SATURDAY'S ELECTION WAS QUIET

It is gratifying to note that Rowan county had a very quiet and orderly election Saturday. In no place was there any marked disturbance. One of the principal reasons why Rowan's balloting went off without undue turmoil was the fact that there was little money and consequently little liquor and vote-buying.

LOUISVILLE'S LAW ON DRUNKEN DRIVERS

In Louisville the fine for driving while drunk or being intoxicated in a public place is $18 and 9 days in jail. The sentence is mandatory. The jail sentence which has been tacked on has done much to keep drunken drivers off Louisville streets.

Louisville's law is a good one. It will work equally as well in every county and city. It would work here if placed in effect.

There is perhaps no person who endangers life as much as the drunken driver. Every drunken driver is a potential murderer, for no one knows when the liquor which has crazed his brain will cause him to wreck. Insurance companies will not issue policies on drivers who are continually getting drunk. Our drivers license law is so fixed that it does not relieve the situation, but is rather only a means of securing revenue.

JOBS AND FACTS ABOUT JOBS!

Are there more jobs now than a year ago? What is the cause of unemployment? Do jobs keep in pace with industry? These are questions that every man wants to know the answers. There are many versions, but one of the best is contained in a pamphlet issued by the Lee Clay Products Company of Clearfield to its employees, which reads, in its entirety: "Jobs! Jobs! Jobs!"

Everybody has his own explanation of why there haven't been enough to go around recently. And everybody has his own cure. Maybe you have yours. "But the truth is that many of the facts about unemployment are absent—that is facts that we know are correct. Until the government has taken an official, scientific census it is very difficult to say that any facts are exact."

"Nevertheless, in the absence of such a census, we must try to get at the facts as we have them. "The National Industrial Conference Board has made a study of this subject recently which reaches two conclusions:

"1. The improvement and increased use of machinery is not responsible for unemployment; "2. The increase of women in trade and industry is not responsible for unemployment."

"Their figures show that in 1930, there were approximately 495,000 gainfully occupied individuals for each million of population ten years of age and over."

"In 1880, there were only 473,000 in every million. "In a word, the opportunity for employment was better in 1930 than in 1880 by 22,000 per million of population or 4.6 per cent."

"Why do they use the year 1930 instead of last year or the year before? Because a census was taken in 1930 so that we have facts. Since 1930, we have only guesses. We think we know how many are out of work, but we do not really know. We guess. The government guesses. Private organizations guess. NOBODY KNOWS: Nobody can know unless a census is taken."

"Here are some very interesting facts concerning jobs: "Jobs divide themselves into general classes: production jobs and distribution and service jobs.

"Production jobs include agriculture, lumbering, fishing, manufacturing and mechanical industries and mining. This, of course, includes construction jobs. "Distribution and service jobs include trade, transportation, clerical, domestic, personal and professional service jobs."

"Now see how these jobs have shifted about between 1880 and 1930.

"Production Jobs: Agriculture, lumbering and fishing jobs decreased 53.5 per cent.

"Manufacturing and mechanical jobs increased 25.6 per cent.

"Mining jobs increased 38.9 per cent.

"But the total for production jobs shows a decrease of 26.3 per cent.

"Distribution and Service Jobs: Trade and transportation show an increase of 144.8 per cent.

"Domestic and personal service shows an increase of 48.5 per cent.

"Professional services show an increase of 81.9 per cent.

"The total for distribution and service jobs shows an increase of 97.2 per cent."

"In a word, during the fifty-year period when the machine was developing, most efficiently, manufacturing and mechanical jobs not only kept in step with it but increased 25.6 per cent, and at the present time only a small portion of the unemployed can be traced to the manufacturing industries."

HOLC REFINANCING MEANS LONG TERM LOANS

For nearly three-quarters of its million homeowner borrowers, HOLC loans represent substitution of long-term credit for burdensome short-term mortgages maturing in full.

