MOREHEAD, Ky.---Jim McCollum of Sonora, Ky. had a minor in home economics at Morehead State University but few people kidded him about it.

The stocky Hardin Countian escaped the taunts of his buddies mainly because they had seen him work out with weights and knew he was anything but a sissy.

Jim, who finished his degree work last week, majored in health and physical education and hopes to become a physical therapist.

The six courses in home economics - he was the only male in each of them - resulted from a need for background nutrition courses and from his hobby.

"I had to have the nutrition courses and my favorite pastime is cooking so the home economics minor was a natural," said Jim who lettered in basketball and track at East Hardin High School.

His cooking interest developed at the home of his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Ireland of Sonora, who let him "tinker around" in the kitchen.

Jim's tinkering paid off handsomely in grades as he compiled an almost straight A average in his home economics courses and learned "more about cooking than I ever dreamed."

His favorite dishes are wild game and Chinese foods and he has the most trouble with pastries.

Strangely enough, Jim didn't have to call on his coed classmates for help in the culinary courses. "I was already a better cook than most of them," he said. "Of course, diplomacy was necessary at times."

Jim transferred to MSU because of its superior physical education department and discovered that the home economics faculty also is superb.

"I didn't outcook any of my instructors," he recalled. "And I never did learn to smile when they addressed the entire class as 'girls.' "

Has he considered a career as a chef?

"I've thought about it. I worked as a short-order cook at a restaurant and it wasn't too bad. However, I'm determined to become a therapist."

The 22-year-old bachelor hopes to someday marry a good cook. "I like to cook but it's really the woman's job in a home. Besides, I'll teach her just to make sure she can handle it."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University hopes next year to initiate the first college degree nursing program in Eastern Kentucky.

A proposal for creation of an associate (two-year) nursing degree at MSU goes before the Kentucky Board of Nursing Education and Nurse Registration in mid-February.

If approved, the university will begin accepting applications immediately for the first class starting in August. Such a timetable would produce the first nursing graduates by May, 1973.

As outlined in the application to the nursing board, the MSU program would be coeducational and require 67 semester hours of course work and clinical training over a two-year period. Most of the clinical experience would be at Morehead's St. Claire Medical Center. Special exposure in geriatric nursing at Daniel Boone Convalescent Center in Morehead and psychiatric nursing at Eastern State Hospital in Lexington also are planned.

Classroom, laboratory and office facilities for the envisioned MSU Department of Nursing and Allied Health will be provided in the $3 million Appalachian Technical Institute which goes under construction early in 1971. Temporary quarters would be used the first year. Clinical facilities are contained in the new $2.5 million, 50-bed addition to the medical center due for completion next fall.

nursing at msu 2222222

St. Claire, a public hospital opened in 1963, would cooperate in the program at no cost to MSU, according to Mrs. Doris Schmidt, head of the proposed nursing department.

To be operated as part of the School of Applied Sciences and Technology, the proposed program is aimed at reducing the critical shortage of registered nurses in Appalachia and Eastern Kentucky.

At present, the only nurse training facilities in the eastern third of Kentucky are "diploma" programs at hospitals in Ashland and Harlan. A "diploma" program also produces registered nurses but its graduates are not awarded college degrees as they would be at Morehead State.

Persons completing either type of program must pass a state examination to become registered nurses.

"We are confident of creating one of the best two-year nursing programs in the nation," said Mrs. Schmidt, a 12-year veteran of nursing education.

Facilities at the hospital and the campus will be interconnected by closed-circuit television and four full-time faculty members would be employed. A class of 30 students each year is planned.

Recruiting of male and female students for the first class will commence as soon as the nursing board acts affirmatively.

Mrs. Schmidt said an ad hoc advisory committee appointed by MSU President Adron Doran had been invaluable in planning the proposed nursing degree.

Thursday, Dec. 10, was a night to remember on the Morehead State University social calendar.

President and Mrs. Adron Doran hosted their sixth annual formal dinner party honoring faculty, staff and members of the Board of Regents. Special guests included State Sen. and Mrs. Joe Stacy, State Rep. and Mrs. Sherman Arnett and Mrs. William H. Layne.

Regents attending with their wives were Dr. W. H. Cartmell, State Rep. Charles D. Wheeler, Lloyd Cassity and Dr. Frank Mangrum. Also present was Regent Jack Sims and his date, Miss Becky Buchhammer. Other off-campus guests were Mr. and Mrs. Lew Kilgus, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Gillespie and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Redmond, all of Maysville, Mrs. Helen Price Stacy of West Liberty and W.E. Crutcher, publisher of the Morehead News.

Table hosts for the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Ray Hornback and MSU Student Council President Dudley Hawkey and his date, Miss Connie Wells.

