INVITES PUBLIC TO EXAMINE RECORDS

Road Projects, Sewing Cent, N.Y.A. Office Employees Are Classified

Answering charges that the federal payroll was being used in Rowan county to build a GOP political machine, a Republican County Judge Charles E. Jennings, declared over his signature that the roll-up was being prepared "without political prejudice or favor."

The matter how hard anyone tries to do a job right there always those who find fault," Jennings declared. "This seems to be true in this case. The roll-up does not substantiate the contention of those seeking an investigation."

Judge Jennings attached a list of the men working on all projects in Rowan county with a tabulation of the end showing how many Democrats and how many Republicans were receiving aid in Rowan county.

His capitulation showed there are 14 Republicans and 189 Democrats on all projects in the county. The politics of eight employees were given as unknown. In addition to this is listed 14 Republicans and 12 Democrats as sewing teams and 4 Republicans and 4 Democrats as furnishing trucks.

The WPA force at Morehead including project superintendents, James Humphreys and foremen, disclosed a total of 28 salaried employees of which 18 are Republicans, 9 Democrats and 1 based on party affiliation.

Hicks To Preside Over Local Meeting

Parade Will Open Rowan Fair Here Friday At 10:30

Over 1,000 Rowan Voters Unregistered

Between 1,000 and 1,200 people in Rowan county who are eligible to vote have not registered, County Clerk C. V. Alfrey estimated today.

Alfrey said that registration had slowed up during the past week. It is expected to gain momentum, however, with the appointment of the Democratic and Republican campaign managers.

The exact date on party registration has not been proclaimed since the primary, but Mr. Alfrey said the estimated 250 Democrats and a like number of Republicans had registered since August 1.

Mr. Alfrey recently issued a statement saying he had received reports that rumors were being circulated that there is a charge of fraud in connection with the election. "There is no charge, whatsoever," he declared, "and the rumors are without foundation."

A parade led by the Morehead college band will officially open the sixth annual Rowan County School and Agricultural Fair in Morehead Friday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

From then on through Saturday the Fair will provide entertainment in the form of a wide variety of exhibits to be on display in the Morehead High school and the public school gymnasium.

The Rev. H. L. Moore, president of the Fair, has been writing for several weeks with his assistants preparing the sixth annual meet to be the most successful thus far. "This is a fair for Rowan citizens and every person in the county is invited to come and participate," The Reverend Moore said in extending a welcome to the people.

Additional space has been provided this year for Fair exhibits, and greater promotion will be made to keep away from the exhibits to include every art and achievement within the county.

ENFORCING LAWS ON THE HIGHWAYS

The highway patrol in Rowan county is becoming more active in arresting speeders and other traffic violators. This is as it should be.

For many years, motorists in Rowan county have disregarded all state laws regarding speeding, parking on highway and other violations of this kind. The result has been that accidents have increased at an enormous rate, and driving has become a greater menace than ever.

We are, by no means, in favor of a speed trap, that would result in unwarranted convictions, and the eventual stalling of criticism from tourist organizations. We do not want tourists to be routed around Rowan, as they were around Carter county several years ago. However, it is to the best interests of every driver, whether he be tourist or a local person, to have law enforcement on the highways. It is a law that needs to be enforced even more than possibly any other statute, for the carrying out of its provisions means a decrease in the loss of lives and maimed bodies.

DISARMAMENT OR PREPAREDNESS?

Writing in Liberty, a magazine which he edits, Bernard MacFadden says that the United States is a sleek, fat lamb—a tempting morsel and a figurative meal for one or more of the lions that represent the world's warlike nations.

He says: "With every other nation armed to the teeth, here we are, little more than a sleek, fat lamb, harmless, unarmed, giving our way nonchalantly, apparently oblivious to the dangers we are facing."

"The average citizen, even though he knows the menace that is facing us, realizes he is helpless in this situation. He may wonder why the officials of our country fail to do something to build up the armaments necessary to protect our people. But he is helpless to do anything beyond voicing his personal criticism."

Mr. MacFadden goes further to say that airplanes could land in New York from almost any country in Europe... that chaos would result to any large city if its water supply were cut off with a well-placed bomb or the gas an electric power snuffed out.

"We have been so busy making money, we have been blinded by our extraordinary progress, we are so impressed with our bigness, that we have acquired the impression that no country would dare to attack us... But you can rest assured that our weaknesses are known, that the vital spots for attack has undoubtedly been recorded in the war offices of our possible enemies."

There is much logic and sound reasoning in what Mr. MacFadden writes on this subject. It has long been a matter of debate whether the United States should pursue a policy of preparedness or disarmament to insure longer peace. The latter has prevailed so far, but with every nation arming to the teeth, with every peace treaty abolished or ignored, it appears to be time for the United States to start casting in safer waters. A strong armed force protecting our borders would make Americans feel more secure and instill more feeling among Americans that war is farther away.

