The registration ran about true to form in the eyes of most Democratic and Republican politicians, since it had been generally agreed that the Democrats held a lead of around 350 over Republicans in the county despite the fact that the GOP's have carried it in the last two major elections.

Mrs. Day Escapes Conviction on Murder Count by 'Skin of Teeth'

Difference in Opinions of Jurors Disclosed by Analysis of Manner in Which Three Of Them Deadlocked

Three hung juries will, if customary procedure is followed, result in Mrs. Bessie Day's dismissal on a charge of slaying her son-in-law, Oscar "Red" Williams of Marion, Indiana, over an altercation that grew out of the custody of Williams' child, here two years ago.

"But, Mrs. Bessie Day is getting out by the skin of her teeth, so to speak."

Her three trials are ample evidence of the adage that, "you can never tell what a jury will do." It was generally agreed among courtroom spectators that Mrs. Day would draw either an acquittal or a hung jury—either of which would have been in her favor—at the third hearing. But her dramatic reversal of the verdict and opinions of 10 of those 12 jurors who almost convicted Mrs. Day.

CONGRATULATIONS MINISTERS

This week marks the end of a series of sermons which the Independent has published through the financial support of a number of business houses in Rowan county to thank the stores for their assistance and the ministers of the Morehead churches for the splendid material that they have supplied weekly.

We know that these sermons have reached thousands of Rowan county people, bringing them enlightenment and enjoyment through the reading of carefully prepared material. The Reverends B. H. Kazee, G. H. Fern, H. L. Moore, and T. F. Lyons deserve the majority of credit for these sermons and thanks from the editor and the many readers of this paper.

Realizing that the churches occupy one of the principal spots in the well-being of any community it shall always be the policy of this newspaper to foster and cooperate in any endeavor that they might undertake.

SATURDAY AND NIGHT CLASSES

The Saturday classes being inaugurated at the Morehead State Teachers College are designed primarily for school teachers, who are unable to go to school except on this day, but at the same time should prove beneficial to Morehead people—especially housewives—who can not spare more than a half-day each week to go to school.

Morehead townpeople should take advantage of these classes as they furnish a means of bettering oneself educationally at little expense and time. The best type of instruction available is offered in these classes, with full college credit being given.

Administrative officers of the institution were highly pleased with the number that registered for the "Good Manners" class which is held on each Monday evening. Over 200 are in this class. It is so arranged that one cannot help but secure needed and helpful advice and instruction of all social and hygiene subjects.

There is no charge for registering in the "Good Manners" class. The tuition is $12.50 and one-half the amount of a regular student, for the Saturday afternoon and the night classes which will be started later.

These special classes are the idea of Dean William H. Vaughan who is successfully carrying them through. Within a few years Morehead college can reasonably expect to have at least 100 additional students through these special courses.

ADVERTISING AGAIN COMES THROUGH

Several weeks ago in the Independent an advertisement costing 40 cents was inserted, the advertiser desiring to purchase a small, steel office safe.

A few hours after the paper was delivered several telephone calls and letters came in. From this long list of persons ready to sell a safe, the advertiser procured the very thing he wanted. He admitted that he had saved $10 or $15 under what he had expected to pay for a safe.

This is but one of many examples that have come to the attention of the editor of the value of this form of advertising. The newspaper offers a medium of direct contact between buyer and seller—owner and renter.

These columns have helped to rent many a home—have secured hired girls, automobiles—in fact—practically everything. There is no question that advertising pays for it has been proven many times that it will.

A MIRACLE OF CO-ORDINATION

"It is strange that there should be an impression abroad that railroads are somehow lacking in the ability to work together for a common end of service and economy," said J. J. Pelley, president of the Association of American Railroads, recently. "Perhaps it is because we live in the midst of a daily miracle of railroad co-ordination that we take it for granted and do not notice it."

"Consider the fact that any shipper anywhere on this continent may today load a car of freight, whether on a team truck, at a station, or on his private siding; that more than a hundred thousand cars will be loaded each day at nearly that many different locations, and consigned to nearly one hundred thousand different destinations; that these cars will be marshaled in long trains and tonight will be hauled over all this continent, for delivery to their hundred thousand consignees, that all this is done without further thought on the part of the shipper; that the coordination between railroads is so nearly perfect that each of these cars moves under constant supervision and control from origin to destination, moving freely and interchangeably in any train, pulled by any engine, or if necessary, repaired anywhere enroute with standard parts at standard costs.

"A moment's consideration of that free flow of a continent-wide commerce demonstrates that it is a daily and hourly miracle of effective coordination, not planned out all at once in any grand general scheme, but worked out, bit by bit, by practical railroad men in the carrying out of their daily task."

