MOREHEAD, Ky.---Two Morehead State University graduates have returned to head their alma mater's alumni office.

Dr. Harry C. Mayhew, MSU's director of alumni affairs from 1964 to 1967, has completed an educational leave of absence and resumed his duties as director of alumni relations. He also is an assistant professor of education.

Ronald E. Barker of Crestline, Ohio, a 1964 MSU alumnus, has been named associate director of alumni relations.

Dr. Mayhew, a native of Paintsville, received a doctorate in education administration and curriculum last month from Ball State University. He holds bachelor's and master's degrees from MSU.

The 30-year-old educator also previously served as an instructor of journalism and English and assistant director of public information at MSU. He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa education honorary, the American Alumni Council and is the new president of the Joint Alumni Council of Kentucky.

Dr. Mayhew is married to the former Ann Sandifer of Mount Olivet, also a Morehead State graduate. They have a daughter.

Barker, a two-term Crestline city councilman before accepting the MSU post, was employed six years by the Fisher Body Division of General Motors Corp. in Mansfield, Ohio. His most recent position was labor relations representative.

The new alumni official is married to the former Judy Hume of Maysville. They have two daughters.

participated in the adult reading workshop conducted recently at Morehead State University.

For the second year, MSU's Appalachian Adult Basic Education Demonstration Center received funds from the U. S. Office of Education to offer a teacher-training workshop to serve educators in Appalachia.

This year's grant of $52,000 was used to train 52 teachers, including Mr. Conroy, in the fundamentals of teaching reading to adults. The three-week workshop opened June 15 and closed July 3. It was developed on the assumption that most adult education teachers in Appalachia do not have sufficient training in reading.

The workshop was designed to develop four-man training teams from each Appalachian state. Now trained, the teams return to their home states to conduct reading clinics for other adult education teachers.

The Appalachian Adult Basic Education Demonstration Center has been located at Morehead State University since 1967. Its purpose is the improvement of adult basic education in Appalachia.

The AABEDC currently operates 14 projects in 11 Appalachian states.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Officially, it was a "community service project." But to members of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority at Morehead State University, it was love.

The sisters of ZTA spent the spring semester working with two four-year-old girls in a foster home near Morehead. Betty and Bonnie (not their real names) were recommended by a state social worker because both were culturally deprived, extremely timid and had speech impairments.

Betty had poor coordination and could say only "mommy" and "daddy." She cried frequently, shedding her tears silently. Bonnie could speak only very simple words and was openly hostile. She had daily temper tantrums.

Through weekly visits from small groups of the sorority sisters and periodic outings, the youngsters began to lose their shyness.

With their grownup playmates providing attention, love and adventure, Betty and Bonnie overcame some of their handicaps. Both now can speak in simple sentences and run, jump and skip like other four-year-olds.

Tests have shown that neither child is retarded and, if progress continues, both will be normal within two years and start attending public school, according to local doctors.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- All signs are pointing to another successful Daniel Boone Forest Music Camp at Morehead State University and the music department's "dynamic duo" again deserves much of the credit.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert V. Hawkins have been directing music camps for 16 years and at MSU since 1968. Dr. Hawkins, the university's director of bands, and Mrs. Hawkins, his wife of 29 years who doubles as an administrative assistant, came to Morehead from the Gunnison Music Camp in Colorado which they operated for 13 years.

Their efforts at MSU have resulted in the Daniel Boone camp, formerly Cumberland Forest Music Camp, growing sixfold to an enrollment of more than 800 this summer. Addition of marching band skills brought much of the expansion.

The three-week training session, which opened July 6, also includes instruction and experience in concert band and all instruments. It annually attracts several top college band directors, clinicians and professional musicians as guest faculty. The 1970 group includes Al G. Wright, director of bands at Purdue; William Santelman, retired conductor of the U. S. Marine White House Band; Clarence Sawhill, director of bands at UCLA; and John Wummer, former principal flutist in the NBC Symphony and the New York Philharmonic.

