breathitt County High School through a series of in-service programs in an effort to bring about such an individualized educational system in Breathitt County.

Attending the workshop were Harry Barnard, Daniel S. Arnold, Ronald Atwood, and Fred Edmonds from the University of Kentucky; Mrs. Geneva Owens, Morris Taylor, and Thomas Johnsten from Eastern; Leonard Burkett, Carole Carte, Don Holloway, and Crayton Jackson from Morehead; and Robert Lawson, curriculum director for ES '70.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 11--WMKY-FM, Morehead State University's campus radio station, will begin carrying the new national call-in program "Night Call" on Monday, Sept. 16.

The program, which is produced by the Television, Radio and Film Commission of the United Methodist Church, will be heard Monday through Friday from 11:30 p. m. until 12:30 a. m.

Anyone in the United States may call host Del Shields collect and speak directly with a guest. The purpose of "Night Call" is to help people find reconciliation and to move toward solutions to problems through understanding.

The program offers persons of widely differing views and backgrounds to speak, to be challenged, to ask questions, to discover new views and truths, said Don Holloway, WMKY-FM station manager.

"Night Call" guests include Arthur Miller, New York Mayor John Lindsay, Cleveland Mayor Carl Stokes, Ralph Abernathy, James Baldwin, and Bill Cosby.

"In actuality, "Night Call" is a national town meeting which offers all Americans the opportunity to meet and talk over their problems in the best way man has yet found: person to person," Holloway said.

Since the program, which originates from New York City, began broadcasting June 3, over 60 stations have begun carrying the program.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept 19 -- Julia Rankin, who underwent a kidney transplant operation in May, is entering Morehead State University this fall as a freshman.

Julia's new kidney was donated to her by her older sister, Janice, who is paralyzed. Both girls have the same blood type, which made the kidney function immediately after the transplant. The operation was performed at the University of Kentucky Hospital, Lexington, on May 28.

Since then, Julia has been in and out of the hospital. Now, her doctors have given her permission to enroll in college and live in a dormitory.

A native of Sharpsburg, Julia has chosen a sociology major. After graduation, Julia hopes to be a social worker. Having seen enough illness during her days in the hospital, Julia has chosen a career in which she can help healthy people with their problems.

The University freshman also has an avid interest in art and hopes to take art courses as electives.

Julia has been acquainted with others having a similar medical experience. She was able to encourage a man in the Lexington hospital who was waiting for a transplantable kidney. The first girl in Bath County to have a kidney transplant is also one of Julia's friends.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 20 -- A program presenting peaceful uses of nuclear energy will be given at four Boyd County schools by Morehead State University and the Atomic Energy Commission, Oct. 1-4.

The exhibit, called "This Atomic World," will be at Paul Blazer High School, Oct. 1; Coles Junior High School, Oct. 2; Putnam Junior High School, Oct. 3; and Fairview High School, Oct. 4.

Charles Mays, a 1968 Morehead graduate with a Bachelor of Science degree in physics and chemistry, will be in charge of the exhibit, which will be presented at a 40-minute assembly program at each school.

Using a specially-designed van-type truck to transport the exhibit, Mays will visit one school each day, presenting the nuclear energy peacetime story first at an all-school assembly program and later in classroom sessions.

Mays, who took eight weeks of intensified training in atomic energy and the presentation of the exhibit at Oak Ridge, will be available at each school for special counseling with interested students and guidance counselors.

"The assembly program is designed to interest all students. It will cover in student terms such basic nuclear physics highlights as radioactivity, chain reaction, reactors and their uses, transmutation, and the application of radioisotopes in medicine, industry and agriculture," said Dr. Charles A. Payne, chairman of the Division of Physical Sciences at Morehead.

A more detailed discussion is presented in the classroom session later. Aimed primarily at the science students, the topics discussed in the classroom include atomic structure, the nucleus, radiation biology, fission and fusion, Mays said.

Specifically-designed electronic equipment, including a radiation counter, a reactor model, a Van de Graaff generator and a number of electronically-activated panels, will be used in the presentations to illustrate Mays' lectures.

The Morehead State-operated unit will be available to all schools in Kentucky during the next two school years, Mays said. He is visiting schools in the eastern portion of the state this year and will visit the schools west of Louisville next year.

"We think this is a tremendous opportunity for high school principals to bring a vitally important and meaningful program to their students and teachers," Dr. Payne said.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 20 -- When the Morehead State University marching band performs at the San Diego Chargers-Cincinnati Bengals American Football League game at Cincinnati Sept. 29, it will have practiced six days a week for three weeks, said Dr. Robert Hawkins, band director.

The band, which consists of 202 members, reported to the campus Sept. 8 for issuing of uniforms and tryouts for the Eaglette Majorette Corps, which includes four squads of four girls, one alternate each, and a featured twirler. This year's featured twirler is Barbara Thomas from Xenia, Ohio.

The band's first time together as a group was Tuesday evening, Sept. 10. Full-time practice began the next day. During the one-week university band camp, the band practiced daily from 8:30 until noon, from 1:00 p.m. until 4:30, and from 6:00 p.m. until dark, Dr. Hawkins said.

Since school has begun, the band now drills from 4:10 p.m. until dark on weekdays, and from 10:00 a.m. until noon on Saturday. Several members drilled an hour in the mud Thursday night so they wouldn't get behind in the schedule, Hawkins said.

Countless hours of planning and practice will go in to the preparation for the Cincinnati performance. The band, which includes about 100 freshmen, will have to adjust to performing on a professional football field instead of the college field because of the added width.

The band will be on the field a total of 13 and a half minutes at Cincinnati. The pre-game performance which will last three minutes and 20 seconds, will begin with a ceremonial fanfare by Ketelby, followed by "Charge," the official song of the Chargers. "Bengal Growl," the Bengals' official song; "Toy Tiger," and "Hold That Tiger" will all be played for the home team. The band will exit with "Barnum and Baily's Favorite."

The halftime show, which will be 10 minutes and 10 seconds long, will open with a percussion fanfare, followed by a contemporary composition celebration overture by Paul Preston.

A precision drill will be performed to the music of "Glory of the Gridiron." It will consist of a position drill featuring a series of obliques, a fast-break drill, and a drill featuring a series of diagonal designs.

The city of Cincinnati will be toasted as the band forms two wine glasses that touch in the center of the field. The toasting music will be the waltz from "La Traviata."

The band will go into a showboat formation to salute the annual race between the "Delta Queen" and "The Belle of Louisville." "Old Man River" will be played during this salute.

The final formation will be an outline of Kentucky surrounded by a sunburst, and Stephen Collins Foster's "My Old Kentucky Home" will be played. Janet Hatfield, Miss Kentucky who is a freshman from Jeffersontown, and Mary Ann Buddick, Miss M.S.U. and a member of the Eaglettes, will be presented to the crowd at this time.

Dr. Hawkins arranged all of the songs except for "Old Man River" and the waltz from "La Traviata," which were arranged by James Martin, associate conductor.

Dr. Hawkins' main helper is his wife Kate, who sponsors the Eaglette Majorette Corps and assists in many ways. Martin and David Bushouse serve as associate conductors. Other Morehead faculty members on the marching band staff are Eugene Norden, Earle Louder, and Robert Schietroma.

Michael Swaffar is a graduate assistant with the band, and Charles Lee is the drum major. Miss Thomas and Judi Lawson are Eaglette drill leaders.

Other Eaglettes are: Charlene Boyd, Debbie Branhan, Mary Ann Buddick, Patricia Cole, Mary Clinger, Sue Crain, Nancy Frazier, Peggy Geers, Jo Johnson, Linda Laird, Emma Miller, Ruth Ann Miller, Lisa Palas, Marilyn Rossiter, Brenda Turner, Linda Waite, Gorja Walter, Maurine Welsh, and Terri Williams.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 24 -- Salvador Dali's painting entitled, "Illustration, Histaminic Reaction" which depicts the nose as a burden to the human race, is one of the works included in an art exhibition worth a half million dollars to be shown at Morehead State University.

Thirty-five paintings are included in the show, which will open on September 30 and run through October 13. All the works belong to Abbott Laboratories, which owns a total of 400 paintings--one of the largest art collections by a corporation. Abbott uses reproductions of the paintings by first-class artists in product advertising and on the covers of the Abbott house magazine.

"This is the largest collection ever to be shown at Morehead," said Jack Harris, instructor of painting and art gallery director. To be housed in the gallery of Morehead's new Claypool-Young Art Building, the exhibit will be the first of many such shows in the University's spacious art facilities.

Other works included in the exhibit will be Raoul Dufy's "Le Grand Concert;" Fernand Leger's "La Boite A'Chapeau" and Rēne Magritte's "La Presence D'Esprit."

The paintings are circulated by the American Federation of the Arts, an organization which sponsors travelling exhibits.

Gallery hours in the Claypool-Young Art Building are: Monday, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. and 6-9 p. m.; Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Saturday and Sunday, 1-5 p. m.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 24 -- Selections by Igor Stravinsky, Paul Hindemith, and Walter Mays will be included in Dinah Hawkins' senior clarinet recital, to be given on Tuesday, Oct. 8 at 8 p.m. in Baird Music Hall, Morehead State University.

Performing with Miss Hawkins in the Mays sonata for two clarinets, will be her teacher, Dr. William Bigham, professor of music at Morehead, who will play the second clarinet part.

A daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Hawkins of the Morehead music faculty, Miss Hawkins was an academic scholar at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music before she entered Morehead State University. She received the Three Arts scholarship which is awarded by the patrons of Cincinnati. In 1963, after winning the Central City (Colorado) Music Competition, she attended the Aspen Institute of Music. She also attended the Cumberland Forest Music Camp on the Morehead campus.

The public is invited to the concert, the first of the fall music season at Morehead State University.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 25 --When is a twin not a twin? Answer--when she is Patricia Ann Justice from Elkhorn City.

Enrolled at Morehead State University this fall are two girls by the same name, from the same city and who graduated from the same high school. However, they are not related.

There has been no real confusion due to the identical names other than messages for one reaching the other, they said. Sometimes Elkhorn City mail reaches the wrong Patricia Justice, which is easily remedied by understanding postmen.

To add to the jumble, there was another Patricia Justice in Elkhorn City during the girls' high school days.

One of Morehead's Patricia Justices, a redhead, is a sophomore transfer student from Prestonsburg Community College. Her major is elementary education.

The other, a brunette, is a freshman with an area of concentration in social science.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Sept. 25--A five-part Inaugural Series featuring vocal soloists as well as string, woodwind and vocal ensembles will be presented by the Morehead State University music department in the recital hall of the new addition to Baird Music Hall beginning October 6 at 3:00 p. m.

The new recital hall is designed particularly for solo and small ensemble performances, said Dr. Glenn Fulbright, chairman of the music department. "This series is set up to offer a variety of programs for which the hall is suited," he said.

Baritone soloist, James Beane, who is an associate professor of music at Morehead, will present the opening recital.

He will be assisted by Anne Beane, soprano, and accompanied on the piano by Larry Keenan, instructor of music at the University.

Groups of selections by Schumann, Haydn, Duparc and the contemporary American composer, John Duke, will be included in the program. Also four duets will be performed, one from Mozart's Don Giovanni, and three by Purcell.

The second concert of the Series will be presented by the woodwind quintet on November 26.

On January 19, the faculty string ensemble will give the third concert.

A recital of contemporary ensemble music, organized by James Martin, instructor of music at Morehead, is scheduled for March 4.

The final concert, on April 20, will feature the chamber singers under the direction of James Beane.

All Sunday programs will begin at 3:00 p. m. Others are scheduled for 8:00 p. m.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 4--Over 1,800 high school musicians, representing 24 bands, will participate in the Kentucky Music Educators Association Band Festival at Morehead State University, Saturday, October 12.