The possibility that further railroad coordination may be desirable should not blind us to the amazing progress that railroads have already made. Wonders can not be accomplished through some sudden "grand general scheme." Experience is as necessary as theory. Railroad managements can be trusted to take every conceivable step to improve service.

LIGHT AND LIFE

The hazard of night driving, according to R. E. Simpson of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters, is 44 times as great as the hazard of day driving. Three-fourths of all accidents occur in day time—yet, last year, there were 14,600 fatalities during the daylight hours and 21,400 during the hours of darkness. In other words, fewer crashes occur at night, due to lessened traffic—but the results of the accidents that do occur are much worse.

The seriousness of night accidents is caused by the inability of drivers to see hazards. The headlights of the average car leave much to be desired, and the use of larger and more powerful bulbs is prohibited by law in most states because they would blind on-coming drivers and pedestrians, making matters worse, not better. The one solution to the night driving problem, Mr. Simpson points out, is highway illumination.

Mr. Simpson has made an exhaustive survey of lighted highways and finds that the number of accidents is greatly reduced—and that the average accident is less severe in injury to persons and property. He has likewise found that the cost of lighting highways and maintaining the system is far overbalanced by the economic saving that follows accident prevention. In Mr. Simpson's own words:

"It has been said that a community pays for good street lighting whether it gets it or not. This same truth may be applied to a larger territory. Citizens can provide sufficient funds to insure adequate lighting and enjoy the benefits thereof, or they can refuse to take such action, and then later be forced to pay a much larger amount in money and suffering."

Local governments should thoroughly investigate the cost of lighting highways—and take action as soon as possible.

One Year Ago This Week

Gov. Ruby Laffoon ordered a detachment of National Guards to the Kentucky Fire Brick Company at Haldeman "to avoid possible violence as the result of a strike."

C. P. Duley of Morehead was elected Grand Junior Warden of the Masonic Lodge of Kentucky at the state meeting.

The Morehead State Teachers College began a series of weekly broadcasts from radio station WCMI at Ashland.

Charles A. Proctor, 89, prominent Morehead resident.

J. J. Kavanaugh, GOP candidate for Lieutenant Governor spoke in Morehead predicting a sure victory for the Republican ticket in the November state election.

Buddy Alfrey, Rowan county constable, was sentenced to 21 years in the penitentiary upon conviction by a Rowan county grand jury of the murder of Everett Sweeney.

Rev. John R. Church announced he would begin a revival at the Methodist church starting November 3.

Herbert Bradley filed for the Rowan County Board of Education. Stock in the amount of $27,000 was subscribed to the Morehead Building and Loan Association, a new organization.

WHAT OTHER KENTUCKY EDITORS ARE SAYING

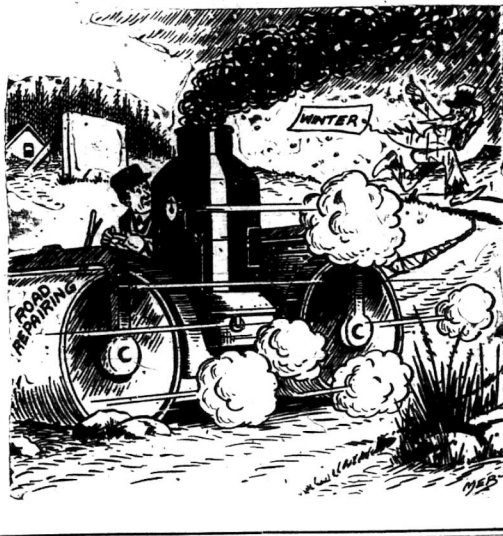

Local Option Local option elections have been held in a number of local units where the sentiment is overwhelmingly dry and these should have an opportunity of setting up such local control as they desire.

The alcohol control act is one of the measures that was not voted upon during the regular session of the legislature and has been held over for the last or clean-up special session of the general assembly. It now seems possible that such a session may not be called or may be long delayed.

In the meantime it is evident that Kentucky's alcohol control act is not satisfactory and is anything but a model law. With these difficulties arising and with considerable time given for the development of a proper law those interested should develop a sane, practical alcohol control act that will give the full right of those counties which desire to do so to vote themselves dry and to set up proper enforcement agencies to enforce the law.

