MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Charles Crabtree had a busy week. He enrolled at Morehead State University and enlisted in the Army.

The 18-year-old resident of West Portsmouth, Ohio, reported to Fort Knox last week to begin a three-year hitch. He also signed up for MSU's "Project Ahead," a new program which will enable him to pursue a college degree while serving on active duty.

Crabtree will undergo basic training at Fort Knox and then move to Fort Gordon, Ga. for advanced training in data processing. His Army technical classes and any other college-level training will be applied to a degree in computer science at MSU.

The graduate of Portsmouth West High School will enroll on campus to finish his degree program after being discharged from the Army in early 1978.

"Just as the name indicates, this program puts him ahead of other veterans when they start to college on a full-time basis," said Bob Smoot, MSU's coordinator of veteran's affairs.

A cooperative venture of MSU and all of the U.S. armed forces, the program is administered on the local level by military recruiters. The services pay 75 per cent of the tuition costs for classes taken on active duty.

Project Ahead 2-2-2-2-2-2

"In addition to having most of his expenses paid while in the service, each participant has a permanent advisor here on campus to make sure he takes only those classes which count toward the degree," Smoot added.

Once a "Project Ahead" serviceman has been released from active duty, he remains eligible for the maximum educational benefits from the Veterans Administration.

College credit can be earned several ways, including correspondence courses from MSU and other institutions, part-time study in college extension programs at military installations and completion of certain service schools.

Information about "Project Ahead" is available from local military recruiters or from the Director of Admissions, MSU, Morehead, Ky. 40351.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Considering that about 85 per cent of the businesses in Eastern Kentucky are classified as "small" Morehead State University's new two-year degree in applied business should have a good future.

MSU's Department of Business Administration has developed a specific program in small business management. It includes 64 semester hours of credit in accounting, marketing, purchasing, economics, business law, communication, and several approaches to management.

"Our goal is to provide a well-rounded program for the training of small business managers in the shortest time," says Dr. Eugene Martin, head of MSU's business administration program. "Besides the education of future businessmen, this program also gives the University a wonderful chance to furnish another service to the region by helping those already involved in small business."

The program is less than a year old and already has a dozen students enrolled full-time and several others enrolled for part-time study.

Dr. Martin said MSU hopes to offer some of the small business classes at night for the benefit of individuals who work in the daytime.

"This program is just beginning to move and we're excited about its prospects," he added. "The small businessman is the foundation of American free enterprise and his training is just as important as those of the giant corporations."

President Adron Doran has announced that corrective work on the University Center will start immediately.

Franklin Circuit Court in Frankfort ordered the state, a California bonding company, a supplier and a subcontractor to share the $625,000 in repair costs.

The court directed payment of $350,000 by the state, $125,000 by TransAmerica Insurance Co., $95,000 by Vermont Marble Co. and $55,000 by Martina Brothers Co., Inc.

Dr. Doran said the state's share of the project had been provided in the current state budget for capitol construction.

The state filed a $750,000 damage suit in April, 1973, against Cincinnati contractor Frank Messer and Sons, Inc. The action was initiated after marble veneer fell from the building and leaks damaged the structure's contents. Messer, in turn, sued the supplier and subcontractor.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A student leader and an administrator at Morehead State University have filed an official protest to the proposed reduction of bus service between Lexington and Ashland by Greyhound Lines, Inc.

A petition was submitted Friday to the Kentucky Department of Transportation by Don Zenner, vice president of MSU's student body, and Roger L. Wilson, the university's vice president for student affairs.

They asked the agency to delay the Jan. 21 effective date requested by Greyhound and to schedule a public hearing on the company's application to drop one of three daily round trips between the two cities.

"The reduction in bus service will work a hardship on students and other residents of this area and is most inappropriate in view of the energy problems facing the country," said Zenner.

"Greyhound is our only means of public transportation and we can't afford to lose bus service like we did the trains," Wilson added.

Wilson said MSU would have several witnesses at any hearing on the matter. He urged area residents to write the Department of Transportation in opposition to the Greyhound application.

