Safecracker Botches Job, But Escapes As Police Watch Building

An attempted safecracking in the business office at Morehead State College was thwarted Tuesday night, but the would-be burglar escaped from officers who had surrounded the college Administration Building.

Police Chief Callis Coyle said tools used in the attempt were covered, but the man jumped out of a window, over a stone ledge on College Street side of the structure and fled.

Three officers—Patrolmen Bill Bowman, Carl Johnson and Brotherman Dail—were covering the entrances to the building, Coyle said, but were unable to apprehend the burglar when he leaped from the window.

The action took place during a heavy rainstorm.

No damage was done to the safe, on which the man apparently had just started when he was discovered by Bowman, making one of several night raids which local police carry out at the school.

Hearing a tapping noise, which he thought was coming from the boiler room, Bowman entered the basement of the building, and soon discerned that the noise was coming from the business office on the floor above.

Bowman radioed for additional officers, and he, along with Johnson and Dail covered the entrances. Apparently alerted by the activity outside, the burglar went through the window to the street and fled.

Coyle said a sledge hammer, a man's hammer, a crow bar and screw driver were found in front of the safe, but the man had made little progress toward getting it open.

Built into a wall and reinforced with steel, the strong box is believed to be almost impenetrable. Officials at the college were quoted as saying "he could have worked a week without getting into it, and when he got in he wouldn't have found enough to pay him for a good night's work."

State Trooper Carl Suss assisted officers in a search for the man, following his escape. Bowman made the discovery about 10:30 p.m., and he surrounded the structure shortly afterward. The escape was made sometime between 10:30 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Damage in the building was confined to a door leading into the room in which the safe is built into a wall, the police chief said.

CPA Firm Opening Offices Here Today

Morehead today (Thursday) got its first certified public accounting firm.

Opening this morning at the corner of Main Street and College Boulevard (East) is an office of Circle and Adams, Ashland CPA's.

In charge of the office will be Orby Myers, a Morehead State College graduate and a native of Soldier, who recently completed the requirements for his CPA certificate.

No Contact, But Auto Damaged

Two automobile mishaps— one involving a collision between vehicles—caused minor damage to cars in Rowan County this week.

A passenger vehicle, driven by Edgar William Taylor, 61, of Farmers, ran through a fence at the residence of J. B. Booth, tore down a 30-foot section of the barrier and damaged the auto.

State Trooper Marvin Jennings said the car was parked along the highway and when the driver started to put it in motion, the accelerator was pushed to the floor. The tires spun for a distance of 115 feet before the vehicle plowed into the fence. The mishap took place at 11:30 p.m. last Wednesday.

An auto driven by Herman Lee Mabry, 23, of Morehead, R. 3, ran off Ky. 1167 (Dry Creek Road) Friday after rounding a curve and meeting a car which was over the centerline. Driver of the second vehicle was Larry Darrell Linville, 24, of Elliottville.

The Mabry car struck a guard post, damaging the right front fender.

Trooper Jennings investigated.

Squirrel Season Open In This Area Aug. 29

Kentucky's small game hunting season begins Saturday, with the opening of one zone of the squirrel season in Kentucky.

The Western Zone season, composed of most of the Bluegrass area and all of western sections of Kentucky, will be continuous, the closing date being Nov. 15.

The Eastern Zone, designated by the Commission, Minor of Clark, of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, as the following counties, including Rowan: Menifee, Powell, Estill, Jackson, Rockcastle, Pulaski and McCreary and all counties lying to the east of this line, the opening date for the first season is Aug. 29, to continue through Nov. 15. A second season in that zone opens Dec. 14.

Again this year the bag limit will be six squirrels with a possession limit of 12 after two or more days of hunting.

Although the harvest of quail this year was below normal, indications are that the squirrel population this season will be good with the take depending on the weather conditions. Biologists of the Department point out that the squirrel population out last season also was good but the harvest declined because of extremely poor hunting conditions and due to the fact that because of the forest fire menace the season had to be actually closed down for a number of days.

The Department reports the mast crop (nuts, hick and hickory which squirrels feed) was unusually good last season and usually this indicates a good supply of squirrels for the following season. This has been borne out by reports from field men who indicate a greater number of young squirrels this past spring.

According to spot surveys conducted by the Department, last year almost two million of fox squirrels and grey squirrels were harvested, notwithstanding the unfavorable hunting conditions during much of the season.

Ask Disaster Aid For Rowan County

Gov. Edward T. Breathitt asked Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman Monday to declare nine more counties disaster areas because of severe drought conditions.

The governor requested that farmers be permitted to graze cattle and harvest hay on land retired from production under federal programs.

The counties are Greenup, Powell, Breckinridge, Montgomery, Rowan, Fleming, Harlan, Lee and Robertson.

