President's Message.

...of Federal activity will do well to study the history not only of the national banking act, but of the pure food law and notably the meat inspection law as recently enacted. The pure food law was opposed so violently that its passage was delayed for a decade, yet it has worked unmitigated good. The meat inspection law was even more violently assailed, and the same men who now denounce its provisions as a violation of the right of interstate commerce in seeking to oversee and control the workings of interstate common carriers and business, concerning and ruining a great American industry. Two years have not elapsed, and already the law has worked so well that the great length the law confers upon the public is accompanied by an equal benefit to the reputable packing establishments. The latter are better off under the law than they were without it. The benefit to interstate common carriers and business, concerning the meat inspection law, would be equal if marked.

Pure Food Law.
 Incidentally the passage of the pure food law the action of the various state food and dairy commissions shown in striking fashion how much good for the country has resulted from the hearty cooperation of the federal and state officials in securing a given reform. It is fortunate that the action of these state commissions that we see the enactment of this law, for they aroused the people, first to demand the enactment and enforcement of state laws on the subject and then the enactment of the federal law, without which the state laws were largely ineffective. There must be the closest cooperation between the national and state governments in administering these laws.

Currency Legislation Needed.
 I again urge on the congress the need of immediate attention to this matter. We need a greater elasticity in our currency, provided of course that we recognize the even greater need of a safe and secure currency. Provision should be made for an emergency currency. The emergency issue should of course be made with an effective guarantee and upon conditions carefully prescribed by the government. Such emergency issue must be based on adequate securities approved by the government and issued under a license. The issue should permit currency being issued when the demand for it was urgent, while securing its retirement as the demand fell off. It is worth investigating to determine whether officers and directors of national banks should be allowed to loan to themselves, or to companies, should be subject to the same supervision as banks. Legislation to this effect should be enacted for the district or a region or the territories.

Yet we must also remember that even the wisest legislation on a national scale may accomplish a certain amount. No legislation can possibly guarantee the business community against the results of speculation. It is folly any more than it is wisdom to be an individual, to invest in his own speculative ventures. When an individual mortgages his house to buy an automobile he incurs disaster, and when wealthy men or men who pose as such are as unscrupulous or foolishly eager to become speculators in reckless speculation, especially if it is carried out by dishonesty, they jeopardize not only their own future, but the future of all the subsequent fellow citizens, for they expose the whole business community to panic and distress.

Can't Revise Tariff Now.
 This country is definitely committed to the protective system and any effort to repeal it could not but cause widespread industrial disaster. In other words the principle of the present tariff law could not be changed. But in a country of such phenomenal growth as ours it is probably well that every dozen years or so the tariff law should be carefully scrutinized so as to see that no excessive or improper benefits are conferred thereby that proper revenue is provided and that our foreign trade is encouraged. There must always be as a minimum a tariff which will not only allow for the collection of ample revenue, but which will at least make good the difference in cost of production here and abroad—that is, the difference in the labor cost here and abroad, for the well being of the wage worker must ever be a cardinal point of American policy. The question should be approached purely from a business standpoint, both the time and the manner of the change being such as to arouse the indignation of protectionists and distribute the business work and to give the least just for selfish and factional motives. The sole consideration should be as to what the public good, this means that the subject cannot with wisdom be dealt with in the year present, a general election being as a matter of fact experience has conclusively shown that at such a time it is impossible to get men to treat it from the standpoint of the public good. In my judgment the wise time to deal with the matter is immediately after each election.

Income Tax and Inheritance Tax.
 When our tax laws are revised the question of the income tax and an inheritance tax should receive the careful attention of our legislators. In my judgment, both of these taxes should be part of our system of federal taxation. I speak deliberately about the income tax because our scheme for an income tax was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court, while in addition it is difficult to administer in its practical working, and great care would have to be exercised to see that it was not evaded by the very means which it was intended to be levied. Nevertheless a graduated income tax of the proper type would be a desirable feature of our federal taxation. It is to be hoped that one may be devised which the supreme court will declare constitutional.

