MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The temporary ghost town comes to life this weekend at Morehead State University as upwards of 6,000 students return to start the spring term.

The fall semester ended Dec. 18 and, except for a few maintenance, security and administrative staff members, the campus has been deserted.

Registration for the spring semester begins Monday, Jan. 10, with graduate students and seniors reporting to the Laughlin Health Building starting at 7:30 a.m.

Juniors and sophomores enroll that afternoon and until noon on Tuesday, Jan. 11. Freshmen register Tuesday afternoon and all day Wednesday. Classes open Thursday morning.

The spring break is scheduled March 11-20 and the semester ends Saturday, May 13. Commencement is Sunday, May 14.

Part-time students taking only night and arranged classes register Saturday, Jan. 15, from 8 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. at the Health Building. Night classes begin Monday, Jan. 17.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kennon Breeding, Box 177, Elkhorn City.

The half-year scholarship, awarded through recent approval by Congress for an increase in the number of ROTC scholarships, will pay for Cadet Breeding's tuition, textbooks, and laboratory fees. The scholarship also provides an allowance of $100 a month.

Breeding, who was a member of the Elkhorn City High School Student Council, is majoring in business administration management. He is active in the National Society of Scabbard and Blade, the Association of the United States Army and the Pershing Rifles. A Distinguished Military Student, Breeding received the Recono Badge at Advanced ROTC Summer Camp.

By accepting the scholarship, Breeding committed himself to four years active duty. He has applied for a commission in the Regular Army and hopes to be assigned to the artillery branch.

He is married to the former Sharon Wright.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---More money and additional scholarships are now available to students who get their college education through the Army ROTC program.

Opportunities for more students to win Army ROTC scholarships opened when President Nixon signed into law two bills--one to increase scholarships and another to double the monthly subsistence allowance.

The scholarship law increases the ceiling on Army ROTC scholarships from 5,500 to 6,500.

The subsistence law doubles ROTC subsistence allowance from $50 to $100 per month for 10 months of each academic year.

All ROTC advanced course and scholarship students currently receiving a subsistence allowance will have their allowance increased to $100 retroactive to Nov. 14, the day the government lifted its temporary freeze on wages and prices.

The new law also permits for the first time up to 20 percent of the scholarships to be granted to students in the two-year ROTC program. These are junior college graduates and students of four-year colleges who have not taken Army ROTC during their first two years.

Each scholarship pays for tuition, textbooks and lab fees for each academic year during the length of the scholarship.

This fall 1,067 high school graduates began their college studies on four-year Army ROTC scholarships. More than 2,000 ROTC scholarships will be offered in 1972-73.

Further information about the scholarships can be obtained from Col. Arthur L. Kelly, professor of military science at Morehead State University.

Gideon arrived in the United States in January and registered for MSU's spring semester. He plans to major in business.

Asked about the language barrier faced by most foreign students, the campus newcomer said:

"Speaking English is easier for me than speaking Amharic, the official language of Ethiopia. I learned English in elementary school."

He was active in high school activities, serving on his high school's student council. After graduation from high school as the youngest member of the class, Gideon worked in a bank for two years to earn the money to come to school in America.

At MSU he is working in the University Store part-time and hopes to work during vacations to earn more money for his tuition.

Gideon plans to return to Ethiopia after receiving his degree from MSU. "I could probably be more successful here, but my country needs well educated people in all fields," he said.

The Wall Street series is designed to provide an understanding of the stock market and its relationships to the economy; to explore investing, particularly for individual investors; to analyze economic developments and trends, and to spotlight interesting and significant personalities in the areas of business, government, and the economy.

The program will be hosted by Louis Rukeyser, correspondent and economic editor for ABC News.

No extra expense is involved in the project either for KET or the university.

Morehead State has the only interconnection with a city television cable system among the five production centers located at Kentucky universities and one of the very few in the United States.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University has unveiled plans for a Golden Anniversary Celebration this year.

MSU President Adron Doran announced that Dr. Ray Hornback, vice president for university affairs, has been named chairman of a 14-member executive committee which will arrange "an appropriate observance."

Created by the Kentucky General Assembly in 1922 as Morehead State Normal School, the university underwent four subsequent name changes before achieving university status in 1966.

"Morehead State University has a rich heritage of service to the people of Kentucky and we feel our 50-year anniversary is a fitting and proper time to commemorate these contributions," said Dr. Doran.

Dr. Doran said detailed arrangements would be announced shortly.

"The celebration will take many forms during the coming months and we hope to involve all elements of the university community, local citizens and other persons of state and national prominence," he added.

Student members of the executive committee are Morehead junior Mike Mayhew, president of the MSU Student Government Association, and Greenup senior Ann Leslie, president of the MSU Panhellenic Council.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's spring semester enrollment is 8,044 - an eight per cent increase over the spring of 1971.

The total includes 5,841 students registered on campus, 950 enrolled in extension classes at 20 off-campus locations, 736 in correspondence courses and 517 at University Breckinridge School.

Last spring's figures were 5,655 on campus, 803 in extension, 516 in correspondence and 471 at Breckinridge for a grand total of 7,445.

This spring's totals in extension and correspondence are subject to further increases as additional off-campus classes are formed and as more persons enroll in home-study courses.

Morehead State also serves the region by broadcasting basic adult-education courses over WMKY, the university's 50,000-watt FM radio station. The university currently offers three courses by television over stations in Louisville, Cincinnati and Huntington, W. Va.