Freeman already has declared 26 Kentucky counties as drought disaster areas.

State Police Head In 'Rights' Meet

Col. David A. Kerpie, director of the Kentucky State Police, attended a two-day conference at the University of Oklahoma August 7 and 8 and one of 150 police executives from throughout the U. S., who have been invited to participate in exploring the recently enacted Civil Rights Act of 1964 and its implications for law enforcement.

Flemingsburg Mother - Daughter Graduate Together At M'head

Mrs. Richard Applegate and Mrs. Peter McNeill were among 241 summer graduates of Morehead State College who returned to their homes to receive degrees at commencement exercises last Thursday.

But for these two residents of Flemingsburg, the night was far from uneventful as the two became one of the few mother-daughter combinations to graduate from Morehead at the same time.

The 58-year-old Mrs. Applegate received the AB degree in elementary education while her 34-year-old daughter was awarded the AB degree in public school music.

Mrs. Applegate, who has raised a family of five, graduated from high school in 1924 and taught in Fleming County for three years. She then took on the task of raising a family, farming and at one time was a rural mail carrier.

Then eight years ago she resumed her teaching career and enrolled as a freshman at Morehead State College. By attending night and Saturday classes and enrolling in each summer term, she has accumulated the necessary requirements for graduation while teaching the fifth and sixth grades at Mt. Carmel school in Fleming County.

"It has been a long, hard pull, she said "but I would not trade my experience for anything. I have enjoyed it thoroughly. She added, "My training has been inspirational that I plan to do graduate work in special education to enable me to work with retarded children."

Her daughter, Anna Lou McNeill, is a transfer from Berea College who during the past year taught music on a part-time basis in Fleming County while attending Morehead State College three days a week. She made a perfect 4.0 standing during both semesters in 1962-64.

Mrs. McNeill, her husband, and four children live on a farm in Fleming County and she too hopes to do graduate work in the days ahead.

"It was certainly a thrill to walk across the stage and receive my diploma on the same occasion as the awarding of Mother's diploma," she said. "We are all extremely proud of Mother's efforts as she has worked very hard for her degree."

Now that Mrs. Applegate and her daughter are graduating, there is only one other person in the family who is a prospective Morehead student, Julia Applegate, a 1-year old junior at Fleming County High School, planned to go into medicine or law.

"If she is as good a student as her mother or sister," said Dr. Adron Doran, president of Morehead State College, "we look forward to the day when Julia enrolls at Morehead."

TENANTS MOVING IN

Sybil Keller Named Housing Director

Morehead's Municipal Housing Commission has named Mrs. Sybil Keller as executive director.

Mrs. Keller, wife of the district manager of General Telephone Company, was unanimously elected after L. Jayne resigned because of illness. The resignation of Jayne, who recently underwent major surgery, has been accepted with regret. The commissioners placed on record a resolution of thanks and appreciation for his work.

The 30 tenants at Rawcell Heights, Morehead's only federally financed housing center, started moving in Monday. All apartments, which are, one, two, three and four bedrooms, have been assigned, but applications are still being accepted to fill future vacancies.

The commission, meeting Friday, also:

"Heard a report that the placement of a 1 1/2 acre site would start this week. Land set aside for Rawcell Heights, including shrubbery, etc., will be finished in the spring. This costs $10,000, already awarded by bid.

"Instructed the executive director to permit occupants, who have been assigned, until Aug. 20 to move into their apartments. Must still move this week.

"Instructed the maintenance director to submit reports of any misuse of the property or misconduct of tenants.

"Received a report from City set a 15-mile speed limit within the project. Mayor Eldon Evans said today that the signs to this effect are being installed.

"Issued an order that tenants cannot store anything in the far-range area and give detailed instructions on the operation of the natural gas heating systems.

"Instructed the architect-engineer to work with city council and the commission so that application for additional units at Morehead can be expedited and submitted to the regional HHA office at Atlanta. The city must meet a workable program plan approved by HHA, most of which, like zoning and planning, must be effected. The commission indicated the application would be far more sure.

"Heard the Secretary's report that only about half the applicants for initial occupancy could be accommodated by the 30 units. Usually housing projects like this are not filled until two, three, months after final inspection.

Members of the Commission are: W. E. Crutcher, chairman; William H. Layne, vice-chairman; Herbert Allen, W. H. Rice and Mayor Evans, ex officio.

Rawcell Heights had opened housing Sunday and the first tenants started moving in early Monday morning. Rents average $31.27 a month, with gas for cooking and heating furnished. The housing center at Rawcell of Morehead Graduate School and Rowan County Health Center, has city mail delivery, city utilities, city police and fire protection, and garbage pickup.

Vaccine Offered On Fulltime Basis

Sabin oral polio vaccine is now available at the Rowan County Health Department on a fulltime basis, it was announced this week.

