38 to 100 Drowned in Kentucky
As Flood Sweeps Away Houses;
Aid Rushed to Stricken Area

Italian Export Subsidy Reports
Are Investigated by U. S.

Findings Submitted to Treasury;
Countervailing Duties Possible

Britain Refuses
To Elaborate Upon
When Poles Get Aid

Obligated Only in Event
Independence Clearly
Periled, Says Butler

Former Assemblyman
Gets Bribery Sentence

Summary of

July 05, 1939, Page 1

Flood
(Continued From First Page.)
so swift boats had not been able to reach her.

There was no indication of the whereabouts of Mrs. Boyd’s husband and son, he said.

Mr. Crutcher said three-fourths of Morehead was under water and that from 4 to 8 feet of water stood in Railroad street, the town’s principal thoroughfare.

Red Cross Sending Aid To Flooded Areas
By the Associated Press.

American Red Cross headquarters said today field representatives were being sent to Morehead, Ky., and Licking County, Ohio, where “flash” floods of small creeks inundated several communities last night.

No detailed reports of the floods had been received here. Mrs. Sheridan Connally of Lexington, Ky., was dispatched to Morehead.

Officials were trying to reach Joseph Leverenz, field representative in the Ohio area, to send him to Licking County.

Representative Bates, Democrat of Kentucky, part of whose congressional district was inundated by the flood, said he would seek Federal aid for the flood sufferers as soon as he received detailed reports from the area.

“As soon as we can determine the extent of the needs,” he said, “I will seek assistance from the Red Cross and the Works Progress Administration if necessary.”

Mrs. N. L. Wells, secretary of the Rowan County Red Cross, wired national headquarters:

Red Cross officials, who already had dispatched a field representative to Morehead, said Helen Moses, disaster relief worker from headquarters, would leave today for Kentucky. Officials have notified a nearby C. C. C. camp in the Morehead area and asked that rescue workers be sent at once.