THE MAN AND THE DOLLAR

We read of numerous strikes throughout the nation—of threatened walk-outs—of disagreements between labor and capital. Is American labor and capital at odds? Sometimes they are, but for every strike that is called there are thousands of other plants where men are working agreeably and are satisfied.

As a whole capital and labor are not at odds. They are so very necessary to each other for both to exist. This is all explained in an "easy-to-decipher" manner in a bulletin issued by the Lee Clay Products Company of Fairfield, which reads, in its entirety: "A man stands at your back door, a stocky man with a round, good-humored face. He is dressed in worn shirt and pants and a weather-beaten hat is on his head. You hand him a dollar and the smile on his face makes you believe the popular statement that the man is more important than the dollar. But is he?"

"This man does odd jobs around your house. The dollar you paid him was for fixing the screen door which had warped. But before he could do the job you had to give him a screwdriver that cost you around a dollar. You had to give him a plane that cost a couple of dollars. You had to give him a hammer that cost another fifty cents.

"Capital," says the dictionary, "is that part of wealth which is devoted to the production of more wealth." In other words, all capital is tools, whether the tool is a screwdriver or a die that stamps out automobile bodies. It is as useless to talk about the workman and the dollar, as though they stood in opposition to each other, as it is to argue whether lungs are more important than air. Each needs the other. Capital needs labor and labor needs capital.

"Without the dollar, man cannot live. How many productive jobs can you think of that can be done without tools? Particularly is man's dependence on the dollar evident as industry becomes more and more mechanical. As tools become more complex and capable of producing more, they become more costly and more dollars are required to set a man to work."

A leading automobile manufacturing company recently pointed out that they had to provide $2,008 of land and plants, $2,670 of machinery and $665 of raw materials in order to put one average workman to work. Add that up. It makes more than $5,000 for each worker's tools, using the word in the broadest sense.

"This same company had also to provide a large amount of working capital for each employee in order to carry the materials over from the raw state until the time the finished car was sold. That working capital is as much a tool and as necessary to production as any machine.

"This same story can be repeated in any industry. Railroads, in trucks, locomotives, roundhouses, terminals, and the like, provide more than $5,000 worth of tools for each worker.

"The steel industry requires still more to finance and maintain the average job. Here the figure required to put a man to work stands at $11,500. Of this amount, $4,000 is needed for the necessary real estate, buildings and other equipment.

"Here is the secret of America's high living standard. We have more tools, more machines. The average American workman has more than the workman in other countries because he can produce more with the help of the tools supplied by capital.

"To talk of capital being on one side of the fence and labor on the other is nothing less than nonsense."

WIDER SCOPE OF LIFE INSURANCE

The remarkable progress that has been made in extending the scope of life insurance in the last decade or two receives less notice than it deserves.

In pre-war days, the prospective policyholder had his choice of a rather small number of policy contracts. So-called "straight life" was about the only kind of insurance most buyers knew about, with endowments running in second place.

Today the buyer can obtain insurance that, like straight life, is 100 per cent protection. He can obtain insurance that, like some annuities, is 100 per cent straight investment—that guarantees him an old age income. And he can obtain policies that give him both protection for dependents and investment for himself. This last form is becoming the most popular of all.

Even the life insurance agent today is much better able to prepare a policy program suitable to the needs of the individual than he used to be, so is the modern life insurance company working to create policies which meet almost every human exigency.

One Year Ago This Week

Local officers began an investigation into the mysterious death of Marion Smith at Gates. Smith's body was run over by a Chesapeake and Ohio train, but officers held the belief that he was murdered and then placed on the tracks.

An overflow courthouse crowd heard King Swope, Republican nominee for governor, score Chandler and Dan-Talbott in an address here.

"The Messiah" is the title of the oratorio that was selected by the Morehead Civic Chorus for presentation in December.

Charlie Crumm of Elliott county died in a Lexington hospital of a bullet wound allegedly inflicted by Ed Hall, Morehead patrolman.

Morehead's first amateur hour was planned for Friday by the Morehead Woman's club.

WHAT OTHER KENTUCKY EDITORS ARE SAYING

Pardon Pleas, 'A Terrific Strain'

Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson, who was the acting governor of Kentucky for two weeks while Governor Chandler was away on vacation, writes a daily editorial captioned "Diary of a Substitute Governor" for his Richmond Daily Register. This from his Monday's diary:

"Numerous pleas for pardons. Applicants disappointed when explained that attitude of government of refusing to interfere with court decrees unaltered and I am willing to be the first to deviate.

