MOREHEAD, Ky.---Vince Semaury, Morehead State University defensive line coach, is tackling the dual role of football coach and artist.

The 32-year-old Semaury is a "hard-nosed" coach on the gridiron but also a sensitive artist in the studios of MSU's Claypool-Young Art Building.

Semaury, who hopes soon to complete a master's degree in art education at MSU, resumed his serious pursuit of art in January when he was hired as an Eagle assistant coach.

He starred on both the gridiron and in the art studio while at the University of Kentucky. While serving as an assistant football coach and wrestling coach, he taught art for five years at Flaget and Trinity High Schools in Louisville.

"While I was head coach at Male High School and an assistant at the University of Louisville, I was not very actively involved in art," he said. "So I am returning to one of my first loves after a three-year absence."

Semaury's first piece of abstract wood sculpture, "Janus," reflected his dual careers. He selected the name because the piece suggested two heads.

(MORE)

Janus, the Roman god of doors and gates, is usually represented with two faces, one looking forward and one backward. The Romans prayed to him when they were about to begin a new venture.

Soon after finishing Janus, Semary was starting a new career as a varsity football player. Looking backward, he could see a coach telling him that he could never make it as a major college football player.

Looking forward, Semary ignored the coach's advice to look for a smaller school and played a lot of football during the next three years.

"I remember playing both offensive and defensive guard one night in Miami with the humidity about 100 per cent," he said. "I lost 24 pounds that night."

While he was laboring on the football field, he was also working in the studio. His favorite medium is sculpture because "It gives me a third dimension---depth---that painting and other media can't."

His latest sculpture project is a fiberglass work of two entangled football players.

The piece is designed to show "the tremendous impact and action involved in football," Semary said. He said that he purposely left some of the mesh wire exposed "to add a raw, rough, unfinished feeling" to the work.

"I like to base works on horizontal and vertical lines. They contrast and react against each other, giving the effect of impact," he said.

How does his football background affect his art?

"Some of the emotions and feelings that I've acquired playing and coaching football show up in my work," Semary said.

"I concentrate on showing emotions in my art," Semary said. "Portraying emotion is more important to me than showing minute details."

Dr. Bill Booth, MSU art department head, feels that Semary's football background is an asset to his art endeavors.

"Only an artist who had experienced the jolting collision of the contact sport of football could have conceived and executed a work of such dynamic power and movement," Booth said about Semary's football sculpture.

"The strength and dynamic qualities of his artistic efforts reflect his strong concerns for the athletic competition," Booth added.

"Semary brings to his consideration of sculpture, drawing and printmaking an understanding of the human anatomy and of the strength which the figure can impart in an artistic frame of reference," Booth said.

Semary is currently experimenting with a variety of media. He is working with collographs, watercolors and sculpture.

He is hoping to join the MSU art faculty upon completion of his master's degree.

Like Janus, Semary is once again looking in two directions. But it is evident that he is mostly planning his future.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Mrs. Adron Doran, wife of the president of Morehead State University, has been named general chairman of the most ambitious fund drive in the history of Girl Scouting in Eastern and Central Kentucky

The campaign--to be conducted in late September--involves 39 of the 57 counties in the Wilderness Road Girl Scout Council. Excluded are counties which give United Fund support to Girl Scouting.

Mrs. Doran's appointment was announced at a campus press conference by Mrs. Graydon A. Long of Lexington, president of the Wilderness Road Council which serves more than 13,000 Girl Scouts.

The fund raising effort has a goal of $15,000 and will consist primarily of residential and business canvasses. Collections will be used to supplement cookie sales and United Fund gifts in the council's 1972 budget.

Mrs. Doran, a former president of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, was cited by the Girl Scout official for "dynamic leadership" in other civic projects.

"Her decision to lead this vitally necessary fund effort virtually assures its success," Mrs. Long said. "Probably more than any other woman in Kentucky, Mrs. Doran embodies the current Girl Scout emphasis on 'To Know, To Care, To Be Involved.'"

Mrs. Doran, the founder and director of MSU's Personal Development Institute, was recognized this spring as "Outstanding Woman of the Year" by Cardinal Key national honor sorority.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University's summer graduating class was advised Thursday to take a positive outlook and to live life to the fullest.

Dr. John E. Horner, president of Hanover College, compared the modern United States with Alexander the Great's empire as he addressed the largest summer graduating class in the institution's 50-year history.

"Be idealistic yet be very realistic," Dr. Horner said. "Like Alexander, we face the problem of finding 'a sense of realism to balance what is with what might be'."

"Let us condemn in our nation that which is not good but also let us praise our nation for what is good," Dr. Horner said.