The evening's theme was "Old Fashioned Christmas" and the Adron Doran University Center was festooned in red, green and gold for the occasion. About 800 persons were greeted upon arrival on the first floor by Mr. and Mrs. Santa who stood beside a split rail fence and a sleigh. Also in sight were the dancing Eaglettes, directed by Mrs. Robert Hawkins, and the MSU "Eagle" who sported a Santa Claus beard and cap.

Xmas party 2222222

A toy workshop with 15 busy elves appeared on the same floor as Santa's helpers assembled boats made by Steve Bizzel of University Breckinridge School. The toymakers, all from Breck, included Peter Hanrahan, Joe Back, Greg Spears, Nathan Coates, Todd Hallum, Jimmy Boodry, John Payne, David Philley, Mark McClure, Mike Campbell, Brian Moore, Doug and Dave Keenan, Matthew Hanrahan, Rod White, David Tapp, Darold Bailey, Ricky Staggs and Richey Newton.

As the guests moved up the suspended staircase which had been interwoven with holly and pine they found Gene Deaton directing the MSU Stage Band and its vocal group, The Intimate Circle. Also in view was a "living picture" of the biblical three kings comprised of Breck students Tim Porter, Marshall McNeely and Tom Martin. The Faculty Brass Ensemble, conducted by John Stetler, also entertained. The Stage Band later performed for dancing on the second floor foyer overlooking University Boulevard and the President's Home.

Dr. and Mrs. Doran received their guests in front of a ceiling-high winterwhite native cedar tree on the third floor. The partygoers moved from there into three reception rooms. The hallway scenes included a child playing with a toy train, another "living picture" of a family singing carols and two ballerinas dancing on a life-sized pin cushion covered with green net, tinsel and gold balls. An alcove featured a storytelling "living picture" of the "Night Before Christmas" with Breck students Virginia Landreth, Nadine Phillips and Sally Sadler. The "family" singing at the old pump organ was Joan Raines, Pat Leonard and Audrey Phillips and the ballerinas were Deanne Roberson and Debra Cox, also from Breck.

The University Madrigal Singers, directed by James Ross Beane, sang in the third floor foyer and Mr. Beane later led the caroling.

The University Center ballroom was transformed into a festive banquet hall and its holiday atmosphere was heightened by a dozen wall-mounted shadow boxes containing various Christmas scenes. The boxes and other decorations were made under the supervision of Don Young, Doug Adams and Maurice Strider.

An old-fashioned fireplace and stocking-draped mantle was the backdrop for the head table as its mirror reflected the hurricane lanterns on each table. Alternated in red and green color combinations, the tables also featured the Dorans' elegant Christmas card, printed by Martin Huffman, and ceramic figurines of Mr. and Mrs. Santa and Mr. and Mrs. Frosty The Snowman. The mementos were manufactured by Nell Carr and the Industrial Education Department.

Poinsettias and mums used extensively in the building's decor were grown by the Agriculture Department under the supervision of Dr. Charles Derrickson and Robert Wolfe. Native Christmas trees appearing on each level were decorated with trimmings made by children at UBS. Costumes and sets for the "living pictures" were made by Bobbie Manning, Debbie Epperhart and David Sparkman of Breck. Harlen Hamm of the Breck faculty supervised all of the children involved.

Ceramic centerpieces at the head table bore a black bow in the hair as Mrs. Doran's trademark and a black bow tie characteristic of Dr. Doran. The white hurricane lanterns were mounted on red bases and used red candles.

Organist Larry Keenan supplied dinner music and caroling occupied the guests between the main course and dessert. Performing later on a revolving stage were Mrs. Doran at the organ, Deaton on trombone, Jay Flippin at the piano and Tom Dupin on drums.

President and Mrs. Doran conducted the meditation and Dr. Doran read a Christmas poem before the university's First Couple led singing of "White Christmas" as the party's traditional finale.

Mrs. Doran gave credit to her general chairman, Don Holloway, and to her planning committee but it was clear to all present that the annual party again bore the indelible stamp of a talented and delightful First Lady.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University has launched a "top to bottom" study of its ROTC program, MSU President Adron Doran announced Wednesday night.

The review, authorized by the university's Board of Regents, is being made by a nine-member student-faculty committee headed by Dr. John Kleber, assistant professor of history.

News of the study came during an ROTC banquet during which Dr. Doran received the Army's "Outstanding Civilian Service Medal" for his support of the officer training operation at MSU over a three-year period.

Lt. Gen. George I. Forsythe, project officer for the Army's all-volunteer concept, made the presentation, citing the president for "rare initiative and intense zeal" in his contributions to ROTC.

The three-star general said Dr. Doran had been instrumental in providing ROTC facilities at MSU regarded as the best in the Eastern United States, in granting academic status to ROTC faculty members and in awarding academic credit for ROTC courses.

Dr. Doran revealed the study during his acceptance remarks, noting he had recommended and appointed the committee which is expected to report by April 1.