All three types will be administered free from Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until noon and from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. until further notice.

Proposal Lost In 1962; Try In '63 Failed

Rowan Counties once again will be asked to approve a special tax for support of a public library program.

That the levy will be on the ballot this fall -- for the second time in three years -- was assured this week when Rowan Circuit Court approved a resolution ordering that the question of a seven-cent special tax for library purposes be submitted to the voters at the November general election.

The court acted after receiving a petition carrying the names of 125-150 voters seeking the election. A minimum of 100 names is necessary for the document to have valid status. Calculated by members of the Morehead Junior Chamber of Commerce, the petition reportedly carried the names of persons from all sections of Rowan County.

The tax -- if approved -- would go to expand the present Rowan County Public Library, would allow reintroduction of Bookmobile service to Rowan's "beefed up" library district operation locally. In addition, passage of the tax would probably make the county eligible to become a part of one of the so-called "regional library districts," set up by the state to serve two or three counties.

Two previous efforts to levy such a tax have failed, one at the polls and the other on legal grounds.

A vote on the question at the November, 1962, general election resulted in a 521-vote defeat, with most rural sections of Rowan County voting heavily against the proposal. Morehead precincts favored it.

A similar effort last year died in the making, when it was found that the petition which the Jayces had lodged with the court was defective and the time for filing an amended request had expired.

Magistrates Otis Caldwell, Herb Christian and Fred Fultz voiced their approval of calling the election. Actually, the court has little or no alternative, only a valid petition is submitted. Kentucky law requires that the court certify the question to the voters at the next general election.

Present revenues for the operation of the library are derived from the county, the city council and the state.

Just how much money a seven-cent tax would raise has not been determined.

WWI Vet Buried In Arlington

Death came last Tuesday to Ira L. Edgerton, 68, the father of Mrs. Emma Black of Morehead.

Edgerton, a veteran of World War I, died in the Veterans Administration Hospital in Huntington.

A resident of Cranston, R.I., he was born Sept. 18, 1896 in Guilford, N. C.

Other survivors include a son, Ira L. Edgerton Jr., with the U. S. Navy, another daughter, Mrs. Nellie Dick, Cranston, a brother, Roland Edgerton, Portsmouth, O.

The body was removed from Sucky Funeral Home to Arlington, Va., where services were held Monday afternoon in Arlington National Cemetery.

On AOA Committee

Dr. Byron E. Wentz of Morehead has been reappointed as a member of the committee on legislation of the American Optometric Association, Dr. Charles E. Seeger, association president, announced this week.

The AOA committee on legislation is responsible for the study of bills affecting the profession before the congress of the United States. It is one of three committees comprising the association's department of national affairs.

Rain Totaled 3.6 In. In 11 1/2 Hours, vs.

A rain easily classified as a drought-breaker fell in this section late Tuesday night with the official Weather Bureau gauge recording 3.6 inches within a 90-minute period.

A rancher Jim Covert of the Kentucky State Police said the measuring device, located at the KSP headquarters on Ky. 32, showed the 3.6-inch reading Wednesday morning.

Rainfall, accompanied by crackling lightning and heavy thunder, began about 10 p.m. and abated shortly after 11:30 p.m.

No reports of flooding, other than from surface water, were received by local authorities.

Penalty Provision Added To Stickers

Morehead City Council this week added teeth, in the form of a penalty, to the automobile title and license fee act.

Acting at Tuesday's regular monthly meeting, the city's governing body decreed a penalty of $2 a month--or portion of a month--for the late payment of the auto permit.

The new provision of the ordinance goes into effect Oct. 1. Stickers for the upcoming year are effective Sept. 1. They are on sale at city hall and are priced at $10.

CONSTRUCTION NEXT SPRING

Utility Board Obtains Easements

A construction contract on Morehead's new water treatment and distribution facility can possibly be let next spring.

That was the earliest time mentioned this week by Clay Snedegar, chairman of the Utility Plant Board, and Clint Johnson, superintendent, who announced that advanced engineering work is continuing, but that is not expected to be completed until late this fall.

Completion of the new intake, treatment plant, pipelines and reservoir has been scheduled for about 18 months.

The two Utility Plant Board spokesmen said that options have been obtained on all but one parcel of land believed necessary for the project. And that one tract may not be needed.

Latest acquisition of the board was a site on Licking River for the intake. Obtained from Luma Armstrong at a cost of $1,000, the plot is 150 x 150.

The site obtained this week were easements from the intake to the location of the treatment plant, near the Rowan County Airport. Johnson said three parcels of land were involved, one owned by Armstrong, one by Jack Evans and the third by Dewey Lewis.