"Touchingly tragic the pardon pleas of frail, stooped, aged mothers. Their unshaken faith in wayward sons is sublime. Certain are these mothers that never again would the son for whom clemency is sought offend against the law of the state. Dejected and depressed, they depart reluctantly. I could have sent them away happy, with a pardon that would have opened prison cell of that son and restored his freedom.

"But that boy committed murder. A life sentence was conferred by the court. My duty it is to protect society from one who murders in his heart.

"Am about ready to conclude that the office of commissioner of pardons should be re-created, all consideration of clemency be referred there. The governor spared. A terrific strain offone's emotions. These pathetic pleas of troubled, helpless mothers."—Shelby News.

HE DESERVES A BREAK

THIS WEEK IN MOREHEAD

REGISTRATION: Despite the fact that Republicans gained slightly on the week's vote registration at the county clerk's office, local GOP's are worried apologetically.

There is good reason for concern among local party leaders. It appears to be a physical impossibility to divide the 500 registration lead that the Democrats now hold, even though every unregistered voter is brought in. The fact of the matter is that Rowan county has at least 300 more Democrats than it has Republicans—possibly an even greater margin.

Although Republicans would like to carry the county for Landon this fall that is not the major cause for concern. The fly in the ointment is that county elections will come up in 1937—marking the bitterest campaign issues and fights of any election.

FACTIONAL BATTLES: The past two years have seen so much spread upon the turbulent waters of strife within the Democratic party here. Actually, the fight in the ointment is that county elections will come up in 1937—marking the bitterest campaign issues and fights of any election.

Rowan Republicans are depending upon that factionalism to again carry them through the county elections. At this time it appears that the Republicans are lining their hopes upon a solid foundation, for little or nothing has been or probably will be accomplished within the past year in cementing the Democratic party in Rowan county.

Many so-called Democratic leaders who are pleading for harmony are, themselves, causing a spreading dissension through recommendations for jobs and the like.

Unless something is done within the next year, it can be pretty safely assumed on the basis of past elections, that the Democrats will have a whale of a primary fight, with the factionalism never being. One of the prime reasons for this is that C. P. Duley was elected this year over Junior Warden of the state stage, while many progressive young people of high-moral character have been awarded membership in the lodge.

For many years Mr. Duley has worked faithfully and well for the Masonic cause. The place that he has achieved within the lodge is no more worthy than the man that holds it.

Morehead is to be commended as the home of a man as outstanding in lodge circles as is C. P. Duley.

COLLEGE BAND: Morehead people often overlook one of the greatest student assets at Morehead college—that is the band which is directed by, Marvin George. This 60-piece organization will play this week for the school at Agricultural Fair. Throughout the year it will be seen in many other leading roles—at football games, parades and concerts.

For the last two or three years the band has made remarkable progress, and has been enlarged this year. The band will be clad in new uniforms this year.

The conference will take their keynote from this year's Red Cross Roll Call slogan—"The People's Red Cross." Your Family Coat-of-Arms

The arms shown here are borne by the descendants of the Rev. Nathaniel Rogers who came to Boston in 1630 and later settled at Ipswich, Massachusetts. It was believed by members of the Rogers family that their American ancestor was the grandson of John Rogers, the compiler of the first authorized edition of the English Bible and who under Queen Mary's reign was burned at the stake in 1555 for his part in the English Reformation. This family tradition was proven without foundation by the researches of Col. Chester in 1861.

The father of the above mentioned Nathaniel was the Rev. John Rogers of Dedham. A description of Arms: On a silver background a red chevron; three black roses; with dual coronets. Crest: A standing hound with a ducal coronet.

The second conference will be held in Hopkinsville in the Westminster Presbyterian church on September 29th, with Mr. Elmer Moss, Chairman of the Hopkinsville Chapter presiding. Among the topics listed for discussion at this conference are disaster preparedness, home hygiene, safety program, and a resume of Red Cross work in Kentucky during the past year, the latter to be given by Miss Riley. Mr. Dix will address the conference on the subject "Shall We Move Forward?" Mr. Carr will develop the conference theme, and Mrs. Matson will speak on Junior Red Cross.

On the following day a conference will be held in Owensboro at the Owensboro Hotel. Mr. Edward Smith will preside at this meeting, and Mike Callas, Chairman of the Owensboro chapter, will greet the delegates. Miss Riley, Mr. Carr and Mrs. Matson will speak at this conference.

The fourth meeting is scheduled for Frankfort on October 1. Forest Alvin will preside at the conference which will be held in the Capital Hotel. The national headquarters speakers include Mrs. Connolly, Mr. Sayer, Mr. Carr and Mr. Jones. Mrs. W. L. Reams, of the Middleboro chapter, will discuss home hygiene and care of the sick, and members of the First Aid Squad of the L. & N. railroad shop will present an accident prevention and first aid playlet entitled "Home, Sweet Hazardous Home."