The festival will be held in the Breathitt Sports Center Stadium, and the starting time is 1:00 p. m.

Morehead's festival is one of three K. M. E. A. band festivals scheduled for this month. The two other festivals are at Murray State University and Western Kentucky University.

Bands participating in the Morehead festival will come from a 67-county region in Kentucky, representing the largest geographical area of the three festivals. Morehead is serving as host to the group for the fourth consecutive year.

The bands will compete in nine categories arranged according to total student enrollment. Each band will be rated by a panel of judges selected by the K. M. E. A., and each band will receive a framed certificate of performance. The bands will also be given a military inspection to grade their overall appearance.

Each band will perform from five to seven minutes and will be judged according to appearance based on military inspection, marching precision, and playing ability.

"The marching bands in this region have established a very high level of competency," said Dr. Glenn Fulbright, head of the Morehead music department and manager of the Morehead festival. "The interest in the festival has been very keen. Some bands which started as observers are now participants."

The 24 participating bands, in order of appearance, are:

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 4--"Women always set the standard of behavior," said Mrs. Adron Doran, wife of Morehead State University's president, as she addressed Delta Omega Xi sorority October 3 at their kick-off banquet. After her talk she was made an honorary member of the sorority.

"Facets of Femininity" was the topic of Mrs. Doran's talk in which she told the Omegas that a woman's age-old duty is to be attractive, interesting and of value to others.

Mrs. Doran, in speaking of celebrities with whom she has been acquainted, said that the bigger persons are always simple and down to earth. "They don't have their heads and feet in the clouds," she said.

"Your public personality begins in private," she reminded the girls. "The surface is an indication of inner beauty, and your appearance sells your ideas."

"A feminine woman never goes out of style," Mrs. Doran said. "High fashions change, but the real essence of femininity never changes."

She said that beauty is an overrated endowment. If it isn't with other endowments, it can be "cold and down right boring."

"We must develop orderly minds to have orderly habits," she said.

"Be a thinker now and all your life. Associate with people of ideas."

In closing, Mrs. Doran asked the girls to put "quality in every thought, word and deed" to be the most successful sort of women.

Paula Birchfield, president of Delta Omega Xi, presented Mrs. Doran with a certificate of honorary membership in the sorority and a charm engraved with the Greek letters of the organization.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 4--Guidance counselors from a 21-county area of Eastern Kentucky attended a two-day Operation Talent Search conference September 30 and October 1 on the Morehead State University campus to learn how to discover undiscovered talents in their students.

Speakers at the conference included Dr. Emmitt Burkeen, director of Talent Search at Western Kentucky University; Lola Doane, counselor at Belfrey High School, Pike County; and Samuel Robinson, principal of The Lincoln School.

Financed by a $50,754 federal grant, Operation Talent Search at Morehead has the purpose of identifying, encouraging and motivating young people of exceptional ability but lacking the financial resources to continue their education above the high school level.

Campus offices on the fifth floor of the new Education Building will serve as a clearing house in identifying students and contacting various college financial officers about the capabilities of the student, said Frank Sandage, Director of Operation Talent Search at Morehead.

Talent, defined by Operation Talent Search personnel, is not only intellectual, but also includes social leadership potential and physical ability in music, art, sports, or creative ability.

Campus workers supplement work of guidance counselors by providing a super-structure in an effort to discover students who don't realize they have special talents.

It is hoped that 40 percent of the student body at each high school will be termed "talented" and will go on for a post-secondary education in a vocational school or college.

Counselors who attended the conference are to administer questionnaires to high school juniors and seniors in each of the 70 high schools in the area. Teachers are asked to evaluate the students. The permanent record of each student is checked for grade average, achievement scores and IQ evaluation. This information is placed on data processing cards, and a computer selects the top 40 percent of the students.

Students chosen are then encouraged to stay in high school and seek post-secondary education by films and programs designed especially for their situation.

In the future, Operation Talent Search workers hope to have pilot projects in model schools for the use of talented students in such areas as music, art and creative writing. Educational television will be used to reach the student and his parents at home.

Operation Talent Search works cooperatively with Project Upward Bound and ALPS (an Accelerated Learning Program for college students) in the total development of the potential of their discovered talent.

Three Talent Search programs are active in Kentucky. Besides the one at Morehead, there is one in Louisville's west end and one at Western Kentucky University, Bowling Green. In the U. S. there are 75 Talent Search organizations.

Kentucky counties involved in the Morehead Operation Talent Search are: Bath, Boyd, Breathitt, Carter, Elliott, Fleming, Floyd, Greenup, Johnson, Knott, Lawrence, Lewis, Magoffin, Martin, Mason, Menifee, Montgomery, Morgan, Pike, Rowan, and Wolfe.

Persons interested in knowing more about the program should contact Frank Sandage, 503 Graduate Studies Building, Morehead State University.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 7 -- A herd of 16 registered polled hereford cows have been donated to the Morehead State University agriculture department by the Kentucky Polled Hereford Association.

The objectives of the university beef cattle program will be to aid in the instruction of animal science students, to provide an opportunity for illustrating and teaching practical production and management of beef herds, both commercial and registered, said Dr. Charles Derrickson, head of the Morehead department of agriculture.

The university herd has been selected to contain genetically-proven, high-yielding, fast-gaining, efficient cattle which will reduce cost of production and ultimately provide higher quality beef at the meat counters.

All the cows will be artificially inseminated to insure production of the best possible offspring.

Dr. Derrickson said that the herd may increase to 25 as other interested members of the Polled Hereford Association donate cattle.

"Eastern Kentucky has potentials in beef cattle raising and it could be quite profitable for the Eastern Kentucky farmer," said Dr. C. Nelson Grote, Dean of the School of Applied Sciences and Technology.

Kentucky ranks third highest in total number of polled herefords in the United States.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 8 -- A total of 6,261 students have enrolled at Morehead State University this fall.

This includes 1,952 freshmen, 1,356 sophomores, 1,243 juniors, 1,234 seniors, and 476 graduate students and represents the largest enrollment in the institution's history.

There is a slight decrease from last year in the number of freshmen and sophomores, which can be attributed to the establishment of community colleges in Maysville, Louisville and Hazard, in addition to junior colleges that were already in existence at Ashland, Prestonsburg, and Cumberland.

On the other hand, the number of juniors and seniors has increased almost 20 per cent over last year. This increase is attributed to the graduates from junior colleges in the region coming to the Morehead campus. Morehead accepted 427 transfer students this fall, a 11.78 per cent increase over last fall.

"There is a definite trend in advanced standing students continuing their education through graduation. This is due to a greater attempt to keep the students in school once they are here," said Bill Pierce, Acting Director of Admissions.

The graduate enrollment shows an increase of 54 students or almost 13 per cent over last year's figures.

Pierce pointed out that the number of students in the lower division has decreased slightly because of the University's concerted effort to be more selective in admission of out-of-state students. The percentage of out-of-state students has decreased 2.69 per cent from last year. Twenty-seven per cent of the enrollment is from out of state.

Of the transfer students, 19 per cent were from out of state, and 21 per cent of the beginning freshmen were from out of state. Fifty-three per cent of the beginning freshmen are males, and 47 per cent are females.

The 1967 fall enrollment was 6,148, and 5,484 were enrolled for the 1966 fall term.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 14 -- Music filled the air at Morehead State University's Breathitt Sports Center Saturday, October 12, as 25 Eastern Kentucky high school bands with approximately 1800 members marched for ratings in the fourth Kentucky Music Educators Association Band Festival.

The bands, appearing before over 3,000 spectators, competed in nine categories arranged according to total enrollment. A military inspection was given each band to grade overall appearance.

Nine bands were rated superior in playing, marching and appearance categories. They are: Tates Creek High School, Lexington, under the direction of Don Trivette; Blazer High School, Ashland, directed by Larry Moore; Holmes High School, Covington, directed by James Copenhaver; Henry Clay High School, Lexington, under the direction of Richard Borchardt; Bryan Station High School, Lexington, directed by William Campbell; Campbell County High School, Alexandria, directed by John DuPuy; Dixie Heights High School, Fort Mitchell, under the direction of George Gartner III; Erlanger Lloyd High School, Erlanger, directed by Charles Hill; and Paris High School, Paris, directed by Thomas A. Military inspection was administered by officers from the ROTC unit at Morehead State University.

Morehead's festival was one of three K. M. E. A. band festivals scheduled for this month. The others are at Murray State University and Western Kentucky University.

Bands participating in the Morehead festival came from a 67-county region in Kentucky, representing the largest geographical area of the three festivals.

The 202-member Morehead State University Marching Band presented a special performance during the band festival.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 14 -- Morehead State University's soccer team had its string of 24 consecutive games without a defeat stopped by the University of Dayton Saturday. Dayton won 3-0.

The streak dated back over a three-year period, with the team posting a 11-0-1 record last year and winning its first two meets this season.

Dr. Mohammed Sabie, the team's coach, was not present to see his team lose. He is attending the Olympics in Mexico City.

Dayton was the only team which had previously come close to defeating Morehead during the winning streak, when they tied 1-1 last season.

Morehead's next match is 3:00 p.m. Thursday at Breathitt Sports Center against Kentucky Southern College.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 14 -- A concert by Count Basie and his orchestra, the dedication of the $1.2 million Claypool-Young Art Building, and music by Woody Herman and his band will highlight 1968 Morehead State University Homecoming activities on October 18 and 19.

Officially opening the festivities at 6:00 p.m., Oct. 18, will be the traditional candlelight dinner in the Doran Student House.

Following the candlelight dinner, Count Basie and his orchestra will perform in concert at 8:30 p.m. in the Laughlin Fieldhouse.

Saturday's activities will be highlighted by the dedication of the Claypool-Young Art Building, at 10:00 a.m., to be followed by an open house and an art display. Various academic receptions are also scheduled.

A smorgasbord luncheon will be served in the huge, multi-purpose room of the Laughlin Health Building beginning at 11:00 a.m.

Saturday afternoon, Morehead will meet Youngstown University in the traditional Homecoming football contest at 2:30 p.m. at Breathitt Sports Center.

Following the game, various open houses will be sponsored by schools and social organizations on campus. Academic coffees will be held in each school for alumni and friends who want to meet with former faculty and classmates, and observe academic and facility growth.

Climaxing the weekend will be the traditional Homecoming Dance featuring Woody Herman and his band. Recognized as one of the big-band leaders in jazz, the Herman sound will be heard beginning at 8:30 p.m. in the Laughlin Health Building multi-purpose room.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 15 -- Phil Hardin of Morehead State University won his third consecutive cross country while leading his team to a 23-32 victory against Kentucky State at Frankfort Friday.

Hardin finished the five-mile course in 28:11, and teammate Jack White was second with 28:25. Dan Price of Morehead was fourth with a time of 28:36.

A junior who participated in only two high-school track meets while attending Rowan County High School, Hardin has won a four-team event at the University of Cincinnati and a 10-team meet at the Ashland, Ohio, Invitational Meet.

The next meet for Coach Marshall Banks' team is at 10:00 a.m. Saturday at Eastern Kentucky University. Eastern's top runner is Grant Colehour, who finished second in the university division of the NCAA meet last year. Colehour has returned from trying out for the U. S. Olympic team.

Coach Banks said that he thinks Hardin can give Colehour a good race. The coach said he is pleased with the performances of Hardin, White, and Price in the Kentucky State meet. "We showed a real team effort, and the win was really gratifying because this was our first dual meet this season, and our boys needed to show that they can win against single competition," Banks said.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 15 -- Paula Risner, a brown-eyed brunette from Mt. Sterling, was named Homecoming Queen at Morehead State University today. She is a senior social science major.