The committee, comprised of six faculty members and administrators and three students, will study:

"The adequacy and relevance of the curriculum, the effectiveness of the teaching-learning process, the qualifications and requirements of the faculty, the financial and administrative affairs, the admissions and retention policies and the elements of compulsory versus voluntary requirements."

Other committee members are Dr. Frank Mangrum, faculty representative on the Board of Regents; Jack Sims, Munfordville senior and the student body's board representative; Dr. Ray Hornback, vice president for university affairs; Dr. Morris Caudill, associate dean of undergraduate programs; Lt. Col. Arthur Kelly, professor of military science; James Dougherty, Chillicothe, Ohio, senior; and Robert Williams, Lexington graduate student.

Morehead State's Army ROTC unit was approved in 1967 and enrolled its first students in September, 1968. Originally, two years were required but the Army agreed to eliminate the sophomore obligation soon after the program began.

"We must enforce present strip mining laws in order to stop the destruction of our land from the ravages of surface mining," Combs told more than 500 persons at the student-faculty gathering. "If those laws are not sufficient, we must enact new laws."

Reiterating his stand on the severance tax issue, the former judge said:

"I have, since July, been advocating a severance or production tax on minerals. Such a tax, in my opinion, should be pegged to the market price on coal and the revenue should be returned to the counties from which the mineral is produced. This tax should not be used to punish or prohibit or to place the Kentucky coal industry at a competitive disadvantage."

Combs, the second Democratic gubernatorial candidate to appear at MSU in recent weeks, said his campaign was intended "to give Kentucky back to Kentuckians."

He was introduced by MSU President Adron Doran. His appearance was sponsored by the university's Young Democrats Club.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Mrs. Mignon Doran, wife of Morehead State University President Adron Doran, goes far beyond the traditional role of a campus First Lady.

She directs a unique service, the Personal Development Institute, which offers a non-credit course designed to develop individual qualities ranging from manners to vocabulary.

Classes are voluntary and each student receives a handsome certificate upon completion of the five-week course. Additionally, PDI is recorded on the student's permanent transcript for the benefit of prospective employers.

Mrs. Doran founded PDI two years ago after recognizing that public education lacked any emphasis on personal development. The Institute's purpose is to identify and understand the forces that affect the personal potential of students and adults on the MSU campus.

Changing social, economic and political climates are considered in the instruction aimed at improving confidence, poise, personal appearance, health and self-assurance.

"The enhancement of the inner as well as the outer beauty of young people at Morehead State is the major thrust of PDI," said Mrs. Doran. "We are vitally concerned with preparing the total person for rewarding professional life and citizenship."

PDI students explore the various social processes through experiences and instruction. She stresses the importance of personal appearance, diet, wardrobe, manners, grooming and certain other personal protocol.

Mrs. Doran, by her personal example, has been teaching the social graces since coming to MSU in 1954. Among numerous other things, she has supervised festive dinners and parties for students and faculty members. The popular First Lady started teaching the social arts professionally after launching PDI two years ago and now operates in two studio classrooms which provide a "living room" environment for PDI.

A former speech and music teacher, Mrs. Doran has spent many years collecting and writing materials which students use in their studies. Her classes involve various visual aids, role-playing, discussion techniques and demonstrations.

The Institute encompasses a broad scope, including on-campus classes and workshops for student teachers, ROTC cadets, community leaders, secretaries, sororities, fraternities, public school teachers and MSU faculty members.

More than 1,000 persons have completed PDI since Mrs. Doran began the pioneering venture in early 1969.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- It's official. Morehead State University has a new college degree nursing program.

Creation of an associate degree in nursing at MSU has been approved by the Kentucky Board of Nursing Education and Nurse Registration.

The university will begin accepting applications immediately for the first class starting in August, according to Mrs. Doris Schmidt, head of MSU's Department of Nursing and Allied Health.

The two-year coeducational program will require 67 semester hours of course work and clinical training. The clinical experience will occur at St. Claire Medical Center in Morehead and Hayswood Hospital in Maysville.

New classroom, laboratory and office facilities for the nursing department will be provided in MSU's $3 million Appalachian Technical Institute which goes under construction shortly.

"Our nursing degree is aimed at helping reduce the critical shortage of registered nurses in Appalachia and Eastern Kentucky," said MSU President Adron Doran. "We are confident of establishing one of the best two-year programs in the nation."

Direct subsidies, less legislative regulation and tax relief are the most pressing needs of the country's rail industry, according to three executives of the Louisville and Nashville and Chesapeake and Ohio railway companies.

The discussion centered on a recent report of "America's Sound Transportation Review Organization (ASTRO)," a study group financed by the nation's railroads.

Defending the report's findings were Eugene Herde, general attorney for the L&N at Louisville; Alfred James Jr., general manager of the L&N's Northern Region; and John D. McGee, district sales manager of the C&O at Ashland.

Business and economics students were told that railroads compete at a disadvantage because they lack the operating subsidies paid airlines and the free travel corridors, namely federally-developed inland waterways used by marine transporters and federally-financed highways used by truckers.