On Monday, Mr. G. C. Sutherland, safety director of the Inland Steel Corporation of Wheelwright, will speak on the subject of Accident Prevention and First Aid at a conference to be held in the South Methodist church in Prestonsburg. R. C. Thomas will preside at this meeting. Other speakers will be Mrs. Connolly, Mr. Sayer, Mr. Carr, and Miss Ella V. White, Executive Secretary of the Floyd county chapter, who will speak on disaster preparedness.

At the conclusion of each of the conferences, the film "The American Red Cross to the Rescue," depicting relief work in the 1936 spring floods and tornadoes will be shown.

"THE DAY OF THE LORD"

TEXT: "But the day of the Lord will come." II Peter 3:10.

Many of my readers will doubtless think strange that I should use this opportunity for a message so lacking in inspiration. However, I cannot refrain from this use of it. There has never been a day when we so much need to be reminded that the day of the Lord is coming. This is something which we, in this fast age, have almost forgotten. So much the worse to meet Him, having forgotten to prepare.

The text assures us of one thing: The day of the Lord WILL come. It is true that we have come to feel that it will not, but the certainty of that great day has never changed in the slightest degree. The writer here tells us that this is one thing of which we can be certain. We may not know when, nor how, but we can be assured that the day WILL come.

This is not the first age in which the day of the Lord has been questioned. Nor was it unknown that such questions would arise. Peter tells us here that "there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, 'Where is the promise of his coming?' for since the fathers fell asleep all things continue as they were from the beginning of creation." But, says Peter, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness; but is long-suffering to us-ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." Then he says, with the assurance of the text: "But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up."

All along the way some have said He is not coming. And today, more than ever, they argue that this old preaching about the coming of the Lord is just superstition. That is what people thought when Noah was building an ark, and telling people of the coming destruction. They thought he was crazy. Any man who preaches old fashioned Bible truth in this day is counted crazy by some people. But a real preacher hasn't anything else to preach but Bible truth. Plenty of them may be doing it, but they have no business doing it. If the coming of Christ is real, and I have no idea of anything else, then it is mighty serious, more serious than any political movement of men or nations today.

The devil would deceive us into believing that such things in the Bible are merely figurative, and that they do not mean that Christ is literally coming. I heard a man of high reputation say over the radio the other day: "I am not interested in the literal coming of Christ; I think of His as coming every day into the lives of our people." And, that makes mighty pretty preaching. It sounds smooth and soft, has no stirring elements, makes us purr in our own goodness, and do nothing about it. With that kind of teaching we can go on about our business and just let Christ come into the world if He wants to and if He doesn't, it won't effect us any way. We think we have freed ourselves from these superstitions and now we can go on unclurled, unrestrained, in selfish, lustful living. The wise will not be so deceived. "Be not deceived; God is mocked," says the scriptures. Shall God utter the promise of His coming again, and then let the world mock Him? By all means. Not the certainty of Christ's coming is marked by the clock of God. In His long-suffering mercy He pleads with us to make ready to meet Him.

But what shall we do? We have sin upon us, and God cannot tolerate sin. Nations have broken their honor, and individuals have sold their integrity for gold. The spirit of selfishness is arising as never before, and gluttonous conquest is on. Recently we have seen the veneer of civilization stripped from a nation who, in selfish conquest, tore another nation to pieces. Others are preparing for like movements, and it is not impossible, nay, improbable, that we shall soon be engulfed in a world conflict of selfish conquest. Is that the way to prepare to meet God? Will He crown the nation who has conquered? No! This world shall become His footstool, and those who cling to it as their possession shall be crushed beneath His feet.

Preparation to meet Christ when He comes must be made in the individual heart. No matter what a nation or people does, each of us can make our souls white and clean in the blood of the crucified Lamb. There is no Gospel but the Gospel of the individual. Every man has his own case with God. Every man who agrees with God on Jesus Christ as a substitute will be saved. There is no other way for us to prepare to meet Him. If we fail to meet Him now in mercy, we shall then have to meet Him in judgment. It will be too late then for mercy to help us. Our country may be rich, and have high educational systems, and be cultured in every respect, and be a powerful nation under heaven, but that will not satisfy for our individual souls. We are each of us, out of harmony with God, and we can never meet Him in peace until the blessed harmony has been restored.

