J. SPRIG CHAMBERS, EDITOR.

Maysville, August 28, 1847.

We are requested to say, that the late Esau Maysville, recently advertised by Charles A. Marshall and others in this paper, are now offered on extremely favorable terms, through Dudley Richardson, who will show the lots, and state the terms to any person desirous of purchasing.

POSTPONE.—We are requested to state that Madame ALBANKOWSKA'S concert has been postponed until to-morrow evening.

We are also requested to state that the price of admission has been reduced from 75c. to 50c.

The Philadelphia American and Gazette, speaks of Mr. Clay's reception in the city of Brotherly Love, as enthusiastic in the extreme. So great was the excitement in the city, when it became generally known that he was there, that he was compelled to forsake his bed, to gratify his enthusiastic admirers in the city, by appearing before them and thanking them, as he did briefly, for their kindly welcome. He passed, on the next day, en route for Cape May, and, at his departure, was cheered by the voices of not less than 20,000 persons, who had assembled at the wharf to witness it.

Our readers will not forget that this justly celebrated lady will give her first and only Concert in this City, at the City Hall to-morrow night. Tickets $4 cents each.

The Programme is decidedly rich, and we will not miss hearing "John Anderson my Jo," for twice the Admittance fee.

MADAME ALBANKOWSKA.—This accomplished vocalist has favored our citizens with two Concerts during the week, which were large and fashionably attended. Her music is highly appreciated by the best judges here, who do not hesitate to pronounce her equal if not superior to the finest vocalists they have ever heard.—Lexington Observer and Reporter.

The Washington correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, writing under date of the 16th, says:—General Patterson will leave here about the middle of the week for Mexico. More troops will be raised should our overtures of peace be rejected, and also the means provided in Mexico to take care of them. One thing however is certain, that of all the territories, that Mexico has not yet been rejected, though Santa Anna and the Congress equally seem to assume the responsibility of retaining them.

CALHOUN and BENTON.—We take these paragraphs from a Washington letter of the Baltimore Sun:—Speaking of Col. Benton, I learn from a reliable source that he is preparing his narrative of thirty years' service in the United States, with reflections on the most eminent statesmen who flourished during that period. It will be a sort of pendant to Lord Brougham's lives of eminent men of the reign of George III. and will prove an invaluable source of study to the future historian. It is not to be published till after the Colonel's natural death, and will then help to bury a good many persons at the same time. Every one who reads Mr. Calhoun has for some time past, been preparing a similar work on the philosophy of Government, with reflections on the statement of the United States Constitution.

So it seems as if these two great champions of the United States Senate were to be opposed to each other even in the grave, and that both are determined to bequeath their names to posterity. The proposed work with Mexico, will no doubt, require a separate chapter from each, one discussing the merits of Scott and Taylor, and the other those of the Lieutenant General.

Mr. STEWART.—In the discussion of the Irish Railway bill, in the House of Commons, June 28, paid an eloquent tribute to the memory of O'Connell. It elicited marked applause.

"He hoped that parliament before it expired, would give some further proof of its sympathy for Ireland, for great difficulties might arise to the government from the death of one to whom his country owed a debt immense of endless gratitude. "I trust," continued Mr. Stiel, "the time will come when English statesmen shall accord in rejecting the bill, in which a nation was controlled—that accursed which a whole people were accustomed to view with admiration, and on which senators lunged with scornful derision. The grave will have had its share, and I wish he had lived to see the day when that city which was the object of his pilgrimages, and in which is the most easily shrunken of that religion which he was once the humble believer and the disinterested champion! I wish that he had lived to kneel down at the altar of the noble temple raised with hands—that the oldest marble altar of the Vatican, who smile down in the blaze and effulgence of sacerdotal pomp might have come to receive the salutations of the greatest pontifical reformer who has ever sat upon the throne of St. Peter's. I wish he had seen the day when the Pope—who I find a son of the same mother as I—would himself justify in his address to you—if I seize on this occasion to refer to a tribute to the memory of the illustrious dead—whose wisdom, whose fortitude, and whose piety, were truly an example to the world."

It is now certainly known that Mr. STANTON is elected to Congress, from the Memphis District.

Late from Mexico.

RICHMOND, Va. August 20, 10 P. M.

New Orleans papers of the 13th, received, state that two important documents have been received from Pacheo, the New Minister of Foreign Relations in Mexico. The first abounds with fulsome praise of Santa Anna, and identifies his whole history and glory with the present war. It denies that he has any understanding with the American Government for peace, and wishes Governors and Legislators first to encounter the enemy and have an equal share of honors.

The second says, the civilized world sides with Mexico, and the opinion is general, that the United States will be defeated by the dissemination among themselves. It stated further that the British Government had assured the authorities that they would not resort to any revolutionary government in Mexico. A letter from Lord Palmerston of the 11th June, says that it is the duty of British residents and Minister to follow Government, should chances of war compel them to seek security in other parts of territory in order to maintain present relations.

The Cincinnati Atlas, of 20th says: We received yesterday the following somewhat astonishing communication. We know nothing of Mr. Parsons or his abilities, save that we have seen similar letters in this in some other papers.