She was presented a loving cup at a student convocation, and will reign over the festivities, Friday and Saturday.

Officially opening the festivities will be the traditional candlelight dinner at 6:00 p.m. Friday in the Doran Student House. Mrs. <sup>Adron</sup> Doran, wife of Morehead's president, will provide dinner music on the organ, accompanied by Brad Jones on the saxophone and Tommy Dupin on the drums. Jones and Dupin are MSU students.

The Coeds, seven Morehead State University students, will sing several selections for the dinner. They are Suzi Shank, Karen Hagaman, Harriet Hunt, Debbie Perdue, Elizabeth Lindon, Vicki Otten, and Chris Hocker. The group will be accompanied by James Rauch on the piano and directed by Mrs. Victor Venettozzi of the Morehead State music department.

Following the candlelight dinner, Count Basie and his orchestra will perform in concert at 8:30 p.m. in the Laughlin Fieldhouse.

Saturday's activities will be highlighted by the dedication of the Claypool-Young Art Building, at 10:00 a.m., to be followed by an open house and an art display. Various academic receptions are also scheduled.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 15 -- Paula Risner, a blue-eyed brunette from Mt. Sterling, is the 1968 Morehead State University Homecoming Queen. A senior with an area in the social sciences, Paula has maintained over a 3.4 average in her years at Morehead.

The new queen is a member of Chi Phi Delta sorority and was voted Best Dressed on campus in the spring of 1968. She was in the 1967 Homecoming Court, is the current Tau Alpha Epsilon Sweetheart and was Trail Blazer Calendar Girl.

An election was held October 14 in which Paula was elected by student votes. She was chosen from a field of eleven girls.

Paula is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Risner, 417 North Maysville Street, Mt. Sterling.

She will reign over Homecoming October 18-19, beginning with a candlelight dinner at which she will have her own table. Later she will be spotlighted at a concert by top jazz musician, Count Basie.

On Saturday, she will attend the dedication of the Claypool-Young Art Building and a smorgasbord luncheon held in the Laughlin Health Building from 11:00 a.m. until 1:30 p.m.

Kickoff time for the football game with Youngstown is set at 2:30 p.m. There, the queen and her court will be recognized at half time.

She will be officially crowned at the Homecoming Dance. Woody Herman and his band will perform beginning at 8:30 p.m. in the Laughlin Building.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 17--Three Morehead State University freshmen are among twenty home economics majors in the state who received Kentucky Future Homemakers of America Scholarships this year.

The $300 scholarship winners are: Marietta Daulton, Hillsboro; Carolynn Martin, Jeffersonville; and Marcia Kay Razor, Salt Lick.

To be eligible for these scholarships, the entrants had to have a Future Homemakers Association State Homemaker's degree in high school and be planning to continue their study of home economics in a Kentucky college this fall. Also, each girl had to present three recommendations written by persons other than high school personnel and home economics teachers. The latter requirement was a very important factor in the final choice.

Winners receive one half of the scholarship money each semester.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 17 -- Mrs. Russell Snyder, president of the Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers, from Henderson, was the keynote speaker at the fall conference of the Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers-District 12, held at Alumni Tower, Morehead State University, on October 17.

Informing the delegates about upcoming programs throughout the state, Mrs. Snyder emphasized the importance of the meeting to be held in Lexington November 12-14. The topic will be "Concern for Children in Trouble," and will include a tour of Kentucky Village.

Dr. Adron Doran, president of Morehead State University, welcomed the representatives.

The afternoon speaker was Sherryl Binion, from University Breckinridge, Morehead, who was Governor of Girls State and a delegate to Girls Nation. She recalled her experiences at the state and national meetings for the conference.

The District 12 conference attracted approximately 100 delegates from eight Kentucky counties. They are: Greenup, Carter, Bath, Fleming, Lewis, Mason, Elliott and Rowan.

Workshops held during the afternoon were: Procedure and By Laws, headed by Mrs. William Boyd, Greenup County; Publicity by Mrs. Sherman Goodpaster, Bath County; and Legislation by Kenneth Fern, Fleming County.

Representing the host unit of the conference was Mrs. David Abner, president of the Rowan County High School PTA and Sherman Arnett, principal of Rowan County High School.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 22--The Philosophy and Literature of Existentialism, a book by Dr. Lewis Barnes, Professor of English at Morehead State University, has been published by Barron's Publishing Company, Woodbury, New York.

Written to appeal to many different levels of reading, the book combines the historical, philosophical and literary aspects of existentialism. Dr. Barnes said a competent junior or senior on the high school level could profit from the book as well as college undergraduates and some graduate students.

The book explains that existentialism is a literary philosophy wherein an individual considers his personality so unique and so individualistic that he cannot accept outside standards unless he, from his own being, agrees with them or unless he creates them.

Dr. Barnes says in his book that the existentialist cannot accept traditional values as to morals, curriculum, draft laws, political planks, and other common denominators that most of us accept.

"The book should have considerable interest because much of the unrest and many of the movements current in our unstable and uneasy society have their roots in this literary philosophy and philosophical speculation," said Dr. Barnes.

In Existentialism, Dr. Barnes gives examples in terms of authors and their works. From his point of view, the existential thesis is the central theme of The Catcher in the Rye.

Dr. Barnes' book falls into two main divisions: the first four chapters discuss and define existentialism. The second section of the book is both historical and geographical in that existentialism, as a literary force is traced from Kierkegaard to the current great writers Updike, Styron, and Malamud, among others.

The book distinguishes between existentialism in continental Europe, England, and the United States. There is a glossary of terms which is synthesized and correlated with the points of view taken by Dr. Barnes. A bibliographical section is also included.

The book will not be required reading in any Morehead classes. Dr. Barnes said, "I consider requiring individual books published for sale and income, poor or doubtful ethics."

Dr. Barnes has written thirty-eight articles in the Morehead State University Bulletin of Applied Linguistics, which is published each week. Begun three years ago by Dr. Barnes, the Bulletin is sent by subscription to various university libraries, college professors, high school and elementary school teachers.

An article by Dr. Barnes entitled, "Robert Frost: Surprise, Expectancy, and Congruency" was published in the Xavier Review. Appearing in the Leeds Centaur was "Christopher Fry: Paradox of Comedy" by Dr. Barnes. He also wrote two articles entitled, "Elements of Composition in Linguistics" and "Unique Uses of To Have in English," in the Kentucky Bulletin of Teachers of English.

Several publishers are interested in a programmed text by Dr. Barnes now being used for freshmen in 101S TV Linguistics at the University. Two sections of the text are complete and two more will be completed by June 1969. This text is to be called, Linguistics: Programmed Treatment of Grammar, Composition, and Principles of Literature.

Dr. Barnes received his bachelors degree from Louisiana State; a B. P. H. E., A. M. from the University of Toronto (Canada); an LL. B., from the John Marshall Law School in Georgia; an A. M., from the University of Birmingham (England); an A. M., and PhD. from the University of Ottawa (Canada); and a D. Lit., from London University (England). He will receive another PhD. from London University in the psychology of learning by January, 1969.

On campus, Dr. Barnes teaches classes in Shakespeare, the English Renaissance, Jacobean Drama, Restoration Drama, Psycholinguistics, Sociolinguistics, and Dialectology. He shares teaching the following with other instructors: Reading and Linguistics, Structure of Literature, Advanced Grammar in Linguistics, and Semantics.

Dr. Barnes prepared, with the cooperation and assistance of Dr. Norman Tant, director of instructional media at Morehead, a complete course, English 405G, for television presentation. This course has been given over television on WSAZ-TV, Huntington; WCET, Cincinnati; and on the Jefferson County ETV system. Plans are being made to give this course in the spring of 1969 over Kentucky's state ETV network.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 23--Seeing triple? It's possible at Morehead State University where freshmen triplets, Jim, Joel and Jon Williams of Canal Winchester, Ohio, are enrolled this fall.

It's an advantage to be a triplet, the boys agree. There's always someone around with whom to play football--and someone to pal around with when you're new at college, they said.

But being triplets becomes drudgery after awhile when people constantly want pictures and ask about identity problems. The boys feel that they are easy to tell apart after you have been acquainted with them awhile.

Before coming to college, the boys dressed alike. Now, they compare notes before appearing on campus. They feel that different apparel is more appropriate for college.

A problem arises at clothes buying time when the Williams' parents have to pay three times as much for apparel than most other parents.

Jon and Jim are mathematics majors, while Joel is in pre-medicine. Their plans after college graduation are uncertain at present.

All three boys belong to the University marching band in which Jim plays trombone; Joel, baritone saxophone; and Jon, tenor saxophone. They enjoy this musical activity, but are awed at how time-consuming it has become.

Through high school, the triplets were in concert band together. Jim and Joel were in marching band, while high school football took Jon from this activity.

They have another brother, Jeffrey, on campus. A college education at Morehead has become a real family affair for the Williams brothers.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 23--A program presenting peaceful uses of nuclear energy will be given at two Boone County schools by Morehead State University and the Atomic Energy Commission, Nov. 8 and 11.

The exhibit, called "This Atomic World," will be at Boone County High School, Nov. 8; and Ockerman Junior High School, Nov. 11.

Charles Mays, a 1968 Morehead graduate with a Bachelor of Science degree in physics and chemistry, will be in charge of the exhibit, which will be presented at a 40-minute assembly program at each school.

Using a specially-designed van-type truck to transport the exhibit, Mays will visit one high school each day, presenting the nuclear energy peacetime story first at an all-school assembly program and later in classroom sessions.

Mays, who took eight weeks of intensified training in atomic energy and the presentation of the exhibit at Oak Ridge, will be available at each school for special counseling with interested students and guidance counselors.

"The assembly program is designed to interest all students. It will cover in student terms such basic nuclear physics highlights as radioactivity, chain reaction, reactors and their uses, transmutation, and the application of radioisotopes in medicine, industry and agriculture," said Dr. Charles A. Payne, chairman of the Division of Physical Sciences at Morehead.

A more detailed discussion is presented in the classroom session later. Aimed primarily at the science students, the topics discussed in the classroom include atomic structure, the nucleus, radiation biology, fission and fusion, Mays said.

Specifically-designed electronic equipment, including a radiation counter, a reactor model, a Van de Graaff generator and a number of electronically-activated panels, will be used in the presentations to illustrate Mays' lectures.

The Kentucky exhibit of "This Atomic World" is one of 14 such units visiting the nation's high schools, Dr. Payne said.

The Morehead State-operated unit will be available to all schools in Kentucky during the next two school years, Mays. He is visiting the schools west of Louisville next year.

"We think this is a tremendous opportunity for high school principals to bring a vitally important and meaningful program to their students and teachers," Dr. Payne said.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 28--David Bushouse, French horn player, and Earle L. Louder, on the euphonium, will appear in a faculty recital at 8:00 p. m. Thursday, November 7, in Baird Music Hall on the Morehead State University campus.

Bushouse, who will perform works by Schumann and Donato, has his B. M. and M. M. degrees from the University of Michigan. He is an instructor of music at Morehead, a staff member of the Cumberland Forest Music Camp and associate director of the Morehead bands. A French horn student of Louis J. Stout and Harry Bev, Bushouse has been on the Morehead faculty since 1966. He will be accompanied on piano by Larry Keenan, instructor of music at the University.

Louder, who will play music by Handel and Blazhevich, was a euphonium soloist with the Official United States Navy Band for twelve years at Washington, D. C. Before joining the Morehead State University music faculty this fall as an assistant professor, he studied under Leonard V. Falcone, Merrill Sherburn, and Byron Autrey and performed with the Lansing Symphony, Lexington Symphony, and the Michigan State University Marching Band, Symphonic Band, and Symphony Orchestra. Since 1966 he has been on the staff as a guest artist and instructor at the Cumberland Forest Music Camp. Louder has B. M. and M. M. degrees from Michigan State University. Mrs. Lucretia Stetler, pianist and instructor of music, will accompany him.