Why are we out of harmony with God? Because God gave His only begotten Son to die for us, and to show His love for us. But the world has refused that Son. Those who have received Him and owned Him as Saviour have come into this blessed harmony. But God can never bring peace to a soul who will not admit the crucified Saviour, and own Him as Lord. "He that believeth not is condemned already." Why? "Because he hath sinned?" No, though God hates sin. Yet, He loves sinners. And He is not condemning us because we are sinners, because we have always been that. He is condemning us because we have refused the Christ who died for us. That is one offense which will never admit us to peace with God. You can't refuse Jesus as Saviour, rejecting God's love, and ever expect to meet God in peace. That is why we are out of harmony with God. So, if we will own Christ as Lord and Saviour, God will forgive our sins and bring us heavenly peace.

This will mean that the Judgment is past for us. I am a child of God by the miracle of the new birth. "By grace," I have been saved, "through faith." No judgment of sin awaits me, for my judgment passed when Jesus died on Calvary. I shall come into a judgment of my works, to receive a reward, but sin has been paid for in Calvary. Thus, I am at peace with God, through the satisfaction made by Jesus who died for me. So am I a child of God, to receive His blessing and help, and to be an heir of God and a joint heir with Jesus Christ. In this way I have been made ready to meet Christ when He comes, whether I be living or dead.

Every soul who comes this way, trusting this Christ, recognizing His love, and believing that God does accept Him, may have this experience of the incoming Holy Spirit who tells us He is in us to live evermore.

But what of those who do not honor the Lord by recognizing the death of Christ? There can be but two possible endings, Heaven or Hell? God urges His preachers to press this truth to the front. It is much easier to talk of sweet inspirational things, and to conjecture about world problems and movements, and give moral advice. But let us not bury this serious warning: "But the day of the Lord WILL come." If that be true, everything hinges on preparation for that day.

Each of us must meet the Christ who comes again. We cannot afford to trifle about our preparation. For, HE WILL COME!

Jennings declared: "We are not trying to hide anything for we feel we have not allowed politics to enter this work in Rowan county. Two weeks ago Democratic senators and congressmen were prevailed upon by several local Democrats for an investigation of the Rowan county set-up, and Jennings' report followed a four-day examination by a Mr. Smith of the district office.

HARLAN CARTER'S EYE EXTRACTED, LEXINGTON

One of Harlan Carter's eyes was extracted at the St. Joseph hospital at Lexington this week. Carter was injured in an automobile wreck almost a month ago. Mrs. William Skaggs was brought to her home here from the St. Joseph after spending 13 days in the hospital where she underwent a major operation for the removal of a tumor. She is recovering rapidly.

Urges Complete Use of Corn Crop

S. C. Jones of the College of Agriculture, a member of the Kentucky drought committee, urges farmers to make complete use of the corn crop. This, he says, can be done. 1. By placing the crop in silos where available. 2. By applying the crop in trench silos. 3. By cutting the crop, shocking, curing and sheltering. There will be more barn room for storing fodder because of the short hay and tobacco crops. Shredding conserves space and improves palatability.

Corn fodder constitutes from a fourth to a third of the value of the crop. It is rich in carbohydrates or energy and fat-making material and is a good substitute for grass hays. It is low in protein and gives best results when fed with legume hay.

Kentucky's three million-acre corn crop, if saved and utilized along with other feed products grown in the state, would practically take care of the feed problem.

Communities that have had main can greatly benefit themselves financially by feeding rough feeds and selling good hay and corn to drought communities in need of feed.

Cave Romance Ends - As 'Pa' Takes Bride

Romance in a cave, where they took up "housekeeping" following their marriage last Saturday, ended Wednesday for Ben Porter, 19-year-old member of a tenant-farmer family, and his bride, Vera Grimes, 14, of Cleves, Ohio. Vera's father came to Bowling Green today and took his daughter back home, leaving Porter behind. The girl had made the cave her home for three weeks. Deputy Sheriff Boyd Downey said: Officers first arrested her 15 days ago when residents of the Lost River community south of here notified them of the cave-dweller.

After being held in jail four days the girl was released, when efforts to identify her had failed. A few days later she was married to Porter, who lives on 12 1/2 acres. The youth, who the officer said, where the cave was located, was one of a family of eight, residing in two rooms. He and his bride took to the cave.

They were living there when officers called today at the request of the girl's father. Vera didn't leave without a battle. Downey said, screaming and kicking as officers took her away. She told officers she was married to Gallatin, Tenn. and that she had hitch-hiked to Bowling Green.

Seven Sinners' At College Theatre

Film, Starring Edmund Lowe, Constance Cummings, Friday Night

"Seven Sinners," a mystery drama fashioned to provide Edmund Lowe and Constance Cummings with the best roles of their careers, is to be the attraction Friday at the College Theatre.

Based on a story by Arnold Ridley and Bernard Merivale, "Seven Sinners" sends an American detective and a girl chasing from Nice to Paris and then to London in pursuit of the gang, and particularly its clever and fiendish leader, engaged in a whole series of crimes, from murder to gun running and train wrecking.

