'Whar is the milk!"

In the pantry, in the dinin' room, dear. Bil didn't say a word, but took some terrible long steps in the dark. He found the dining room again, and the pantry, but he couldn't find the milk anywhere. After trying for about five minutes, he went up stairs again, and leaning against the door to steady himself, asked his wife again:

'Susan, Susanl' eaid he, very particular. Eh—what!' said she, waking up again. Is there any milk in the house!'

I told you there was some milk in the pantry, dear—

Down went Bill again. This time he felt everywhere, and upset everything, making drink milk in his conces, when cusus was at the table.