Earlier, the group had taken an option on three acres which had been promised the gift of three additional acres, near the airport for the treatment plant. County Judge W. C. Flannery and Dr. John Tye, Dayton, O., Flannery's brother-in-law offered the land for $2,400. This figure included easements over adjoining land owned by the two.

Johnson said Tuesday that rights-of-way for the eight-mile pipeline from Farmers to Morehead would probably be obtained in this case, according to Johnson.

Expected to cost $1,500,000, the new plant will provide the city with some 1,500,000 gallons of water daily. With water purification, according to engineers, the planned facilities could furnish up to 4,500,000 gallons, far beyond present anticipated needs, and sufficient for Morehead's projected growth during the next 20 years.

The city has applied for a Federal grant with which to pay part of the construction cost and will issue bonds for the remainder.

GETS DEGREE—William Whitaker III of Morehead, 1, receives his diploma and congratulations from Morehead State College President Adron Doran at last Thursday's commencement exercises. Whitaker compiled an outstanding scholastic record at MSC, college officials said. He was graduated with high distinction.

State Files For Compliance With Junkyard Screening

The State Highway Department filed about 20 criminal complaints against junkyard operators Wednesday to force them to comply with the 1962 screening law.

Compliance Officer Ed Hancock said the department also plans to go to court against other dealers who have failed to apply for permits under the statute.

The law, upheld by the Court of Appeals several months ago, requires junk yards located within 2,000 feet of highways to be screened from public view.

Commissioner Henry Ward said he instructed Hancock to choose violators in each of the 12 highway districts and go to court.

"I told him to select real good examples, not just small dealers," Ward said.

The department is hopeful that the crackdown against so-called dealers will cause many better operators to comply.

Ward said he has been pleased with compliance so far. About 500 dealers have applied, said 50 permits have been issued.

The law authorizes the department to institute both criminal and civil actions against junk yard dealers in violation.

The criminal-action route would lead to $10 to $1,000 daily fines against junk yard operators convicted of violating the law.

The state files it has learned that Hancock said criminal complaints were filed in counties in which the violators were located.

THE PUBLISHER'S PEN Companies Are Signing Leases On Rowan County Farms

The southern Ohio oil boom, bringing to some of our backcountry neighboring farm dreams of riches, has spread into Rowan, and counties of this area.

It is companies that are bigger and more prosperous with each passing day, getting deeper and bigger as it enters this part of Kentucky.

One friend, who is sometimes right, says that a vast pool of oil is being discovered because the oil is at a depth not heretofore drilled, and modern machinery makes it possible to profitably achieve such results.

The facts at hand do not bear this out, but then again we do not claim to know much about sands, rock patterns and oil pools.

Mark Johnson, now a geologist of Lexington, had leased considerable acreage in Elliott County. He employed an "expert" geologist.

What he was told about certain sands and rock formations, the drilling of additional wells did not appear feasible.

Mark listened in silence to much of the unfavorable report, his face finally turned red, his glasses slipped to the end of his nose.

What the hell do you think I hired you for, in this heated command, he said to the geologist.

Returning to the salient fact at hand - there may not be much, if any, oil underneath the valleys and hills of Rowan and neighboring areas, but it is obvious that leasing is underway on a large scale.

Records at the county clerk's office reveal that Ashland Oil Co. has leased on Rowan farms during June, and another big batch is expected.

It appears that 50 cents an acre is paid for the lease, and 50 cents for renewal each year if a well is not drilled, or the lease abandoned.

This is the biggest leasing boom in Rowan County's 108-year history. We hope to report a gusher one of these days.

What he was told about certain sands and rock formations, the drilling of additional wells did not appear feasible.

The third Monk's turn came five years later and he said: "I'm getting out of this place. The too much bickering."

Somebody About Our Type Faces Readers were quick to notice in the last issue that this column, and of the other reading matter, was set in a different type.

In January The Morehead News installed a fountain, precision, high speed, lithograph-offset press. . . and, brother if you don't think this equipment meant big money just price one.

The publisher and the editor adopted an operating plan calling for the use of linotype (hot metal), with proofs (by printer) for the photography and plate-making division.

An acute shortage of linotype and printers developed. This was coupled with a training program on the new equipment, created in 1955 period and forced the owners to acquire IBM executive machines and "cold" equipment for the setting of ads, headlines etc.

We have reason to believe that the new, faster, and legible, plant condition machines will hit the market by Christmas which will require our third conversion.

Most members of the 4th Estate recognize (some bitterly dispute) that the day of linotype operators and printers except in the most important cases using high speed rotary presses, is just about at its end.

Education Bill Is Important Cooper Says

Sen. John Sherman Cooper said today that the National Defense Education Act of 1958, which provides for extension of federal aid to schools in areas of strategic importance.

He called for its final passage in the Congress, declaring: "I am glad that this bill makes provision for extending these laws through June 30, 1967."