Dr. Hawkins relies heavily on his wife, describing her as "my right arm." "Kate," as she is known on campus, has a myriad of duties, including sponsorship of the Eaglette majorette corps, promotion of the music camp, recruitment of high school musicians for the bands and daily supervision of the band office.

As a result of her work with band directors and an idea her husband used for a speech, Mrs. Hawkins was the moving force behind the founding of the Women Band Directors National Association during the Daniel Boone camp in 1968. The organization has grown each year and now holds one of its semi-annual meetings on the MSU campus during the music camp.

Mrs. Gladys Wright, wife of the Purdue band director and a close friend of Kate Hawkins, is the current president. The association had 50 charter members and its purpose is to encourage more women to choose band careers.

Dr. and Mrs. Hawkins have been a team since they met in the college band at Indiana State University. She was a trombonist and head twirler and her husband-to-be was a sophomore clarinetist.

Both have bachelor's degrees from Indiana State. Mrs. Hawkins completed her master's at Ball State. Dr. Hawkins did his master's work at Indiana State and received his doctorate from Columbia where he also taught briefly.

Dr. Hawkins spend 16 years as director of bands and music division chairman at Western State College of Colorado before coming to MSU where he has developed standout marching and concert bands.

The Hawkins family is a winning combination at Morehead State but the active couple is not resting on laurels.

"We're doing what we like at a great university and we hope to help do even bigger things," said Dr. Hawkins.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University, the City of Morehead and Rowan County will observe Adron Doran Appreciation Day on Tuesday, Sept. 1, to salute the dean of Kentucky's active college presidents.

Morehead Mayor William Layne and Rowan County Judge Ott Caldwell are issuing a joint proclamation designating "Adron Doran Day" in Morehead and Rowan County to honor Dr. Doran on his birthday for 16 years of service to MSU.

Morehead State's seventh president has served since 1954. He has been in office longer than any other Kentucky college president now serving.

The public is invited to a reception and presentation of resolutions and proclamations at 10:30 a.m. in the Adron Doran University Center on Sept. 1.

Resolutions will be read by Ted Crosthwaite, president of the MSU Alumni Association; Dudley Hawkey, president of the MSU Student Council; Dr. Wilhelm Exelbirt, representing the MSU faculty; and Lloyd Cassity, Ashland, speaking for the MSU Board of Regents.

The joint proclamation for "Adron Doran Day" in Morehead and Rowan County will be read by Mayor Layne. Also scheduled is a special presentation from Gov. Louie B. Nunn.

The proclamation coincided with similar writs issued by Morehead Mayor William H. Layne and Rowan County Judge Ott Caldwell to honor Dr. Doran on his birthday for 16 years of service as MSU's seventh president.

Gov. Nunn's proclamation and tributes by U.S. Rep. Carl Perkins, Mayor Layne, Judge Caldwell, the MSU Student Council, Board of Regents, MSU Alumni Association and the MSU faculty were presented at a reception Tuesday morning in the Adron Doran University Center.

Dr. Doran, who was appointed in 1954, has been in office longer than any other Kentucky college president now serving. Morehead State has built more than $60 million in new physical facilities, increased its enrollment 1,000 per cent and gained university status under his administration.

The governor's proclamation cited Dr. Doran for "his dedication and the exemplary manner in which he has conducted his office."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University has announced plans to construct a $3 million building to house its Appalachian Technical Institute, hailed as a "significant breakthrough" in technical education.

The five-story classroom and office structure will house a technical education program ranging from college graduate work to high school teaching.

"This new facility will be the only one of its kind in Kentucky and among just a few in the country," said MSU President Adron Doran.

"It is a significant breakthrough and will enable our institution to better serve the career needs of Eastern Kentucky and Appalachia."

Financed through an $800,000 federal grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission and university revenue bonds, the building is expected to be completed in early 1973. Construction will start late this year and require about two years.

Dr. Doran said the institute, to be operated by the university's School of Applied Sciences and Technology, will enable MSU to expand technical course and program offerings on the graduate, four-year and two-year levels.

A cooperative agreement with the Kentucky Department of Education will provide laboratory teaching experiences at the nearby Rowan County Vocational Extension Center, a satellite of the Ashland Area Vocational-Technical School.