The rail spokesmen said their industry is taxed four times heavier than others in transportation and called "overwhelmingly unfair" the real estate tax rate paid on right-of-way property.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---If you're an early morning TV viewer, you've probably seen the smiling face of Dr. Lewis Barnes, the "television professor" at Morehead State University.

An expert in linguistics with 26 years of college teaching experience, Dr. Barnes also likes to work in an electronic classroom, MSU's $250,000 television production studio.

The English professor has taught on live television but in recent years has become almost a TV regular by videotaping linguistics courses for home study.

He presently is revising and retaping a course which will be shown this fall. His two other finished products, each containing 45 lessons of 30 minutes each, have been shown on commercial and educational TV stations in Louisville, Cincinnati and Huntington, W.Va. The new course also will be offered to the Kentucky Educational Television (KET) network.

The taping schedule is demanding - at least three lessons weekly - but his three hours of preparation time for each program is light compared to the six hours or more required of MSU's Department of Instructional Media which operates the television studio.

Most of the advance work is production of "visuals," the 25 to 30 charts, drawings and photographs used in each lesson.

Taping sessions require about two hours to put one lesson "in the can" but Dr. Barnes says he finds it easy to teach his invisible students. "It's almost second nature to me after all these years in the classroom," he said.

His wife, Dr. Ruth Barnes, writes the scripts and Dr. Norman Tant, who supervises TV production at MSU, edits them and coordinates overall planning.

Once the "television professor" moves into camera range, he becomes the center of attention for the director, three cameramen, three control room engineers and two floor men.

"It's a team effort and they all make me look good," Dr. Barnes said. "He's a real pro," is the reply of Steve Young, his director.

Production costs of the courses are reimbursed from fees paid by viewers who enroll for college credit.

"I may never be a star but I like to teach with television," Dr. Barnes said.

His TV style is relaxed yet efficient. Dr. Barnes was recruited for the MSU faculty after MSU President Adron Doran saw him teaching on live television in New Orleans several years ago.

"I must have done something right," he recalled.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Joe was doomed to academic failure when he came to Morehead State University last fall as a freshman but a new, imaginative program saved him.

Joe (not his real name) had the reading ability of a ninth grader and his faculty advisor knew college work would be too much for him. Poor reading skills account for a majority of the college dropouts and Joe was headed for the same fate.

However, MSU had instituted a new course in "developmental reading" and Joe was assigned to it along with other freshmen identified as below par readers in a series of tests.

He was given another test to determine exactly which skills he needed to improve. His trouble was traced to vocabulary, one of the most common problem areas.

A professor worked out a step-by-step plan to attack Joe's difficulties on an individual basis and challenged him to complete the program before the fall semester ended. A senior student was assigned to Joe's case as a tutor and worked with him during every class session.

Weekly counseling sessions followed as Joe made steady progress through the programmed materials and various teaching machines. Ensuing tests showed his reading level climbing constantly. He soon found himself reading materials he had avoided in the past.

"Suddenly, I was sure of myself and not afraid to pick up anything to read," Joe recalled. "I've still got a lot of improving to do but one thing is for certain, I'd never have made it through my first year without this course."

Joe's attitude a semester later is a complete reversal of his reaction to the news last fall that his reading level was below average. He was angry and blamed his high school for failing to properly prepare him.

"My pride was hurt most of all," he recounted. "It wasn't easy to admit to my friends that I wasn't the cool guy who knew everything."

But MSU required Joe and the others to take the course if they wanted to stay in school.

"I didn't like it at first but after about two weeks I could see a change and I started learning other things about studying that have really helped me," he said. "And another good point is the two hours of credit I earned in the course."

Joe's reading ability now is about equal to a college freshman and he's working on his own to keep improving.

Not all of the Joes in the course make as much progress but, in the words of one MSU administrator, "If we salvage one student, the program has justified itself."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Construction starts next week on Morehead State University's $3.5 million Appalachian Technical Institute which has been hailed as a "significant breakthrough" in technical education.

The five-story classroom and office structure will be built by Tenco Construction Co. of Atlanta, Ga. to house a technical education program ranging from college graduate work to high school teaching.

Scheduled for completion in September, 1972, the building will contain almost 110,000 square feet of floor space, including two levels of indoor parking.

It is being financed through a grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission and by the sale of university building bonds. The reinforced concrete structure has a total cost of $3,579,000 and will connect to the existing Home Economics-Industrial Arts Building via an overhead, enclosed bridge.

"This new facility will be the only one of its kind in Kentucky and among just a few in the country," MSU President Adron Doran said as construction contracts were signed. "It is a significant breakthrough and will enable our institution to better serve the career needs of Eastern Kentucky and Appalachia."

The Institute, to be operated by MSU's School of Applied Sciences and Technology, will allow the university to expand technical offerings on the graduate, four-year and two-year levels.