"We are pleased with the continued growth of all areas of the university," MSU President Adron Doran said in releasing the figures. "Increased enrollments indicate the university is doing a better job of meeting the career needs of this region and the commonwealth."

TELEPHONE:
AC: 606/783-3325

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University is turning students into television performers in hopes of making them better teachers.

The program is called microteaching and it uses closed-circuit television for self-evaluation and self-improvement of future teachers.

In use at MSU since 1968, the system involves the videotaping of students as teachers in classroom situations. The sessions then are played back and analyzed by the student and his faculty supervisor.

"We have found that seeing and hearing himself in the act of teaching is very, very helpful to the prospective teacher," says Mrs. Elaine Kirk, director of microteaching in MSU's School of Education.

A typical microteaching class involves about 10 students in their last semester of undergraduate study. They meet weekly for an hour and take turns teaching, operating the television equipment and participating in critique sessions.

Dr. James H. Powell, dean of the School of Education, feels the program is making "a significant contribution" to teacher preparation because it combines four training elements--learning theory, methods, instructional media and laboratory experience.

Sessions are taped in the microteaching studios then played back in an adjoining projection room. Individual lessons range from three to 20 minutes and utilize the other class members as pupils in the imaginary classroom.

(MORE)

Mrs. Kirk, a 14-year veteran of instructional television on all levels of education, supervises the technical operation but students are strictly on their own when the camera lights up and the video tape rolls.

"This system has worked wonders for individual poise and self-confidence," she reports. "Our students also are preparing better lessons, more effectively using teaching techniques, utilizing additional classroom activities and improving their speech habits as a result of this practical experience."

Faculty members like the system because it allows them to make instant observations about deficiencies in a student's teaching skills.

Dr. Mary Northcutt, chairman of MSU's Department of Elementary Education, describes microteaching as "an invaluable experience. Dr. Robert Needham, chairman of secondary education, says microteaching has been "a major factor in the self-improvement approach used in secondary education."

Side benefits of the system include the personal improvisation of teaching materials and familiarization with television equipment.

"Facing a class for the first time isn't nearly as scary after you've watched yourself on television," Mrs. Kirk remarked. "We get their feet wet here."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Three high school visits daily, two extension classes per week, periodic "career days," and occasional "college nights."

This and more is included in the regular schedule of Harry Gilbert of Falmouth, student teaching area coordinator for Morehead State University.

One of three such persons at MSU, he works in Boone, Bourbon, Bracken, Grant, Harrison, Kenton, Mason, Nicholas, Pendleton and Robertson Counties. During the past five months, he has traveled 12,000 miles for the university.

His job involves supervising student teachers, visiting school superintendents and principals, recruiting students and teaching extension courses.

Gilbert is teaching on campus for the first half of the spring semester but will return to his various tasks for the final eight weeks.

"I'm staying in a residence hall through the week and going home on weekends," Gilbert said. "Although I miss my family, I am seeing first hand what instruction student teachers receive so I can better relate to them in the field."

Gilbert observes each of his student teachers a minimum of four times and makes himself available for counseling. He has supervised as many as 87 student teachers during one semester.

"I like to consider my house as a home away from home for the student teachers," he said. "Whenever a student has a problem, he can contact me instead of going back to campus. An area coordinator can serve a vital function by being a nearby go-between for student teachers and administrators.

Gilbert, who is in his third year as an area coordinator, said he is impressed with student teachers. "Most of them are very dedicated and have a sincere desire to become good teachers," he said.

"Modern teaching aids such as microteaching and audio-visual aids are most helpful," he said. "Today's student teachers receive a great deal of actual teaching experience and their units of instruction are of very high quality."

When working out of Falmouth, Gilbert starts a typical day with a visit to one of about 25 schools in his area. He usually visits for two or three hours with the principal while supervising teachers and student teachers.

After visiting at least two more schools, he returns home to write individual reports. He spends two or three nights each week teaching extension courses or attending special events such as "career day" programs.

Gilbert was an elementary and junior high principal in Harrison County before becoming an area coordinator.

"It's a lot more fun being an area coordinator than being a principal," he said. "I still have contact with students and enjoy the high school atmosphere without the responsibilities of a principalship."

"We are hoping to substantially increase our archives in the next few months," said Dr. Ray Hornback, vice president for university affairs and the committee chairman. "The material is needed for the publication of an official history and for a 50-year report being prepared in connection with our Golden Anniversary celebration."

Dr. Hornback said the university prefers donated material but also welcomes the loan of personal possessions by former students, faculty members and present or past residents of the Morehead area.

"All persons donating or loaning material will receive proper credit in publications and in the university archives exhibition at the campus library," he added.

The chairman said the committee also would like to receive the personal recollections of persons associated with MSU since its creation by the Kentucky General Assembly in 1922. Letters and tape recordings are being sought.

"Morehead State University has influenced the lives of thousands and thousands of persons in the past 50 years," Dr. Hornback said. "This celebration offers an opportunity for many, many of these people to make contributions to the documented history of a great institution."

Material should be sent to Dr. Jack Ellis, Director of Libraries, Morehead State University, Morehead, Ky. 40351. Each person is asked to indicate if the item is being donated or loaned.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Although the fifth annual Miss Morehead State University scholarship pageant is several weeks away, behind-the-scenes preparation is in full swing.

Seven committees composed of MSU fraternity and sorority members are planning for the April 5-6 competition which qualifies its winner for Miss Kentucky and possibly Miss America competition.