"Not only will Morehead State University be able to improve the quality of technical education in this region but we also will be in a position to prepare more industrial technicians through our associate degree (two-year) programs," Dr. Doran added.

The reinforced concrete structure will connect to the existing Industrial Arts-Home Economics Building via an overhead, enclosed bridge. Encompassing more than 109,000 square feet of floor space, the new building will have two floors of parking and three floors of classrooms and offices.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Admission of out-of-state students to Morehead State University for the fall semester has slowed to a trickle but applications from Kentucky students are being processed at full speed.

University President Adron Doran said Kentuckians would be accepted up to and through fall registration week which begins Monday, Aug. 24.

"Out-of-state applicants are not considered unless they rank in the top 50 per cent of their classes and now even those are being placed on a waiting list because of our quota," Dr. Doran added.

The Kentucky Council on Public Higher Education requires this year that no more than 20 per cent of the 1970 freshman class be from out-of-state. MSU admissions officers have tentatively accepted enough non-residents to meet that figure. However, new out-of-state applicants are added to the list of admitted only when a previous applicant withdraws or cancels his enrollment.

Dr. Doran reported admissions are running ahead of last year and that the university appears headed for another record fall enrollment.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University opened its 10th and final post summer session this week with more than 550 students enrolling for single courses.

Designed to help more students complete degree work before the public schools open, the concentrated session has become a casualty of MSU's new academic calendar.

With the fall semester now opening in late August instead of mid-September, there no longer is sufficient time to conduct the "mini" session following the regular, eight-week summer term. Hence, the special period in August is being dropped after this year.

However, a three-week "intersession" will be inaugurated next year between the end of the spring semester in early May and the start of summer school in mid-June.

"Moving the short term to late spring will enable more students to participate in summer commencement," said Monroe Wicker, MSU's director of school relations and post summer school coordinator since the terms began in 1961.

Morehead State's 1970 fall semester starts with registration Monday, Aug. 24. Classes open Thursday, Aug. 27. The term closes Thursday, Dec. 19.

However, the 31-year-old financial whiz added that peaceful student dissent should not be categorically condemned.

"I can tell you from personal experience that you can make your presence felt and move this great nation and state toward meaningful social change," he told the 320 class members. "But this must be done within the existing political structure."

Forgy, who said his age placed him astride the generation gap, said students had been guilty of impractical idealism and that older adults had formed a distorted view of campus unrest through the "big eye" of television.

"The problem you, the young generation, have is one of public relations," the Lewisburg native said. "You project the wrong image to many people and this creates a misconception."

Many adults misunderstand today's youth culture and have reacted with contempt and fear, the deputy finance commissioner said in a plea for understanding of the "over 30" set.

"Most of you want construction, not destruction," Forgy said. "And you are not willing to throw away 3,000 years of painfully achieved civilization, no matter how imperfect it may be."

He added:

"But the real danger in the people's objection to the educational community lies in their feeling that the universities are being transformed into political organizations for the adoption of partisan political goals....The institutions cannot have it both ways. They cannot be politically involved and then expect immunity from reprisal from a public which disagrees."

Calling for understanding of the fears of the old and the aspirations of the young, Forgy concluded:

"As you go out and away from this great university, I trust you will not rob yourselves of the bright future which can be yours in this land if you join hands with others in an effort to breach the gaps in our society."

MSU President Adron Doran introduced Forgy and later awarded four associate degrees, 97 master's degrees and 219 bachelor's degrees. It was the largest summer graduating class in Morehead State history.

Terry L. Hoffman, a 1969 graduate of Morehead State University in chemistry, presents the 40-minute assembly program which explains in simplified terms the structure of atoms, the operation of nuclear reactors and concepts of radiation, fission and fusion.

Specially designed electronic equipment is used to demonstrate the sources of radiation, how nuclear energy is harnessed to furnish electric power for cities and the use of radioisotopes to aid in diagnosis and treatment of diseases and to learn more about life processes.