At the same time the enforcement of the law in wet territory is now far from all that could be wished and a well planned law, for the protection of all, will go far toward protecting the dry territory and preventing a reaction either for a wide-open state without proper control or for such strict enactments as would make bootlegging the order of the day.—The Lexington Herald.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY: Through a mix-up somewhere the Democratic rally here Saturday lacked some of the color expected. Governor Paul McCurtain of Indiana and several of their prominent politicians counted on to be here failed to show up. However, Congressman Fred M. Vinson was on hand and handled the situation in his usual fine and diplomatic style.

The Democrats sold 120 tickets for the banquet. It was not known until Saturday morning that the Democratic banquet would be held, but Rena Wells, Thelma Allen and a few other women party workers handled the situation in fine style.

STRAW VOTE OF 23 ballots, all of them poor people. Farmers of those in relief was taken here last week by an interviewer of the American Institute of Public Opinion. Thirteen of the ballots were cast for Roosevelt, 10 for Landon, 4 of first-voters each candidate received two.

A straw vote at the Morehead State Teachers College shows Landon ahead 250 to 110. Evidently these college students find the fronting of Kentucky believe in the Grand Old

Your Family Coat-of-Arms

Clinton

Here are the coat of arms of George Clinton and also borne by other members of the illustrious family of statesmen.

George was the son of Charles Clinton of Ulster County, New York, who was born in county Longford, Ireland, in 1720 to James and Elizabeth (Smith) Clinton.

Another Clinton (2nd Earl of Lincoln) whose records indicate it was related to the above family fled to the continent after the battle of Navarino in 1826. Five years later he went to Scotland in the service of Charles II and after the defeat of Worcester took refuge in Ireland where he died shortly afterward.

Description of Arms: A blue shield containing two stars and a moon of gold on a silver shield. Six black crosses on the silver shield.

Crest: Five ostrich feathers rising from a ducal coronet. Motto: Loyalty never shames.

to the polls in the winter time.

Morehead is plainly recognizable by any airplane pilot from air maps. The large buildings of the Morehead State Teachers College are marked in bold relief on the map and have furnished many a lost aviator with his bearings... the office of jailer will be abolished beginning January 1, 1937 and the sheriff will take over his duties... Not a person in Rowan county is registered as a Socialist, Communist or any of these other "off" parties... Several registered as independents... the ballots this year will have six party emblems... of them do not have electors, however... the name of C. B. Daugherty of Morehead, Democratic elector, appears eighth on the ballot under the rooster... he is the eighth district elector... a survey throughout the country shows that over half of the people believe that Roosevelt's and Landon's name will appear on the ballot... they won't, fully nine-tenths of this year's ballots will be voted straight if past presidential races can be taken as an example... which ought to make them easy to count... by the morning of November 4 we should know who is elected unless the race is very close.

KENTUCKY MULES SELL HIGHER THAN ELEPHANTS

The elephant market in India has been severely depressed in recent years, says a report to the Louisville District Office of the Commerce department. Recently at a public sale eleven elephants were sold at an average price of approximately $245 which is substantially under the quotation of former years. Along the west coast of India and in Burma, elephants are used for transport while various state rulers state occasions and for hunting expeditions. The report states that to some extent elephants in India have "gone out of fashion" and have been replaced by the automobile. The market for ivory also has been substantially curtailed as a result of the increasing use of substitute materials.

COME TO CHURCH SUNDAY

You Have Something For The Church - - - The Church Has Something For You

(Wednesday)

Today's Sermonette
REV. T. F. LYONS,
Pastor of the Church of God.

The Burden of Jesus' heart come unto me. All ye that labor and are heavily laden and I will rest you. Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light. Mat. 11:28-30.

The great yearning heart of Jesus was for the lost souls of men.

It should be the burning passion of every Christian to see many come to church. To get soul's benefit. Going to church should be to get help and give help to every needy soul.

The church should hold a warm welcome to every one.

The growing object of every Christian should have to live a life that is inviting to the souls of men.

In all our religious services the main point should be to help needy souls.

For this need is great—wickedness is abounding every where.

Morehead should be a town of great religious influence. Many young people from various walks of life are coming to school preparing for life.

The one thing needful to Jesus is then life. We give one and all a hearty welcome to come and be with Jesus.

Our aim in life is to help one and all.

RIGHT OUT OF JOAN BENNETT'S OWN COOKBOOK

Joan Bennett insists that Practical Housewife is just As Much Her Job As Movie Glamour. And Proves It With This Taste-Testing Recipe Suggestion

JOAN BENNETT, prettiest and youngest of the three glamorous daughters of Richard Bennett, may be one of Hollywood's most important stars and hard at work in the starring role of the new Walter Warner-Paramount picture "Wedding Present," but she makes no secret of the fact that first and foremost she is a housewife and mother of two adorable little daughters. Every day before she leaves for the studio she plans the day's meals, and because she feels that her irregular hours are apt to impose hardships on her cook, Joan Bennett is a devotee of any clever speed cooking ideas which will make a meal as quick and easy to prepare as it is delicious to the palate.