Quoting Alexander the Great and the late professional football coach Vince Lombardi, Dr. Horner told the graduates that faith in God, family and country are necessary elements for a great nation.

MSU President Adron Doran conferred degrees on 418 candidates, including 161 master's degrees, 253 bachelor's degrees and four associate (two-year) degrees.

The 161 master's are the most graduate degrees ever awarded at an MSU commencement.

Graduating with high distinction were Debra Lynn Coyer of Zebulon, Jeanne Dillon of Maysville, Karen J. Hilton of Cecilia, Suzanne C. Lane of Pleasure Ridge Park, Anne Elaine Leslie of Greenup, Patricia Carolyn Sloan of Worthington and Linda Susan Bush Wiley of Oldtown.

Smith, a Birmingham, Ala. native, who was MSU's first black varsity basketball player in 1963, completed his college eligibility in 1967 and signed with the Globetrotters a few months later.

"Smitty" spent the 1967-68 season touring the world with the famed basketball troupe but lost the next two winters to Army service.

The 6-3 guard rejoined the Trotters in 1970 to finish the second half of the grueling 180-game schedule. He decided to call it a career after the first half of last season.

"Playing every day didn't bother me so much, and I love the game," he said. "I liked entertaining and seeing the world, but I had to prepare for my future. I also married and wanted to settle down."

The 27-year-old Smith returned to campus last spring to finish his undergraduate degree and work on his master's degree with emphasis on physical education.

"I look at my work with a radio audience as more of a one-to-one communication rather than performing in front of a large audience," Smith said.

"I try to create a relaxing feeling by presenting various jazz artists," Smith said about his program format. "I enjoy the opportunity to communicate with the audience and to share my kind of music with them."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Starting this fall, bachelor's degrees in university studies and in social welfare are being offered by Morehead State University.

The university studies degree does not require students to declare a subject major or an area of specialization. All studies beyond general education requirements may be concentrated in a single discipline or in elective courses.

Persons desiring this degree must complete a minimum of 128 semester hours of credit with a cumulative grade point average of 2.0 or better.

The 128-hour total includes 46 hours of general education requirements and 43 hours of junior and senior courses.

At least one year in residence and one semester immediately preceding graduation must be completed at MSU.

"The program leading to a baccalaureate degree in university studies will provide opportunity for students who are undecided on areas of specialization to establish a broader base of investigation and to exercise greater freedom in selecting courses of special interest," said MSU President Adron Doran.

"We believe this program will reduce the attrition rate at the university level," he added.

The bachelor of social welfare degree will prepare students for employment as middle-range social workers and to enter graduate schools of social welfare.

Requirements for the social welfare program include the general education requirements, 36 hours of social and behavioral sciences courses and 26 hours of courses in social welfare.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---U.S. Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton (D-Mo.) is appearing Oct. 20 at Morehead State University as part of the Golden Anniversary Celebration, it was announced today by MSU President Adron Doran.

The Missouri senator is scheduled to address a 2 p.m. convocation at Laughlin Fieldhouse during the Golden Anniversary Homecoming Weekend. He will be introduced by Gov. Wendell H. Ford.

"We are honored to have Senator Eagleton visit the campus to help us observe our Golden Anniversary," Dr. Doran said. "He is an outstanding young man whose courage has endeared him to millions of Americans of all ages."

The 43-year-old Eagleton was nominated for vice president at the Democratic National Convention this summer but he resigned from the ticket soon afterward in the wake of his voluntary disclosure that he had undergone medical treatment.

"The appearance of Senator Eagleton is in keeping with our tradition of bringing distinguished national leaders to the campus during Homecoming and throughout the school year," Dr. Doran added. "The entire university community is looking forward to his visit."

Sen. Eagleton's career in public service began in 1956 at the age of 27 when he was elected prosecutor in St. Louis County, Mo. He followed that victory by becoming Missouri's youngest attorney general and lieutenant governor before being elected to the Senate in 1968.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Morehead State University has been awarded a federal grant of $18,000 to continue an environmental dissemination program in 49 Kentucky counties.

The grant from the Office of Environmental Education in the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare will be supplemented by $15,789 from MSU to finance the second phase of a project started last year.

A federal grant of $25,000 and another $16,000 in university funds were used to assess the environmental knowledge of Eastern Kentuckians.

A test written by Dr. Jerry Howell, MSU's director of environmental studies and project director, has been administered to nearly 8,000 high school students and 450 area residents were interviewed.

The test results have not been completely analyzed, Dr. Howell said. When they are finished, Dr. Howell and his staff will distribute information intended to help correct deficiencies in the area's environmental knowledge.