Following the assembly, a chalkboard talk to science classes deals more specifically with the topics of atomic structure, radioactivity, radiation biology and careers in nuclear science.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- When it comes to colleges and summer jobs, the Harris sisters of Olive Hill really believe in togetherness.

Callie, Connie and Cathie Harris all are enrolled at Morehead State University and sister Cindie, a junior at Olive Hill High, plans to attend MSU in 1972.

The four sisters also agree on good places to work in the summer. All were employed by the same restaurant this summer in Petersburg, Va. An uncle's home became their "dormitory" for the summer.

They are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Harris of Olive Hill.

Callie, 20, is the oldest. She is majoring in special education at MSU. Connie, 18, is studying biology and Cathie, 17, has chosen art. Both are freshmen. Cindie, 16, doesn't yet know what she'll study at MSU.

Each coed is a good student. Cathie has won two academic scholarships. The three now at Morehead State are considered likely candidates for Dean's List honors.

The first of the sisters to work in Petersburg was Callie in 1968. She stayed home in 1969 but sent Connie and Cathie. All three returned this summer and took Cindie with them.

They worked as waitresses and apparently made quite a hit with their boss. "They're the politest group of girls I've ever had work here," said Will Nunnally, the restaurant manager. "For their ages, they're really mature."

The sisters have a brother, 15-year-old Tommie, a sophomore at Olive Hill High. "We might take him back with us next summer," said Cathie. "And he's already convinced that Morehead State is the right place," added Callie. ###

mother-daughter 2222222

The idea of going back to college was spurred by two things, Mrs. Waggener says. Her widowed mother, Mrs. John Mayo, is an associate professor of mathematics at MSU. Mary Anna had planned to stay with her grandmother so Mrs. Waggener asked if she might also come along. Mrs. Mayo, of course, was delighted and three generations of college women took up residence in the Mayo home near Morehead.

"After working in Head Start for two summers I knew my dream of being a teacher had to be fulfilled," Mrs. Waggener recalls. "I'll be here less than two years and then Mary Anna will be completely on her own."

Mother and daughter don't have any classes together but they meet sometimes for lunch or in the campus library. Both are regular visitors to the Baptist Student Union.

"We see each other very seldom during the day," reports Mary Anna. "Mother doesn't interfere with my personal life."

Mrs. Waggener insists that her daughter live in a campus residence hall next year because "that's an important part of going to college."

Having mother in the same college has two distinct advantages, according to Mary Anna. "She's available for good sound advice and the family car."

Mrs. Mayo also likes the situation. Her daughter and granddaughter help with the housework but, most importantly, "they're such good company."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Tributes from the great and the ordinary poured in from near and far as Morehead State University President Adron Doran celebrated his 61st birthday.

More than 400 persons jammed the Adron Doran University Center ballroom to observe "Adron Doran Day" as proclaimed across Kentucky by Gov. Louie B. Nunn in honor of Dr. Doran's 16 years in the MSU presidency.

Students, faculty, administrators, staff members, political figures and private citizens came with personal greetings for President and Mrs. Doran.

Hailed as the "right man with the right plan" for MSU since his inauguration in 1954 as the university's seventh president, Dr. Doran said he and his wife, Mignon, had made a "team effort" in their commitment to Morehead State.

Individual plaudits included:

"This great Kentuckian has given of himself in immeasurable quantities to the people of the Commonwealth," said Gov. Nunn's proclamation.

"Dr. Doran has exhibited great vision, strong leadership, admirable statesmanship and ardent dedication to the cause of public higher education," read part of the resolution presented by the MSU Board of Regents.

"Adron Doran has been an inspiration to the people of this region to work for the best and expect the best," read part of the joint proclamation issued by Morehead Mayor William H. Layne and Rowan County Judge Ottis Caldwell.

"He has helped protect serious-minded students from those who would deny them the privilege of pursuing an education," said Student Body President Dudley Hawkey, in quoting a resolution adopted by the MSU Student Council.

"Dr. Adron Doran has faithfully and successfully completed 16 years as president of Morehead State University during the institution's greatest period of growth and development," said Ted Crosthwait, president of the MSU Alumni Association.