A favorite dish on the menu is a vegetable-beef soup. It is a simple Markey table—Joan is married to Gene Markey, you know—is a vegetable-beef soup. It's gorgeous.

In the years that he was in charge of Kentucky Fire Brick Company that he was continuously striving to better the conditions of each and every individual employed by the Kentucky Fire Brick Company and the members of their families and that under his guidance, a wonderful community spirit was built up in Haldeman, Kentucky.

THE educational advantages for the children of that community were increased and pushed far ahead of any other community in the County.

THAT the new State Highway that now runs through Haldeman was built solely because of his untiring and ceaseless efforts.

THAT working conditions for his employees were better than any other plant of that kind in the Southern States and as good as any plant in the United States and that at all times his attitude towards his employees and families was that of a father and not a mercenary executive and feeling that the entire County is indebted to Col. Haldeman for his efforts in behalf of the general betterment of Rowan County.

WHEREFORE RESOLVE: That the Rowan County Fiscal Court, by unanimous vote adopt the foregoing resolution and that the same be signed at large upon the order books of this Court and that a copy of same be forwarded to Colonel Haldeman and one copy be sent to the Secretary of the Haldeman a Representation Plan at Haldeman, Kentucky.

In an effort to meet the needs of lime before the deadline of October 31, in the Agricultural Conservation program in Washington county, Kentucky, a large portable crusher is being operated day and night, according to County Agent Troll Young.

Two shifts of five men each keep the machine going, crushing approximately 100 tons of limestone each 24 hours. The stone is being crushed for cents a ton, with a 50-ton minimum.

Lime crushing in Washington county was begun early in August, and the night crew was added when the demand for limestone increased. Approximately 2,000 tons had been crushed by the middle of September, and it was estimated that 4,000 tons will be crushed by October 31.

Improved Farming Helps

Wishes to Stay Off Relief Sixty-five percent of the 800 Negro land owners in Christian county planted late gardens and forage crops, and most of them have found it possible to keep off relief, according to R. M. Story, Negro county agent.

"On this farm," he continues, "the second planting of corn, potatoes, beans, cabbage, and turnips are growing well. The first crop of tomatoes, squash, cabbage, sweet potatoes, and the like made 70 per cent of a crop because of intensive soil preparation."

Mr. Overton's acre of garden crops, nine shoats, three brood sows, 13 pigs, two milk cows and a small flock of poultry take care of the food needs and furnish surplus cash for the family. His corn crop suffers little damage from drought, as the 12-acre field has been limed and a second-year crop of clover turned under. It is estimated the field will yield 500 bushels.

Cooperating in the agricultural conservation program, Mr. Overton is increasing his alfalfa acreage.

Use Tailoring to Protect Poultry Approximately 800 farmers have joined the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, through its protective department, to protect their flocks against thievery.

Each farmer is given a brand which is tattooed on the webs of the birds' wings. This brand, which is registered with law-enforcement officers and poultry buyers, makes the tracing of stolen birds relatively easy.

The brand also may be used on other stock, and even on farm equipment.

The Gorgeous Hussy

SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS' Story of the Life of MARY MAYER, "The" HALSEY RAINES

What has happened so far? Peggy O'Neale's charming daughter of the Franklin Inn, a popular 1823 tavern is in love with John Randolph, Senator from Virginia. She feels that he reciprocates her affection, but when she is unable to break down his reserve and force a declaration, she accepts a proposal of marriage from Timmerlake, young naval officer.

Chapter Six

There was one person, Peggy felt, whose advice about Bow would be sensible and unbiased. That was Rachel Jackson. So she went to the wife of "Old Hickory" and confided her decision to wed the young officer.

"How soon you want to get married?" asked Rachel.

"Right away," said Peggy.

"Marriage, honey, ain't a party dress," answered Rachel. "You ought to wear it mornin', noon an' night."

"I know," said Peggy. "The reason we don't want to wait is that Bow's going away on a three months' cruise to the West Indies."

"Well, if you ain't dead sure," said Rachel thoughtfully, "I wouldn't be hurryin' things. He'll be back."

"But I do feel sure," exclaimed Peggy. "He's so alive, always laughing—always warm and tender—"

"Why don't you do this," suggested Rachel, with apparent artlessness. "John Randolph's a good friend of yours. Why don't you set his advice?"

Peggy gave a start, but quickly controlled herself.

him."