The inheritance tax, however, is a far better method of taxation. The government has the absolute right to decide as to the terms upon which it should receive bequeathed property, and its point in the distribution of property is especially appropriate for the imposition of a tax. Taxes in the public stock laws have repeatedly been placed upon the national statute books and as recently declared constitutional by the supreme court. The laws which contained the progressive principle—that is after a certain amount is received by the legatee or gift in life or death—increased the rate of the tax. The rate of taxation is increased in proportion to the richness of bond of the man receiving the legatee. These principles are equally applicable to the estate of civilized nations of the world.

Germany's Inheritance Tax.
 The German law is especially interesting to us because it makes the inheritance tax an imperial measure, while leaving to the individual state of the empire a portion of the proceeds and permitting them to impose taxes in addition to those imposed by the imperial government. Small inheritances are exempt but the law is so drafted as to be progressive that when the inheritance is still not very large, provided it is not an agricultural or a forest land, it is taxed at the rate of 25 per cent if it goes to distant relatives. There is no reason why in the United States the national government should not impose inheritance taxes in an amount in those imposed by the states and when we had an inheritance tax about one-half of the states levied such taxes concurrently with the national government, making a combined maximum rate in some cases as high as 25 per cent.

To Tax Nonresidents Higher.
 The tax should be levied in a way to bear more heavily upon those residing without the country than within it. A heavy progressive tax upon a very large estate is a very good thing, but a tax upon a small fortune, or a tax upon a man of industry as a life tax would be on a small fortune. No advantage comes either to the country as a whole or to the individual inheriting the money by permitting the transmission to their estate of the enormous fortunes which would be affected by such a tax, and as an individual in its form of revenue raising such a tax would have to be met by the people of the generations growing to maturity.

We have not the slightest sympathy with that sort of speculation which would try to get business thriftlessness and inefficiency on a par with industrial thrift and efficiency, which would strive to break up not merely private property, but what is far more important, the home, the chief prop upon which our whole civilization stands.

Such a theory if ever adopted would mean the ruin of the entire country, but proposals for legislation such as this have advanced are directly opposed to the view of socialistic principles.

Enforcement of the Law.
 A few years ago there was loud complaint that the law could not be invoked against certain offenders. There is no such complaint now. The course of the department of justice during the last few years has been such as to make it evident that no man stands above the law, that no corporation is so wealthy that it cannot be held to any account. Everything that can be done under the existing law and with the existing state of public opinion, which so profoundly influences both the courts and juries, has been done, but the law themselves need strengthening. They should be made more definite, so that no honest man can be led unwittingly to break them and so that the real wrong can be readily punished.

Moreover, there must be the public opinion back of the laws and the law themselves will be of no avail. The two great evils in the execution of our criminal laws today are sentimentality and weakness. For the latter the remedy must come from the minds of the legislators, the courts and the juries. The other must depend for its cure upon the gradual growth of a sound public opinion which shall insist that regard for the law and the demands of reason shall control all other influences and emotions in the jury box. Both of these evils must be removed or public discontent with the criminal law will counteract injunctive.

Instances of abuse in the granting of injunctions in labor disputes came to occur, and the resentment in the minds of those who feel that their rights are being invaded and their liberty of action and of speech unreasonably restricted continues likewise to grow. Much of the attack on the use of the process of injunction is wholly without warrant, but I am constrained to express the belief that for some of it there is warrant. This question is becoming one of prime importance, and unless the courts will deal with it in effective manner it is certain ultimately to demand some form of legislative action. It would be most unfortunate for our social welfare if we should permit many honest and law abiding citizens to feel that they had just cause for regarding the courts with hostility. I earnestly commend to the attention of the congress this matter, so that some way may be devised which will limit the abuse of injunctions and protect those rights which from time to time it unwarrantably invades. Moreover, discount in other respects with the use of the process of injunction by the courts, not only in labor disputes, but where state laws are concerned, I refrain from discussion of this question as I am informed that it will soon receive the consideration of the supreme court.