A cooperative agreement with the Kentucky Department of Education will provide laboratory teaching experiences at the nearby Rowan County Vocational Extension Center, a satellite of the Ashland Area Vocational-Technical School.

Among the Institute's associate (two-year) programs will be MSU's newly-approved nursing degree.

"Not only will Morehead State University be able to improve the quality of technical education in this region but we also will be equipped to prepare more industrial technicians through our associate degree programs," Dr. Doran added.

The Institute will be located at the western end of the campus. It was designed by George L. Shannon and Associates of Prestonsburg.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Gov. Louie B. Nunn was caught in the spirit of Kentucky's fabled "March Madness" here recently.

The governor, in town to address the Morehead Chamber of Commerce, paid a surprise visit to the 16th Regional Tournament at Morehead State University's Laughlin Fieldhouse.

More than 4,000 spectators gave him a standing ovation early in the Ashland-Morgan County game.

Ashland charged to a 53-19 halftime lead and Nunn joined hundreds of other fans in an early start for home.

Earlier, the Republican chief executive told more than 100 business and civic leaders that they should be eager to speak out against critics of the free enterprise system.

"Businessmen like you helped build this mighty nation and your taxes go a long way in keeping government strong and active," Nunn said. "Social welfare programs and other services of government could not exist without the taxed profits of a free enterprise economy."

He urged the chamber to utilize the human and technical resources of Morehead State University for increased economic and social progress in Northeastern Kentucky.

MSU President Adron Doran hosted the annual banquet.

Dan Egbers, Fort Thomas junior, and Ron Mather, Hodgenville sophomore, will be pitted against 15 other two-member teams March 19 and 20 at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N. C.

Winners advance to the national finals in mid-April at Macalester College, St. Paul, Minn.

"We're thrilled at the invitation," said Mrs. Julia Webb, MSU's debate coach. "It's a great honor for Dan and Ron. They are outstanding students and exceptional debaters and have certainly earned this recognition."

Egbers, a member of the University Senate, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Egbers, 7 Linden Court, Fort Thomas. Mather is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Madison Mather, Rt. 1, Hodgenville.

They will be the first MSU debaters to participate in the nationwide competition sponsored by the American Forensic Association. Morehead State is the only state university competing this year, Mrs. Webb said.

Egbers and Mather can argue either side of the national debate question concerning compulsory wage and price controls.

Janet Horton, senior at Rowan County High School, will represent Kentucky's Seventh Congressional District and the Talent Search Project in Washington next week.

Selected as one of 2,000 high school seniors from across the nation to take part in the 1971 session of A Presidential Classroom for Young Americans, Janet will have the opportunity to study in depth the intricacies of the federal government at work.

Janet is the daughter of Mrs. Wanda Carpenter of Clearfield.

The curriculum of the Classroom focuses on the three branches of the American government--executive, legislative and judicial. Those high school seniors chosen to participate attend one of six one-week sessions, which begin each year soon after Congress reconvenes.

Janet will stay in Washington's Shoreham Hotel, the second floor of which has been taken over by the Classroom for the period. Her roommates--four of them--will be from different sections of the country.

Each student will be assigned a "Syllabus of Study" which is comprised of 21 seminars, most of them conducted in the offices of the branch of government being studied. Classroom discussion will be supplemented by lectures and meetings with key government officials.

Discussion groups will be open to the students in the evenings.

A banquet, with nationally known entertainers presenting "A Salute to Young Americans", winds up the week.

A crew from NBC was on campus this week to film part of MSU's black lectureship series for use in a "First Tuesday" segment to be aired in April.

The filming concluded with an interview between MSU Student Body President Dudley Hawkey and John Kerwin of NBC.

The visit to Morehead State completed NBC's travels to several U.S. colleges for a look at the lecture and entertainment circuit. The documentary is concerned primarily with relations between schools and the booking agents who supply hundreds of campus speakers and entertainers each year.

Mrs. Betty Shabazz, widow of slain Afro-American leader Malcolm X, closed MSU's black lecture series with a plea for love and understanding to combat racism in the United States.

She urged students, teachers and administrators to develop "genuine" concern for the human rights of all persons, regardless of race or politics.

"Black Americans want the same things you do - freedom, justice and equal opportunity," Mrs. Shabazz told her predominantly white audience of nearly 1,000 persons. "We seek peace and equality, not violence and hatred."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Morehead State University Board of Regents has abolished mandatory ROTC, approved a $16.1 million budget for the 1971-72 term and liberalized women's dormitory hours.

ROTC has been required of freshmen at MSU since 1968 but all military science courses will become voluntary this fall. The decision followed a four-month study by a special faculty-student committee.

The new budget, slightly increased over the 1970-71 allocation, includes $8.9 million in state funds. It provides funding for 14 fewer full-time faculty and staff positions.