About 50 half-hour television shows will be produced and loaned to schools and civic and service organizations. Steve Young of MSU's instructional media staff has prepared almost 40 video tapes for the series.

A variety of information packets will be sent to public officials, school authorities and private organizations. The material will be tailored to suit the individual needs of the recipients, Dr. Howell said.

Donna Gulley, Sharpsburg senior at Morehead State University, spent the summer flagging cars for a road construction company on Interstate 75, south of Richmond.

A 5-foot, 4-inch brunette, Miss Gulley's interest in being a flagman began the previous summer.

"I was working in the company's office when I read some papers that said the company did not discriminate in hiring workers," she said.

"I decided I wanted to spend my next vacation working outside with a construction crew," she added. "It gave me a chance to get a suntan and earn money to return to school."

She spent 10 weeks working nine to 10 hours daily. Her "work uniform" included a construction metal helmet, a brightly-colored vest and a red flag.

"Working in the rain was the worst part," Miss Gulley said. "Sometimes this happened before we had completed a job, so I would just tuck my hair under my hard hat and keep on flagging."

She carried her transistor radio with her "to make things run a little smoother." "As long as I had my radio with me for company, I could do almost anything," she said.

Girl Flagman 2-2-2-2-2-2-2

The female flagger attracted more attention than the average flagman.

"One afternoon I became suspicious after watching the same car pass me several times," she said. "Finally, the car stopped where I was flagging."

"One of the nicely dressed gentlemen asked, 'Are you or aren't you?' I removed my hat and assured them that I am really a girl."

"Everyone was nice to me," she said. "A state policeman even brought me cold drinks on the hot days."

"It was one of my most enjoyable summers," she said. "I plan on working as a flagman again next year."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---An exhibit of handmade wall hangings by Dennis Shaffner, a 1971 graduate of Morehead State University, is now on display in MSU's Johnson Camden Library.

Featured in the show are nine primitive hangings hooked and knotted on burlap. Some were produced on a horizontal backstrap loom, the most ancient form of weaving.

The works are of unusual colors and textures and are for sale.

Shaffner teaches at Bullitt Central High School in Shepherdsville.

An exhibit of religious art works is on display in Claypool-Young Gallery until Sept. 30. Included in the show are prints and paintings of various periods, collections of santos and icons and a number of missal pages dating as early as the 11th century.

The formal opening of the religious art show is Sunday, Sept. 17, from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. in the gallery.

They are James Cassity of Morehead, James Cooksey of Louisa and Vaughn Caudill of Grayson.

To qualify for the program students must complete one year of the advanced ROTC program, pass the Army aviation physical and flight aptitude tests and be recommended by the professor of military science.

The Army pays for all instruction, textbooks, equipment and transportation to and from the flying school.

Each student receives 35 hours of ground training and 36½ hours of in-flight training. Students learn the principles of flying small, fixed-wing aircraft, fundamentals of navigation, map and compass reading, takeoffs and landings and solo flying.

The potential pilots began training this semester at Mt. Sterling. They recently completed ground training at MSU and are now taking in-flight instruction.

They will be eligible to apply for private pilots' licenses upon completion of the program.

The clinics provide "opportunities to meet other cheerleaders, to share ideas, to develop new techniques and to get motivated."

"I brought back lots of new ideas for our cheerleading squad to try," she said. "Even though I attended the camps as an instructor, I learned a lot myself."

She said she has gained much from her cheerleading experiences. "Cheerleading develops one's personality and leadership abilities," she said.

"Cheerleading is time consuming and could interfere with studies," Rhonda said. "But I have just had to learn to budget my time."

Cheerleading apparently has not interfered with her other activities since she was selected last spring, as outstanding female student in health, physical education and recreation.

She is also a member of Chi Omega social sorority and Cwens and Gamma Phi Beta honoraries and is an Army ROTC sponsor.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Cooper of Cynthiana, she plans to work as a cheerleader again next summer.

Rhonda likes jumping and yelling.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Rhonda Cooper, Cynthiana junior at Morehead State University, spent the summer jumping and yelling.

The brown-eyed varsity cheerleader was an instructor-counselor for the American Spirit Association, which conducts summer cheerleader camps and clinics throughout the country.

As one of 12 instructors, she traveled through 17 states and conducted 11 clinics for cheerleaders ranging from junior-high to college level.

A veteran of nine such clinics herself, the 20-year-old coed has been cheering since the fifth grade. She is in her second year on the MSU varsity squad and also was a freshman cheerleader.

She helped conduct clinics from Sunday through Thursday teaching gymnastics, cheers, skits, pom pom routines, chants, pep rally planning and uniform selection.