"We feel this year's pageant is going to be the best ever," said Tom Yenowine, Pleasure Ridge Park senior and the pageant's executive director. The annual event is sponsored by MSU's Interfraternity and Panhellenic councils.

Robbie Lynn Halcomb, the current Miss Kentucky, and Janet Hatfield Lowman, the 1968 Miss Kentucky and a former MSU student, are emcees for the preliminary judging Wednesday, April 5.

Laurie Lea Shaefer, the current Miss America, will crown the winner Thursday, April 6. Lisa Palas, the reigning Miss MSU, will sing both nights. Upshaw Briggs and Chuck Carthan of MSU's Intimate Cycle also will be featured on vocals.

"Our most important committee is probably the production committee," Yenowine said. "It's responsible for all scenery, props, lighting, sound, music, production numbers, order of appearance of the contestants, rehearsals and overall coordination."

"The committee is responsible for what the audience sees and the show's success or failure depends a great deal on this group," Yenowine said. He noted that last year's production committee won an award.

(More)

Other committees include publicity, hostess, awards, judges, program book and entries committees.

The publicity committee is preparing news releases, press kits and other means of informing the public of the event.

The job of the hostess committee includes helping the contestants prepare for their appearances and other backstage activities and serving as pageant hostesses.

An awards committee is soliciting scholarship donations and acquiring trophies and gifts to award the contestants. The judges committee is in the process of selecting a panel of judges, which must be approved by the state pageant committee.

The program book committee is selling advertisements, arranging for the 33 entrants to have pictures taken and preparing copy for the official pageant publication.

Assuring that candidates fill out all necessary forms and follow correct procedures is the work of the entries committee.

Each girl is also receiving instruction in sharpening social skills and improving other personal qualities from Mrs. Mignon Doran, director of MSU's Personal Development Institute.

"The committees have been working since early last semester," Yenowine said. "We have an executive committee meeting each week."

"Winners from our pageant have been rather successful," Yenowine pointed out. "Three of four years our girl finished in the top 10." Gayle Lyon Roche was the first runner-up in the 1970 state competition.

"Who knows? The next Miss Kentucky may come from our pageant," Yenowine said.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Designing special anniversary emblems for Morehead State University seems to run in the William M. Dodson family

"It's just a coincidence that my mother designed the 25th year celebration emblem," said Bill Dodson, Minford, Ohio sophomore at MSU, who recently devised MSU's official Golden Anniversary emblem.

Dodson's mother, Mrs. Jean Thompson Dodson, made the design used to commemorate the school's 25th anniversary while she was enrolled in 1947. It was printed in the yearbook.

"Mom had mentioned drawing the earlier symbol but I had forgotten about it until I told her that my design had been accepted for the new anniversary," Dodson said.

Dodson was one of several art and industrial design students on the Golden Anniversary Design Committee. Members pooled their ideas and met several times before selecting Dodson's sketch as the most appropriate.

"Since the official seal needed to be adaptable to several uses, I had to work within certain limitations," Dodson said.

Dodson's finished product, which he prefers to call a "logographic design," is circular. The background is gold with dark blue "MSU" lettering and lighter blue mountaintops taken from MSU's official letterhead. "Morehead State University Golden Anniversary" is in black around the outer edge. (MORE)

MSU EMBLEM 22222222

The emblem will appear in numerous university publications and several other places. It first appeared on MSU's Golden Anniversary birthday cake earlier this month.

The MSU design is not the first "logo" Dodson has created. He designed one for the Minford Telephone Co. and is working on others for banks.

Dodson, who is studying art, prefers drawing to other art media. He plans to become either an artist or art teacher upon graduation.

"Bill is a very receptive student who accepts suggestions and follows directions well," said Doug Adams, assistant professor of art. "He has a lot of potential as an artist."

"He has created an emblem which is a credit to both him and the university," Adams said.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Each of the world's three major civilizations has valuable qualities which can and should be contributed to future generations, Dr. Huston Smith, visiting professor of philosophy, said recently at Morehead State University.

Smith, a professor at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was the first Golden Anniversary visiting professor at MSU. He addressed a capacity audience in Button Auditorium on the topic, "The Coming World Civilization."

The nationally-prominent philosopher said the world's three enduring civilizations, the Western, the East Asian centered in China and the South Asian centered in India, each have specialized in one of man's three major problems--natural, social and psychological, Dr. Smith said.

But this specialization has led to the neglect of other problems which, he added, can only be overcome if the civilizations cooperate and contribute the best qualities of each system to the total world civilization.

The philosopher was guest of honor at a reception and appeared as a guest lecturer in several MSU philosophy classes.

Smith's visit was co-sponsored by MSU and the Council for Philosophical Studies.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A Golden Anniversary Ball featuring dance contests and music from the past 50 years will be staged Saturday, April 8, at Morehead State University.

Scheduled from 8 p.m. until midnight in the ballroom of the Adron Doran University Center, it is free and open to all students, faculty, staff, alumni and other friends of the university.

Music is being provided by the MSU Jazz Ensemble and its vocal group, The Intimate Circle, with speciality numbers by other groups.

The Ball is the first formal social event of MSU's Golden Anniversary Celebration which comemmorates the school's creation in 1922.

Persons attending are encouraged but not required to wear formal attire from any of the past five decades, said Dr. Ray Hornback, chairman of the Golden Anniversary Executive Committee.