Of the classes of financial institutions which had held the mortgages that were transferred to HOLC, as a rule only the savings, building and loan associations had employed the long-term monthly repayment type of home loan during the nineteenth twenties when most of the loans were made.

The other loans taken over by the Corporation—from banks, insurance and mortgage companies, and individuals—were mainly from six months to five years in length and, for the borrower, subject to the risk and expense of frequent renewal.

HOLC loans were written for a period of up to 15 years, and are payable through monthly installments of principal and interest by which the unpaid balance is constantly reduced. The interest rate is 5 per cent.

Besides its direct effect in giving borrowers the safest and most economical type of loan ever available to home owners in America, HOLC, by example on a grand scale, has spurred the adoption of long-term, mostly repayment loans by private home financing institutions of all types throughout the country. It has encouraged the prevalent downward tendency in home mortgage interest rates.

One Year Ago This Week

Thos. S. Rhea was leading by 14,951 in Kentucky as the vote in the Governor's race neared completion. A run-off primary was assured because the minor candidates polled more votes than Rhea's majority over Chandler. Rowan county went 513 for Chandler.

King Swope was assured of the Republican nomination for Governor on the face of almost complete returns.

Walter Allen Crockett and Mrs. A. F. Ellington were nominated on the Democratic and Republican tickets, respectively, for Senate from the Thirty-first district.

More than $5,000 in sales tax money was received by Dave C. Caudill, Rowan county treasurer.

Burrows, Crisp and Armstrong were nominated for magistrate.

Officers picked by the Masonic Lodge include: M. C. Crosley, scribe; Hartley Battson, C. O. H.; C. P. Duley, P. S.; E. E. Maggard, R. A. C.; H. L. Wilson, treasurer; C. E. Dillon, secretary; J. M. Butcher, M 3 V; W. C. Swift, M 2 V; Leo Oppenheimer, M 1 V; James Riggsby, Sentinel.—O—O

WHAT OTHER KENTUCKY EDITORS ARE SAYING

Income of the United States Secretary of Commerce Daniel E. Roper has estimated that the national income of the people of the United States will rise to $58,000,000,000 for the calendar year of 1936. The income for 1935 was $53,000,000,000. The national income is probably the most comprehensive gauge of the nation's economic activity.

A tabulation recently made shows the estimated national income for years included in the past ten years, in billions of dollars, as follows: 1926, $78; 1929, $81; 1932, $40; 1933, $42; 1934, $49; 1935, $53; 1936, $58.

President Roosevelt, not long ago, estimated the national income for 1935 at $65,000,000,000. By the end of the year the national income probably will have reached this rate, although the income for the calendar year will not reach this figure.

In comparing the changes two things must be borne in mind. First is the natural increase in population, which has been about 10 per cent in ten years. The other is the change in the value of the dollar. As measured in 1926 dollars, the national income for 1936 would be about $72,500,000,000. With this in mind it will be seen that President Roosevelt thinks that by the end of this year all the ground lost during the Depression will have been regained, insofar as the national income is concerned.

Optimism Rules Eagles Sports Picture As 1936 Football Season Draws Close

New Coach Expected To Draw Many Star Athletes From Ashland and Big Sandy Region; Selection Was Happy Choice On Morehead Campus

Optimism rules in the hearts and minds of Eagle sports followers.

Down-trodden, vanquished and humiliated for five years on the gridiron, the Morehead institution is launching a "new deal" in sports. The worm is turning at Morehead and Eagle fans are confident that this eastern Kentucky institution will within two, three or four years, rightfully assume its place in Kentucky's sports realm.

The pot that brewed dissatisfaction blew the lid off last fall, as delegations of student alumni and fans asked Harvey A. Babb, a president who was only then getting his bearings in new surroundings, to make a change. President Babb promised the "new deal" and fulfilled his promise. "It wasn't that anyone had any ill-feeling towards Coach G. D. Downing, for he is perhaps the best liked man on the Morehead campus. His handicap was many of the principal ones being lack of faculty and administration assistance and a growing feeling of a lack of confidence."