During afternoon sessions she conducted remedial work or gave individual instruction. Nights were filled with skits and pep rallies.

"I felt like a preacher, teacher, mother and doctor," Miss Cooper said. "I stayed with the girls as a counselor and, of course, they came to me with all kinds of problems."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---The Army is working to "cure hard-core people problems" Mrs. George S. Patton, wife of a Ft. Knox general, said Tuesday at Morehead State University.

The wife of the commandant of the U.S. Army Armor School at Ft. Knox was addressing more than 200 persons at a national security class meeting.

Mrs. Patton explained that the Army has more than 470,000 married men with more than 861,000 children. "We have the same problems as society as a whole and we are trying to solve them," she said.

She cited the "Big Brother" program, language courses for wives, budget planning courses and race relations programs as efforts to ease the problems.

"The typical Army matriarch is long gone from the scene, and women are now encouraged to do their own thing," Mrs. Patton said.

The national security class is an elective class to inform incoming freshmen of their obligations and options regarding national security.

Thursday's guest speaker will be Air Force Maj. Gen. Daniel James.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Comprehensive planning with a professional approach is necessary to provide workable solutions to the environmental problems of rural development.

Speaking was Martin Pedigo, public affairs officer for the U.S. Corps of Engineers, Thursday at Morehead State University's second Golden Anniversary Rural Development Conference.

"Pollution is a people problem," the keynote speaker said. "Rural development offers us a new chance, a new frontier in which we can benefit from previous mistakes."

"Rural Development may shift some of our society's problems from the cities but it can also solve some of the problems," Pedigo said. "Some developed areas with green space may be established on marginally productive farm land."

Increased public participation with emphasis on obtaining results is needed, he concluded.

Karl Patterson, director of the Solid Waste Training Program of the Kentucky Health Department, said that the least expensive method of solid waste disposal is using sanitary landfills.

"Environmental problems are not restricted to rural Kentucky but are shared by our entire society," said Edward N. Wilson, head of the oil and gas section of the Kentucky Geological Survey.

Coal burning plants contribute 20 per cent of air pollution, said Gilbert E. Smith, head of the coal section of the Kentucky Geological Survey.

Dr. Jerry F. Howell, Jr., MSU's director of environmental studies, discussed MSU's role in solving environmental problems in the region.

He is conducting an environment awareness project in 49 Kentucky counties. Through a series of tests and interviews, his research team has compiled opinions and information pertaining to the residents' knowledge level of the environment.

After the results are compiled, television programs and informational packets will be distributed to schools, community leaders and civic groups in the 49 counties.

The day-long conference is the second in a series. A conference dealing with education in rural America is scheduled Nov. 9.

An 18-member faculty visitation team from Morehead State University spent last Monday at Johnson Central High School.

The faculty team consulted with teachers, administration, and students on careers in academic areas, teaching classes, and conducting demonstrations.

"The faculty visitation team at Johnson Central High School is the third in a series which will be held in the high schools this year," said Morehead State University President Adron Doran, "and it is a good example of the service being extended by our faculty to schools in the region."

Each of MSU's six academic schools were represented last Monday at Central. Each faculty member spent some time discussing the most recent trends in career education in their respective fields. Morehead faculty members attended classes as regularly scheduled and consulted with students and teachers on subject matter areas currently being studied in the high school classes.

They meet with the Principal and Curriculum Director of high schools and faculty at the University before each visitation in order to provide meaningful activities on subjects currently being studied in the schools.

"The opportunity to work with teachers and high school students better enable our faculty to understand the needs of the high school in many areas including the preparation of high school teachers," Dr. Mayhew said after Monday's visit.

Arrangements for Monday's program were coordinated at Johnson Central High School by Willis Conley, the Principal, and Harold Preston, the Curriculum Director.

"The visitation was a very meaningful program," Preston said, "and our teachers and students were very enthusiastic to have the team from Morehead State University."

The faculty visitation program developed at Morehead State University after a number of pilot projects last year which proved to be highly successful.

The MSU Appalachian Adult Education Center has been selected for one of eight honorable mention awards in this year's United Nations Economic Social and Cultural Organization's competition for meritorious work in world literacy.

MSU's program was the United States' entry in the 193-nation competition.

Since its creation in 1966, the center has received nearly $2 million in federal financing. It has initiated numerous educational and research projects throughout the 13-state Appalachian region.

Through the university's Department of Adult and Continuing Education, teachers and officials have been trained to initiate literacy programs in all of the Appalachian region states.

Currently seven graduate students from Thailand are taking adult education classes at MSU through the Agency for International Development program.

George Eyster, executive director of the AAEC, said that the center is the nation's oldest research facility created to combat rural illiteracy.