The recital is open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Oct. 30--"It was unbelievable to see women actually doing construction work in Russia," said Tana Heller, a Morehead State University junior sociology major, following her three-week trip to Russia and nearby countries.

Tana accompanied her mother, a practical nurse, on the trip which was sponsored by the Association for International Medical Study.

In Moscow, Tana was amazed to see a night club floor show consisting of a man doing bicycle tricks and another man showing talent with a boomerang. The music, however, was very like ours, she said.

The absolute silence at Lenin's tomb was another thing which impressed Tana on her visit to Moscow.

"No other country will take Russian money," said Tana, "so stores catering to tourists are set up dealing in all money foreign to Russia." These stores, called dollar stores, sell merchandise at amazingly low prices with stores dealing in Russian money having drab material and hats, she said.

The Morehead student noted that Russian people are very eager to trade their money for other countries' money. This enables them to shop at the dollar stores. They frequently approach tourists asking to trade, Tana said.

"A majority of churches in Russia are used for museums," Tana noted. She visited a cathedral within the Kremlin walls in which many Russian czars are buried.

Tana was quick to compare Moscow University to Morehead noting the dormitory rooms were smaller than the ones at Morehead and had less light. She was amazed to see few cars at the University. "In fact, all the time I was in Russia, I saw no gas stations," Tana said.

"I didn't see many restaurants in Russia," Tana said. She ate mostly at hotels where carbonated water was served with each meal.

Tana was amazed to see carbonated water available along Russian streets in machines like our vending machines, although a common glass served each thirsty person availing himself of this beverage.

Children along Russian streets begged for gum or ink pens. They were thrilled when someone obliged them and always wanted to give a token in trade, said Tana.

She noted that great numbers of North Vietnamese soldiers were in Russian cities. Pictures of the Viet Nam war in newspapers always showed Americans firing at the Vietnamese. Also, Tana noted that Russian movies show American soldiers in harsh, animalistic training.

Tana was impressed with the marble-decorated subway tunnels in Leningrad and with the extremely long escalators leading down to the subways.

"Russia was a rather clean country," Tana said, "and our hotel accommodations were very nice."

After seeing drab clothes in Russia day after day, Tana was relieved to see mod, colorful clothes in Budapest.

Besides Moscow, Leningrad and Budapest, Tana visited Copenhagen, Stockholm, Istanbul, Athens and Rome.

Tana is the daughter of Mrs. Eileen Heller, Portsmouth, Ohio.

MOREHEAD, Ky.; Nov. 1 -- "Early Woodcuts," an exhibition from the George Binet Print Collection, will open in the Claypool-Young Art Gallery on the Morehead State University campus Wednesday, November 6 at 7:00 p. m. The 40 prints will remain on display until November 25.

Gallery hours are Monday and Wednesday, 10:00 a. m. - 10:00 p. m.; Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 10:00 a. m. - 5:00 p. m.; Saturday and Sunday, 1:00 - 5:00 p. m.

The selection is from the period 1450 to 1625 when the late Gothic merges into the Renaissance. Religious subjects were the primary interests of the artists.

Woodcuts were cut from plank blocks of pearwood with a knife, the design being drawn on the block, and the woodcutter leaving the line standing as he cut away the background. Single cuts prior to 1500 are rare, and in this exhibition, "Christ Bearing the Cross" is the earliest, around 1450, by an unknown artist.

Single cuts by Durer and other sixteenth century masters show religious subjects such as "St. George" by Durer, included in the Morehead display.

The period from 1475 to the early 1500's saw the most beautiful balance between text and illustration not since equaled. The exhibition shows pages printed during this period, many of whose wood cuts are colored by hand.

Durer, who was trained in the studio in which the Nuremburg Chronicle was produced, is believed to have designed cuts for "Lives of Saints," "Ship of Fools," "Hortus Sanitatis," "Croneken der Sassen" and "Virgil" all shown in this exhibition.

Shown, too, are stylistic changes, fashions of dress such as in "The Wedding," 1488, the construction of cities, waging of battles, furniture and furnishings, cities, ships and travel, as well as typefaces and layout of pages, in an interesting and little-known area of print making.

The public is invited to attend the exhibition.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 4 --Life through the ages is presented in a mural just completed by Allen Lake, associate professor of biology at Morehead State University.

The art work, which begins with forms of life living in water, is located just inside the main entrance of Lappin Hall on the Morehead campus. Animals moving from the sea onto the land, the appearance of plants, mountain building, and other major geological and evolutionary events are depicted.

A stigmarian root system and a specimen of a stromatocerium postulosum are so situated in front of the mural that they correspond with the time during which they lived.

The stigmarian root system was discovered by Lake and James Chaplin, assistant professor of geosciences at Morehead, presently on leave, while on a field trip in Elliott County. The tree was part of a tropical swamp that existed 235,000,000 years ago in what is now Eastern Kentucky.

A reef-forming coral-like fossil from the Ordovician period, the stromatocerium postulosum is a useful time marker found often in Lexington limestone.

The mural has been in planning stages since before the new addition to Lappin Hall was begun.

During the spring semester of 1968, Lake drew the mural to exact scale on graph paper. His plans were in conjunction with the geology department of the university.

Finally, the actual art work on the mural was carried out the week before homecoming with Lake working late each day for a week.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 4--"Discover America" read the plate on the front of Joe Bowen's 10-speed, light-weight touring bicycle, and Joe spent 16 months and 14,000 miles doing just that.

Bowen, a 25-year-old freshman speech major at Morehead State University, began his bicycle trip in Los Angeles on April 8, 1967, and ended it on August 1, 1968, in Washington, D. C. In between, he visited 33 states, three Canadian provinces, and parts of Mexico.

During his travels, Bowen met seven governors and numerous mayors, spent three days on a movie set, as a guest of M-G-M, proposed to his wife, climbed four major peaks, and skied behind a hydroplane.

How did he decide to make the trip?

"While still in the Air Force, I had an itch to discover first hand what my country looked like--to see the mountains, deserts, plains, seacoasts, forests, and vast ranchlands--to know intimately its varied people," Joe said.

"I also had a vague urge to do something clean and wholesome and healthy, in such a way that I could show my fellow Americans and people in other countries that the longhaired, unwashed hippies who are getting so much publicity these days don't represent all young Americans," he continued.

After attending a Great Western Bicycle Rally at Solvang, Cal., on a borrowed bike, Joe decided to make the 14,000 mile trek.

Why 14,000 miles? "No reason in particular," Joe said. "I simply studied a map and wrote down all the places I wanted to visit--states, cities, national parks and monuments, historic sites, industrial centers, and other such places--then plotted out an approximate route. When I added up the miles, it totaled up a bit over 14,000. But as I traveled and heard of other places I wanted to see, I would go on and visit them."

On April 8, 1967, Bowen set out from Lompoc, Cal., on his new bike. Clipped to the frame was a one-pint water bottle. Between the handle bars, he carried a small, rubber-lined utility bag, and on a carrier rack in back of the seat he fastened a medium-sized waterproof bag and a bedroll. The two bags contained his minimum needs.

As Bowen started the trip, he had $45.00 in cash, hardly enough to get him far by more conventional travel means. His traveling expenses averaged $3.00 a day, most of which went for food and postage to mail his souvenirs back to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bowen of Bowen, Ky.

When his funds ran low, he would stop for a few days and find a job. His jobs included working as a busboy, picking fruit, helping explore for oil, working in a hot dog stand, stacking hay, moving furniture, and washing dishes.

"I thought I was in pretty good shape but soon found differently," he said. "The going was pretty rough the first 20 days. One night I slept on the beach and was caught in a storm. Never again did I do that because all my gear was covered with wet sand."

Bowen met his first governor in Salem, Oregon, when Gov. Tom McCall welcomed him to the state. While in Oregon, Joe climbed Mt. Hood, before going on to Washington state to conquer Mt. Ranier. He also climbed Pike's Peak and the Great Tetone.

After he had crossed the Cascade Mountains heading east, Bowen contracted an eye disease near the Grand Coolee Dam. He spent a week with friends 60 miles from Spokane while he was treated by a Spokane eye specialist. The doctor refused to charge any fee, telling Bowen to have a good trip.

"The doctor in Spokane is typical of the friendly people whom I met all along my route," Joe said. "I enjoyed many free meals and great hospitality was shown me by almost everyone."

In Helena, Montana, Joe met a lady who had ridden a horse from Montana to the Chicago World's Fair in 1933, and they spent a few hours comparing notes. At Cody, Wyoming, Joe was a special guest in the July 4 Buffalo Bill Cody Parade. He then moved on to Deadwood, South Dakota, where he sat in the chair where Wild Bill Hickock was shot and visited Wild Bill's grave.

Down to 10 cents in Durango, Colorado, Joe took a waiter's job at Mesa Verde National Park, where he met some waitresses who were American Indians. He later visited them in New Mexico.

In Ouray, Colorado, he thought he would be jailed when he was stopped by a motorcycle policeman, handcuffed, and taken to city hall. To his dismay, Bowen was named Ouray's "Unique Tourist of the Year."

Bowen arrived in Utah about apple-picking time. He got a job in Mohab, where he took tours down the Colorado River on a jet-powered boat by working as a crew member. One jet-boat pilot introduced Bowen to some friends who owned a pontoon plane, and Joe later skied behind the airplane on Lake Powell.

M-G-M studios heard about Joe's cycling journey and invited him to spend three days on the Arizona set where "Stay Away Joe," starring Elvis Presley, was being filmed. This was in October, 1967, after Joe had traveled 8,000 miles.

"Elvis Presley really impressed me," Joe said. "He is a very personable person who has time to talk to you. He was always telling me about how his expectant wife was going to have a boy, but it turned out to be a girl."

Bowen also met actresses Joan Blondell, "a motherly type," and Katy Jurado, "a friendly, temperamental Mexican," and actors Thomas Gomez and Burgess Meredith.

Joe recalled one night when members of the filming crew threw some firecrackers into a campfire. "The firecrackers were not the only things that exploded," Joe said, "Miss Jurado exploded too." (more)

"Visiting the movie set was about the most fascinating thing that I did on my trip," Joe said. "I found out really how hard everyone works to produce a movie."

Joe also visited another movie set--this one was at Tule Springs, Nevada, where "The Stalking Moon," starring Gregory Peck, was being shot. A friend who is a 21 dealer in Las Vegas arranged for Joe to visit the set twice.

"Mr. Peck is very nice, and he is an outstanding personality," Joe said. He also met actress Eva Marie Saint, whom he really liked. "She was full of all sorts of questions about my trip, and I found her a most interesting person," Joe said.

This past January Joe spent two days on the set of "Bonanza," the popular western television series. There he met series stars Lorne Green, Michael Landon, Dan Blocker, and David Canary. "I believe I liked Dan Blocker the best because he is the type of person one can identify with. I later rode through Carlsbad, New Mexico, where Blocker was a school teacher, and the people there are sure proud of him," Joe said.

Five governors, in addition to Gov. McCall, whom Joe met were: John Bell Williams of Mississippi, Jack Williams of Arizona, Dewey Bartlett of Oklahoma, Claude Kirk of Florida, and Robert McNair of South Carolina. He also spent about two hours one day with former Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

Joe toured the various state capitols and sat in on their legislatures, and had lunch with Wallace in the legislature's dining room.

Another well-known politician whom Joe met was Mayor Sam Yorty of Los Angeles. Yorty invited him to come back to California to appear on his television show.