The employment of Coach Downing as head of the department of physical education for men was a highly satisfactory one on the campus and among the alumni, who had known Downing for years. As soon as it became known that a change was in the offering the athletic committee felt that he could bring eastern Kentucky high school luminaries, principally from Ashland and the Big Sandy region, who had been going to other schools.

Johnston has brought peace to Morehead's athletic controversy and muddle; he has instilled, before he sets foot on the Blue and Gold gridiron, a feeling of confidence, his has been a "happy" selection, and he can be assured of every atom of support possible from the institution, when he starts drilling his first college team on September 1.

Your Family Coat-of-Arms

Gibbs

Sir Henry Gibbs of Honington County, England and his descendants claimed the coat of arms that appears here. Warwick, son of Sir Ralph Gibbs, was the father of Robert Gibbs, a prominent Boston merchant who came to America about 1650.

A grandson of Robert Gibbs was buried in 1789 in the Old North Burial Ground at Providence, Rhode Island where the coat of arms presented here can be found on his tombstone and that of his wife, a daughter of Col. Joseph Whipple.

It is believed that a great many of the Gibbs families in America can trace their ancestry to the above Robert Gibbs.

Description of Arms: On a black shield three silver bottle axes. Crest: Three broken tilling spears bound with a wreath. Motto: Firm of purpose. C. F. I.

Synopsis — Blackie Norton, proprietor of the Paradise Music Hall in San Francisco's Golden Coast, and Jack Burley, millionaire of Nob Hill, are rivals for the love of Mary Blake, singer, to whom Blackie gave a job when she needed it, and whom Burley has gotten a prima donna role at the Tivoli Opera House. Just after her opera debut, Mary sees Blackie and agrees to marry him. But Blackie's boyhood chum, now Father Mullin, refuses to allow Blackie to exploit her as a performer in his gambling joint. She goes back to the Burleys and Jack's mother intercedes for her son.

those reasons. Not one of them would stay in the fight any longer. As he left the Paradise, sick at heart, Blackie bought a newspaper and was confronted with a large portrait of Mary Blake and an announcement of her engagement to Jack Burley.

The night of the Chickens' Ball, Mary Blake had her second big triumph at the Tivoli in the role of Manon. Burley gave a banquet for her after the performance on the stage, and Father Mullin looked for a moment to congratulate her on her success, and on her engagement to Burley. He promised to attend her wedding.

"Are you happy, Mary?" he asked. "Yes" was a trifle over-enthusiastic, but she met his searching look squarely.

"Then everything's all right?" He pressed her hand, smiled doubtfully at her, and bade her good night as Burley entered her room.

"They're calling for you, Mary. Don't bother to change now. You can do that after the party—before we go to the ball."

"The ball?" "Sure. We're going to wind up at the Chickens' Ball!"

"Oh, no, Jack!" There was pain in her surprised exclamation. "Oh, that's all right, dear. I happen to know that Blackie Norton won't be there."

But Blackie did put in a brief appearance at the ball; he went to tell Della that no ball would be given to his performers and he was out of the contest. A number had just come to an end amid loud applause. Blackie got up.

"I'll go and help you." He pushed her back into her chair. "No, you won't! See the show and come over later. You can tell me who won."

"They say you'll go up for a year, Blackie. And five thousand dollars fine."

"I'm glad to see you, Della," said Mary constrainedly. "You won't be for long. I just got dropped over to tell you what I think of you!" She turned so that she faced Burley's astonished guests.

"I haven't seen the woman since she walked out on the best man in San Francisco to marry to town's number one rodent."

Burley frowned. "Think you'd better see Della."

"Oh, no! I've got a few things to say to you. In case you folks don't follow me, I'll tell you that this mouse, Burley, has just had a padlock put on the Paradise and thrown all Blackie Norton's performers in jail. That's what Blackie got for picking this phony out of the gutter and giving her a chance. She walked out on him and had Burley slip him the worst Blackie's broke. He hasn't got a dime and he'll be sent to the pen for probably a year! Delightful people!" She nodded towards Burley and Mary.