Dance contests include "The Charleston" to the music of "The Charleston," the "jitterbug" to "Woodchopper's Ball," the "twist" to "Let's Do The Twist," and current popular dances to "Lucretia McEvil."

"We're planning a fun evening filled with good music, nostalgia and fellowship," said Dr. Hornback.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Arthur J. Goldberg, former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, has called on Americans to rededicate themselves to perfecting the UN.

The former Supreme Court justice addressed nearly 1,000 persons at Morehead State University as part of the school's Golden Anniversary Celebration. Earlier, he spoke to more than 200 high school students attending a leadership seminar on the MSU campus.

"Despite its weaknesses, the UN is still the best instrument for peace and law among nations in our unruly world," he said.

"There is no realistic alternative to it."

The United States, he said, cannot afford to slacken its support of this world organization it helped create. "We must not diminish our efforts to make it more effective," the former diplomat said.

Goldberg said the U.S. had not always acted in accord with the UN Charter, citing military involvements in Vietnam and the Dominican Republic which were undertaken without UN sanction.

The United Nations should involve all nations of the world, regardless of individual political systems, he added, calling himself an "internationalist."

Goldberg said he doubted the Vietnam war would have developed if the issue had been brought before the UN in its early stages.

The former ambassador said he supported U.S. recognition of Red China and Bangladesh.

"Recognition is not a badge of good conduct," he said. "It is merely the acknowledgement that a certain regime does indeed rule a particular country."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---There was good news and bad news when four Morehead State University professors addressed more than 200 high school students at a leadership seminar.

Later, the delegates from more than 40 Kentucky high schools heard a lecture by former U.S. Supreme Court Justice Arthur J. Goldberg.

The afternoon investigation of "Our World Tomorrow" featured two biologists foretelling doom unless environmental pollution and overpopulation are brought under control and two political scientists expressing optimism for U.S. relations with Russia and Red China and for the fate of America's cities.

Dr. M.E. Pryor, MSU's biology chairman, told the visitors during a session on world population that redistribution of the earth's billions and increased food production are not the answers to "people pollution."

"Some say the world already is overcrowded but it is evident to me that the only feasible means of controlling future growth is an educational effort aimed at persuading the world's women to practice-birth control," he said.

Dr. Pryor admitted the contraception plan faces constant attack from religious and other groups but contended there is no other way to prevent a doubling of the world population to seven billion within 35 years.

Biology instructor Langston D. Smith likened the earth to a spaceship whose life support systems of air, water and food are being depleted rapidly with no means of replenishment.

"Many persons tell men they aren't concerned with the condition of the earth 30 or 40 years from now," he said. "And I tell them they needn't be because, with the attitude, there won't be any people here to worry about."

During a session on "The U.S., U.S.S.R. and China: What Lies Ahead?," Gary Cox, assistant professor of political science, reviewed changes in the U.S. attitude toward communism during the past 20 years.

He called President Nixon's trip to Red China "an opening of dialogue" and stressed the importance of Nixon's upcoming visit to the Soviet Union.

"Our primary goal must be a single society, in which every citizen will be free to live and work according to his capabilities and desires, not his color, his wealth or his position," said Dr. Jack Bizzel, professor and chairman of political science.

In his session on "Tomorrow's Cities," Dr. Bizzel questioned the claim that U.S. cities are dying and presented arguments pro and con.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University President Adron Doran had a "class reunion" with three former students during the recently-adjourned 1972 Kentucky General Assembly.

A former Democratic state representative and Speaker of the House, Dr. Doran met with two graduates of Wingo High School and an MSU graduate who are now state representatives.

Reps. Lloyd Clapp, Wingo Democrat, and Larry Hopkins, Lexington Republican, were students at Wingo High when Dr. Doran was its principal. Rep. Darvin Allen, Royalton Democrat, has received two degrees from MSU during Dr. Doran's tenure as president.

Clapp, who represents the same district that Dr. Doran served for four terms, has been a legislator since 1966. He owns and operates a Wingo furniture store and farms part-time.

Hopkins, who was four years behind Clapp in high school, is a former Fayette County court clerk and was a freshman House member. He is a Lexington stockbroker.

"One of the most pleasing realizations to me after I was elected was in knowing that two of us from Wingo would be here together," Hopkins said.

"I always looked up to Lloyd in high school," Hopkins continued. "He was a really big basketball star."

One of his great delights, said Dr. Doran, was in seeing Clapp, Hopkins and Allen serving together. "They're all my boys," he said as he asked Allen to join the Wingo huddle.

"Dr. Doran didn't put up with much horsing around," Clapp said, "but everybody loved him."

As Dr. Doran stood talking about old times with his "boys," it was evident to all that the admiration was mutual.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Two prominent Kentuckians have been reappointed to the Morehead State University Board of Regents.

Named recently by Gov. Wendell H. Ford to new four-year terms were Dr. W. H. Cartmell, Maysville physician and surgeon, and Jerry F. Howell, Jackson banker and real estate developer.

Dr. Cartmell, who has served longer on the MSU board than any other person, is beginning his fifth term. He originally was appointed by Gov. A. B. Chandler in 1956 and subsequently reappointed by Gov. Bert T. Combs in 1960, by Gov. Edward T. Breathitt in 1964, by Gov. Louie B. Nunn in 1968 and by Gov. Ford this year.

Mr. Howell, who is starting his second term, was first named by Gov. Nunn in 1968. He and his wife are MSU alumni.