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 15, 1847.

To the Editors of the Daily Atlas: Dear Sirs: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your kind notice of the New York papers, and in statement concerning the remarkable powers of a Mathematician in this city, who adds, subtracts, multiplies, divides, and performs all other mathematical operations with such rapidity that seems almost miraculous. As I am that person, I will endeavor to give you a correct statement of the facts, which you will be glad to publish: First: Let a column of 5 cures, say 2000, be of length 10 or 20 in breadth, be placed before me, and in less than 5 seconds time I will give the sum total, always commencing on the left hand side to write the answer down. It matters not what length the number is, or what breadth, I will give the sum total as fast as the figures can be written down. Second: Let a sum be written in multiplication, in 1000 figures in the multiplier and as many in the multiplicand, and I commence on the left hand side, and write the product underneath, all in one hour, as fast as the figures can be written down. Thirdly: Let a sum be written in division, with any large amount for a divisor, and I commence writing the remainder, until the quotient. Interest, at any particular rate, can be performed in the same manner, without using any extra figure, but by the use of every denomination, can be summed up instantly without reducing them to a denominator. These rules can be learned in one hour, by any person having the printed instructions. Please insert this in your paper, also stating that any person wishing these rules will enclose $10 through the New York Post Office. Please forward me the paper which you will be furnished with a full set of the rules.

Is STANTON Quo?—There is in Boston a pretty newsmonger (well known as a man who loves to retail intelligence, and especially "war news") a la Mrs. Tuttle, who is an eye-sore to every body he comes in contact with. His mind to such an extent of a morning, runs in to get up early the day following, he is gathered up persons officers as tolerable him, rather than he can learn, and then go to bore his neighbors with the "news," which he has not the least concern to remember, or relate, in any shape come-at-able. He is "wed" almost every day in the week of late—but he has rarely had news like that he carried down to him with him, yesterday.

The "late dispatches which were" were announced on Sunday, and true to his word, M—entered one of his favorite haunts yesterday morning, with his customary interruption. He was met by a man near the door. "Army News?" inquired M. "No such." "What is the news?" "From the seat of war." "Where's the army?" "Oh, in Stata quo?" "The devil it is!" "Yes."

"How long has it been there?" "Since the 27th."

"Thunder!" exclaimed M—, and away he rushed down State street, with intelligence M—met him at the corner of the street to whom he imparted the information that "our army had reached Stata quo"—whereupon the stranger expressed his envy and advised him to call on S—

He did so, and a long conversation followed, in which it was pretty well known that "our army was in Stata quo!"

Our witty friend was congratulating himself on having circulated this desirable piece of information long before and after the fact had the news, and was boasting of the fact to a friend, who asked him if he knew where "Stata quo" was located. We departed, I expect, knowing well the sentiment of Mexico it was situated in, but he had the news right from the office, and it must be so.

"You're a thundering fool," said the neighbor. "Why?"—Don't you know that "Stata quo" means in the same sense or condition as the word "Stata quo" in Latin phrase?"

M—offered to bet to his wife was right, and at the last accounts he was pouring over Disturnal's Map of Mexico, endeavoring, most assiduously, to discover the location of "Stata quo." Boston paper.

ETNA ALLEN.—The capital anecdote related by Hon. John P. Bixbee, was the entertainment given on board the Ibernia to Mr. Secretary Walker, in regard to Ethan Allen, reminds us of another.

Edmund Burke, the English Ministry tried various means to bring his stern republican principles, and win him, if possible, over to the side of the Mother Country. At length, Lord North, who was the humble friend, offered him one half of New Hampshire. Ethan listened attentively, and replied, that if he remembered him strongly of an ancient friend of Sampson, who was an important personage attempted to bring him the whole world, and all its possessions, if he would fall down and worship him!"

Lord North, saying to him, "I know you on Lord North, "would you believe it, the old rascal didn't own a square foot of the territory!"—Boston Atlas.

A judge once said to a lawyer who was more remarkable for the number of his words than the sense of his speeches, that he was very much like necessarily. The lawyer said, "I can't say that, for I have seen you in the law office. Because," said the judge, "necessity knows no law."

The News from the City of Mexico. Upon recurring to-day to the accounts from Mexico, we have again to remark that the representations of the news made from the former city from Puebla differ. From the former city the news is decidedly more favorable to peace than from Puebla. This is probably to be explained by the fact that gentlemen in Vera Cruz derive their principal support from the English, who are aware of every movement of their minister to bring about negotiations for peace and prevent the city of Mexico from falling into our hands. When we meet in person our communications, we shall have more to say about the probabilities of peace; we content ourselves to-day by giving our readers every facility for forming their own opinions by the ample correspondence we offer them.

We will present the following translation of a letter of the latest date from the city of Mexico, written by a foreign merchant established there to his correspondent in Vera Cruz.

MEXICO, July 29, 1847.