"Come on, folks!" said Burley rising, not even attempting to conceal his fury. Della pushed him back into his chair.

"Hold still! Don't think I'm going to breathe the air near you any longer than I have to. You ought to make that mouse, Burley, happy. Mary Blake!" Della drew a five dollar bill from her purse and plunked it down on the table in front of Burley. "Here's a five spot, brother. I'm buying back my introduction to you!" She sailed away, leaving them staring after her. Mary was stunned and dazed, and did not come out of it until she heard Freddy Duane's voice from the stage announcing: "The last entry of the evening was to have been from Blackie Norton's Paradise, but as it is now four-thirty and Mr. Norton's performers have failed to arrive, we stopped to see—We'll close the contest without them."

"Mr. Duane!" Mary Blake had risen to her feet. "I'm representing the Paradise for Mr. Norton!" "Mary, I forbid you to go up there!" exclaimed Burley, his face white with anger. Mary did not even reply; chin up and shoulders squared she marched through the crowd to the stage, amid scattered applause that kept increasing as she approached. Passing Della's table the latter cried: "There's a woman for you!"

Freddy Duane, hiding his astonishment as best he could, went forward to the steps to help her upon the stage. "Ladies and gentlemen," representing the Paradise, Miss Mary Blake. "Then a vast audience burst into a round of fervent applause, many voices crying out for her to sing 'San Francisco.'" She nodded her agreement to the orchestra leader and the strains of that popular song soon filled the auditorium.

Duane lined the leading contestants up on the stage, pointing to each in turn and waiting to judge the volume of applause. Mary was last in the line, and when Duane pointed to her, the audience gave her an ovation. Duane held up his hand for silence.

"Ladies and gentlemen—the appearance of Miss Blake for the Paradise was as great a surprise to me as it was to you. I congratulate you on your choice and present the award to Miss Blake for Mr. Blake's—"

Above the ensuing applause arose the voice of Blackie himself. "Just at a moment there!" He had returned to the Lyric just as the spectators had started the ovation for Mary and gone to Della's table. Della now tried to hold him back, imploring him to keep quiet, but he broke away from her and started for the stage.

"There's been a mistake here, Mr. Duane." He swung up on the stage. "I never said that woman she could appear for me!" His voice and look were so contemptuous that Mary could not restrain a gasp—a gasp that was echoed by the audience. Blackie took the cup by its base and faced Mary. "You've got me all wrong, sister. I don't need this kind of dough." He threw the cup at her feet, the gold coins spilling out on the stage, and climbed down upon the floor.

"I guess that prize belongs to certain boys who had stood second in volume of applause."

"You're pretty cheap, Blackie!" "You're rotten!" called various individuals as he passed them towards the exit.

"Everybody dance!" cried the master of ceremonies. As the orchestra began to play, Duane took Mary's hand. "Come on, Mary." She could not have moved from the spot without his urging. She looked up then and saw Jack Burley standing at the steps waiting for her.

"Do you want me to take—you home, dear?" he asked, all his anger gone. "Yes, Jack." He put his arm about her and started towards the ball room when a low, strange and protracted rumble was heard. It seemed to come from nowhere and from everywhere. It increased more ten-rounder but stretched out and on and on. The opponents made a quite different picture than our fighters, too, being stripped to the waist, and clad in breeches, stockings and pumps.

Dancers on the floor began to jam as some stopped to listen. "It's an explosion," said Burley. "A boiler must have burst." He opened the door to escort Mary through when, right before their eyes, the door went, with a loud creaking of wood, shifted out of plumb, so that he could not close it. The floor shook, toppling tables, chairs and people. A large chandelier dropped several feet and remained swinging hanging only by an electric wire.