Dr. Cartmell has been vice chairman of the board throughout his tenure and is a former member of the Kentucky Council on Public Higher Education. He is an honorary life member of the MSU Alumni Association and in 1970 received the group's Public Service Award.

Both Cartmell sons have enrolled at MSU and the youngest, David, presently is a senior majoring in sociology.

Mr. Howell, a former teacher and furniture dealer, served four terms in the Kentucky General Assembly, three in the House and one in the Senate. He is a director of Investors Heritage Life Insurance Co.

"These two gentlemen have given greatly of themselves to Morehead State University and their reappointment by Governor Ford represents his high confidence in them and in the integrity of the administration of MSU," said Dr. Adron Doran, MSU president.

Pre-registraton for Morehead State University's 1972
Interession ends Thursday.

Students may pre-register for 68 different courses in the offices of their school deans. Fees will be paid May 22 in the Laughlin Health Building.

Interession, which closes June 9, is a three-week term between MSU's spring semester and summer term. Students may earn up to four semester hours of credit during the session. Most classes meet three hours per day.

Fees for Kentucky residents are $11 per undergraduate semester hour or $14 per graduate hour. Out-of-state students pay $32 per undergraduate hour $42 per hour for graduate study.

Rooms in air-conditioned residence halls will be available and a cafeteria will be open.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Debbie Trimble's concern for others is taking her to Yugoslavia this spring.

An 18-year-old Paintsville freshman at Morehead State University, she has been selected as a U.S. delegate to an international conference on the aging May 24 in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia.

Debbie is attending a regional conference this week in New Orleans and has attended similar meetings in Atlanta and Washington on invitation from President Nixon.

More than 1,200 persons participated in the Washington conference where Debbie had lunch with Kentucky Sens. Marlow Cook and John Sherman Cooper and Seventh District Congressman Carl Perkins.

She spent a week discussing areas of health, nutrition, recreation, religion, transportation and other matters concerning senior citizens.

"I really enjoyed the Washington conference," she said. "I learned a lot about the needs of older people and I was glad to see so many persons of all ages share my interests."

Debbie first became interested in the problems of youth and the aged as an active member of her "Teens Who Care" organization at Paintsville High School. She served three years as the group's president.

"I've always found it is easy to work with older people," the pre-nursing student said. "When I organize a visit to a rest home or to see a shut-in, my friends always volunteer to help."

She constantly receives calls from persons seeking advice. "I want to help mankind in whatever way I can," she said.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Trimble, she hopes to become a nurse and work in geriatrics or mental retardation.

Last semester, she headed a group that provided weekly entertainment at the Daniel Boone Convalescent Center in Morehead. She also was a member of MSU's Student Government Association and served as president of her residence hall.

Her current project is the organization of a club similar to "Teens Who Care" at MSU which would work with youth and the aged.

"I am in love with living," she said. "My background is full of love, and I want to share my good fortune with those who are not so fortunate."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---What started as an industrial education project in school is becoming a money-making invention for John Ponsoll, a recent graduate of Morehead State University.

"One of my class projects last year required me to design an item that could be used in a shop," said Ponsoll, a native of Warren, Pa. "Instead of just drafting a design, I decided to build a portable work area."

"I wanted to make a workbench that also could be used as a storage area," he said. "I liked my finished product better than anything I'd seen in the catalogs."

Ponsoll, who now teaches industrial arts at a junior high school in Beltsville, Md., mentioned his graduate project to friends who suggested that he try to market the idea.

A Roanoke, Va. firm liked his sketches of the working area and paid to have his original model shipped from Morehead to their offices.

"They completely disassembled my work bench and carefully measured every screw and piece of wood," Ponsoll said. "The firm offered to completely buy my idea, but I decided to retain the rights and receive a fee for each one they sell."

The firm is marketing the product as a "portable experience center." The model on the market is primarily for elementary school shops but can be adapted for other uses such as art classes, home economics classes or various repair tasks.

(MORE)

It is 30 inches wide and five feet long when closed and opens to a five feet by five feet working area. The top folds in to conceal a tool console storage area and folds out to provide two work surfaces. When closed, it looks like an ordinary work table.

"This center provides a tool display area, a supply storage area and a portable, convenient work surface, all in one," Ponsoll said.

"I'm really glad to see my idea accepted by a major firm," Ponsoll said. "They are featuring the work experience center at various shows throughout the country and orders are beginning to come in."

"I had no idea that one of my classes at Morehead State would lead to this," he said. "I'm glad I decided to build it instead of only making a sketch."

Ponsoll, who worked as an MSU graduate assistant in recreation and received a master's from MSU last spring, said he is working on several other ideas which might have commercial potential.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- When the "Man of La Mancha" "fights the unbeatable foe" soon at Morehead State University, his opponent will wear "armor" covered with more than 300 tiny mirrors.

The popular production opens a three-night run Thursday, April 27, in MSU's Button Auditorium. Considered the major production of the year, the musical is a joint effort of the MSU Theater and the Department of Music.

Dr. William Layne is the director, Douglas Engelhardt is the orchestra conductor and Lance Brockman is set and costume designer.

"Many people never realize that every costume seen on stage begins with an idea born in the designer's imagination," Brockman said.

"Too often the audience thinks the costumes are rented or borrowed, but instead they are constructed by students from the renderings of the designer," he added.