Cooper, a co-sponsor of the bill, said the act makes provision for extending federal aid to schools in areas of strategic importance.

Just as thousands of students and teachers in my own State of Kentucky have already benefited from existing provisions of the National Defense Education Act, still many others in Kentucky and across the country can benefit from the provisions of this Act.

Youthful Evangelist Who Sees Visions To Conduct Revival Near Olive Hill

A 16-year-old evangelist who claims to have seen visions of Christ and who has converted some 200 of his high-school classmates, is coming to Eastern Kentucky for a series of...

Spencer Campbell Jr., 16, sees visions

(Va.) Gazette. Campbell—raised by an aunt and uncle—said his visions began at age 12. His descriptions: "A strange thing happened up at Olive Hill one day. I was with some friends in the church time and it touched off a sudden reaction in him. I grabbed the sides of the pulpit. ... grew numb, couldn't move. ... saw Christ open the back door of the church and walk in. There was a very bright light coming from his face. I couldn't see his face because of the light, but I could see his robes and his hands with the blood dripping out of them. ... I felt like I could have given to heaven right then if I could have had a ticket to him, but I couldn't move. ... Campbell says the visions have become a recurring part of his services. "Ever since then, I just take a text and stand there and wait until I see things," he said. "I don't talk about what I see. I don't always see them. Sometimes my Scriptures will change on me, and when they do I'm pretty sure to see one. The boy plans to continue in the ministry as an evangelist. Kiser said a 35-voice choir from Campbell's "home church," the Campbell's Cook W. Va., will accompany him to Olive Hill. A choir "from Toledo, O., and a group from Akron, O., and a Portsmouth quartet will also make up the musical part of the services. Young Campbell is a Methodist but his messages are non-denominational, Kiser said. The globe appearance will be his only one in Kentucky before he returns to school in September according to the sponsors of the services, which will begin at 7:30 each evening from Sunday through Saturday.

JUST A HABIT

Compulsiveness Can Be Cured

Want half an hour after supper to go to the kitchen, helps himself to a large wedge of cake and reads the next television program. ... back, this time for a glass of beer and a roast of beef. ... Mrs. Brown is not a bride with three children who crumbe each time. ... Mrs. Lewis has her eyes rapidly severed in an instant and, after a few more, blinks them. ... Mrs. Jones is a woman for the right, check her door six or seven times to make sure everything is all right. ... washing his hands—between the 50th time—and if he wash them at least twice more before going to bed. Exaggerated? Perhaps slightly but persons who are in most respects perfectly average are slaves to compulsive acts that seemingly serve no purpose. They may or may not be aware of these habits. In each case the act is non-productive. The fictitious Mr. Smith already has eaten three adequate meals. Mrs. Brown's hands often ache and Mrs. Lewis is aware of her constant eye twitching. A double check really is all that's necessary for Mr. Jones and his son's hands are clean. These are but a few of the most common compulsive acts — that sometimes may become serious enough to require professional treatment to unravel. Nearly always they are but a symptom of an underlying anxiety, although in some cases, they are reinforced habits which remain long after the anxiety has been removed.

initial cause has been removed. Excessive spending, drinking, smoking, sexual activities are other common outlets for persons who have developed these habits to relieve their nervousness. Even so laudable a habit as work can become a compulsive act if the person is so dedicated himself to his job that he substitutes all else and spends his entire time in job-related activities. Psychiatrists differ slightly on the best course of action for these compulsive habits but all agree that, not strongly ingrained or a symptom of a deep disturbance, it is possible to accomplish it without professional help. Dr. Beverly Mead, of the University of Kentucky Medical Center, pointed out that about 90 per cent of man's activity is habit of one form or another. This includes speech, writing, eating and sleeping. He generally ascribes to personality. Any mechanism used over a period of time, he added, is likely to become self-perpetuating. Dr. Kenneth Moore, of the Lexington Veterans Administration Hospital, noted that for persons attempting to break a compulsive act, more than a simple understanding of the cause is necessary; an emotional understanding also is needed. All such acts serve a purpose, he continued, usually to relieve an underlying conflict by using another method of expression. Dr. Mead said all habits serve a purpose and this was noted by Dr. John A. Schreiner, a Lexington psychiatrist, who said that if the compulsive act is not socially disruptive and does not cause the performer too much distress, sometimes it is better to leave well enough alone. Dr. Schreiner believes that it is a "relative peace" as when an act becomes compulsive and added that sometimes focusing attention on it will make worse. Dr. Mead said that if a self-help program is selected, the following steps are helpful: A thorough self-examination as to cause and desire to cease a compulsive acts, attention to the action and a deliberate attempt to do something else. It also is necessary to realize, he added, that a habit, even if undesirable, is filling some need for its performer. Physical activity often can be a distraction for many of the more common and less serious cases, according to the doctor. Dr. Moore suggests that person attempting to cure a compulsive act reduce systematically the amount of gratification the habit brings. He added a warning that strong motivation is needed for success. Dr. Schreiner suggested that it must first be determined what the act has as physical cause such as illness or a professional appraisal is helpful for determining the extent of the compulsion, asking that often with pre-adolescents and teen-agers, reassurance is enough to help them break their habits that are not too strongly ingrained. All three psychiatrists agreed that sometimes compulsive acts bespeak deep and serious emotional disturbance which must be treated professionally but, in most of these cases, compulsive acts are compounded by other symptoms. Persons with obsessive compulsive neuroses often are very difficult patients to treat, the doctors agreed, because they frequently are above-average in intelligence, enjoy verbal fencing with their doctors and