"It's an earthquake!" said Burley. Mary looked at him, and cried in a strange voice: "Blackie! Blackie!"

Doug. Jr. Fights Bare-Knuckle Bout

Realism With Capital 'R' Marks Ring Battle In 'Amateur Gentleman'

An old style bare-knuckle boxing bout, so realistic that it sent Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. to the infirmary for treatment, is a thrilling feature of "The Amateur Gentleman," the adaptation of Jeffrey Farns's famous romance of Regency England, which comes to the College Theatre Friday with Elissa Landi co-starred.

These old-time ring battles were quite unlike our modern fights in many respects. First and foremost, of course, was the fact that the protagonists wore no gloves to soften their blows, which made the sport much more brutal, and to add to this, the bouts were no

Vinson's Majority In Elliott Is 717

Beckham Carries County By 625 Plurality; Republican Vote Light

Pre-election reports that Fred M. Vinson would have a hard fight in Elliott county proved unfounded as the facts of complete official returns. The vote shows that the incumbent congressman carried every precinct but one and polled 1,274 votes to Sausberry's 571, a majority of 717.

J. C. W. Beckham rolled up a plurality of 625 votes over Logan in Elliott. The total vote for the three leading candidates was: Beckham 1,103; Logan 474; Brown 322.

The handful of Republicans that voted in Elliott county favored Lucas for Senator; McClave for Congressman and Stewart for Clerk. The vote for the leading candidates was—Senator: Lucas 84, Douglas 72; Congress: McClave 129, Wood 65; Clerk: Stewart 197, Hughes 43.

In the Senator's race on the Democratic ticket, Beckham carried 10 precincts and Brown and Logan one each.

Cannibals Scarce

Solomon Islands Chief Says Very Few Remain In Jungles These Days

If your conception of a cannibal is a fuzzy-haired black man with rings in his nose and bells on his feet, dancing around a boiling kettle, here's your chance to get it straight.

This comic-strip version of the head hunters was exploded by bare-footed Kata Ragosa, a black chief from the Solomon Islands, who told the audience of cannibals.

"There were no cauldrons for the cannibal victims," he said, "and there are so few cannibals these days you couldn't brush a dozen out of a thousand miles of jungle."

In his effort to assist in a Seventh Day Adventist, evangelical meeting, the former devil worshipper took time out to shatter a few myths about the cannibal.

"Only the warriors who joined in battle partook of human blood," Ragosa explained. "Women, children and the stay-at-home didn't get a bite. The stones, not in kettles as the American cartoonist believes, and in most instances children under 12 were sacrificed."

DR. ELLINGTON TO BE ON VACATION AUGUST 17

The dental office of Dr. A. F. Ellington will be closed from August 17 to August 31, inclusive. Dr. Ellington and Mrs. Ellington will be vacationing at Lake-of-the-Woods, Ontario, Canada, at that time.

Before definitely accepting it, I shall have to ask the President and the Board of Regents for a leave of absence inasmuch as your summer school is in session and I have been re-elected for next year.

In my political science classes I have always tried to impress my students with the fact that, as good citizens, they should co-operate with the state officials and work for the betterment of the Commonwealth in every way possible. I feel that in accepting this practical job in political science, I am merely putting into practice the ideals which I have tried to inculcate in my students.

The organization of this new division of Public Assistance will be a real job but I am glad to cooperate with Governor Chandler and Commissioner Wallis and exert my entire energy to being of greater service to the state.

Young Democrats Meet August 8th

(Continued on Page Four) has not yet been received. Among the state officials expected to attend the meeting are: Charles Arnett, secretary of state; Charles O'Connell, clerk of court of appeals; John Buckingham, state treasurer, and numerous others.

Other persons high in state politics expected are Robert Hummer, Senator Louis Arnett, and several other senators and representatives. Congressman Fred M. Vinson has been asked to address the meeting, but his acceptance has not been received.

The meeting signals the opening of the campaign in the Eighth district for the re-election of President Roosevelt, Chairman Mickis announced.