Mental disorder as a major social problem today was the topic of Monday's class in Contemporary Social Problems at Morehead State University as three Morehead health professionals participated in a panel discussion.

Dr. Billie Jo Caudill a physician, and Dr. Ranjit Sinha, a psychiatrist and W. H. Draper, a psychologist, both of the Cave Run Comprehensive Care Center, spoke briefly about mental problems and then discussed the topic with class members.

Dr. Caudill, spoke on the role the general practitioner plays in mental disorders and the family. She stated an individuals aches and pains often are not physical problems but actually a display of some type of mental distress. In her role as a family practitioner, she must locate the problem, counsel the patient and refer the individual to experts if necessary.

Draper, a psychologist, agreed with Dr. Caudill's definition as to the nature and treatment of everyday mental stresses. He added that in modern psychology, testing and therapy are both major areas in aiding a disturbed person.

Dr. Sinha, a native of India outlined the five basic problem areas of abnormality. These areas involve nearly every facet of life and are often interrelated where imbalance in one area could cause deviant behavior in another.

The class is taught by John Oakley.

Arnett is traveling nationally to voice his philosophy of helping poor people endure their poverty a little better to become healthier, better sheltered, and better fed.

"There must be an agency of advocacy for poor people," says Arnett, "just as there is an agency for women, for labor, for blacks."

OEO was dismantled but congressional supporters moved community action agencies into the newly created Community Services Administration which gives them an independent status.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University President Adron Doran has announced the employment of architects to develop plans for expansion of MSU's Johnson Camden Library and Lawrence Wetherby Gymnasium.

The Council on Public Higher Education at its meeting on Jan. 17 approved the programing and preliminary planning for both projects.

Dr. Doran reported that State Finance Commissioner William Scent had assigned the library project to the Frankfort architectural firm of Hugg, Carter and Blakeman and the gymnasium to Wilson Bond and Associates of Lexington.

Dr. Doran said the University would request funds for the projects in its 1975-76 budget and, if finally approved, work on both could start in the spring of 1976.

The library project consists of a new wing and renovation of the original building which opened in 1931. Dr. Doran said the new space would alleviate overcrowding and loss of seating area caused by a 300 per cent increase in library holdings since the building was enlarged in 1965.

The gymnasium project will involve a substantial increase in seating capacity and construction of additional facilities for expanded academic programs, including an indoor-outdoor swimming pool.

Dr. Doran said cost estimates would not be available until the architects finish their preliminary plans.

"These projects, if approved and funded by the 1976 session of the General Assembly, will provide needed facilities to strengthen our academic program in several areas," Dr. Doran stated.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Former federal anti-poverty chief Alvin Arnett told a Morehead State University audience here Tuesday that programs aiding poor people have survived because of Watergate.

Arnett, former director of the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity, said the Nixon Administration was preoccupied with its legal problems last summer and did not concentrate on dismantling OEO.

"If it had not been for the help of elected officeholders, like Governor Wallace of Alabama, Governor Moore of West Virginia and Mayor Daley of Chicago, the bureaucrats would have carried out Nixons's threat to kill OEO and its programs," the Salyersville native added. "The name was changed and some programs moved to other departments but the basic anti-poverty effort is still alive."

Arnett, who was fired by Nixon last July, warned that Washington's "regulation writers" still may try to strangle the "people programs" in red tape.

He credited U.S. Rep. Carl D. Perkins with a major role in passage of an extension of OEO programs under the new Community Services Administration.

Arnett's appearance at MSU was sponsored by the Kentucky Association of Community Action Agencies.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The sanctuary of the athletic training room has been breached by Judy Dunn, Versailles senior at Morehead State University.

She is the only female enrolled in athletic training classes at MSU and, for laboratory experiences serves as a student trainer.

"I thought at first that other members of the staff would hassle me about being the only girl involved but they have really been great," she said.

Miss Dunn, who works primarily with MSU's women's teams, is considering a career as a professional trainer.

"I took a class in athletic injuries as an elective in my physical education major and I became quite interested in the field," she recalls.

Following that class and others in MSU's athletic program she was assigned as a student trainer in womens sports. The part-time job is very important to her.