It is from the train wrecks that the picture reaches a new high in green excitement and it is in one of these accidents that the hero gets his first clue and proof that the wreck was not an accident, but the work of a murderer to cover up his crime, for one of the passengers on that express

The picture is reported by those comedy as well as thrill and train was dead when he got on! who previewed it as abounding in mystery. The dialogue belongs in the modern school of wise-cracking. There is romance, too.

Albert de Courville directed this GB picture, the cast of which includes in support of Lowe and Miss Cummings, Thommy Bourdelle, a celebrated French actor, Joyce Kennedy, Henry Oscar, Felix Aylmer and others.

Fifteen minutes of exercise daily would eliminate one of America's traditional characters—the Tired Business Man, butt of jokes and mainstay of bald-headed row at the theatre.

During the production of Paramount's "Anything Goes," Bing Crosby frequently had to work at the studio for 14 hours at a stretch. Yet, to his own amazement, he invariably appeared the following morning absolutely refreshed.

The secret rests in the system worked out by Richard Kline, Paramount physical culture expert, to maintain the vitality of stars under pressure.

The physical culturist took time off to instruct Crosby on how to keep fit. He was told to go on a diet with a high alkaline content. For breakfast he was allowed orange juice and a baked apple or a spierdick.

For luncheon and dinner, he had the choice of spinach, broccoli, brussels sprouts, cabbage, beef and other vegetables. Lamb chops were allowed once or twice a week. Desert consisted of custard, a baked apple and cream.

Each day during production, Crosby was put on a stationary bicycle to ride half a mile, working up speed gradually. This was followed by deep breathing exercises to rest respiration. Next came work on a hydraulic rowing machine, a series of abdominal exercises on an inclined board, and slow stretching calisthenics.

Any man, says the singing star, can keep fit, by following this program.

Supporting Crosby in "Anything Goes," which comes next Sunday to the Cozy Theatre, are such popular favorites as Ethel Meriman, Charlie Ruggles, Ida Lupino, and Grace Bradley.

ed, code of living straightforward and trust.

General Jackson regarded her as the one woman in the world. At the same time he was conscious of one condition to which he was subjected in coming to this alien and artificial environment. He had heard many a report of the ways of the gossip-mongers and society snobs of Washington. He realized that the attitude might be toward Mrs. Jackson's homely mannerisms, such things as the "rawkin' cheer" she always carried about with her, and the clasp she favored. He hoped that his position as United States senator would carry with it a degree of social security for both, but he knew that if it did his difficulty in reaching so intangible an enemy.

When Rachel Jackson, whose thoughts ran along the same lines, gave a sigh, the General put out a reassuring hand. "I ain't nuthin', Gen'ral," she said. "I ain't worried."

"Them social spew-cats can't bother us," answered her husband. "I'm Senator Jackson now."

"You could be President Jackson," responded Rachel. "But it is nuthin' to stop 'em. There's nuthin' in this world as mean and vicious as the way women cut toward somebody they look down on."

Peggy ran forward to embrace the Jacksons.

"When a woman looks down on somebody," said Jackson, "in most cases you'll find it's somebody she should be lookin' up to."

"There's another reason in my case," said Rachel with a tired smile. "It's 'cause I'm married to a set man in the country an' they know it!"

Three sharp blasts sounded on the coach horn. The horses were in a hurry to abrupt her. She there came a murmur of excited voices from outside. Cuthbert and Horatius rushed from the Inn to provide amny first aid for the protruding bundles of baggage, and Major O'Neale, who had been waiting for the General, stepped forward to clasp the hand of "Old Hickory."

"Where's Peg?" asked Jackson abruptly, when the first greetings had been exchanged. "Still lollin' abed, I'll warrant, when she ought to be up gittin' a man some breakfast."

Major O'Neale was about to make some excuse when Peggy herself flashed across the doorway and ran forward to embrace the Jacksons. She had become extremely fond of them during their earlier visit to Washington and she even called the fierz General "Uncle Andy." Now, as Cuthbert wrestled with Rachel's rocking chair and hawcock, she bundled the all-night travelers inside the tavern and made sure that the cook was roused into action to prepare a hearty Tennessee-style breakfast.

Later that morning, while the Jacksons took their ease, Peggy kept her appointment for a more thorough palm-reading by Professor Sunderland. The appointed rendezvous was a little rose arbor in a secluded corner of the garden. The Professor, evidently determined to give satisfaction, had brought with him such accessories as a crystal ball, a horoscope board and a pack of playing cards. As he entered into a long and glowing presentation of the wealth and social career that lay ahead of his attractive subject, Peggy sat back in her chair and drank in his words.

"You really mean that there is a future like that ahead of me?" she asked. "A future that has nothing to do with bills and lodgin' and taxes?"