Logan Winner Of Senate Nomination

(Continued on Page One) error Beckham cut it to 2,550 by carrying Loganville where he was backed by the Miller-Burnett organization. Logan had the support in Jefferson county of the Leonard Taylor faction.

From his home in Bowling Green, Mr. Logan predicted the entire Democratic ticket will win in Kentucky in November.

Incumbents Nominated The size of the vote cast was surprising to many. Registration is believed to have helped bring out the Democratic vote.

The Democratic Congressional nominees who will be on the ticket with Mr. Logan include Voris Gregory, Mayfield; Glover Cary, Owensboro; Emmet O'Connell, Louisville; E. W. Creal, Hodgenville; Brent Spence, Fort Thomas; Virgil Chapman, Paris; A. J. May, Prestonsburg and Fred M. Vinson, Ashland, all incumbent members, and George L. Tye, Barbourville.

Robert H. Lucas easily won the Republican nomination for Senator and will oppose Senator Logan in the final election.

Mr. Lucas' running mates will be Robert H. Brumfield, Hopkinsville; Claude E. Smith, Owensboro; W. A. Armstrong, Louisville; Stanley Jagers, Hodgenville; Edwin L. Bramlage, Erlanger; A. R. Anderson, Danville; John B. Mollette, Van Lear; W. H. Woods, Mt. Sterling, and the sole Republican member of Congress from the state, John M. Robison, Barbourville.

Charles K. O'Connell will be on the Democratic ticket for Clerk of the Court of Appeals. The one state race still in some doubt was the Republican contest for the same office. R. Lee Stearns held a lead of 600 votes over E. E. Hughes with 3,941 precincts counted and 255 scattered precincts to report.

Lloyd Appointed To Head Pension Board

The group, headed by Mrs. Anna H. Settle, of Louisville, president of the Consumers' League, called on the Governor to urge appointment of trained welfare workers and charity supervisors to administer the state's old age pension act.

Dr. Lloyd issued the following statement this morning regarding his appointment: "My appointment as Director of Public Assistance came as a surprise. Before definitely accepting it, I shall have to ask the President and the Board of Regents for a leave of absence inasmuch as your summer school is in session and I have been re-elected for next year.

GRIN

No man is worth a woman's tear, so dry
Your eyes of sorrow—life is fair today
With bright Spring flowers gayly on display,
And birds are nesting, No, we may not sigh
Because of things that hurt. If we but try
We can bring beauty back—we even may Make of these heartaches something that shall pay
If we can only smile and cease to cry.

Come, take it on the chin, and hold your own.
The world wants not a person who is down;
And only so can man expect to win.
Hold up your head, assume a hopeful tone
If even for a while you play the clown.
Time heals the heart of pain if we can—

Many Drivers Do Not Have Licenses

The fact that many people are operating an automobile in this county without the new drivers license became known this week as a check-up at the office of Circuit Clerk Joe McKinney showed that only 530 had been issued. This is almost a thousand less than there are drivers in the county.

A stiff penalty is provided for anyone caught operating a motor vehicle without license. The cost of the license is $1. of which 85 cents goes to the state and 15 cents to the clerk.

Friday and Saturday were busy days at McKinney's office, a long line forming to get their drivers licenses. On these two days more than 325 permits were issued.

WOMEN LIVE LONGER THAN MEN; LIFE SPAN INCREASED

That people live longer than ever before and that women live longer than men are facts clearly established by the set of life tables just issued today by the Department of Commerce, and just received by its Louisville District Office. At the beginning of the present century the average length of life in the United States was 47 years for white males and 51 years for white females. The tables just published relating to the year 1930 give an average of 58 years for males and nearly 63 years for females. This change reflects the great progress that has been made in lowering the death rate and thus adding to the years of life through improved sanitation, higher standard of living, labor-saving inventions in the home and the advances made in education and in the science and practice of medicine and surgery.