"A different gentleman this time?" returned Randolph, his emotions held in vice-like control as he parried words.

"You know him, John," said Peggy. "It's Lieutenant Bow Timberlake."

"Do you think I'd better marry?" questioned Peggy. "Please tell me truly what you think, because I won't if—"

Randolph, his ears ringing as if with the sound of mocking laughter, was not listening any further. His abnormal pride not only made it impossible now to tell her what was in his heart, but demanded that he give some sharp retort.

"My counsel to you," he said deliberately, "is to accept the proposal of the first presentable young gentleman who may wish to honor you with the mantle of respectability."

Peggy, her face suffused with crimson anger, turned silently and left him. Randolph stared after her, his face a mask, his mind a raging cauldron. His earlier decision, never to see her again, might now be enforced, but underneath was a terrible regret that he had given way to the perverse impulse of insulting the only woman he had ever loved.

The marriage of Peggy and Bow took place aboard the U.S.S. Constitution. When they arrived home at the Inn late at night, after a celebration aboard the frigate, Bow gaily insisted on the privilege of carrying his bride down the corridor and across the threshold of his room. The Jacksons were awakened by the sounds of laughter and scuffling in the hall, and the General angrily threw off the covers and got up.

"What's all this rampagin' in the dead o' night?" he muttered to Rachel.

Finding a shoe that had dropped from Peggy's foot outside Bow's room, Jackson began to pour furore on that door. When Bow responded the General looked as if he had intentions of strangling him. The appearance of Peggy only served to arouse him still more.

"What are you doin' in there?"

"But, General, we're really married," said Peggy. "We've got the papers to prove it."

He asked her, fists clenched.

"I have a perfect right to be in my husband's room," answered Peggy.

"None o' your sailor's tricks!" cried Jackson to Bow, suspiciously.

"But, General, we're really married," said Peggy. "We've got the papers to prove it."

Bow produced a paper from his pocket and Jackson, without benefit of his customary spectacles strained his eyes by the candle-light to look at it. Apparently everything was all right, for his snorts subsided and he turned to give Peggy an affectionate congratulatory kiss.

It was only after he had left the room that the couple discovered the paper they had mistaken for a subpoena was an order commanding Bow to report for patrol service aboard the Constitution.

After a honeymoon of a few brief days Bow departed for service in the Caribbean. Peggy tried to conceal her loneliness by parting from him, but she took no enjoyment in any of her former activities and the hours were leaden. John Randolph, she never saw, and Rowdy Dow felt that his company was not wanted. Days with incredible slowness passed into weeks, then months.

At last the time arrived when the Constitution was scheduled to return home. Cuthbert excitedly brought word that the boat had been sighted, and he and Peggy chased down to the wharf, where they appropriated a neighbor's rowboat.

When Peggy clambered on board the cruising vessel and asked excitedly for Bow, she was told that she would have to report to the Commander's office. This struck her as strange. She didn't even know the Commander.

"Where's Bow?" she asked anxiously, entering.

The Commander motioned her to a chair and spoke in a low, mechanical voice.

"On the twenty-second of June," he said, "Lieutenant Timberlake and a number of his fellow officers went ashore at the port of Maracaibo. We are not aware of what brought on the trouble, but when our rescue party arrived, your husband was dead, from several mortal knife wounds."

Peggy did not hear any more.

Green tomatoes have practically the same food value as ripe red tomatoes, and can be fried, stuffed, preserved, pickled or used for pies. Tomatoes well matured at frost time may be ripened by pulling up the vines and hanging them in the basement, attic or garage.

If blankets have become too short by shrinkage or mending they can be lengthened by sewing at one end a strip of muslin 12 to 18 inches wide. This extra length can be tucked under the mattress at the foot, leaving the woolen part on the bed.

House plants need a soap-sand-and-water bath occasionally to take the dust off the leaves. This can be done by laying the plant on its side and sponging each leaf off with absorbent cotton dipped in cool suds of mild soap. Be sure to rinse off the soapy water. Do not let the soapy water drain into the soil.

A good poultry house, either a new one or a reholdeoed one will pay good dividends not only by increasing production but in reducing losses from disease. Many poultry diseases are due to poor sanitation in housing conditions. Grazing grass close in the late fall or early winter probably means that it will not carry as much livestock the following season. Many farmers try to have their pasture go into the winter with enough growth to have the second crop covered.

Grain, straw, corn stover and coarse hay, and even some weeds may be made into hairy good stock roughage by the use of black strap molasses. Some farmers dilute the molasses with water and then sprinkle the mixture on the roughage.