Some of the center's research findings are now being utilized by federal agencies in their own programs to combat illiteracy in urban areas and among minority groups, Eyster said.

The AAEC includes an adult learning center available to educationally disadvantaged persons in the Morehead area. It offers preparatory work leading to high school equivalency certificates and it is used to test new teaching methods.

One of the AAEC's recent projects was to conduct a follow-up study of 79 students in the Huntington, W. Va., area three years after they earned their high school equivalency certificates.

The study showed that they were employed and contributed $430,000 to the economy. Prior to their training, most were welfare recipients.

Eyster pointed out that the cost for training the 79 persons studied was only $22,000.

Dr. LeRoy, who organized MSU's courses in African history, has spent the past two summers visiting and studying Africa.

In 1971 he toured Ethiopia, Tanzania, Kenya and Uganda. His 1972 visit included Nigeria, Liberia, Gambia, Ghana, Morocco and Senegal.

"When one mentions Africa, the average student thinks of big wild animals and Tarzan," Dr. LeRoy said. Many African cities have modern convenience but the countryside is still primitive, he said.

Some of the African cities have problems similar to those of American cities, he said. Lagos, Nigeria, is trying to develop a tourist attraction around its Tinubu Square but must deal with problems of beggars and open sewers near modern skyscrapers, he added.

Dr. LeRoy has taken thousands of color slides of Africa. "In Lagos I was whisked away by secret police for taking pictures of harbors and public buildings which appear on post cards," he said.

He also had to be cautious with a camera in Zanzibar in 1971. "Tourists are watched closely and are only allowed in certain areas," he said.

In Tangiers, Dr. LeRoy was greeted by the chief educational advisor and also met some government officials. While riding in an official car in Tangiers, he saw one man chasing another with a knife through the city streets.

He visited African universities, including the University of Ibaden in Nigeria. "It has the best university book shop I have seen anywhere," he said. "Each major Nigerian university has a branch of the national archives."

In 1971 he met Gideon Hailemaskel, who was working in a bank in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, and recruited him for MSU.

Gideon enrolled at MSU in January, 1972, and persuaded his former classmate, Samson Bekele, to attend MSU. Samson's father is ambassador to Zaire. Both young men are business majors.

"Because education is scarce and difficult to obtain, Africans value it very highly," Dr. LeRoy said. He distributed MSU catalogs throughout Africa and has received inquiries from potential students.

"I encountered good people wherever I went," said Dr. LeRoy, who plans to return to Africa in two or three years.

Morehead State University expects to award its first associate degrees in nursing next spring.

The Class of 1973 had 21 members when the fall term opened this year. Another 31 enrolled as the Class of 1974.

Since its inception in the fall of 1971, the program has grown to include four full-time faculty members and two part-time instructors.

Classes are conducted on campus with clinical training at St. Claire Medical Center and Daniel Boone Convalescent Center, both in Morehead, Eastern State Hospital in Lexington and Hayswood Hospital in Maysville.

MSU's nursing degree has been approved by the Kentucky Board of Nursing Education and Nurse Registration. Persons who satisfactorily complete the two-year course of study are awarded an associate of applied science degree and are eligible for the state examination to become registered nurses.

New on-campus facilities for nursing are included in the $3.5 million Boyd F. Reed Hall which is now under construction.

Mrs. Doris McDowell is head of MSU's Department of Nursing and Allied Health.

The Missouri Democrat was speaking at Morehead State University's Golden Anniversary Homecoming convocation. He was introduced by Gov. Wendell Ford.

The power to declare war and the power of the purse belong to the Congress instead of the President, Eagleton said.

Eagleton said that President Nixon has "strongly urged that he be given what amounts to an item veto power over appropriations made by Congress."

"This means, very simply, that President Nixon would be empowered to spend funds appropriated by Congress when he approves of the purpose of the expenditure but to withhold such sums when he disapproves," Eagleton said.

By the end of this year, President Nixon will have added nearly $74 billion to the national debt, the senator said.

He closed by praising the legislative abilities of Kentucky Congressman Carl D. Perkins, who attended the speech.

Eagleton 2-2-2-2-2-2

Other Kentucky Democratic leaders on hand were State Sen. Walter (Dee) Huddleston, former Gov. Bert Combs and former Lt. Gov. Harry Lee Waterfield.

Later, in a press conference, Eagleton said that Kentucky is among three states where the Democrats expect to win previously Republican Senate seats this fall. He also listed South Dakota and Michigan.

Eagleton reported he did not agree with polls which show President Nixon getting a majority of America's new young voters.