SS Possible Even With Some Earnings

Did you know that it is possible to receive social security benefits to receive some income in spite of substantial earnings? Thomas S. Thompson, Social Security Director in a recent report, stated recently that workers over 65 believe that they are not eligible to receive social security benefits merely because they earn more than $1,000 a year. "Congress," said Thompson, "has made it possible for anyone over 65 to earn more than $1200 a year and still get some of their social security checks. Since many older workers are not aware of this, thousands of dollars go unclaimed. Under the present rule, if a worker earns more than $1200 in a year, $1 in benefits may be withheld for every $2 earned over $1200. If he earns $1,500, $1 a worker earns over $1,700, $1 in benefits may be withheld. Since those amounts are withheld from the total yearly family benefits, there is often more than enough to absorb the withholding, thereby leaving benefits payable. For example, Mr. Jones, 66, is now working and earning $2000 per year. Because he earned no more of $1200, he did not apply for his social security benefits. If he had, he would have found that he was entitled to a monthly benefit of $100 based on his earnings through the years. His 65-year-old wife would be entitled to a wife's benefit of $50. Together their total monthly benefits would be $150 per month, or $1800 per year. Applying the above test to his $2000 yearly earnings, $800 in benefits would be held back because his earnings between $1200 and $1700, and $900 would be held back for his earnings over $1700, total amount withheld. The losses, therefore, would be able to receive the difference between the $1800 yearly benefits to which they are entitled and the $1150 which would be withheld based on his $2000 yearly earnings. This would amount to $650. If Mr. Jones had applied for his social security benefits before he was 65, he would have received $650 in security benefits for each year. In addition to this, explained Mr. Thompson, there are other conditions which permit payment of these benefits. Under these provisions, no matter how much a beneficiary earns in a year, he can still be paid his full benefits for any month in which he does not earn wages of more than $100 and does not actively work in self-employment. A $150, 489 beneficiary will receive $100 for any month he is 72 years of age or more, regardless of his monthly or yearly earnings. Thompson urged workers 65 or older to get in touch with their nearest Social Security office to learn if they can receive benefits even though they are earning.

100 YEARS AGO THIS WEEK The Civil War In Kentucky

By JOE JORDAN (Kentucky Civil War Commission)

One hundred years ago this week a Confederate States Army force under Col. Adam R. Johnson was in possession of considerable territory in Western Kentucky far behind Union Army lines. The Rebels were making themselves as comfortable as they could in the area, taking it easy, and acting with an audacity that bordered on a provocation. Johnson issued a proclamation and a series of general orders, all headed "Headquarters Confederate States Forces, United States, Ky." He announced that the Confederate States War Department had appointed him commander of the "District of Southwest Kentucky" and ordered all Confederate soldiers in his district who had taken the oath of allegiance to the Federal authorities to report to him without delay. The Confederate States government having declared that oath is no binding." It was thought his mission was to recruit remnants of Morgan's command scattered by the disastrous defeat of Morgan's June raid. He even made a move to enforce the Confederate draft law, ordering up all male citizens 18 to 45 exempt from military duty. One of Johnson's officers, Maj. Wm. Taylor crossed the Ohio River from Henderson, Ky. to Evansville, Ind. under a flag of truce and escorted his men to the north side of the river by a U. S. naval cutter. Taylor was ordered to cross to Louisville and see Maj. Gen. S. G. Burbridge, who was in command of Federal troops in Kentucky. Taylor carried a letter which Johnson had addressed to Burbridge, requesting a defender of the letter's order regarding the Confederate soldiers who were to be placed upon the list and to be punished for the lawless acts of renegades from both armies." He referred to the execution of two Confederate soldiers at Henderson and said that this precedent was followed by Confederate soldiers in other parts committed on the continent. Burbridge refused to receive the communication, declaring that Johnson was either a Confederate soldier or a general, and he had "failed to prove that he is the former." Johnson had been one of Morgan's brigade commanders on the Indiana Ohio Raid. Burbridge could scarcely have failed to know that he was a fellow commissioned Confederate officer. Maj. Taylor was sent to Memphis and passed through the lines to Confederate territory. The Evansville Journal reports that Johnson had at his headquarters headquarters 700 to 800 men "finely armed and equipped and well mounted." In Crittenden County, it said there was a company of one hundred men that was expected to join up with Johnson. In the fourth year of a bloody war, the entire Evansville editor asked what must have been a startled rhetorical question "Now does any man suppose that these Rebel forces are concentrated there for a peace full purpose?"