Brockman pointed out that MSU drama students took about two weeks to construct six complete sets of "armor." Some of it has a covering of more than 300 small mirrors sewn on thin cloth, he said. In reality, the "armor" is mostly plastic.

Dr. Layne estimated that more than 80 persons are working on the production, including about 20 persons in the technical phases, such as costumes, sets and lights.

Another 20 persons will perform in the orchestra and another 40 persons are in the cast, headed by James Ross Beane, an MSU music faculty member, in the lead role.

Beane, who has appeared in several operas, called the role of Cervantes and Don Quixote "the best musical part I've had."

"I sometimes find it is a problem to make a somewhat distorted sound for Don Quixote without straining my voice," Beane said. "I try to give characterization without allowing vocal strain to creep in."

"The play is marvelously written," Beane added. "The tunes are well constructed and contribute to character development. They express the moods well and often serve as a bridge between the characters of Don Quixote and Cervantes."

"It is a really fun role and I don't feel a bit restricted," Beane said. He shaved his beard for the role because "I had planned to shave it next summer and the play calls for Cervantes to put on a false beard. It wouldn't go over so well if I already had one."

Winner of numerous awards, "Man of La Mancha" played on Broadway for five years and had six road tours.

Tickets are $2.50 for non-students and $1 for students with ID cards. Performances are scheduled April 27-29 at 8 p.m.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---How much food should be ordered to cater a wedding reception for 100 persons?

Larry Brown, a Gallipolis, Ohio, sophomore at Morehead State University, is learning the answers to this and other questions concerning the food business as a food service technology major.

Brown, who will be the first graduate of MSU's two-year food program is receiving an associate degree next month. He has studied quantity cookery, food management, experimental cookery, institutional equipment, quantity food purchasing and advanced food production.

"I've combined what I have learned in all these courses by working in the food lab this year," he said. The MSU Department of Home Economics operates the lab, which serves an average of 100 noon meals daily to faculty and staff members.

"It seems like I always helped my grandmother cook and I usually fixed the holiday meals," he said. When he was a teenager, he went to work as a dishwasher in a rest home and soon advanced to other positions of greater responsibility. He has also catered for parties and weddings in his home town.

"Although he is male, he is undoubtedly the best cooking student in our program," said Mrs. Joyce Price, director of the food lab. "The other students are constantly asking for his advice."

Brown's latest special project was a luau which was served to more than 150 faculty and staff members in the food lab. He wrote the menu, placed the market order, arranged the work schedule and planned the other details such as music and decorations. (MORE)

He also has renovated a kitchen and he is writing a manual of policies and procedures for the food lab.

"I found it kind of strange at first to be the only male in most of my classes," he said. "But after a while I became used to it."

"Larry has outstanding managerial potential," said Dr. Betty Bailey, head of home economics. "He is a delightful student in class and he always goes a little further, such as carving ice sculpture centerpieces to decorate the dining room. He has excellent rapport with students and full-time workers."

Brown has been offered a $10,000 starting salary by a national motel chain. He plans to work in the food service business a few years before returning to complete work on a four-year degree.

MSU's food service program has grown from five students in February, 1970, to 25 students this semester. Students are transferring into the program at the rate of 10 per semester, Mrs. Price said.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Togetherness has been the theme of the educational careers of Tim and Isabel Baker, faculty members at Morehead State University.

Both will receive doctoral degrees May 12 at Oklahoma State University. Mr. Baker's doctorate is in vocational education and his wife's degree is in elementary education.

He is an associate professor of industrial education and she is an assistant professor of education.

This will not be their first commencement together. They received bachelor's degrees from Northeastern State College in their hometown of Tahlequah, Okla. on the same day in 1950.

The Bakers began work on master's degrees at the same time but Mrs. Baker's study was interrupted by the birth of one of their three sons. She finished the degree a year after her husband.

Before coming to MSU in 1966, the Bakers taught 14 years in the same school system and all but three years were in the same building. They taught in Tahlequah, which, according to Baker, is the capital of the Cherokee Indian Nation.

When Baker received an Education Professions Development Act grant in 1967 to pursue doctoral study, all five members of his family were in college at the same time.

"It seems that we have always done everything together," said Mrs. Baker, who, appropriately, met her husband in college.

"Since we were both studying long hours, we understood each other's problems," she added. "We took some of the same courses and compared instructors and helped each other with our research."

"We have been in some phase of education all of our lives, and certainly are happy to be obtaining our terminal degrees," Mrs. Baker said.

"We have been taking the hurdles together," Mr. Baker said, "and we are now clearing the biggest one of all."

Baker is coordinator of vocational, trade and technical teacher education at MSU. He supervises about 100 student teachers and also teaches night classes for vocational education teachers.

Mrs. Baker teaches reading courses and supervises student teachers in elementary education. She served one year as acting director of the reading center at MSU.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's "Mister Mac" is retiring -- again.

Alvin McGary, MSU's director of maintenance since 1962, is among three faculty and staff members retiring July 1 but he'll be the only experienced guest of honor at the retirement dinner.

The 64-year-old administrator first retired in 1961 after more than 30 years in the U.S. Air Force. He left with the rank of lieutenant colonel and became a real estate salesman.

But his years of personnel supervision drew him back into management and he ended up at MSU where his skills were put to use in helping supervise about 200 workmen in the university's Department of Buildings and Grounds.

The college scene was not entirely unfamiliar to this native of Milburn, Carlisle County, who went directly into service upon being graduated from UK in 1931. He later spent three years on the Air Force ROTC faculty at Bradley University.