"Most of the students support George McGovern," he added. The former vice presidential nominee said his departure from the McGovern ticket hurt the campaign at first but that McGovern and running mate Sargent Shriver have recovered and are "climbing steadily."

Eagleton said he planned to seek reelection to his Senate seat in 1974.

The renovation of Rader Hall has been recognized by the Kentucky Society of Architects with an honor award for "achievement of excellence in architecture."

MSU shares the award with the Frankfort architectural firm of Hugg, Carter and Blakeman, Inc. Three earlier winning projects on the MSU campus were designed by the firm's predecessor, Lee Potter Smith, Pritchett, Hugg and Carter, Inc.

A jury of four prominent Chicago architects selected the Rader project for one of eight statewide awards.

The jurors said the renovation of the 46-year-old classroom and office building:

"A very difficult problem of adding to an existing structure of strong character. The solution is very sensitive and compliments the original detail and texture."

The structure was rebuilt and enlarged at a cost of $1.8 million by C. H. Jimison and Sons of Huntington, W. Va. Completed in 1970, the project transformed MSU's oldest building into a modern home for the School of Social Sciences.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Did you know that Abraham Lincoln opposed the Republican Party for two years before joining it?

This little known fact about Lincoln was turned up by a Morehead State University history professor and helped him win an award for historical research and writing.

Dr. Victor B. Howard, a native of Harlan County, received the Harry E. Pratt Memorial Award for his two-part article on the evolution of the Illinois Republican Party. The work was published by the Illinois State Historical Society and was picked as its outstanding article of 1971.

Dr. Howard, a professor of history at MSU since 1966, produced a documented manuscript which revealed that Lincoln, originally, a Whig, tried to preserve his old party for two years before becoming a Republican in 1856.

The research, financed in part by an MSU grant, also turned up new evidence to support claims that Lincoln was not as strongly anti-slavery as certain historians and GOP politicians have portrayed him.

Dr. Howard, who may expand his lengthy article into a book, found the material about Lincoln in his investigation of the life of Ichabod Coddington, an Illinois abolitionist.

In presenting the Pratt award, the Illinois State Historical Society's executive director, Dr. William K. Alderfer, said:

HISTORY PROFESSOR 2-2-2-2-2-2

"The article was written from manuscripts newly discovered by Professor Howard, who presented a new interpretation of the origin of the Republican party in Illinois and of Lincoln's early position concerning the party and the institution of slavery."

The Society said the award was made "in recognition of the exceptional value of his article as a contribution to Illinois and American history and as an acknowledgement of the general excellence, style and accuracy of the original manuscript."

Dr. Howard said he became interested in the Illinois GOP and Coddling while serving 17 years as a high school and junior college teacher in Chicago.

A former principal of Harlan High School, he is a 1940 graduate of MSU and holds a master's degree from George Peabody College and a doctorate in American history from Ohio State.

The professor, who published 18 works in 1971, is married to the former Wilma Bissert of Chicago. They have two children.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Hamp Howard of London, Ky.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---"It's fun to work with young people because they have the enthusiasm without the cynicism," television actress Ann B. Davis said this week at Morehead State University.

Miss Davis, who appears as Alice in ABC-TV's "The Brady Bunch," is starring as Dolly Levi in an MSU Theatre production of "The Matchmaker" through Saturday in Button Auditorium. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

"The students are in a position where everything's possible--- they don't know their limits because they haven't tried many things yet," she said.

The role of Dolly is not new to Miss Davis. She has appeared in about a dozen productions of "The Matchmaker" and has starred in a production of "Hello, Dolly!," the musical version of "The Matchmaker."

This is the third time she has appeared in a play with college students. She performed at the University of Miami and at a Florida junior college.

"Part of what I think I can do in a situation like this is to show what a professional is," she said. "You hear a lot about the deviations from the norm, the stars and starlets who thrive on controversy and publicity--you don't hear as much about the actors and actresses who quietly go about their business."

During the rehearsals for "The Matchmaker," Miss Davis offered a few suggestions about the directions. "Directing is a different talent, and I don't feel that I have it. I directed some one-acts a few years ago, but I really didn't get any satisfaction from it."

Does she do many serious parts? "I don't go for heavy drama because people don't ask me to do it. I took a swing at a couple dramatic things when I was in an actors' workshop, but I'm a comic person and don't do heavy things that well."

To be a success in show business takes "everything far exceeding good sense---talent, luck, stubbornness, survival," she said.

Miss Davis, who won an Emmy Award for her performances as "Schultzy" on "The Bob Cummings Show," offered this advice to young actors:

"You have to learn how to be bad for a while. You have to work with bad directors as well as good directors in order to improve yourself. If you are lucky, you can become a passable actor, maybe get one or two jobs, maybe even make a living at it. It's a weird business. If we knew what the formula is, we'd all be stars."