One of the most important tributes of the day came from Dr. Wilhelm Exelbirt, professor of history at MSU and past recipient of the distinguished faculty award. The elderly professor thanked Dr. Doran for his defense and preservation of academic freedom at MSU.

U. S. Rep. Carl D. Perkins told of Dr. Doran's involvement in national education circles and of the value of his "sound and reasonable" advice to congressional committees in legislative matters.

"Dr. Adron Doran has been nearly as productive nationally as he has been here at his beloved university," the 11-term congressman added.

President Doran described the observance as "the most gratifying day of my life."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---How does it feel to be only 18 and the drum major of Kentucky's largest college marching band?

"Great" says Ronnie Bryan of Morehead State University who took the job after only one year as drum major at East Hardin High School.

But that one year was enough, according to Dr. Robert Hawkins, director of bands at MSU and the man who recruited the handsome youngster to lead his marching band.

"Ronnie is a natural leader and comes from a championship band program," Dr. Hawkins said. "We knew we wanted him from the first time we saw him in action."

The 6-1, 165-pound former basketball and track letterman at EHHS was voted the top drum major last year in the Eastern Kentucky Marching Band Festival at Ashland.

"That was a great honor for me because I wanted so much to prove that being field commander of a marching band could be done just as well by a young man," Ronnie recalled. "My school had used girl field commanders for several years and I was anxious to show that it could be a masculine job."

Ronnie is the son of Mrs. Frances Bryan, Rt. 6, Elizabethtown, and has been interested in music since the sixth grade. Although only a freshman at MSU, he already is enrolled in private clarinet instruction.

Ronnie was headed for a two-year college which has no music program when MSU offered him the drum major's post.

"It was a dream come true," he said. "Suddenly I was going from a school with no music to the college with the best music department and marching band in the state."

Dr. Hawkins says Ronnie is a great marcher whom the other 196 bandsmen respect and follow without question.

The 21-year-old green-eyed blonde was born in Cawood, Harlan County, and her grandparents still live there. Her own parents also are native Kentuckians and hope someday to return to the Bluegrass State permanently.

"My decision to come to Morehead State University was influenced the most by my family's Kentucky connections," Tommie recalled. She transferred to MSU as a sophomore and will be graduated next May with a bachelor's degree in elementary education.

Tommie was crowned last Saturday and she admits to shedding some tears after the excitement of the weekend had passed.

"I still can't believe it happened to me," she said. "It seemed like a dream and I was afraid I'd wake up and find out it never happened."

Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity nominated Tommie for the queen's election and she recalls feeling sorry for them at the time. "They are such a nice bunch of guys and I was sure they had picked the wrong girl," Tommie recounted.

Despite her selection as Homecoming Queen in high school and as Winter Sports Queen at a two-year college, Tommie says she was not optimistic about being chosen at MSU.

However, the friendly coed with the waist-length hair did win and her victory was announced at a student convocation. "Some friends in the crowd said I looked calm when the announcement was made but I was really shaking inside," Tommie said.

She was nervous before each event but Dr. Harry Mayhew, MSU's director of alumni affairs, said of her performance as Homecoming Queen:

"Tommie was a very gracious and lovely queen. She did an excellent job and we're all extremely proud of her."

No one was prouder than her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Whitman, 967 S. Market St., Galion, and they had good right to be.

Not only is she the 1970 Homecoming Queen, Tommie is an accomplished pianist, also a "Golden Heart" of Sigma Phi Epsilon, an officer in Delta Zeta sorority and a Dean's List student while carrying 20 hours of course work this semester.

The new queen hopes to become a kindergarten teacher.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- An old landmark with a new look, a bastion of masculinity succumbed to women's liberation and a majestic painting symbolizing a great alma mater.

These are but three of the changes at Morehead State University which returning alumni will see during the annual Homecoming Weekend, Oct. 23 and 24.

Campus alterations since the last Homecoming include the renovation of Rader Hall, the oldest structure at MSU. The $1.8 million project was just beginning when alumni made their pilgrimage last fall. Now it is nearly completed and the former administration building has taken on a modern image more fitting to its role as home of the School of Social Sciences.