"The university has been an exciting and rewarding place for us," McGary said. "Keeping up with the growth of this campus has been a real challenge but we've had good people to work with from top to bottom."

As second in command in his department, McGary has been chiefly responsible for the cleanliness and repair of the university's estimated $70 million worth of physical facilities.

mcgary retires 2222222

"Maintenance has always had a high priority at this university," he said. "The administration has done a good job of protecting the taxpayer's investment in buildings and equipment."

McGary is married to the former Lillian Meade of Castlewood, Va. They have two married daughters and the youngest, Jean, currently is enrolled at MSU. The McGarys also have two grandchildren.

"We haven't made any definite plans about where we'll live," McGary said. "Morehead has been good to us and it won't be easy to leave."

But, regardless of where he spends his second retirement, "Mister Mac" has plenty of memories from his decade at MSU.

He likes to recall the time he and his boss, Glen Boodry, the physical plant director, became stranded in an elevator between floors in one of MSU's high-rise residence halls.

McGary made the most of an embarrassing situation by using his walkie-talkie radio to report that "Mr. Boodry needs some help to get out of an elevator."

Or the morning when a professor telephoned to ask him where to find "an eight-inch wide 2-by-4." "I told him to get two 2-by-4's and some eight-inch nails," McGary recalled with a chuckle.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- After practicing cheerleading for 10 years, Rhonda Cooper, Cynthiana sophomore at Morehead State University, will be teaching the art of organized yelling this summer.

The 20-year-old varsity cheerleader has been selected as an instructor for the American Spirit Association, which conducts summer cheerleader camps and clinics.

She recently auditioned for the job by performing yells and gymnastic routines and is among 12 instructors selected from hundreds of applicants.

Following a week-long training session in Kansas City next month, she will travel throughout the country with the group until Aug. 24.

Miss Cooper, who has been a cheerleader since the fifth grade, will begin her second year on MSU's varsity squad this fall. She also was a freshman cheerleader.

A veteran of nine clinics, she was named the outstanding cheerleader at a Rensselaer, Ind. camp several summers ago.

She will be teaching cheers, chants, jumps, gymnastics and pom-pom routines to cheerleaders ranging from fifth grade to college. Her group will present ideas and suggestions for uniforms, pep rallies and spirit days.

(More)

"I'm sure I'll love working with the clinic," she said. "However, I'm kind of nervous because I've never traveled where I haven't known anyone, but I'm really looking forward to the experience."

The clinics are beneficial, she said, because they "provide opportunities to meet people, get new ideas, develop techniques and get motivated."

"At the clinics, the individuals learn to control crowds and how to perform in front of people," she added. "Even though I will be attending the camps as an instructor, I expect to learn a lot myself."

She said that a good cheerleader should possess enthusiasm, a good personality and coordination and skill. "Cheerleading develops one's personality and leadership abilities," she said.

"Cheerleading is time-consuming and could interfere with studies," Rhonda said. "But one must learn to budget time."

Cheerleading apparently has not interfered with her other activities since she recently was named MSU's outstanding female student in health, physical education and recreation. She is an active member of Cwens and Gamma Phi Beta honoraries and Chi Omega social sorority and an Army ROTC sponsor.

Rhonda is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Cooper of Cynthiana.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The concern of a recent Morehead State University graduate with noise pollution led to his construction of a sound level meter used in four different MSU classes.

Kenneth Sharp of Lexington became interested in noise pollution in industry and decided to create a device for measuring noise levels.

"I got my idea from an electronics magazine and used some of my own ideas and modifications to make the meter," he said.

"Industry is concerned with reducing the amount of noise caused by machinery because constant exposure to noises can reduce a worker's hearing," Sharp added. "Since I plan to work in industry, I'm even more interested in this problem."

Sharp's device, which is powered by two nine-volt batteries, measures sounds ranging from 144 to 30 decibels. He explained that, according to the Air Force, persons exposed to 85 decibels of noise constantly can suffer hearing loss.

He measured sound levels on the MSU campus and found that rock concerts produce the highest noise level.

Sharp, an industrial education major, used the homemade meter in a special problems course in industrial technology, in a seminar class on electronic measurement of sound, in an ecology course, and in an educational data processing class.

Three MSU alumni have been awarded $8,000 fellowships for doctoral study starting this fall. Only 40 such grants are made nationally each year.

Enrolling at Wayne State University in Detroit will be Bill B. Pierce, MSU's director of admissions, and Tony Romano, principal of Ferguson Junior High School in Xenia, Ohio.

Attending Michigan State University will be Don C. Butler of Mays Lick, who received a master's degree from MSU this month. He finished his bachelor's degree last year.

Pierce completed his bachelor's degree at MSU in 1964 and his master's at UK in 1966. Romano, a 1955 graduate of MSU, received a master's from Columbia University in 1966.

"We're extremely proud of these young men," said MSU President Adron Doran. "They have distinguished themselves and this university by virtue of their selection by such an eminent organization."

All three will pursue doctorates in educational administration.

Members of an environmental art workshop class taught by Don Young, assistant professor of art, have returned from four days of living with nature and photographing it.

Young's expedition, which set up camp in the Daniel Boone National Forest about 15 miles from Morehead, included 22 students, three Explorer Scouts and two professional photographers as consultants.

The class is being offered during Intersession, MSU's three-week "mini-mester."

Young said he tried to choose an area that was isolated but yet fairly accessible. "I wanted a variety of landscapes with wild life and wild flowers," he said.