"Absolutely," said Professor Sunderland. "Your hopes and dreams will be fulfilled a thousand fold."

"How do you know?" queried Peggy breathlessly.

"Did we of the occult sciences not believe in our calling," said Sunderland with dignity, "we would never have dedicated our lives to it. He placed a hand on her arm. "It is impossible to go into everything here. There is a place near the Capitol, where great men come to learn of their future. Were it possible for you to meet there—if you had a deeper interest, I promise, faith, and courage, I will meet you," said Peggy, leaning forward. "Anywhere you say."

Sunderland, apparently moved by her expression of confidence, put his arms gently about her. "Tweezer-bye McCornib street," he whispered. "Three o'clock tomorrow. You won't disappoint me."

"I promise to be there," said Peggy, half under the spell of his personality, half afraid to commit herself further. "I must go now." She disengaged herself and slipped away.

As she picked up a vegetable basket and directly her steps to the kitchen door she became aware of a strong masculine voice, somewhere overhead, pounding out an inopportune sea chantey. Peggy stepped backwards and looked up to a second story window, where Bow Timberlake, his face covered with lather, was performing the double ceremony of shaving and giving vent to song. His face lightened up as he saw Peggy and with one motion he dabbed the soap from his face and leaped over the window sill to the drain-pipe, sliding none too gracefully to the ground.

"What had he cried. "A plink pearl tossed up on the reef!" He looked at her with a half-jesting smile. "If I asked your hand in marriage, what would my answer be?"

"I'd give you a betrothal present," replied Peggy quickly.

"Let me see it."

"First close your eyes."

Bow obeyed, while Peggy surreptitiously selected the largest

"By the Eternal!" the General was calling out "I'll slit your black eyes if you don't stop that contemptible cigar smoking!"

Peggy decided that she was needed in the role of peacemaker. When she entered Jackson's room Rachel was making a determined effort to quiet her husband, while Horatius diddled about futilely with the flues and draughts in the wooden stove.

"Tain't good for you, Gin'ral, to rampage on and empty stumblin'," said Rachel.

Peggy hurried over to the stove, turned a draught valve, and in a justify the smoking had ceased. Jackson peered through his spectacles at Horatius, who was winking away.

"See?" he cried. "That's all you had to do, you hollow-pated post-walloper. Now get out of her and bring me somethin' to eat!"

"By the Eternal," mimicked Peggy, "you must be hungry!"

"Listen," retorted Jackson, after he had recovered from the shock of this impudence. "What was that snake-eyed feller in the garden talkin' to you about?"

"Telling me? Nothing but my fortune," said Peggy, realizing that one of the servants must have reported her secret meeting.

"Well, don't you let me see no more shenanigans goin' on!" replied the General. "I don't like fellers that do a lot of hand kissin'." When he saw Peggy's face drop in his manner lightened. "Now give me a kiss yourself and git out."

(Next week: Peggy disregards General Jackson's advice, and keeps her appointment with Prof. Sunderland. The consequences are more far-reaching than even the General could have suspected.)

Tennessee Gridiron Match Is Cancelled

The football game scheduled for Saturday between Morehead and Tennessee Wesleyan has been cancelled, according to an announcement made today by Eagle Coach Ellis Johnson. It has been known for some time that this game might be cancelled.

Distance of the trip to the Tennessee school and the fact that Morehead will play Murray the following week were given as the reasons for the cancellation.

The Morehead varsity and freshmen will be seen in a regulation game at Joyce Stadium Saturday afternoon. All of the freshmen prospects arrived yesterday and today are being whittled in shape to meet the varsity team. The freshman group includes as likely a bunching of first-year talent as Morehead has ever had.

Ellis Johnson and Len Miller worked the varsity out on a number of pass formations today, streamlining the squad with through the workout with vim and lots of spirit. One brightening note was that Jarrell Vinson seems to have lost little of the art he has in tossing a pigskin around. The Louisia boy was singing them from 10, 20, 30 and 40 yards like a bullet directly into the hands of the receiver. Vinson started the practice off by getting athlete's foot but he apparently has fully recovered.

With a light and comparatively inexperienced team, Johnson expects to use a lot of passes this year for the team lacks the beef and much of the speed necessary for a smart running style. Play More will be heard of this boy Vinson's passing ability before the season is over.

Two pretty fair kickers are under development. They are Clyde Alley, the only senior on the squad who did much of the varsity playing last year, and Fair, a sophomore. Fair has been getting off the best kicks in practice, but has not been trusted under fire. Because he can run with the ball and is a good defensive man, Alley is likely to get the starting assignment in the backfield in place of Fair.