"Right now, I enjoy the work so much that I'd work 24 hours a day if they would let me," she added.

Although scheduled to finish her degree this summer, Miss Dunn may not leave MSU. "I would like very much to come back to school as a full-time member of the training staff and get more practical experience," she said.

The coed trainer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tillie Dunn Jr. of Versailles and is a graduate of Woodford County High School.

(Special to the Morehead News)

Governor Julian Carroll assured more than 400 persons Monday night that the resources of state government are available to help in the recreational development of Cave Run Reservoir.

Addressing the first annual meeting of the Cave Run Development Association, he urged residents of Rowan, Bath, Menifee, Morgan and Montgomery counties to work together to attract tourism to the area.

Carroll and another speaker, Col. L. B. Harper of Eddyville, pointed to the travel and tourism groups in Western Kentucky as an example of the benefits of aggressive selling of outdoor recreation.

The Governor noted that out-of-state visitors spent $575 million in Kentucky last year.

Carroll said the State Department of Public Information has funds available to help publicize the Cave Run region, that the Bureau of Highways is moving to improve roads into the Cave Run area and that the Department of Natural Resources already is deeply involved in fish and wildlife development.

Carroll pledged that his administration would upgrade Ky. 519 from Morehead to Pomp in Morgan County.

Earlier, the session at Morehead State University heard speakers from the U.S. Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Forest Service.

Major Billy Best of the Corps' Louisville District said remaining federal construction would end at Cave Run in two years. He reported on the status of highway relocation projects and said the Corps is allowed to comment on all applications for strip mine permits in the reservoir watershed.

Richard Wengert, supervisor of Daniel Boone National Forest, reviewed the status of various recreation projects in the reservoir area and announced that 155 campsites would be available by May 2 and that 1,000 feet of beach would be ready by Memorial Day.

Bids for other projects, including two marinas, are scheduled for opening later this spring.

Wengert predicted Cave Run would be attracting two million visitors a year by 1985.

Dr. Alec Spencer of West Liberty, the association's president, reviewed the creation of the organization and invited all interested citizens to participate.

Members of the Board of Directors of the Cave Run Development Association are William Whitaker and Clayton Perkins of Morehead and James Dougherty of Farmers; Dr. Spencer, Paul Williams and C. K. Stacy of West Liberty; Jim Reeves, Mike Shields and William Razor of Salt Lick; Maxwell Henry, Ray Redden and Elwood Motley of Frenchburg; and William Peck, Paul Faulkner and Leo Garey of Mt. MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University has received a state grant of $24,233 to help finance the training of radiologic technologists.

The funds were supplied by the Kentucky Council on Public Higher Education under the Area Health Education System (AHES) legislation enacted by the 1974 General Assembly.

It is the first AHES grant made to a regional university.

MSU will use the money to provide living expenses for 19 students in radiologic technology who are required to spend a year as interns in hospital radiology departments.

Currently, MSU students are interning at hospitals in Morehead, Maysville, West Liberty, Hazard, Mt. Sterling, Whitesburg and McDowell.

Radiologic technology is a two-year program offered by MSU's School of Applied Sciences and Technology. The project involves the Buffalo Trace-Gateway AHES and the Kentucky River-Cumberland Valley AHES.

Primary objective of the AHES program is to encourage health care professionals to locate permanently in areas of Kentucky which have shortages of such personnel.

Dr. Jerry Shuck is director of MSU's radiologic technology project.

Morehead, Ky. --- At 8 p.m. Thursday, a caravan of elves, exiled dukes, lovers, some Magnificoes from Venice and the troubled ghost of an assassinated king will arrive on the campus of Morehead State University.

They are, in fact, The New Shakespeare Company of San Francisco, and the play they will perform is William Shakespeare's "As You Like It," scheduled at 8 p.m. in Wetherby Gymnasium.

Sponsored by the MSU Concert & Lecture Series, the play is free to series members and MSU students with ID cards. Tickets are $3 and will be available at the door.