Changes in women's hours, also recommended by a faculty-student committee, start with the fall semester. The new policy eliminates curfews for seniors and graduate students 21 or older and sophomores and juniors with parental permission. Freshman coeds remain under the present system. Students choosing not to observe curfews will be assessed $15 extra each semester to provide additional dorm security.

In personnel actions, the board named Dr. Paul Ford Davis as vice president for academic affairs, Dr. Morris K. Caudill as dean of undergraduate programs and Dr. Charles F. Ward as dean of the School of Applied Sciences and Technology.

Dr. Thomas C. Morrison was designated as acting dean of the School of Business and Economics, Dr. Gene W. Scholes as assistant to the president and Jerry R. Franklin as registrar. All appointments are effective July 1.

MOREHEAD, Ky., --- Dean Aaron, a junior at Belfry High School in Pike County, will represent Northeast Kentucky this summer in the International Science Fair at Kansas City, Mo.

He won the trip Saturday by taking first place in the 8th annual Northeast Kentucky Regional Science Fair at Morehead State University.

Aaron is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Aaron of South Williamson. His project in chemistry concerned electro dialysis, a method of desalting.

Second place went to Sharon Grannis, a junior at Fleming County High School. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Grannis of Flemingsburg.

Her award consists of a week-long visit this summer to a U.S. Navy installation where she will observe naval research.

Alternate for the Navy award is John Klee, also a junior at Fleming County. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Klee of Flemingsburg.

Danny Hawkins, a senior at Fleming County High and the son of Mrs. Mildred Hawkins of Hillsboro won a four-year scholarship to Morehead State. The grant, worth $200 yearly, is renewable each year only if he maintains the required grade point average.

The day-long fair attracted more than 400 exhibits from 30 schools in nine counties. Maurice E. Esham, instructor of science at MSU, was fair director.

PLEASE HOLD FOR RELEASE AFTER 7 P.M., SATURDAY, APRIL 24

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A lifetime of dedicated service to Kentucky will be nationally recognized next month when Dr. Adron Doran receives the Horatio Alger Award.

The 17-year president of Morehead State University joins a select group of about 200 Americans chosen as recipients since the awards began 25 years ago. Past winners include such luminaries as Dwight D. Eisenhower, Billy Graham, Bob Hope, J. C. Penney, Bernard Baruch and Herbert Hoover.

Dr. Doran, 61, a native of Graves County, becomes only the fourth Kentuckian so honored. Others were the late Mayfield Industrialist Willie Foster, Lexington financier Garvice D. Kincaid and Col. Harland Sanders of Ky. Fried Chicken fame.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, another past recipient, will present Dr. Doran his award May 12 at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel in New York City, along with the nine other co-winners for 1971 who include news commentator Lowell Thomas and architect Edward Durell Stone.

Horatio Alger Awards are sponsored by the American Schools and Colleges Association, a non-profit corporation committed to education and American traditions of equality of opportunity, industry and achievement.

The awards were created to honor business and professional leaders who, in the spirit of Horatio Alger, have overcome humble circumstances to attain unquestioned success.

Dr. Doran has risen from a two-room farmhouse in Western Kentucky to national prominence as a skilled and successful college administrator. But, unlike most of the other Alger winners, his wealth is not computed in dollars.

"I have never believed that a man's life should consist of acquiring possessions but rather in taking advantage of the opportunities for personal growth and service to others," he said recently. "The successful lives of the young people who have come under my influence are the fruits of my labor and the wealth of my holdings."

Obsessed by his dream of making Morehead State University a model of equal educational opportunity where individual worth and human dignity were the highest priorities, Dr. Doran's compassionate administration has led MSU to more than 30 precedents in dealing with ethnic minority groups. He received the Lincoln Key of the Kentucky Education Association for "integration without fanfare."

His other campus achievements are legendary in Kentucky. From a tiny teachers college little known outside the state, he has molded MSU into a dynamic university reaching out to serve Eastern Kentucky, Appalachia and the nation. Statistically, enrollment has increased almost 900 per cent to more than 6,000, upwards of $60 million has been expended in imaginative yet practical construction and the operating budget has mushroomed twentyfold to $16 million yearly.

Before assuming the MSU presidency in 1954, the energetic, friendly educator served Kentucky in the public schools as a coach, teacher and principal, in the state legislature, including a term as Speaker of the House and in the State Department of Education. Active in civic and professional affairs on all levels, he has served with distinction on numerous national, regional, and state committees and boards.

The Kentucky Press Association named him "Kentuckian of the Year" in 1959 and Gov. Edward T. Breathitt selected him for the "Distinguished Kentuckian Award" in 1966. Dr. Doran has served as a minister in the Church of Christ since 1928.

"Much of what little success I have known should be credited to my wife, Mignon, whom I married while we were in college 40 years ago," Dr. Doran added. "She has been at my side unflinchingly since that time."

Public plaudits are of secondary importance to this proud, fiercely-competitive man whose greatest joys are the financial, moral, social and spiritual help given privately to students in need.