Waterfield Hall, a bulwark of male housing for 10 years, has been converted to a women's residence hall and its 201 rooms are occupied by coeds. Used almost exclusively for freshman males since its opening, the four-story building gave way to increased female enrollment.

Other physical changes are coming to Morehead State. President Adron Doran last summer announced plans for a $3 million Appalachian Technical Institute to bring "a new vista in technical education" to Eastern Kentucky.

Perhaps most significant of all the year's modifications was the recent unveiling of the Morehead State University Bald Eagle painting which has been adopted as the university's official symbol.

Painstakingly researched and painted by Lexington wildlife artist Gene Gray, the work has been printed for limited sale to friends and alumni of MSU. Only 2,000 copies have been made available at a cost of $25 plus $2 for mailing. Sales are reported brisk and will continue during the Homecoming weekend.

Regardless of the changes which occur from year to year, the nostalgia, entertainment and excitement of a Morehead State University Homecoming will be in even more abundance as thousands of alumni flock to the campus.

The festive observance, billed as "Kentucky's Greatest Collegiate Weekend," starts Friday, Oct. 23, with a 6 p.m. candle-light dinner at the Adron Doran University Center. The evening is capped by an 8:30 p.m. concert by trumpeter Al Hirt at Laughlin Fieldhouse.

Saturday's crowded schedule opens with registration of alumni and various receptions during the morning. A smorgasbord luncheon begins at 11 a.m. and the traditional football game kicks off at 2:30 p.m. with the Eagles facing Tennessee Tech at Breathitt Sports Center.

Halftime activities include presentation of the 1970 Homecoming Queen and her court.

Clarinetist Buddy De Franco is featured soloist and director of the Glenn Miller Orchestra which is to play for one Homecoming Dance at 8:30 p.m. Saturday in the Laughlin Health Building. MSU's nationally-recognized Stage Band will perform for other dancers in the Fieldhouse.

Tickets for all Homecoming events are available at the MSU Alumni Office and the Business Office. A special advance price of $18.50 covers tickets for two persons to all events.

Meeting for the first time at Morehead State, the teachers of reading and their supervisors from across Kentucky will be concerned primarily with techniques for teaching the disadvantaged child.

Dr. Stanley I. Mour, IRA's state organizational chairman and elementary education chairman at the University of Louisville, is principal speaker for the two-day meeting. He will address the conference Saturday, Oct. 17, at 11:15 a.m.

The UL educator recently returned from a year at the University of Nebraska where he was awarded a post-doctoral fellowship to study reading and language arts and sociolinguistics.

"We're certainly looking forward to an exciting and enlightening conference," Dr. Hampton said. "Our program should prove very informative."

The conference opens Friday, Oct. 16, at 8 a.m. The entire day will be devoted to observation of instruction at the Reading Center and classroom practices at University Breckinridge School on the MSU campus.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Edwin R. Benton of Caney, Morgan County, qualifies as one of the most effective student recruiters at Morehead State University.

The Morgan County High School math teacher is a graduate student at MSU and has his wife, two sons and a daughter also enrolled. Also, another daughter is returning to the campus next semester to make it a half-dozen Bentons on the books.

Besides the senior Benton, who has a bachelor's and master's from Morehead State, there is his wife, Mrs. Hilda Benton, sons Phil, 19, and Joe, 18, and daughter Joyce, 21. Lois, 20, now married, is taking a semester off. She, like Joyce, is a senior.

Phil is a sophomore majoring in elementary education. Joe, a freshman who rooms with his brother, is studying political science. Joyce is a sociology major.

Mom and dad Benton commute to MSU for night classes but the others are full-time campus residents. Each child chose Morehead State University because of "dad's sales pitch," according to Phillip.

"We all had a chance to go elsewhere but dad sold us on the idea of coming to MSU. He's a real recruiter."

The Benton offspring hold part-time jobs to help mom and dad foot the bills for a family in college. Phil and Joe also raise tobacco on the family farm during the summer to supplement the college fund.

Mr. Benton commutes on Monday nights and usually sees Phil who has a class in the same building. Mrs. Benton comes on Tuesday nights and Joyce likes to visit with her.