During the period immediately following the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Joe was in Little Rock, Arkansas, where he stayed at a Negro-owned motel and had breakfast with the owners. A television newsman interviewed Joe and the Negro motel owner for national television because the newsman felt it was unusual to see a Negro and a white man getting along so well in the South at the time, Joe said.

One of the most important events which occurred on the tour was Joe's proposal to his wife, the former Marlene Sherman of Minneola, Fla. They had met previously and corresponded while Joe was in the service. They were married in August after the completion of his trip, and Marlene now works in the acquisitions department of the Morehead State University library.

Joe said that he would make a bicycle trip from Anchorage, Alaska, to Key West, Florida, possibly the longest distance one could travel on a bicycle across the United States, if he were given a good offer.

Joe is now working on the second draft of a book about his traveling experiences. He has been contacted by representatives from a major publishing house.

"It was all a very wonderful experience," said Joe. "The people of the United States are really great people, and they will help you if you are trying to help yourself. I was treated royally everywhere I went. The trip helped restore my faith in the American people."

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 4 -- An All-State College String Orchestra concert, a piano-harpsichord recital, and the selection of the 1968-69 high school pianist will all be part of the Kentucky Music Teachers Association (KMTA) convention, to be held November 10-12 at Morehead State University.

Dr. Glenn Fulbright, head of the music department and professor at Morehead, is president of the KMTA. He is also the representative of the Southern Division of the KMTA to its National Board.

KMTA members are private music teachers and college and university teachers of performance, theory and composition.

The first event of the convention at 3:00 p.m. November 10 is concerto auditions, open to college and university piano students throughout the state, to choose a pianist to perform with the Louisville Orchestra.

That evening at 8:00 p.m. in Baird Music Hall, a concert will be presented by the 1968 All-State College String Orchestra conducted by Frederick Balasz. This event is open to the public.

Registration, which begins at 8:30 a.m. at Baird Music Hall, is followed by an opening session at 9:00 a.m. with music by the Western Kentucky University faculty sextet performing Poulenc's "Sextet for Piano and Woodwinds."

At 10:30 a.m., senior high pianists chosen regionally will compete for the privilege of representing the state at the Southern division's competition later in the year.

At that same time, a discussion of counterpoint text will be lead by Professor Neale Mason of Murray State University.

1968-70 officers of the KMTA will be elected at a luncheon-business meeting scheduled for 12:00 noon in the Alumni Tower Cafeteria.

James Bonn of the University of Kentucky music faculty will present works by Bach, Beethoven, Scarlatti, Copland, and Chopin in a piano-harpsichord recital at 1:20 p.m. at Baird Music Hall.

The Kentucky composers program at 4:00 p.m. will include compositions by Mark Winges, Violet Severy, Edward Largent, Kenneth Wright, and Frederick Mueller. Mueller's "Sextet for Woodwind Quintet and Piano" was the 1968 commissioned work written especially for this convention and performed by the Morehead State University faculty woodwind quintet with Larry Keenan, Morehead instructor of music, at the piano.

Dr. James Paul Kennedy, director of the school of music at Bowling Green State University in Ohio, will speak at the convention banquet to be held at 6:00 p.m. in the Alumni Tower dining room.

That evening at 8:00 p.m., the KMTA delegates will attend the Lenox String Quartet's concert, which will include selections by Mozart, Bartok, and Beethoven. This concert is the second in a series, entitled MSU Presents.

An open session on ensemble music by the Lenox Quartet will be presented at 9:00 a.m. on November 12.

At 10:00 a.m. that morning, Karl Payne, Morehead instructor of music, will preside at a piano ensemble session at which Karl and Beverly Payne will give a concert of piano ensemble music including selections by Beethoven, Heiden, Schubert and Ravel.

A cello recital by Suanne Hower of the Morehead music faculty will be given at 11:00 a.m.

The convention at Morehead has been planned by Dr. Fulbright and Keith Huffman, associate professor of music at Morehead.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 4 -- The Morehead State University novice debate team, composed of Lynda Phelps and Tom Hauger, was judged the best negative team in the Manchester College forensic tournament, Saturday at Manchester, Ind. The pair, who were undefeated in the novice division of this tournament, were presented with a trophy.

Miss Phelps, a freshman from Georgetown, tied for second place among all the top novice speakers.

Hauger is a sophomore from Dayton.

The novice affirmative team, Dan Egbers and Mike Greene, placed third, failing to win one debate, which they tied.

Egbers is a freshman from Fort Thomas; Greene, a freshman from Georgetown.

Schools participating in this sixteenth annual invitational event were: Ball State, Butler University, Illinois State University, Indiana State University, Purdue University, Rio Grande College, University of Dayton, and Youngstown University.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 5 -- Mary Denman, a Morehead State University sophomore from Deland, Florida, is one of six Morehead varsity cheerleaders this year. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Denman.

The girls cheer at all home football and basketball games and are responsible for campus pep rallies.

Others on the squad are: Karen Cox, co-captain from Pikeville; Clara Albert, co-captain from Jackson, Ohio; Sue Williams, captain from Ashland; Linda Brewer from Germanstown, Ohio and Suzi Yates, from Mayfield.

Mary was one of three Morehead cheerleaders who attended a national cheerleading camp in Hattiesburg, Mississippi, this summer. The three earned two first place ribbons, one third place and one honorable mention in competition with others in the "small girls group" class.

The girls at the camp were ranked on poise, response of spectators, motions together, techniques, gymnastics and other categories.

Beside competition, the cheerleaders attended classes and were entertained with a talent show, a luau, and a dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Osborne, instructors of health, physical education, and recreation at Morehead, accompanied the girls.

Sponsor of the Morehead cheerleaders is Bettie McClaskey, assistant professor of home economics.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 5--In the second annual College Novice Debate Tournament held at Morehead State University, November 2, the home university's beginning debate team was the only undefeated team.

Members of the Morehead team are: Mike Greene, Georgetown; Dan Egbers, Fort Thomas; Lynda Phelps, Hodgenville and Tom Hauger, Dayton.

Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University, greeted the visiting teams and coaches emphasizing the importance of developing the art of oral communication, especially in the area of argumentation and persuasion. Visitors were from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Tennessee, West Virginia and Kentucky.

During the day-long tournament, each forensic unit engaged in eight debates, four affirmative and four negative on the question: Resolved, that the executive control of foreign policy in the United States should be significantly curtailed.

Morehead's team won first place as an affirmative team, as a negative team, and as a four-man team. The host team disqualified itself as a recipient of trophies.

Next highest scorers were the University of Kentucky and Tennessee Polytechnic Institute, who received trophies.

Tennessee Tech. could provide only a negative team, so Morehead supplied an additional affirmative group to complete the unit. This Morehead-Tenn. Tech combination won six debates, tying with the University of Kentucky for top place in the four-man category. The local semi-novice affirmative debaters were Bob Armstrong, Columbus, Ohio and John Sharp, Morehead.

Other awards for second and third debate teams were given to Bellarmine-Ursuline College, Western Ky. University and Illinois Valley Community College.

The forensic coaches of the schools represented served as judges at the tournament, judging only schools other than their own.

Director of the tournament was Mrs. Julia Webb, assistant professor of speech at Morehead State University.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 6--The Morehead State University Stage Band, begun in 1965, has become a popular group in Eastern Kentucky and neighboring states, averaging two engagements a week.

Among the stage band's engagements last year were bookings at the Lookout House in Covington, at Ashland events, at numerous area high schools and at many campus functions.

The band, composed of 17 instrumentalists and one vocalist, usually plays jazz oriented music, but is able to play any style. Marvin E. Deaton, director of the group and assistant professor of music at Morehead, feels that "a good musician should be able to play any style."

Deaton arranges the music for the stage band, which also performs new works by teachers and students.

Rehearsing about two hours a week, the group is almost self-sufficient. Ten percent of money from their paying jobs is used to buy equipment. The remainder is divided equally among the performers.

Last New Year's Eve booking seemingly was hexed from beginning to end for the group. Initially, they were in a wreck with a mortician, which completely wrecked a trailer of equipment and the director's car. The two feet of snow on the ground slowed them until the trip to Ashland took five hours. Returning, the second equipment trailer hit a cake of ice, breaking an axle. The band members were glad to welcome a new year after all the misfortunes of the last night of the old one.

Several years ago, after a performance at Salyersville High School, en route to Paintsville, another rash of misfortunes occurred. The Grossmobile, a battered '56 Chevrolet used to transport the band, had brake failure at a highway construction site. Workmen were frantically waving the Gross to a stop. Unable to halt, it missed a flagman, but collected a flag and a few choice adjectives from its bearer.

A few yards further, the back door of the Chevy flew open as it rounded a curve. One musician, who was asleep, began to fall out. In the nick of time, a fellow band member grabbed him, after which the door was kept closely guarded.

Following the Paintsville performance and a stop at a restaurant, a heavy fog gathered in the mountains. One of the band members decided to walk in front of the cars with a flashlight to lead them safely home. Thirty minutes and seven tenths of a mile later, they gave up and spent the night in the cars. Deaton's wife, frantic because he didn't return all night, called the state troopers to locate him. He had a difficult time convincing them he was a Morehead professor.

The second stage band, directed by Robert Schietroma, instructor of education, is basically a training group for the first stage band. Occasions on which the first group is booked too heavily, the second group plays the job.

Also under the auspices of the jazz program at Morehead are two combos, each composed of six musicians.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 6 -- Frank G. Clement, three-time Governor of Tennessee, and Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University, will be the featured speakers at the 45th annual convention of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association, Nov. 14-15 in Ashland.

More than 2,500 educators are expected to attend the convention, which will be held in the Paramount Theatre.

The convention opens at 8:00 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14, with special music by the Maysville High School Chorus directed by Mary E. Denney.

Dr. Edward L. Tullis, pastor of the First United Methodist Church, Ashland, will deliver the invocation, followed by the welcoming address by Nelson Allen, President of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association.

Following a greeting from Mrs. Martha Dell Sanders, President of the Kentucky Education Association, Clement will speak on "Education, Citizenship, Progress and You."

The Friday morning session will open at 9:30 a.m. with special music by the Pikeville College Band directed by Carol Feather. The Rev. Omer M. Miller, pastor of the First Christian Church, Russell, will deliver the invocation.

"What's Ahead?" will be the topic of an address by Dr. Marvin Dodson, executive secretary of the Kentucky Education Association, scheduled at 10:05 a.m. Dr. Doran's topic will be: "There Is a Lad Here," and is scheduled for 10:25 a.m.

Twenty-two different departmental meetings will be held Friday afternoon.

Clement, who is presently practicing law in Nashville, was first elected governor of Tennessee in 1952 and served a two-year and a four-year term before leaving office in January, 1959.

He was inaugurated for his third term as Governor of Tennessee in January, 1963. When he was first elected Governor, he was only 32 years old.

During his final term in office, a student loan program for students who would otherwise be unable to enter college was enacted, an educational television network was established, an area vocational technical school and junior college system was established, and a record appropriation for the state's educational program was approved.

Dr. Doran has been president of Morehead State University since 1954, and he has guided the school from a small state college with an enrollment of 600 to an expanding university with over 6,200 students.

Mrs. Sanders, a former teacher at Paducah Tilghman High School, is a candidate for President-Elect of the National Education Association.

More than 30 school units are represented in the E.K.E.A. district, including 18 county districts, 10 independent districts, Ashland Community College, Mayo State Vocational School, Maysville Community College, Ashland Vocational School, Prestonsburg Community College, Pikeville College, and Morehead State University.

The Morehead State University Alumni Association will hold a smorgasbord banquet at 6:00 p.m. Thursday, November 14, in the Henry Clay Hotel. Tickets, which cost $2.50, may be obtained in advance by writing: Rondal D. Hart, Director of Alumni Relations, Morehead State University, Morehead, Kentucky 40351. Tickets will also be available at the door.