"I remember vividly how friends, including my teachers, helped me to help myself and what a positive influence they had on my life," he recalled.

For literally thousands of present and past MSU students, a true friend will be rewarded next month in New York City.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "It was a good, warm feeling. I was glad it was over but also sad that it had ended."

Jim Bailey, Flat Gap senior at Morehead State University, was referring to his state of mind as the final curtain fell in the 1971 Miss MSU Pageant.

As executive director of the two-night pageant, Bailey was responsible for a myriad of details, ranging from printing of tickets to overseeing the judges' balloting.

"It was a tremendous organizational challenge and I wanted to have the best pageant," the 21-year-old speech major recalled. "Our staff was tremendous and they really deserve the credit."

But MSU officials involved with the annual Miss Kentucky preliminary said Bailey had been "wholly dedicated" to his voluntary job.

And it took dedication for a full-time student nearing graduation to take six weeks of his time, including two weeks of day-long activity, to put together a show of amateur talent.

"Except for the loss of sleep, it wasn't too bad," he added. "I've got a lot of catching up to do in my classes but it was worth it. That was great experience."

Bailey, the son of Mrs. Prudence Bailey of Flat Gap, hopes to move on to graduate school after receiving his degree next month.

Now that the pageant is over, Bailey has returned to his other big project of the year. As president of the Campus Club social fraternity, he is supervising the group's affiliation with a national fraternity.

"I just like to keep busy," he said.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- After more than 40 years in public education, Monroe Wicker of Morehead State University is heading happily into retirement.

His career began as an 18-year-old teacher in Knott County and included the principalship of Floyd-Knott High School at age 22 and then to the principal's office at Martin High School.

He later became superintendent of Prestonsburg City Schools and, in 1947, came to Morehead State University to launch what eventually became a 24-year tenure as a campus administrator. By the time he retires July 1, Wicker will have served MSU in four posts - director of school relations, director of admissions and public relations, director of student teaching and director of University Breckinridge School.

He recorded 16 productive years as executive secretary of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association (EKEA) and also served on the Kentucky Committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and on the board of directors of the Kentucky Education Association (KEA).

The personable educator is a graduate of Alice Lloyd College, Tusculum College and UK. He holds the rank of associate professor of education.

Wicker is married to the former Golda Maggard of Hindman. They have two sons; Phil, an attorney in Somerset, and Terry, a computer supervisor in Dayton, Ohio.

Now on a leave of absence to study MSU's programs in extension, placement and correspondence courses, the Knott County native is planning an active retirement.

He hopes to travel extensively, including Europe, and schedule an occasional speaking engagement. His plans also involve more time for playing bridge, reading and attending sports events. The Wickers will keep their home in Morehead.

Of his career, Wicker said recently:

"I've tried to dedicate my life to helping the young people of Eastern Kentucky improve themselves."

Initiated this year to replace the late summer post session, the concentrated term allows students to earn up to four semester hours of undergraduate or graduate credit in daily classes lasting from one to three weeks.

More than 80 courses are scheduled and more will be added on sufficient demand, said Dr. Edward E. Coates, Intersession director.

Registration is Monday from 8 a.m. to noon and classes start at 1 p.m. Fees are $11 per semester hour for Kentucky undergraduates and $14 per hour for in-state graduate students. Non-resident fees are $32 and $42 per hour.

Special courses offered only during Intersession include American Musical Theater Today, featuring seven Broadway shows during a week-long stay in New York; a workshop in drug education which meets on Friday nights and Saturdays; a course in oriental ceramics; and a geological field trip to several Kentucky state parks.

Dr. Coates said Education 499-G, Evaluation of Educational Programs, starts May 31 for the benefit of public school teachers and administrators.

Persons unable to register Monday may do so at the first class meeting, Dr. Coates added.

MSU's regular eight-week summer term begins June 14.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- History professor Stuart S. Sprague of Morehead State University likes to read other people's mail.

He likes it so well, in fact, that he has located three uncollected letters of George Washington in the past six months. And all have Kentucky ties.

Sprague, a 33-year-old assistant professor at MSU, has been engaged in research for his doctoral dissertation on the life of John Brown, Kentucky's first U.S. senator.

His search took him to Fort Harrod State Park last fall where he noticed two Washington letters at the park museum.

Although both were publicly displayed, neither had been reported to the University of Virginia where a new compilation of Washington correspondence is underway.

Two months later, Sprague was rummaging through old newspaper files at the Library of Congress and found the text of another Washington letter in an 1806 edition of the now defunct Frankfort Western World. This find also was new to the Washington archives.

With the collected Washington letters already past the 25,000 mark, Sprague is not excited by his discoveries. But the Washington historians say his contributions are "notable."

"It was just a simple courtesy to another historian," the professor said.

The 12th national festival of the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers is booked June 26-30 on the MSU campus.

About 80 separate handbell choirs representing churches, schools and colleges from across the country will perform during the five-day convention.