She is among nine college students participating in the first semester program of the newly-devised Frankfort Administrative Intern Program.

The new program is an outgrowth of the Frankfort Semester Program, but unlike the older program, is open to students from all four-year colleges and universities within the state.

The program, based on a work-study format, is designed to attract outstanding college students to careers in state government.

In addition to an actual work load under the supervision of Health Department's Jim Rodgers, Pat also attends special classes at Kentucky State College.

During the summer months the interns worked full time in their assigned departments. This fall they are attending classes in the early morning and working in their assigned agencies the remainder of the day.

Pat, like the other interns, was chosen on the basis of her academic standing and demonstrated leadership ability. At Morehead State, she is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority and numerous other campus organizations.

Though originally selected by her campus coordinator, Dr. Jack Bizzel, Pat's final appointment was confirmed by a selection committee of state officials and college faculty members.

The semester for the interns began in July, 1970, and ends in January, 1971.

An addition to Baird Music Hall has been recognized for design excellence by the Kentucky Society of Architects, the third presentation to MSU and the firm of Lee Potter Smith, Pritchett, Hugg and Carter, Inc.

A jury of three prominent Atlanta architects selected the Baird addition for one of nine statewide awards from among 44 entries. Morehead State became the only Kentucky institution to win three straight awards.

The jurors said of the three-story structure which was built across a small creek:

"A handsome, good neighbor to site and existing buildings; straight forward in function and unique in the clever involvement of an existing creek on the site that challenged both the building and the architect's innovative ability in turning a certain liability into an original asset."

The structure was built by Sullivan and Cozart, Inc. of Louisville at a cost of $1.3 million. It includes a 400-seat recital hall and various rehearsal rooms and faculty offices. The building's stairwells are separately enclosed, another unusual feature.

Other Morehead State University winners were the Claypool-Young Art Building in 1968 and the Education Building in 1969.

MSU President Adron Doran accepted the "honor award" during the KSA convention recently in Lexington.

Mayor of Fayette, Miss., since July, 1969, Evers was instrumental in voter registration drives which increased black registration in Mississippi from 20,000 in 1965 to more than 275,000 by early 1969.

The 47-year-old graduate of Alcorn A&M will address a 10:20 a. m. convocation in MSU's Button Auditorium on the topic: "A Black Mississippi Mayor's Attempt to Implement the American Dream for all Citizens."

Married and the father of five, Evers narrowly lost a bid for Congress in 1968 and became a Democratic national committeeman after leading a challenge of Mississippi delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

He succeeded his late brother as field secretary of the Mississippi NAACP in 1963 after the nationally-known activist had been murdered by a sniper. By 1967, Charles Evers had led black Mississippians to electoral control of five rural counties south of the capital city of Jackson.

Other speakers scheduled include retired Air Force Lt. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, the highest ranking Negro ever to serve in the U. S. armed forces, and Mrs. Betty Shabazz, widow of Malcolm X.

The series is financed by a $2,000 grant from the S&H Foundation plus university and Student Council funds.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Terry Kinzer likes to go up in the world.

He likes it so much and does it so well, in fact, that the Morehead State University senior won a national championship this year in motorcycle hill climbing.

The 24-year-old physical education major from Allen, Ky. took first place in 32 out of 36 climbs to win the 351 to 750 cc division of the sportsman hill climb class of the American Motorcycle Association. The Floyd Countian finished second in the other four events.

Terry, who races for his dad's cycle shop at Allen, has won more than 100 trophies in the five years he has been charging up steep hills on his 245-pound, 90-horsepower bike.

Hill climbing usually involves a dirt incline ranging from 50 to 75 degrees and from 100 to 500 feet long. Riders try to climb the highest in the shortest time. Terry says climbing is "a thrill a second."

"Some people think hill climbing is too dangerous," he said. "But if you have confidence in yourself and your equipment, the fear factor is not a handicap."

The stocky champion has been flipped backwards numerous times but escaped injury due to his quick reaction and the protective gear required of hill climbers.