The Morehead State University Combo, directed by Gene Deaton of the Morehead State University Music Department, will perform at the banquet, and Dr. Adron Doran will make a short address.

MOREHEAD, Ky., (Nov. 6) -- Morehead State University received a group of 20 polled hereford cattle today as a gift from the Kentucky Polled Hereford Association.

Breeders from Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio delivered cows and heifers, which will be artificially bred to some of the outstanding bulls in this country, said Harold Schroeder, field representative of the American Polled Hereford Association.

The official presentation of the cattle took place this afternoon when Dr. Adron Doran, president of Morehead State University, accepted the cattle on behalf of the University.

Dr. Doran praised the group for "wanting to receive greater dividends from your commodity than you could receive on the market. You have observed the potential to make a great contribution to this region."

"The herefords are here to help students, and if they can help inspire one student to go out and contribute to humanity, the purpose of the gift will be accomplished," Schroeder said.

Newton Botkin, of Lexington, president of the Kentucky Polled Breeders Association, also spoke at the acceptance ceremony.

"It is been the goal of the Kentucky Polled Hereford Association to establish an outstanding polled hereford herd at Morehead State University," said Joe E. McCord, secretary of the Association.

"The generosity of these breeders will make it possible for Morehead to move directly into the modern beef-type animal production without spending years to upgrade lower quality animals," said Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, chairman of the Morehead State University Agriculture Department.

"The donors are producers who are continually striving to develop animals with a high per cent of saleable lean meat with as little waste as possible," Dr. Derrickson said.

Dr. Derrickson said the cattle will be used by the University to assist in teaching students recommended practices in beef management as well as selection and production practices.

"We hope that the herd will help stimulate interest in good animals in the region and give the farmers of the Morehead region a demonstration herd to follow approved practices of beef production," Dr. Derrickson said.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 12---Morehead's Eagles lost their second straight football game by a three-point margin when they were upended by East Tennessee 16-13 on a rain-soaked field at Johnson City, Tennessee, Saturday.

About 250 persons watched as the Buccaneers' Ron Harrold kicked a 40-yard field goal with eight minutes remaining in the game. East Tennessee had taken an early 13-0 lead, and Morehead bounced back with two Louis Rogan touchdowns to tie the score.

Both East Tennessee touchdowns were set up by pass interceptions, with the first coming in the first quarter when Bill Casey snagged a Bill Marston attempt on the Morehead 41-yard line.

A 40-yard pass play from quarterback Larry Graham to end Ron Causey set up a two-yard touchdown run by Pat Hauser, a former Knox Central Athlete who is the nephew of Betty McClaskey of the Morehead State University Home Economics Department. Hauser's PAT kick was wide to the left, and the Bucs held a 6-0 lead.

Ron Overbay, who nailed down two interceptions in the game, caught another Marston pass in the second quarter and returned it to the East Tennessee 16. Three plays later, Graham connected on a 45-yard pass to Hauser to put the ball on the Morehead 11. With 1:53 remaining in the second quarter, quarterback Al Guy ran two yards for the TD. Harrold's kick gave East Tennessee a 13-0 halftime margin.

The Eagles came clawing back in the second half and struck early as Rogan ran 53 yards out of a 62-yard series for the TD. This included one run for 46 yards. John Clark's kick was wide to the right, and Morehead trailed 13-6.

A one-yard run by Rogan on the first play in the fourth quarter climaxed a 13-play drive for the goal. During this drive, Marston completed passes of 18, one, and 19 yards to tight end Marvin Hicks. Clark's kick was good, tying the score at 13-all.

Tackle Jim Fisher recovered an East Tennessee fumble on the next play, but Rogan and Marston moved the ball a total of minus five yards, and the Bucs took possession of the ball on their own 33 yard line.

Graham connected on three straight passes for a total of 40 yards, and ten plays later Harrold kicked the field goal.

Following Harrold's field goal, Marston had a pass intercepted, Maurice Hollingsworth lost a fumble, and John Coning had a pass intercepted on Morehead's three times with the ball.

The loss dropped Morehead to seventh in the Ohio Valley Conference standings, one notch ahead of winless Tennessee Tech. Morehead will be trying for its third win when it hosts Kentucky State College at Breathitt Sports Center at 2:00 p. m. Saturday.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 13--Placing first at a University of Michigan debate tournament recently was the Morehead State University novice debate team composed of Mike Greene, Georgetown; Dan Egbers, Fort Thomas; Linda Phelps, Hodgenville and Tom Hauger, Dayton. This was the only team in the entire tournament to have a complete day of winning.

Miss Phelps, Hauger and Greene were named in the top ten speakers from a group of one hundred participants.

Colleges and universities represented in the tournament included: Bowling Green State University, Bowling Green, Ohio; University of Detroit; Kent State University, Kent, Ohio; Youngstown Ohio University; Central Michigan University; Kalamazoo College; Lansing Community College; Michigan State University of East Lansing, Michigan; Wayne State University of Detroit.

At a Western Kentucky University debate tournament, Craig Martin from Campbellsville received the second place speaker trophy. Martin and his teammate, Don Cetrulo from Fort Thomas, upheld the negative side of the topic: Resolved, that the executive control of foreign policy should be significantly curtailed, and tied for third place in the win-loss record. Other members of the varsity contingent are John Sharp and Ed Taylor from Morehead.

This Morehead debate team defeated Vanderbilt, Miami of Ohio, David Lipscomb, and Austin Peay.

Accompanying the groups were Dr. W. D. Keller, Mrs. G. C. Webb, and Charles David Daniels.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 15--A new form of stage presentation known as MezzaActing was originated by Dr. Jackson Barefield, assistant professor of speech at Morehead State University.

MezzaActing, the topic of Barefield's doctoral work at Florida State University, employs actors half reading and half acting, as "mezza" implies. He said, "It is a method of presenting plays on a stage quickly, economically and effectively."

No scenery is used in MezzaActing and no props except chairs are employed. Only the most essential costumes appear, but costumes are not restricted. The lighting is versatile and moves often. Actors move from reading stands on one portion of the stage to acting areas elsewhere. There is also a "limbo" area in which actors sit before coming onto stage, no attempt being made to hide these characters.

This form of acting is good for use in high schools, colleges, and universities which have few facilities with which to work. The lack of scenery and costumes alleviates problems which cause many schools to omit drama programs.

Barefield is fascinated by the varied ways people pronounce the same word. He has observed the tendency in the English language for the "l" to be omitted. "This occurred a long time ago in French," he said.

After receiving his bachelors degree at Birmingham Southern in Alabama, Barefield wrote radio scripts and worked for NBC in New York.

He then became a program supervisor and public relations director at McCann-Erickson advertising agency. Some television shows with which he was involved were: Westinghouse Studio One, Sky King, the Bob Hope Show and the Lucy Show.

As program supervisor, Barefield met most of the big names in television. He is a close friend of Tennessee Williams and is mentioned several times in a book about Williams entitled, Tennessee Williams and Friends.

"Catstick," a play Barefield sold for production on Broadway, caused more problems than the playwright had anticipated. He said he "wouldn't go through that again, even with a barrel of tranquilizers."

Problems with "Catstick" were in constant rewriting as required by a director and cast members who refused to play their parts as written.

For three years, Barefield directed a theatre program for graduate students at Troy State University in southern Alabama after which he began his doctorate at Florida State University in an effort to keep up with his students.

At Morehead State University he will direct "A Company of Six," a play employing MezzaActing, with performances December 9, 10, 12, 13 and 14.

Two other plays by Barefield, "The Passionate Women at Glynn" and "There is A Lion in My House," will be published soon. He hopes these works will appeal to colleges, universities and little theatres.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 18--Chi Phi Delta sorority has, for the second consecutive semester, been awarded the Social Club Scholarship Cup for the highest scholastic point average, 2.7382, of the seven girls' sororities at Morehead State University during the spring semester, 1967-68.

The sorority also had the top scholastic average for the fall semester, 1967-68. Thus, they retain the impressive cup.

Special recognition should be given to Lambda Kappa Tau with a point average of 2.7320.

The traveling trophy was purchased in 1967 to encourage scholastic competition between the girls' social organizations.

President of Chi Phi Delta is Marian McRoberts from Maysville. Other officers are: Marilyn Kitchen, Georgetown, vice president; Judy Chaffin, South Shore, corresponding secretary; Barbara Sutton, Lexington, recording secretary; Brenda Hedges, Brooksville, treasurer; Carleen Tignor, Pittsburgh, Pa., pledge chairman; Janet Vaughan, Flemingsburg, social chairman; and Kathy Strauss, Toledo, Ohio, historian.

Other members are: Danice Creager, Kathy Caskey, Penny Kelly Fraley, Janet Enscoe Pearson, Mary Ann Buddick, Judy Winters, Carolyn Lafferty Hall, Jan Samuel Townsend, Paula Risner, Marilyn Stalmack, Donna Buglione, and Kay VanPelt.

Title-holders among Chi Phi Delta sisters are: Homecoming Queen, 1968, Paula Risner, and Miss MSU, Mary Ann Buddick.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 20--Morehead State University debate squad members Mike Greene and Dan Egbers were recently presented with a trophy for being the best affirmative team in a novice forensic tournament held at Morris Harvey College, Charleston, W. Va.

Greene, from Georgetown and Egbers, from Fort Thomas, continued the excellent record of the Morehead novice debate team. The two, their negative teammates, Lynda Phelps, Hodgenville and Tom Hauger, Dayton; and their varsity counterparts, Don Cetrulo, Fort Thomas and Craig Martin, Campbellsville, have during the present season, debated in four states, Kentucky, Indiana, Michigan and West Virginia. Teams from the squad have won a first place trophy in each of the four states.

Early in October, a varsity-novice combination won first at Bellarmine College, Louisville; the negative team was named the best group at Manchester College; the entire novice team received the first place at the University of Michigan. At their own tournament, these debaters carried all the honors.

In addition to team awards, individual speakers have been given top honors; one at Bellarmine, one at Manchester, three at the University of Michigan, one at Western, and four at Morehead.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 21--The 1966 recipient of the Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers scholarship, Blanche Watts Back, recently wrote an article for the Kentucky Parent Teachers Association Bulletin to encourage the continuation of the scholarship.

This $1,000 grant is given to a sophomore at one of the five state universities each year, rotating between the institutions.

Mrs. Back was a sophomore English major at Morehead State University at the time she received the scholarship. A work-study student in the office of Dr. Lawrence R. Stewart, professor of education at Morehead, Mrs. Back was given Dr. Stewart's recommendation for the scholarship.

Mrs. Back, who earned her AB degree in three years, taught senior English at Breathitt High School last year. She will complete her masters degree requirements at Morehead in January.

She and her husband, William Kenneth Back, hope to work as a teaching team in Kentucky, preferably Breathitt County.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 23--Weston Noble, nationally known musical clinician, conductor and lecturer, and Dr. Richard Willis, composer, will be guest musicians at the Ninth Annual Choral Festival for high school students to be held December 6-7 on the Morehead State University campus.

Guest conductor Noble will lead the 250 representatives of 19 high schools in Kentucky and neighboring states in Pinkham's "Christmas Cantata"; Wetzler's "Bring A Torch, Jeannette, Isabella"; "Of the Father's Love Begotten" by Chenoweth; "Song of Praise" by Sitton and "I Know Where I'm Goin'." The concert is scheduled for 8:00 p. m. December 7 in the Baird Rehearsal Hall.

Noble's appearances in 26 states include 15 assignments as conductor of All-State High School groups. For several summers, Noble has joined Robert Shaw and other nationally known figures on the faculty of Meadowbrook School of Music in Michigan. He is also the author of a number of articles which have appeared in various professional magazines.