"We selected a site with no facilities and which was unspoiled by man-made foot paths," the professor added. "Here the group became acquainted with nature and each other and developed a greater sense of perception and awareness."

"The cameras are merely a means of recording the students' feelings and expressions," Young said. "A person who has lived a while in the woods with his camera is more involved in his work than someone who is a stranger to nature."

All of the students, including four coeds, said they enjoyed the outing. The class consisted of juniors, seniors and graduate students.

Barbie Casper of Morehead said she couldn't use a camera before taking the course. An art student at UK, she said she liked spending a few days "roughing it" with nature.

"It is so much more pleasant to experience nature with a group rather than alone," said Elmer Klaber, Covington junior at MSU. "The best way to enjoy nature is to live in it."

Eddie Horton, Danville junior, recorded the sounds of the forest as well as the sights. "I have some great recordings of whippoorwills and frogs," he said.

"I wore out two pairs of basketball shoes on the camping trip," said Ron Nicholson, the 6-8 center on MSU's basketball squad. He enrolled because "I like the outdoors and thought we would have fun."

The students will spend the rest of the course developing and printing pictures taken during their trip into nature's studio.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Student musicians from 30 states are expected to attend the Daniel Boone Forest Music Camp opening July 2 at Morehead State University.

The annual camp includes one week of marching band workshops and two weeks of concert band and instrumental sessions.

Dr. Robert Hawkins, MSU's director of bands and camp director, reports enrollments are running ahead of last year in both phases.

The training program opens with 11 workshops conducted by A. R. Casavant of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Precision drill for drum majors, dance and pom pom routines, baton twirling, precision drill for band members and basic drum majoring are on the calendar.

Concert band and instrumental instruction starts July 9 and involves individual and group lessons in all instrumental areas, conducting, theory, twirling and marching techniques.

University credit, ranging from one to three semester hours, is offered in the college undergraduate and graduate divisions. The camp's largest group is the junior-senior high school division.

Costs are $63 including meals for the Casavant workshops. All Kentuckinas attending the final two weeks are assessed $124, including meals and housing. Non-resident fees are $134 for high school students and $144 for college students.

The Frankfort lawmaker traced the development of jurimetrics and that it places a great emphasis on behavioral psychology and economic anthropology.

"Jurimetrics is to modern law practice and court procedure what law clerks were a hundred years ago," Judge Meigs said. With the aid of modern technology, lawyers now have a large volume of information easily accessible.

A familiarity with words has given lawyers a greater fear of their power than other people and explains the care with which they approach words, he said.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Vince Semaury, Morehead State University defensive line coach, is tackling the dual role of football coach and artist.

The 32-year-old Semaury is a "hard-nosed" coach on the gridiron but also a sensitive artist in the studios of MSU's Claypool-Young Art Building.

Semaury, who hopes to soon complete a master's degree in art education at MSU, resumed his serious pursuit of art in January when he was hired as an Eagle assistant coach.

He starred on both the gridiron and in the art studio while at the University of Kentucky. He then taught art for five years at Flaget and Trinity High Schools in Louisville.

"While I was head coach at Male High School and an assistant at the University of Louisville, I was not very actively involved in art," he said. "So I am returning to one of my first loves after a three-year absence."

Semaury's first piece of abstract wood sculpture, "Janus," reflected his dual careers. He selected the name because the piece suggested two heads.

Janus, the Roman god of doors and gates, is usually represented with two faces, one looking forward and one backward. The Romans prayed to him when they were about to begin a new venture.

(MORE)

Soon after finishing Janus, Semary was starting a new career as a varsity football player. Looking backward, he could see a coach telling him that he could never make it as a major college football player.

Never one to give up easily, Semary ignored the coach's advice to look for a smaller school and played a lot of football during the next three years.

"I remember playing both offensive and defensive guard one night in Miami with the humidity about 100 per cent," he said.

"I lost 24 pounds that night."

While he was laboring on the football field, he was also working in the studio. His favorite medium is sculpture because x "It gives me a third dimension---depth---that painting and other media can't."

x His latest sculpture project is a fiberglass work of two football players entangled in a tackle.

The piece is designed to show "the tremendous impact and action involved in football," Semary said. He said that he purposely left some of the mesh wire exposed "to add a raw, rough, unfinished feeling" to the work.

"I like to base works on horizontal and vertical lines. They contrast and react against each other, giving the effect of impact," he said.

How does his football background affect his art?

"Some of the emotions and feelings that I've acquired playing and coaching football show up in my work," Semary said.

"I concentrate on showing emotions in my art," Semary said. "Portraying emotion is more important to me than showing minute details."

Dr. Bill Booth, MSU art department head, feels that Semary's football background is an asset to his art endeavors.

"Only an artist who had experienced the jolting collision of the contact sport of football could have conceived and executed a work of such dynamic power and movement," Booth said about Semary's football sculpture.

"The strength and dynamic qualities of his artistic efforts reflect his strong concerns for the athletic competition," Booth added.

"Semary brings to his consideration of sculpture, drawing and printmaking an understanding of the human anatomy and of the strength which the figure can impart in an artistic frame of reference," Booth said.

Semary is currently experimenting with a variety of media. He is working with collographs watercolors and sculpture.

He is hoping to join the MSU art faculty upon completion of his master's degree.

Like Janus, Semary is once again looking in two directions. But it is evident that he is mostly planning his future.