"It's a wild feeling when the bike comes back over your head," he said. "You have to know what to do or someone will carry you away."

Terry began competing for the national title last May and finished in October. He will be receiving his trophy next spring.

"When you consider how many good hill climbers were on the circuit this year, winning the national championship really is a great honor," he said. "I hope to do it again next year."

Terry will be graduated from MSU next month but he's planning to stay on campus until his wife, the former Elizabeth Clark of Allen, receives her degree in May.

"I hope to become a teacher and keep my weekends free for hill climbing," Terry added.

Asked if his wife shared his enthusiasm for the sport, he replied:

"She keeps my bike polished."

Both Kinzers apparently like going up in the world.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Eastern Kentucky University President

Robert R. Martin has been honored for his support of alumni associations at state universities and colleges.

Dr. Martin, EKU's chief executive since 1960, received the first annual service award of the Joint Alumni Council of Kentucky (JACK).

He was cited for "significant contributions" to college alumni groups while serving as state superintendent of public instruction and as Eastern's president. JACK was formed in 1957 during his term as Kentucky's public schools chief.

The first EKU alumnus to become the school's president, Martin also was named "Kentuckian of the Year" in 1964 by the Kentucky Press Association.

The award was presented by Dr. Harry Mayhew, director of alumni affairs at Morehead State and the current JACK president.

The joint council also paid tribute to another of its founders with a memorial resolution for M. O. Wrather, executive vice president of Murray State University, who died last September.

Morehead State University President Adron Doran, a lifelong friend of the late educator, eulogized him as "a dedicated and distinguished servant of higher education."

Wrather was JACK's first president. The resolution was presented to his widow, Mrs. Lillie Wrather of Murray.

The council conducted its two-day meeting on the MSU campus. Members include Kentucky's six state universities and two state colleges.

His day begins with a morning appearance at Paul G. Blazer High School where Morehead State's School of Education is engaged in an experimental student teaching program.

Dr. Doran moves to the Henry Clay Hotel at noon to address the Youth Appreciation Week luncheon of the Ashland Optimist Club. Students from Ashland area high schools will be special guests.

The president winds up the day at MSU's EKEA banquet in the hotel's ballroom at 6 p.m. Tickets are $3 and will be available at the door.

Dr. Doran's visit to Blazer will be his first look at the pilot project which has 18 student teachers assigned to the school for the entire semester. Instead of rotating to the campus periodically for more classwork, the prospective teachers receive instruction from an MSU faculty member at Blazer.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's teacher education program has won total and laudatory approval of the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE).

Reaccredited for 10 years were all MSU degree programs and guidance counselors on both the bachelor's and master's levels.

The reaccreditation resulted from a two-year self study by MSU's School of Education, an investigative visit by an NCATE team and hearings by NCATE's Visitation and Accreditation Committee.

"The entire process of accreditation has been very, very profitable and given us many new ideas for further improvement of teacher education at Morehead State University," said Dr. James H. Powell, dean of the School of Education.

"We were delighted to learn that all of our programs through the master's level have been reaccredited," the dean added. "The visitation committee's report was very complimentary and we are looking forward to an even better teacher training program in the decade ahead."

NCATE is an arm of the National Commission on Accrediting and is responsible for regulating all college programs for the training of teachers and other professional school personnel.

Morehead State University is among 470 universities and colleges presently approved by NCATE.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Slight damage was reported at three women's residence halls early Friday after several hundred Morehead State University students demonstrated against women's curfew hours.

Buford Crager, dean of students at MSU, said one person, an outsider, had been arrested and fined for trespassing and disorderly conduct.

Crager said information was being compiled on the activities of each student identified as a participant. No disciplinary action had been taken by late Friday afternoon.

The demonstration, supported by the Student Mobilization Committee to demand extension of women's hours, erupted into small incidents of bottle and rock throwing when only about 30 coeds left the dormitories at midnight, the deadline for an SMC-planned mass walkout.

No injuries were reported in the 90-minute outburst which was confined to a women's housing area on the north side of the campus. Crager said glass breakage had occurred at Waterfield, Thompson and Mignon halls.