Dr. Willis will lecture to Morehead students and choral clinic participants in a Collegium Musicum as part of the American Music Program. His works include two symphonies and a variety of other orchestral works, many choral pieces, band compositions and scores for dance and drama. In 1956, Dr. Willis received the Prix de Rome, a coveted award which took him to Italy for a period of residence and work at the American Academy in Rome.

The Morehead State University Chamber Singers under the direction of James Ross Beane, associate professor of music, will perform Dr. Willis' "Five Elizabethan Songs" as part of the Choral Festival on Friday evening, Dec. 6, at 8:00 p. m.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 27--Morehead State University will not require sophomores to enroll in the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University, has announced to the more than 700 freshmen enrolled in the ROTC program that "We have reached an agreement with the Army in which we will have a compulsory ROTC component for only one year--the freshman year." The remaining three years will be voluntary.

This is the first semester the new Morehead unit has been in existence. An earlier agreement with the Army would have required all freshmen and sophomores to enroll in the ROTC program.

"But we firmly believe that the one year requirement is a sounder approach," Dr. Doran told the freshmen, "as it gives ample time for you to decide if ROTC is for you."

General John C. F. Tillson, III, Major General, United States Army, Deputy Commanding General, First Army Headquarters, said in a letter to Dr. Doran, "I have discussed the matter of one year mandatory programs with Lieutenant General Seaman and he concurs that this is the best kind of program that a university can have for ROTC."

Dr. Doran explained to the students that Morehead State University was one of only 15 colleges or universities from among 80 applicants to receive a new ROTC unit last year and that all such units agreed to produce a minimum of 25 cadet officers each year. He added that without the freshman and sophomore requirement, it would have been impossible to attract the program to the campus during the original negotiations.

"But we have been in correspondence with the Army for some time," added Dr. Doran, "and both parties are now convinced that we can have a strong program by eliminating the compulsory requirement for the second year."

The Morehead president opened his remarks by commending the students on their acceptance of the new program this year and said that he knew there were many of the students who would not be at Morehead if the new program had not been established. He also commented that he knew there were many of the students who came to Morehead in spite of ROTC.

"But whatever your opinions, I am certain that many of you have changed your initial opinion about ROTC during this first semester," Dr. Doran added, "and we are convinced that one year in the program will provide you with sufficient exposure to the program to determine if you wish to continue on."

He pointed out to the group that almost 90% of the officers in the United States Army are products of the ROTC program and that Morehead State University should be in the midstream of activity by providing this opportunity to its students if the students want such an opportunity.

Following Dr. Doran's announcement, a question and answer period was held during which time Dr. Doran and Lt. Col. Thomas A. Harris, Professor of Military Science, answered any questions concerning the change.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 27--An Accelerated Learning Program for Morehead State University students with study and personal problems is being conducted experimentally under a $70,000 grant from the Office of Economic Opportunity.

John Stanley, associate professor of education at Morehead, is serving as director of the program.

It is hoped that the program will make possible a smoother transition and adjustment to college life by providing individualized assistance in social and academic endeavors through a tutor counselor-student relationship, Stanley said.

A better understanding should develop between students and faculty when the program brings students with problems to the attention of the faculty, Stanley explained. He added that the importance of student interaction with peers and faculty members will be stressed by a series of planned informal seminars to bring about mutual discussion as well as social and academic adjustment.

Under the program, self-instruction techniques will aid students in developing study skills and raise the students' grades. Students will be assisted in setting realistic goals and expanding their existing values of education.

Stanley said it is hoped that the program will provide a means of determining whether other colleges and universities can effectively lower the dropout rate for college students by using this method.

Students in the Accelerated Learning Program may select tutoring for two hours a week in reading. Tutoring is also offered each evening for two hours in physical science, biological science, English, mathematics, social science, psychology, and general tutoring in a study area.

MezzaActing (Stat.)

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 27--The true story of the Provincetown Players will be told at Morehead State University December 9, 10, 12, 13, and 14 in "A Company of Six," a presentation combining three well-known plays using MezzaActing.

MezzaActing is a form of stage presentation originated by Dr. Jackson Barefield, assistant professor of speech at Morehead and director of the play. "A Company of Six" is the third production in the world to be presented in this new style.

Versatile lighting, no scenery and no props except chairs are employed in MezzaActing. Only the most essential costumes are used. Actors move from reading stands on one portion of the stage to acting areas elsewhere. There is also a "limbo" area in which actors sit before coming onto stage, no attempt being made to hide these characters.

"A Company of Six" combines three one-act plays--Eugene O'Neill's "Before Breakfast," "Aria da Capo" by Edna St. Vincent Millay and "Suppressed Desires" by George Cooke and Susan Glaspell. They are tied together by narrative to tell the story of a company of actors in Provincetown, Rhode Island, who are credited with helping revive theatre in America in the early twentieth century.

The first play of the three, "Before Breakfast," stars Peggy Holbrook, a senior from Raceland. It is the story of a writer's frustrated wife.

"Aria da Capo" starring Craig Courtney, a junior from Middleburg, Pa.; Terri Bonar, a sophomore from Park Hills; Ron Kidd, a senior from Loveland, Ohio; Bill Hammack, a senior from Lexington; and Mike Chapman, a junior from London, is the second one-act play. The universal story of human nature in love, war and peace is poetically told.

The third and last play is "Suppressed Desires," a comedy starring Hammack, Miss Bonar and Mrs. Holbrook. Here, a woman with an attraction for psychoanalysis, makes her husband's life miserable and shocks her sister into a confused reality.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Nov. 29--A program presenting peaceful uses of nuclear energy will be given at three Rockcastle County high schools by Morehead State University and the Atomic Energy Commission, December 3, 6, 10.

The exhibit, called "This Atomic World," will be at Brodhead High School, December 3; Mt. Vernon High School, December 6 and Livingston High School, December 10.

Charles Mays, a 1968 Morehead graduate with a Bachelor of Science degree in physics and chemistry, will be in charge of the exhibit, which will be presented at a 40-minute assembly program at each high school.

Using a specially-designed van-type truck to transport the exhibit, Mays will visit one high school each day, presenting the nuclear energy peacetime story first at an all-school assembly program and later in classroom sessions.

Mays, who took eight weeks of intensified training in atomic energy and the presentation of the exhibit at Oak Ridge, will be available at each school for special counseling with interested students and guidance counselors.

"The assembly program is designed to interest all students. It will cover in student terms such basic nuclear physics highlights as radioactivity, radioisotopes in medicine, industry, and agriculture," said Dr. Charles A. Payne, chairman of the Division of Physical Sciences at Morehead.

include atomic structure, the nucleus, radiation biology, fission and fusion, Mays said.

Specifically-designed electronic equipment, including a radiation counter, a reactor model, a Van de Graaff generator and a number of electronically-activated panels, will be used in the presentations to illustrate Mays' lectures.

The Kentucky exhibit of "This Atomic World" is one of 14 such units visiting the nation's high schools, Dr. Payne said.

The Morehead State-operated unit will be available to all schools in Kentucky during the next two school years, Mays said. He is visiting schools in the eastern portion of the state this year and will visit the schools west of Louisville next year.

"We think this is a tremendous opportunity for high school principals to bring a vitally important and meaningful program to their students and teachers," Dr. Payne said.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 3--When doesn't a lunchbox carry a noonday meal? When do pennants appear where a crowd isn't cheering? When are umbrellas carried rain or shine?

Morehead State University students and faculty observe such strange occurrences daily as sorority pledges carry lunchboxes, umbrellas, pennants and other initiation items everywhere they go.

Only the actives and pledges know what secret objects are contained in the lunchboxes, etc. Careful observers have seen pledges retrieve candy, chewing gum, and cigarettes from them.

The pledge accessories come in brightly-colored variations determined by traditional club colors. Most bear the pledge's name written in felt or other paste-on letters.

Annually, Alpha Sigma Rho pledges carry navy blue peck baskets lettered in gold felt. Chi Phi Delta initiates shoulder white umbrellas decorated with light blue lettering. The brown lunchboxes lettered in gold belong to Alpha Gamma Epsilon pledges. Lambda Kappa Tau hopefuls carry green felt triangular pennants lettered in gold. Rich purple bags with white letters belong to Delta Omega Xi initiates. "Owl bags," maroon decorated with white, are the creation of Theta Sigma Tau sorority. Blue tackle boxes lettered in green are carried by Alpha Omega Iota pledges.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 4--Sharing problems, eating Sunday meals together and worshipping together are all part of college life for the three members of the Clayton Drake family from Bloomfield who are students at Morehead State University.

John, Eva and David feel secure in college knowing another member of their family is nearby to listen to and help with problems.

The three Drakes worship together each Sunday and eat Sunday dinner together. In parting they always say, "see you next week," showing how busy they really are, seldom able to be together more than once a week.

Eva has worked in the periodical room of the library since she was a freshman. She will graduate in May with a major in elementary education.

Working for his masters degree in biology, John is busy with research, teaching and attending classes. He received his bachelor's degree in 1965 from Morehead. During his undergraduate days, he held a workship in the cafeteria, was a monitor and taught chemistry laboratories.

David, a freshman business administration major, has a Beta Club scholarship.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 4--Undefeated at Columbus, Ohio, in the Otterbein College debate tournament was Morehead State University's varsity negative team composed of Don Cetrulo, Fort Thomas, and Craig Martin, Campbellsville.

At the tournament, considered one of the most difficult in the mid-west, a semi-varsity affirmative team, Bob Armstrong, Columbus, Ohio and John Sharp, Morehead, lost only one debate.

Each participating school lost at least one debate, so Morehead tied in the total win-loss record. Numerical ratings were used by the tabulators to break the ties and Ohio State was declared the winner.

Morehead State University was Kentucky's only participating team. Other schools attending were: Michigan State, Cincinnati, Ohio State, Ohio University, Youngstown, Bowling Green University, Wayne State of Detroit, and Eastern Michigan.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 5--For demonstrating a powder metallurgy process to produce hard-to-machine metal parts, the Morehead State University Industrial Education Club was recently awarded the first place trophy at the 12th Annual Kentucky Industrial Education Association Conference in Louisville.

The purpose of the conference was to present new processes and techniques to industrial educators. Morehead's winning entry showed a process which can be utilized in high school industrial education laboratories where a limited amount of equipment is available.

Fine iron powder was compacted into a desired shape by 15 tons pressure in a die. Then the part was sintered at about 1600-2000°F. fusing the iron grains together. The particle took on a strength similar to cast iron, which was proven by a demonstration testing the impact strength of the samples produced.

Because of this simplified method, no expensive machinery is necessary to turn out such hard-to-machine objects as square holes and inside perimeter gears.

After the Morehead group's demonstration, each observer was given a packet of fine iron powder, a disc made by the powder metallurgy process imprinted with the letters MSU, a printed description of the demonstration and pamphlets concerning the iron powder used.

A highlight of the conference was a speech by Dr. Melvin Kranzberg, well-known journalist in the field of industrial arts whose topic was: "Technology: A Force for Social Change."

Other state universities demonstrated photographic silk screening, fluidic control and polyurethane foam expansion.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 6--The first university level course to be offered on the Kentucky Educational Television Network will be "Linguistics: Grammar and Composition" by Dr. Lewis W. Barnes, professor of English at Morehead State University.

The entire state of Kentucky may see the program three days a week beginning on Monday, January 20. Lasting for 15 weeks on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 p. m. to 8:00 p. m., the course will consist of 45 presentations.

Structural, transformational, and tagmemic grammar and composition will be included in the program. A complete syllabus of the presentations will be available to students who desire to enroll.

The Kentucky Educational Television Network is operated under the auspices of the Kentucky Authority for Educational Television which has established transmitters in twelve locations--Morehead, Ashland, Richmond, Somerset, Hazard, Pikeville, Owenton, Covington, Elizabethtown, Bowling Green, Madisonville, and Murray. As a result, programs will reach every school and home in Kentucky with UHF receiving facilities.