Under the direction of Margrit Roma, whose artistry has developed from 35 years of international theatrical experience, the troupe of 25 actors and technicians work to return Shakespeare to his proper audience - the people.

Their method focuses on the actor and the script with which he hopes to please the audience, rather than on lavish scenery and elaborate technical device. The text is left intact but contains some innovation. Emphasis is on the electricity of action as well as the language. "The idea is to get everything so clear that words are unnecessary, and to make the words sound like they're coming from real people," says Roma.

Wrong? Leslyn Root, Cincinnati senior at Morehead State University, has changed all that.

She is the first woman to complete a four-year degree in industrial arts at MSU.

"The program here is really okay," she stated. "I recommend MSU to other women interested in the field."

Any doubts about being accepted by her male classmates were eliminated when the Industrial Education Club presented her with an initial pin to salute her "first" at MSU.

Studying a male-dominated subject also did not affect her status with other coeds. She is a member of Sigma Sigma Sigma social sorority.

Miss Root will receive a bachelor of science degree in industrial technology on May 9 with an option in drafting and an emphasis in business administration. But she won't be looking for a job for a while.

"Very soon after I get out of school, I plan to go into the Navy as an officer," Miss Root said. "They have mentioned the engineering area but nothing definite has been set."

The entire family is smiling because she recently was chosen as the only female in Kentucky to receive an Army ROTC scholarship this year.

"I feel real good about it and I know that daddy is very proud," says the cadet staff sergeant who was selected last fall as MSU's Homecoming Queen and last winter as Military Ball Queen.

She also will represent MSU in the Mountain Laurel Festival later this month at Pineville, Ky.

"The scholarship is going to make it a lot easier to finish school," she says.

The Zane Trace High School graduate has achieved a 3.7 grade point average while majoring in physical education and recreation. The Army estimates her scholarship is worth about $2,500 each year. It covers all of her fees and a $100 monthly stipend. In return, she will serve four years as an Army officer.

Her upbringing in a military family also is paying other dividends. She has been elected chaplain of MSU's Delta Zeta sorority.

MOREHEAD, KY --- Carbon monoxide. A heavy dose is lethal but what of the lesser amounts we breath everyday?

Eight students at Morehead State University have received a federal grant to study the effect, if any, of carbon monoxide on health and behavior.

Backed with $11,830 from the National Science Foundation, the students in psychology and biology will conduct laboratory experiments over a nine-month period to determine if exhaust fumes from internal combustion engines do alter health, the ability to learn and physical performance. Laboratory animals will be used in the study.

According to Dr. Francis Osborne, associate professor of Psychology at MSU and the project's faculty advisor, the study grew out of the general lack of scientific information on carbon monoxide.

"These students conceived the project and wrote the proposal for the grant and they will conduct the study and evaluate their own findings," he reported. "It is completely a student operation from start to finish."

Funded under the National Science Foundation's "Student Originated Studies" program, the project is the first major student research venture undertaken at MSU.

Gregory Barker, Covington graduate student, is the student project director.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Training minds for the mines" might well be the slogan of two new associate degrees at Morehead State University.

A two-year program in mining technology started last August and another in reclamation technology gets underway this fall.

Both programs are designed to prepare students for technical positions in the mining industry and each requires a summer of on-the-job experience.

"We have made sure that these programs contain only the material which is necessary," says Dr. Jerry Shuck, head of MSU's Department of Industrial Education and Technology. "We did our homework with mining companies and with the state and federal agencies concerned with reclamation."

The mining technology program includes instruction in surveying, mine hydraulics, safety, roof and rib control, ventilation, electricity, safety codes, use of mine machinery and explosives.

Reclamation technology involves training in surface mining methods, federal and state regulations, land-use practices, map drafting and report writing and environmental testing procedures.

"We feel these programs are important to this region because of the growth of the mining industry and the lack of skilled technicians in the job market," Dr. Shuck added.

The required summer work experience and frequent field trips to various mining operations are intended to keep the students abreast of new developments in equipment and in mining and reclamation techniques.

"Our graduates in these programs won't be afraid to get their hands dirty and they also will have the training to eventually assume supervisory positions," Dr. Shuck said.