Appearing at a Morehead State University Golden Anniversary Rural Development Conference, Ginger said he is going to recommend to the State Board of Education that the entrance age for vocational schools be lowered to 15 and that departments of vocational education be established in isolated areas.

"There is a great void in vocational education and in special education," Ginger told the more than 300 persons attending the day-long session.

He stressed the need for smaller classes, more teacher aides and more individualized instruction.

MSU President Adron Doran said the formation of the Appalachian Regional Commission has meant much to Eastern Kentucky and brought national attention to the problems of the 13-state Appalachian region.

"The line of distinction between formal and informal education should be blurred so one is indistinguishable from the other," said Dr. Eugene Hoyt, director of the education activities staff of the ARC.

More than 1,000 persons are expected for the dinner which is being held in conjunction with the MSU Golden Anniversary Celebration. The 7 p.m. banquet will be staged in the ballroom of the Adron Doran University Center on campus. Tickets are $2 and may be purchased from members of the Jaycees or at the Citizens or Peoples banks.

Morehead Mayor William H. Layne and W. E. Crutcher, Publisher of The Morehead News, are co-chairmen of the event. They said, in a joint statement: "Morehead State University has been good for our community and we are asking the people of Morehead and Rowan County to turn out in large numbers to honor our great university on the occasion of her 50th anniversary."

The program will consist of presentations by County Attorney Harvey Pennington and City Attorney Paul Blair. The toastmaster will be George Cline, local attorney who formerly served as United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Kentucky.

Larry Buskirk, pastor of the Morehead United Methodist Church, will deliver the invocation, and Roy Roberson, pastor of the Morehead Christian Church, will offer the benediction.

Highlight of the evening will be the presentation of a large bronze plaque, costing nearly $1,400. The ceremony will be conducted by Crutcher with Mayor Layne and Rowan County Judge Ott Caldwell participating. Dr. Adron Doran, President of Morehead State University, will accept the plaque on behalf of the University.

The plaque, which will be located on the southwestern edge of the campus, reads:

"The citizens of Morehead and Rowan County proudly convey their congratulations and gratitude to President Adron Doran, the faculty, staff and students of Morehead State University on the occasion of the institution's Golden Anniversary, fully realizing that the university is the economic lifeblood of our community and has made Morehead the educational and cultural center of Northeastern Kentucky."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---"Since we spend almost every day and night working on theatre projects, it's nice to be together."

Speaking was by Steve Blaine, Russell senior at Morehead State University, who summarized his feelings and those of his wife, Donna, and Debbie and Greg Bell, the two student families in MSU Theatre.

The couples, among the most active students in MSU's theatre program, feel that being married has helped, rather than hindered, their work and studies.

Greg Bell of Louisville met Debbie Patterson of Covington while working on a theatre production in 1970. "We took off a weekend from technical rehearsals to get married in 1971," Debbie said. "But we were back to work on Monday."

The Bells, who are juniors, have a 10-month-old daughter, Melissa, who is getting an early start in theatre. "I bring her to work with me every afternoon and all day Saturday," Debbie said. "She plays in the costume room and enjoys all the attention from the students."

Steve and Donna Blaine, both seniors, transferred last year from Ashland Community College, where they were active in theatre.

Bell and Blaine have similar interests with both working in set design and construction. Their wives are both concentrating on costume design.

(MORE)

"We got our first chance to really work together last year," Bell said. "I designed the set and Debbie designed the costumes for 'The Boyfriend.'" Debbie's costumes won a best design award from the Morehead Players.

"We were both excited to see our work on stage," Debbie said. She has often taken costume work home with her or gone back at night after the baby went to sleep.

"We have arranged our classes so that one of us is with the baby while the other is in class," Greg said.

The Blaines, like the Bells, have been very active in drama productions since coming to MSU. Donna designed costumes for "Bell, Book and Candle" this fall and designed the set and appeared in "Mary, Mary" during summer school.

"There are several advantages of being in the same field," Blaine said. "We share common interests so we use the same books and supplies."

Both couples plan to enter graduate school and teach on the college level. Bell, whose design for "Romeo and Juliet" is among 11 designs in a touring exhibit sponsored by Southern Illinois University, has not ruled out working as a professional designer.

"All four are exceptional students who show potential," said C. Lance Brockman, MSU's technical director. "They have confidence in their abilities and have done well in positions of leadership."

MOREHEAD, Ky.---In an effort to supply personnel to fill middle-level food management positions, Morehead State University is offering a food service technology degree.