Dr. Barnes, who has been at Morehead since 1963, has built the linguistics area at Morehead State University into one of the strongest in this section of the United States and has become widely known for his extension and television classes. He holds seven degrees, including the LL. B. from John Marshall Law School, the Ph. D. from the University of Ottawa, and the D. Lit. from London University. This month, the Ph. D. in psychology of learning will be bestowed upon Dr. Barnes by London University.

Three semester hours of credit will be offered at both the graduate and undergraduate levels. Undergraduate students must have at least 60 semester hours

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 7--"Simon Boccanegra" Verdi's dramatic three-act opera will be heard over WMKY-FM, 91.1 mgs. Saturday, December 14 at 2:00 p. m. in the Morehead area. This will be the second opera broadcast of the Metropolitan Opera's current season over the Morehead State University FM station.

Singing principal roles will be soprano Gabriella Tucci as Amelia, tenor George Shirley as Gabriele Adorno, baritone Cornell MacNeil as Simon Boccanegra, the Doge of Genoa, bass Jerome Hines in the role of Fiesco, and baritone Sherrill Milnes as Paolo. Francesco Molinari-Pradelli will conduct.

During the first intermission after the prologue--"Opera News on the Air"--the noted musicologist and lecturer on opera, Boris Goldovsky, will bring the radio audience a lively dramatic and musical analysis of "Simon Boccanegra."

During the opera quiz, Edward Downes, quizmaster, will question Mary Ellis Peltz, archivist of the Metropolitan Opera; Jay Harrison, a professor at Queens College in New York and a music critic; Terry McEwen, manager for the classical division of London Records; and Jan Behr, an associate conductor of the Metropolitan Opera.

Based on a Spanish drama, Verdi's "Simon Boccanegra" was first produced in Venice in 1857. A second version with a revised text by Arrigo Boito was given at Milan almost twenty-five years later, in March of 1881.

The opera is set in 14th century Italy when the city of Genoa was a republic. Boccanegra, in the opera prologue, appears as a pirate, but his friends conspire to put him in the Doge's throne.

During the subsequent action, Boccanegra, now ruler of Genoa, disvoers his long-lost daughter Amelia. She is loved by a Genoese nobleman, Gabriele Adorno, who, with several fellow-conspirators, plots to poison Boccanegra when he opposes the marriage of Amelia and Adorno.

The murder plot is successful, but as Boccanegra lies dying, he gives his belated consent to the marriage. 35

Some of the best music in Verdi's score are Fiesco's prologue aria, "Il lacerato spirito" (a wounded heart) which has become a recital-hall favorite with bass soloists; Amelia's "Come in quest' ora bruna"; and the striking Act I finale as well as the duet between Boccanegra and Fiesco in the last act.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 10--A course entitled "The Negro in American History" will be offered at Morehead State University beginning with the spring semester.

The three-credit-hour course will be offered to both advanced and graduate history students. Dr. Broadus Jackson, who will join the Morehead State University History Department in February, will teach the course.

Dr. Jackson, who is presently chairman of the Department of History at Maryland State University, is a native of Lynch, and a graduate of the former Rosenwald High School, Harlan. He received his AB from Fisk in 1949, his AMT in 1952 and his PhD in 1963, both from Indiana University.

"Basically the course will stress the development of the Negro in his American environment, and an attempt will be made to delineate his role in the social, economic and political growth of the United States," said Dr. Edmund Hicks, Chairman of the Morehead State University History Department.

After a brief survey of the Negro's African background, the study will concentrate on the Negro's relationship to the main stream of American history. Attention will be focused on the group as a challenge to the American way of life, historically and currently, in fulfilling the "American dream" for all cultural groups.

"The addition of the course to our curriculum will permit us to fulfill our obligations to the State of Kentucky in the training of teachers for the new general requirement of Negro history at the high school level," said Dr. Hicks.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 11 -- Morehead State University's $1, 200, 000 Claypool-Young Art Building, the only building devoted exclusively to the teaching of modern art methods on a Kentucky college or university campus, has received a Kentucky Society of Architects Honor Award.

Six winners of Honor Awards, were chosen from among 26 entries nominated by the society's members.

Jurors in the statewide competition were Bruce Goetzman and Otto Bauer Nilsen, nationally prominent Cincinnati architects. They described the Morehead structure as "tasteful, dignified and successful."

The Claypool-Young Art Building was designed by Lee Potter Smith, Pritchett, Hugg and Carter, Frankfort. The contractor was C. H. Jimison & Sons.

Housed within the building is a modern tri-level gallery used for faculty and student exhibitions as well as for traveling art shows.

A carpeted student lounge on the main floor and a faculty lounge complete with kitchenette are located on the main floor.

The entire building is equipped with a sound system over which music can be piped to any or all of the classrooms or studios.

Each of the department's teachers has a private studio-office.

A ceramic studio located in the prize-winning building contains 1, 200 square feet of working area and is equipped with a large kiln.

Adjacent to that studio is a sculpture studio with individual student cubicles. This opens onto an outside sculpture court landscaped with trees and shrubs.

A 1, 764 square foot visual presentation room contains 164 seats on seven terraced levels. It is used for teaching art history, film presentations and other special events.

Third floor skylighted studios are provided for students working with oils, watercolors or drawings.

A design studio is equipped with a photography darkroom and cameras used in connection with commercial art courses.

All studios in the building are equipped with a three-way lighting system, involving warm and cool fluorescent as well as incandescent lighting, which, when combined and regulated, produces artificial lighting virtually the same as natural light.

The building also is completely air-conditioned, equipped for controlled humidity, and contains an elevator for student use.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 12--Bellini's opera "La Sonnambula" will be broadcast over WMKY-FM, the Morehead State University radio station, on Saturday, December 21, at 2:00 p. m.

From the Metropolitan Opera, Joan Sutherland, the noted Australian coloratura soprano, will be heard singing the role of Amina. Others in the cast include soprano Colette Boky as Lisa, tenor John Alexander as Elvino, and bass Bonaldo Giaiotti in the role of Count Rodolfo. Richard Bonyngue will conduct.

During the first intermission "Opera News on the Air," Henry Butler, a Metropolitan Opera stage director, will preside over an operatic roundtable discussion by three noted artists--Cornelia Otis Skinner, Peggy Wood, and Cyril Ritchard.

Facing quizmaster Edward Downes on the opera quiz between Acts II and III will be Nathaniel Merrill, another one of the Met's stage directors; Richard Mohr, a vice president of RCA Victor Records; and William Weaver, a music critic and writer now living in Italy.

Following the final curtain of the opera, Howard J. Hook, Jr., national chairman of the Regional Auditions of the Metropolitan Opera National Council, will announce the winners of this year's finals, held at the Opera House on Nov. 17.

Vincenzo Bellini's "La Sonnambula," which had its world premiere at Milan, Italy in 1831, is seldom given nowadays because of the difficult leading soprano role. The opera was first heard in New York City at the Park Theater in 1835. Jenny Lind was long identified with the role of Amina.

"La Sonnambula" tells of the betrothal of Amina to Elvino, the arrival of a stranger (who in fact is Count Rodolfo, lord of a nearby castle which is believed to be haunted by a ghost) and the sleepwalking antics of Amina which get her in trouble with Elvino when she is discovered asleep in the stranger's room at the inn. All ends well, however, when the villagers find out that the castle's phantom is none other than Amina, the sonnambulist.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 13--Dr. Roscoe H. Playforth, dean of the School of Social Sciences at Morehead State University, has been appointed to the advisory committee for a Department of Economic Security project dealing with "The Promotion and Development of Education for Social Welfare Personnel in Kentucky."

In a letter to Dr. Playforth, commissioner Eugene Goss referred to Dr. Playforth's "outstanding work" which has enabled Morehead State University to establish an undergraduate social welfare curriculum.

The project on which Dr. Playforth will work is to serve as a companion project to the Southern Regional Education Board's project. Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Texas have also been approved for companion projects.

The Southern Regional Education Board project is a three-year attempt to alleviate the shortage of qualified personnel for social and welfare services. The structure is such that both projects have mutual goals with the Southern Regional Education Board providing technical assistance and other help as needed and extending project services through the fifteen Southern Regional Education Board states.

The Kentucky project's goal is to increase the quality and quantity of baccalaureate manpower to meet the needs for personnel in social welfare programs of public and voluntary agencies. As the focal point is the worker with a bachelor's degree, the project will take a systematic approach, viewing each aspect of the manpower problem: recruitment, education, utilization and retention. The project activities are to be planned to have simultaneous impact in all four areas.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 13--A larger percentage of the total student body at Morehead State University is made up of Kentuckians this year than last year.

The out-of-state enrollment dropped 7.2 per cent from 1,819 to 1,687, while the enrollment of Kentuckians went up 5.6 per cent from 4,329 to 4,575 students.

The drop in out-of-state enrollment can be attributed primarily to the increase in fees for out-of-state students from $580 to $740 for two semesters which went into effect this fall. The out-of-state tuition fee increase to $740 at Morehead State University, Eastern Kentucky University, Murray State University, Western Kentucky University, and Kentucky State College, places these institutions $57 above the median fee charges as reported at the member institutions of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

In the fall of 1967, 70.4 per cent of the enrollment at Morehead was made up of Kentuckians, 29.5 per cent out-of-state students. This semester, the percentage of Kentuckians has risen to 73.1 and the percentage of out-of-state student has dropped to 26.9.

"There is no question but that the increase in out-of-state fees cut back our enrollment as there were numerous highly qualified students from other states who would have been freshmen here who could not afford the increase in fees," said Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University.

He added, "Kentucky now charges a higher out-of-state students fee than do the majority of comparable institutions in other states."

Dr. Doran also pointed out that "there was a rather significant number of out-of-state upperclassmen who did not return to Morehead because of the increas.

in fees." A total of 1,521 upperclassmen from other states returned to the campus in 1967, but only 1,424 returned this fall--a drop of 97 students. This represents a percentage drop of 6.4 in out-of-state upperclassmen.

The fee hike had its effect upon graduate enrollment also as the number of out-of-state graduate students dropped from 62 to 51, a decrease of 17 per cent. But the in-state graduate enrollment showed an increase from 360 to 391 students, an increase of 8.6 per cent.

The drop in out-of-state enrollment was reflected in the total enrollment this semester which hit a new Morehead high of 6,262, but was only a 1.9 per cent increase over the enrollment figure of 6,148 in the fall of 1967.

MOREHEAD, Ky., Dec. 13--A new interdisciplinary major in urban affairs has been approved by the Curriculum Committee at Morehead State University.

"The program, requiring 30 semester hours, will provide a background for persons desiring to enter a graduate program in city planning," said Dr. Roscoe Playforth, Dean of the School of Social Sciences at Morehead.

As a non-teaching major, the program is conceived as a "pre-city planning curriculum," Dr. Playforth said. "It will act as a general overview in the field of urban affairs and make it possible for those interested in city planning to better prepare themselves," the Dean added.

Two new courses, "American Urban History" and "Urban Geography," will be offered next fall in conjunction with the major. Other courses which will constitute the major are already included in the curriculum of the University.

Required courses for the major, in addition to the newly created ones, are "Municipal Government," "General Sociology," "Urban Sociology," and "Special Problems in Urban Affairs." Twelve hours of electives may be selected from six related three-hour courses.

"It is strongly suggested that students with an urban affairs major include statistics and computer programming fundamentals in their programs," Dean Playforth said.

"Statistics and computer programming are tools which are becoming more helpful to the social scientist as the discipline becomes more quantitative in its research and analysis," Dr. Playforth said.