ON HATE GROUPS President Johnson's public condemnation of "hate organizations" will be followed by legal maneuvers to expose those who have accused of fomenting terror. An administration source said evidence is being gathered by Federal authorities to use against those who try to "force, bully and intimidate" Negroes from claiming their constitutional rights.

$800,000 In Loans Granted Soil Conservation Groups

More than $800,000 was loaned during the last fiscal year from state funds set up to help Kentucky's soil conservation districts acquire specialized heavy equipment. State Natural Resources Commissioner J. O. A. Matlick said the loans are made from a special equipment revolving fund, administered by the Department of Soil and Water Resources. The amount put under loan this fiscal year is $241,305 more than was advanced last year. The funds are used by the districts to help purchase heavy equipment used in soil conservation work. The loans provide up to two-thirds of the purchase price of equipment. The remainder is furnished as a down payment by private contractors who sublease the equipment from the local soil conservation districts. The loans are secured by mortgages on heavy equipment that they could have otherwise purchased.

The revolving loan program began in 1948, with an appropriation of $400,000. This was increased to $800,000 by the 1963 legislature. Since 1948, a total of $8,856,188 had been put under loan through the end of the last fiscal year. During the 1963-64 fiscal year, equipment purchased through the loan fund, including such items as crawler tractors, such as clear ditcher, 72, 654 feet of farm roads; 147, 354 feet of open ditch drainage; and 467, 880 feet of tile drainage. In addition, the equipment has been used to dig 576 ponds and tanks, clear 1,457 ponds, and install 809, 717 feet of fence row, clear and reclaim 170, 970 feet of stream channel, and grade 1, 064 acres of land.

A program of musical music was presented by Mrs. J. R. Morten and Mrs. Russell Gallimore. The altar was decorated with white tapers against emerald green trees and baskets of white gladioli. The bride's train was entwined with smilax with a white satin pique-train. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white pean de soie and imported Chantilly lace. The fitted bodice was styled with long sleeves and a scalloped scoop neckline. The modified bell skirt was accented by a full-length panel of appliqued lace which extended around the hem. The removable court train, attached at the neckline, was trimmed with lace. Her veil of tulle was held by a tiara of seed pearls. She carried a white orchid and ribbon of the valley.

Old Kentucky Ham To Get Special Niche At This Year's State Fair Celebration

Old Kentucky ham, or "country ham," famous the world over for flavor and aroma, has a special show at this year's Kentucky State Fair. A special judging class will be held for the delicacy, says Gov. Ned Breathitt will be at the Exposition Center Wednesday, Sept. 16, to recognize class winners and promote this gourmet's delight. Gov. Ned Breathitt will be honor guest at the breakfast, which is 8:30 a. m. Louisville time at the Fairgrounds' Savarin restaurant. Grand champion and reserve grand champion ham will be auctioned off, Varney said, at the breakfast.

Thousands of travelers have eaten Kentucky ham and gone home with one, or spread the word about the article. Consequently, says Varney, Kentucky is in a unique position to raise income. "It is a sizable business now, with modern curing, aging and merchandising methods based on careful research, there is a better future for a Kentucky country ham industry."

This product differs from conventional hams, Varney points out, in several respects. These differences probably account for the product's desirability. One is that curing ingredients are pumped into conventional hams by brine or a plastic solution. On country hams, they are applied as a dry rub. In curing, water is removed from the country ham but increased in conventional hams. The conventional ham is marketed soon after curing, but the country hams' flavor is more intense because of concentration through loss of water and enzymatic activities in aging.

One other factor in favor of country hams is the variety of ways they may be used. They can be baked, boiled, broiled, fried, made into croquettes, or coated with a glazing. So can conventional hams -- but the old ham's taste level is much higher to many persons after these treatments.

Varney says the old ham show entries will be accepted from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Wednesday, Sept. 9. They go immediately on exhibit in the east wing. They will be judged Tuesday, Sept. 15. He has full information on regulations, premiums etc. of breakfast. "It will be buffet style, and include country ham, eggs fried apples and biscuits. This is a traditional Kentucky breakfast. The breakfast is open to any person. Price is nominal. There will be speeches, jars a get-together session. Then the grand champion and reserve grand champion proceeds go to the person who produced the winning hams."