The two-year program emphasizes food management, production, purchasing and personnel management. Students receive practical work at MSU's Institutional Foods Laboratory. They prepare for a faculty dining room which serves about 100 meals each day.

Students enrolled in food service must finish 30 semester hours of course work during the freshman year and 30 hours the second year. During the summer between the two years, they are involved in a field experience which involves working for a food establishment and must complete related class assignments.

The program includes courses in nutrition, food sanitation and safety, food management, meal management, school lunch, quantity food purchasing, organization and administration of food service, problems in management and quantity cookery, dining room procedures and advanced food production management.

Class projects include preparing special meals for the faculty dining room.

FOOD PROGRAM 2 2 2 2 2 2 2

For a recent class project in a management and quantity cookery class, a student presented a "Creole Carnival" featuring jambalaya, rosemary steak and other Creole dishes. He planned the menu, purchased the food and supervised the preparation. The project included selecting background New Orleans jazz music and festive decorations.

Currently 17 students are scheduled to graduate in the spring of 1974. About 40 are listed as majoring in food service.

The two-year program is designed so that a student may return to school and complete the four-year food service administration program with a bachelor's degree. Graduates of the four-year program may enter an internship to become registered dietitians.

The MSU Department of Home Economics is currently surveying Kentucky hotels and motels to determine needs for middle-level management personnel. In addition, community-related seminars for Kentucky food service operators are being planned.

The program is under the supervision of the Department of Home Economics in the School of Applied Sciences and Technology.

Full-time teachers in the food services program are Debrah Chandler and Mrs. Kay Holley, who are registered dietitians and experience in the food service field. Miss Chandler, who supervises the foods lab, has worked in hospitals, restaurants and vending areas.

"This program is really needed because trained middle management people are the hardest to find," Miss Chandler said.

Morehead State University is making an effort to fill that void by preparing trained food service managers.

Col. Arthur L. Kelly, professor of military science at Morehead State University, announced that applications may be obtained from the Commanding General, First U.S. Army, ATTN: Army ROTC Scholarships, Fort Meade, MD 20755.

MSU's voluntary Army ROTC program is considered one of the finest in the country. The junior class is the largest of the 90 schools in a 15-state area offering ROTC, excluding military institutions.

MSU's ROTC enrollment of 327 ranks third in First U.S. Army, which is larger than two other regional institutions combined.

More than 1,000 four-year Army ROTC scholarships paying for tuition, fees, books, and laboratory expenses will be awarded to high school seniors this year. The scholarships pay $100 per month for up to 10 months of the school year.

Upon completing ROTC and graduating from college, scholarship winners are commissioned second lieutenants in the U.S. Army and serve on active duty for four years.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---The Morehead State University Alumni Association has announced plans to construct a $50,000 "alumni house."

Approved recently by the Alumni Association's Executive Council, the two-story, colonial-style facility will be financed entirely by alumni contributions already on hand.

Construction is expected to start next month and be completed by early spring. The structure will rise on the site of the existing Faith Presbyterian Church on University Street near MSU's Claypool-Young Art Building. The church will be razed when the Presbyterians move into a new building north of Morehead.

The "alumni house" will contain more than 4,200 square feet of floor space and will include the offices of the Alumni Association, meeting and reception rooms, display and exhibit space, a lounge, mailing equipment and kitchen facilities.

Funds for the building were provided by more than 300 persons who belong to the MSU President's Club, an organization created for the sole purpose of establishing an alumni facility at MSU.

Alumni Director Don Young said collection of unpaid pledges would resume in the near future and that a new appeal for funds would be launched to finance furnishings and landscaping for the new building.

Billy Joe Hall, president of the Mount Sterling National Bank, has been named chairman of the new drive. Other committee members are State Rep. W. Terry McBrayer of Greenup, Ted Crosthwait of Frankfort, Dr. William Blair of Paintsville, Harold Wilson of Mount Sterling, Roy Caudill of Morehead and Lucien Rice of Cranbury, N. J.

Crosthwait and Rice are former presidents of the Alumni Association. Hall served as the university's first full-time director of alumni affairs.

Dr. Larry Hillman of Detroit, Mich., current president of the Alumni Association, described the project as "the most exciting development in the history of alumni activities at MSU."

The new facility will be built on MSU-owned land and will be available for other university functions when not in use by alumni.

"The lack of suitable land has delayed this project several times and it is only because of the assistance of President Adron Doran and the Board of Regents that we are able to proceed,"

Young added.

He said a formal groundbreaking ceremony would be scheduled later.

Nearly 14,000 persons have received degrees from MSU since the first class was graduated in 1927.