"My Dear Sir: I have the pleasure of acknowledging the receipt of your esteemed letter of the 23rd inst., with its enclosure, and thank you for the pains you have communicated. I am unable in return to tell you any thing of much consequence. We are still waiting and very impatiently to see the end of this protracted affair. Latterly it has been very generally believed that negotiations for peace would be entered into, but it appears that expectations to this effect are likely to be disappointed, peace is not yet in the air, and the Government of A. Juto of the principal generals of the army took yesterday. Some were of opinion that the wisest course was to march their own troops into the forces and attack the Americans at Puebla; but this opinion did not prevail. They determined that they would await tranquilly the enemy within the walls of the city, continuing to fortify the walls as far as possible. We know not, therefore, what will happen, or whether the Americans will commence their march forthwith. I doubt whether they will do it before the arrival of further reinforcements. In the meantime, the Government is endeavoring to raise a large army. Santa Anna is at this moment sole Dictator. Congress can do nothing because there is never a sufficient number of members to constitute a quorum for business. They say that the Government is seeking a closer union with European powers, and with this view has given orders for the liquidation of the claims of their subjects."

The above brief note is from a most respectable source, and may be presumed to afford a just idea of affairs in the capital, and is later than any papers from the city. It is not a translation, but is taken from the "American & Gazette."

Letters from a Reviewer.

August 20th, 1847.

A faithful transcript of my thoughts since my last letter, would fill a volume octavo. I have not time to do more than to say, preserved from the wreck of things perishable, but I am steady to my original purpose of jotting down random thoughts, and I trust that your recommendation, they will at least merit that of presenting a faithful picture of a vagrant mind.

It is night now—one of those sweet hours, when the soul, like a bird, seeks relief in the absence of the burning sun. The tiny waves as they break upon the pebbly beach of the beautiful Ohio, whisper peace and rest, and grass are expanding their parched surfaces, beneath the refreshing influence of the summer dew. The old are sitting at their street doors, in dreamy meditation upon the past, or plunged into the study of the future, are building airy castles, whose fairy structure is emblematic of the hopes of man, unless when based upon the foundation of the christian virtues, they cluster around the feet of some venerable saint, and inspire their precursors to plea in the promenade, and the little prattlers, wearied with incessant play, are sleeping the sweet sleep which childhood only knoweth.

My dear friend I know not who is, but I have an insuperable aversion to the contemplation of gloomy pictures, and I love it perhaps to the constitution of my nature, that I do not see something bright and serene, or something sweet to love. Even now, as I cast a momentary glance, through the lattice window I see a dark-eyed youth walking the pavement with his head inclined towards a sweet girl; who seems to be pouring her very soul into his ears. Again and again I see them, until I almost forget the history of that love, from its first dawn, through its various vicissitudes, to one, and which has become so imbedded in their very nature, that existence itself would be a burden without it. Additionally, I would not be so indiscreet as to say, that not only do lovers love in each other eyes, than to the rest of the world, but that they really are so—their faces being animated, by the play of the passions, into a more beautiful and more sweet in its expression, than the features of any other mortal.

I should be satisfied to miss their cheering presence in the accustomary promenade, and be almost content to chide the truant lovers, for not affording to the world, his evening theme of bright imaginings.—Cheered by their presence, I ask myself there such a being as a misanthrope? Can I not find a more noble and a more pure source of blessing, as not to sympathize in the joys of others?

They are gaudy and their voices are succeeded by the deep guttural, of two stout Germans, who are talking of their lands, and the friends of their early years, forgetful of the time being of all the ills of their former life beyond the seas, they speak only of their friends, and the friends of the endearments of native home. How universal is this feeling. No matter what spirit of oppression—what despotic rule—what earing cares, or galling chains we put upon them, they will still—grow bright as spots in time, and mellow the recollection of the wrongs, with which their enjoyments may have been associated. Even Ireland—land of my ancestors—recall but her name with the wall of her banishing chains, she sends the tribute of a tear from her exiled sons. Strange, imperishable, immortal sentiment the love of Erin, beneath the flag of the free heart's only home, will pour out his life blood, and devote at the shrine of American liberties, there is ever in his heart of the love of his motherland—the most sacred shrine of his affection for his native land, and his motherland home.

Really I must conclude this letter, else I get the name of the dreamy enthusiast, instead of my accustomed sobriety of observation. Yours, &c.

Mr. Editor.—I notice that the Richmond Chronicle and Lexington Observer are in favor of holding the Whig Convention, for two months, of Governor, in some time in the spring of '48.

It would not be a good idea for us to wait until that time, in order that we may see the hands of the Locos.

Yours.

The suggestion of our correspondent above has some force in it. And if it meets with the approval of our Whig brethren throughout the State, we would suggest the 1st Tuesday in April, as the proper time for holding our convention. Our candidates could then go from the convention immediately into the canvass, and continue constantly at work until the election.—Ed. Herald.

REBEKAH BARK.—The new branch of the State Bank in this city, went into operation on the 10th inst., and immediately some of our Citizens commenced a run upon it with small sums in Gold and Silver to exchange for the bank's promissory notes. The Cashier thought he can stand such a run as long as these notes hold out.—See.