Eight free, public concerts are scheduled at MSU's Laughlin Fieldhouse, including a festival-ending program with all of the choirs in a joint performance.

Most of the handbell enthusiasts are students who have spent a year raising the funds to attend the festival.

Handbell ringing is old musical art but its popularity is relatively new in the present musical world, according to Richard W. Litterst, of Rockford, Ill., the festival director.

The tuned handbell is English in origin and has its clapper rigidly mounted and hinged so that striking is possible in only two directions, a downstroke or upstroke. Sets of handbells range from two octaves, 25 bells, to five octaves of 61 bells. Individual bells range in weight from seven ounces to 10 pounds.

The American Guild of English Handbell Ringers was organized in 1954 and is the only organization in the world specifically promoting the art of handbell ringing.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Almost 400 high school coeds will be arriving at Morehead State University Sunday for the 25th annual Kentucky Girls State.

The six-day exercise in democracy is sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Kentucky. The session ends Saturday, June 19.

Each delegate is a high school senior and will become a citizen of a mythical 51st state. The make-believe area includes 12 cities and four counties. Elections will be held to select officials on all levels of government and will culminate in the election of a Kentucky Girls State governor on Wednesday.

The delegates will be representatives or senators in the Kentucky Girls State Assembly and will travel to Frankfort on Friday, June 18, to operate their government in the state capitol.

Gov. Louie B. Nunn will address the group in Frankfort and Attorney General John B. Breckinridge is scheduled to speak on campus Tuesday. Also participating will be Mary Louise Foust, Democratic nominee for state auditor.

Mrs. J. Emerson Lewis of Lexington is chairman of the 1971 Kentucky Girls State.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University has received new federal grants for psychological research and a special training project for social workers.

The U. S. Office of Education awarded $9,458 to the MSU Department of Home Economics for the sponsorship of a series of home and family management workshops involving 41 service workers of the Kentucky Department of Economic Security.

Four workshops will provide information on nutrition, child care and development, family planning, home nursing and consumer education. Funded for a 13-month period, the project is directed by Mrs. Floy Patton and Mrs. Sandra Donovan of the MSU home economics faculty.

A grant of $8,965 to the Department of Psychology will finance a study by Dr. Henry Stukuls of learning and memory differences between handicapped and non-handicapped grade school children.

The project's findings are expected to outline specific procedures for elimination of memory deficits of handicapped children enrolled in special education classes. The study has been financed for 14 months.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "The Miracle Worker," William Gibson's account of the education of Helen Keller, is the first production of the 1971 Summer Theater at Morehead State University.

Performances are scheduled June 29 and 30 and July 1-3 at 8:15 p.m. in the MSU Little Theater.

A long-running Broadway play and an Academy Award-winning motion picture, "The Miracle Worker" recounts the training of Miss Keller, a blind deaf mute, by Annie Sullivan. Her eventual success follows some of the most turbulent and emotionally packed scenes ever presented on the stage.

Cast in the role of Helen Keller is Leslie Engelhardt, a student at University Breckinridge School. Mary Morris, a transient student from the University of Colorado, portrays Annie Sullivan.

Dr. William J. Layne is directing the three-act play and C. Lance Brockman is technical director. Admission is $1.50.

Other Summer Theater productions include "Charley's Aunt," July 13-17; and "Barefoot in the Park," July 27-31.

A special rate of $3.50 covers tickets for one person to all three plays. Tickets may be ordered from PO Box 1257, Morehead State University, Morehead, Ky. 40351.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- More than 900 student musicians from 30 states will participate in the Daniel Boone Forest Music Camp opening July 5 at Morehead State University.

The annual camp includes one week of marching band workshops and two weeks of concert band and instrumental sessions.

Dr. Robert Hawkins, MSU's director of bands and camp director, reports enrollments are running ahead of last year in both phases.

The training program opens with nine workshops conducted by A. R. Casavant of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Precision drill for drum majors, dance and pom pom routines and baton twirling are scheduled July 5-7. Precision drill for band members, basic drum majoring and pom pom and dance routines are on the calendar July 8-10.

Concert band and instrumental instruction starts July 11 and involves individual and group lessons in all instrumental areas, conducting, theory, twirling and marching techniques.

University credit, ranging from one to three semester hours, is offered in the college undergraduate and graduate divisions. The third group and the camp's largest is the junior-senior high school division.

Special to the Ironton Tribune

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A visit to Morehead State University this week is highlighting the third year of College Bound, a program designed to develop student interest in higher education at Rock Hill High School.

The week includes college classes, life in campus residence halls and other exposure to cultural and social aspects of college life. Seniors, juniors and sophomores from RHHS are attending classes in fine arts, mathematics, science, technology and personal development.

Steadily increased enrollment of Rock Hill graduates in college and other institutions of higher learning has resulted from College Bound, started in 1969 by Gary Kingery, the school's federal programs coordinator.