Varney says he hopes (1) the old ham breakfast will be an affair, and (2) that the old ham show will be the first step toward expansion of an industry peculiar to Kentucky. "Other states produce old hams. But we produce old Kentucky's country hams."

Tightening Point System

Stronger point levies aimed primarily at speeding and racing violations will go into effect in the State's driver point system by Labor Day weekend, according to Gov. Edward T. Breathitt. "I realize that no enforcement is a popular program," Breathitt told a recent public hearing held in Frankfort on the proposed changes. "But all of us as public officials must face up to our responsibilities. Whatever price we have to pay in public criticism will be well worth it if even one life is saved."

Major changes in the point assessments are: Racing (now 6 points); suspension of driving privilege for 90 days for first offense, one year for second offense, and three years for subsequent offenses. Speeding (now 3 points) under 10 miles per hour over limit, 3 points; 10 to 25 mph over limit, 6 points; 25 mph and over, suspension of driving privilege for 90 days. Moving violation involving an accident from 4 to 6 points. Passing stopped school bus loading or unloading -- from 4 to 6 points. Operating a motor vehicle in violation of restrictions (such as without glasses) -- from 3 to 4 points. Failure to yield right of way to emergency vehicle -- from 2 to 4 points. Operating a motor vehicle in violation of restrictions (such as without glasses) -- from 3 to 4 points. Attempting to elude a peace officer when making an arrest -- from 3 to 4 points. Operating a motor vehicle in violation of restrictions (such as without glasses) -- from 3 to 4 points.

Lewisport Work On Giant Plant Is Underway

Groundbreaking ceremonies near Lewisport, on the Ohio River in Hancock County, marked the start of construction of the $50 million Harvey Aluminum Company rolling mill that is expected to employ an estimated 1,600 persons when completed in mid-1966. The mill is the largest single new industrial investment made in Kentucky during the past 10 years. The city of Lewisport issued $50 million in industrial revenue bonds to finance construction of the plant, the largest municipal industrial revenue bond issue ever marketed in the nation.

Harvey Aluminum is building the mill, will sell it to Lewisport, and then lease it back. Lease payments will retire the bonds. All bonds are scheduled to be retired by 1988. Gov. Edward T. Breathitt delivered the keynote address at ceremonies held at the Hancock County High School. "This rolling mill will bring a tremendous boost to the economy of Hancock County and the surrounding area in terms of jobs, increased income and the growth of business. It is another example of industry's faith in the future of Kentucky as a major industrial area of the nation," Breathitt said.

A Company President Lawrence Harvey, Torrance, Calif., stressed that "the progressive attitude of Lewisport, the Governor, the Legislature and the Kentucky Department of Commerce has given Kentucky a much-deserved reputation as a state having an ideal business climate. Instead of the traditional show-el, a public driver was put in operation to symbolize breaking of ground for the new industrial facility."

My wife and I have been wanting a home of our own for a long time. I'm a small salaried man and I didn't think that we could afford one. Then one day a friend told me about First Federal Savings and Loan Association Home Ownership Plan. I went in to talk it over. The friendly officers showed me how I could own a home of my own and pay very little expense connected with it in one lump sum. I pay monthly just the way I used to pay rent.

Of the 20 persons attending the public hearing on the proposed revisions, only one question was raised. Dallas Queen, Mayville, vice-president of the Kentucky Automobile Dealers Association, questioned the method of determining the speed of an offending motorist when "your own specifications for police cruisers allow for a 3 per cent speedometer error. Queen said he would have to consult with the dealer he represents before the association could endorse the proposed changes. Other spokesmen were unanimous in their approval, however. Some of the typical comments voiced were: James M. Brown, Louisville Automobile Club: "We intend to fully support the Department of Public Safety in this matter. Captain Estel Hack, Louisville Safety Council: "I hope the courts and the police will do a good job of apprehending and convicting offenders when these changes go into effect. George Wilson, Lexington, Kentucky Automotive Wholesale Association: "This is a step in the right direction. Paul Young, Louisville, Kentucky Motor Transport Association: "We agree in essence with everything you are trying to do."

Priming helps produce good quality leaf. Priming tobacco crops is one way to help produce high quality tobacco, says H. Smiley, University of Kentucky Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

Priming is removal of the lower leaves of the plant as they ripen. When the remainder of the plant is allowed to ripen to the top, quality is upped considerably. Usually growers will not prime tobacco, but will wait and stalk-cut the entire plant when lower leaves have become withered. But this means top portions of the plant usually have not ripened.

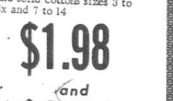

"With the large quantities of undesirable burley tobacco now in storage, it should be the object of every grower to help right the situation by producing high quality, ripe tobacco." Highest acre-returns from