All players on the squad started from scratch, but at this time most of the boys are showing up above the others. Hammond at one end, Brashear at tackle, and Horton, center, appear pretty well assured of starting berths. Hammond and Horton are sophomores while Brashear was a star line man

Drouth Insurance Planned By F. D. R.

President Announces Plan Sunday; To Be Carried On Small Basis

President Roosevelt will call for immediate action toward a two-fold crop insurance and drouth prevention program to guard the nation's farmers and consumers against the danger of crop failures or price collapses. Appointment of two committees to work out specific programs for presentation to the next congress was announced in letters made public by the White House before the President left for Hyde Park, N. Y.

Mr. Roosevelt named Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace chairman of a committee directed to "prepare a report and recommendations for legislation providing a plan of 'all risk' crop insurance," and suggested that the system provide for payment of premiums and insurance in commodities.

The announcement followed a public suggestion by Wallace for a plan under which farmers would put part of their crops of good quality into a pool from which they could draw in lean years. It would serve to keep surpluses from depressing the price structure in good years and provide an "insurance" year.

Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification agent, in other department, was named chairman of another committee to draft recommendations for a permanent land use program designed to avert drouth emergencies in the great plains area.

The President suggested the crop insurance plan might be limited to wheat or two major crops at the start and that it should be formulated with the advice and assistance of national farm organization leaders so that it can be submitted to congress with their support.

Vego Barnes Takes Campaign Position

Vego E. Barnes, newly-elected Democratic state campaign chairman, took office Sunday in Louisville at the meeting of the campaign advisory committee. John J. Greenleaf, retiring campaign director, was deposed by the Democratic State Central and Executive Committee at a recent meeting in Frankfort, Ky. present. Mr. Greenleaf said that he will remain in Louisville part of this week to conclude all details of running over the chairmanship to Mr. Barnes, but declined an offer to remain in any other capacity in campaign headquarters.

Mr. Barnes said that it is his plan to make as few changes as possible in the campaign chairman for the counties. He said those changes would be of "bolters" or those antagonistic to the governor's administration.

SPORTS

Bruce Dudley, writing in Monday's Courier-Journal of the Morehead college football prospects said: "The Morehead team looks weak to me, but Johnson was aglow with its prospects."

Dudley has been around to see nearly every team in the state practice. The mere statement that he says Morehead looks weak to him is a sort of damper on Morehead, for he has viewed in action the college elevens that Morehead will have to beat if they expect victories this fall.

As a matter of fact, Ellis Johnson is not half so optimistic over Morehead's chances as Dudley would have you believe. Johnson is working hard with the boys, putting them through their paces and taking it as he gives it out. There has been a great improvement since the team was called to the first practice. But it cannot be denied that chances for victory this year are pretty lean.

The material, such as it is, will not stack up in weight or excellence with that of the teams that Morehead will play. It is the fault of no one. Morehead is a young school, just starting on the road to sports' achievement. It will take years to attract the first-class talent to the school.

The boys on the squad will carry with them as much of more fight and spirit than any team they play. They have their hearts and minds set on winning and perchance the old saying that you can't beat anyone that just won't be beat will hold good with the Eagles this fall.

Johnson says the Morehead team will average 160 pounds. On the face of it this appears fairly good. However, Morehead's opponents will outweigh the Eagles many pounds to the man. Their training will, on an average, have been over a longer period of years. In most cases they will be better football players this year.

But, as has been written in this column several times before Morehead will not be discriminated if they do not win many games this fall. It is the future that is eyed by Eagles and Eagle fans. Key things in years to come is the keynote. Morehead will, if this spirit holds out and the cooperation of times, bring a trail of sports victory across the horizon of Kentucky's college gridirons in seasons to come.

Breckinridge Halts Football Work-Outs

It was announced here today that Breckinridge Training school would definitely drop football as a sport this year. Lack of material, and reluctance to send a small light team against high school elevens were given as the reasons for the abolishment of the sport.

Bobby Laughlin, coach, is now helping Ellis Johnson and Len Miller with the Morehead freshman team.

Breckinridge has always been unable to successfully cope with either high schools in this section in football because the team has been outwreathed several pounds to the man.

Large Crowd Hears Dr. Fern's Sermon

Doctor Fern was in his pulpit at the First Christian church Sunday morning for the first time since vacation, and he was greeted with a large audience. The Bible school had an unusually large attendance. The audience at the preaching service was large and there were four additions to the church.

The program of the church opens in earnest next Sunday. Dr. Fern will preach at both the morning and night services. The Bible school begins at 9:45 a. m. The preaching services come at 10:45 a. m. and 7:15 p. m. The Christian Endeavor or young peoples' meeting comes at 8:30 p. m.

The past year was one of the best, if not the best year, in the history of the church. The plans are to make the coming year the very best of all. A campaign will soon be launched to reach the un-reached and to church the un-churched.