The process of obstructing the essential object of the court's doing its work well, and as preventive measures are always better than remedial ones, it is to be hoped that from every standpoint commendable. But when it is reckless or unnecessary, as the above should be, it is to be hoped that all of the very men who are properly anxious to prevent any effort to cheat the courts of this necessary power. The court's decision must be final. The protest is only against the conduct of individual judges in needlessly multiplying such final decisions or in the technical use of which the abuse of a temporary injunction to accomplish what is in fact a permanent decision. The president urges the passage of a model employers' liability act for the District of Columbia and the territories to encourage corporations to treat injured employees better, and to financially indorse the eight hour day.

The president urges the states to fight the child and woman labor evil.

The national government has as an ultimate resort the control of child labor. The use of the interstate commerce clause to prevent the products of child labor from entering interstate commerce. But before using this would certainly be most desirable under an amendment for the territories under an amendment to the constitution.

Presidential Campaign Expenses.
 Under our form of government voting is not merely a right, but a duty, and, moreover, a fundamental and necessary duty if a man is to be a good citizen. It is not possible that either the general or the individual shall not contribute to presidential or national campaigns and, furthermore, to provide for the publication of both construction and construction. There is, however, always danger in laws of this kind, which from their very nature are difficult of enforcement, the danger being not that they be obeyed only by the honest and disinterested by the unscrupulous, so as to act only as a penalty upon honest men. Moreover, as such laws are a burden on an unscrupulous man of unscrupulous means from having his own way with the law. There is a very real increase in the world, I believe, with a substantial improvement in our system of conducting a campaign, although I am not sure that it will take some time for people to be familiarized themselves with such a proposal as to be willing to consider the advantages. The cost of such large campaign funds would vanish if congress passed an appropriation for the purpose and legislative authority for the great election parties, an appropriation amounting to the necessary amount for the organization and maintenance of a great campaign.

May Rheumatism out in the United States.

When an eminent authority announced in the Seranton (Pa.) Times that he had found a new way to treat that dread American disease, Rheumatism, with just common, every-day drugs found in any drug store, the physicians were slow indeed to attach much importance to his claims. This was only a few months ago. Today nearly every newspaper in the country, even the metropolitan dailies, is announcing it and the splendid results achieved. It is so simple that any one can prepare it at home at small cost. It is made up as follows; Get from any good prescription pharmacy Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. These are all simple ingredients, making an absolutely harmless home remedy at little cost.

John Reis, who was shot at L. must be recently, is yet in an extremely serious condition and his recovery is not expected.

Monday evening, a short way West of town, Frank Hall and Charley Garvin had a difficulty which ended in the death of Hall and probably will also cost Garvin his life, as he is fearfully cut.

The cause is said to have been from previous unfriendly relations which existed between the two. While Hall was stabbing Garvin a shot came from unknown quarters and struck Hall in the shoulder. He ran about fifty feet and fell dead. Garvin is at his father's house under the care of Dr. Williams.

Vess Abrams has moved from the Valley to his new residence on Mill.

Rheumatism, as every one knows, is a symptom of deranged kidneys. It is a condition produced by the failure of the kidneys to properly filter or strain from the blood the uric acid and other matter which if not eradicated, either in the urine or through the skin pores, remains in the blood, decompose and forms about the joints and muscles, causing the untold suffering and deformity of rheumatism.
This prescription is said to be a splendid healing, cleansing and invigorating tonic to the kidneys, and gives almost immediate relief in all forms of bladder and urinary troubles and backache. He also warns people in a leading New York paper against the discriminate use of many patent medicines.

penditure of money. Then the stipulation should be made that no party receiving campaign funds from the treasury should accept more than a fixed amount from any individual subscriber or donor, and the necessary publicity for receipts and expenditures could not readily be provided.

The Army.
The president recommends legislation to increase the number of officers in the army, especially in the medical corps. The rate of pay for officers should be greatly increased, he declares. There should be a relatively even greater increase in the rate of pay of enlisted men. If we are to keep the army in shape to be effective in time of need. The president recommends severe examination of officers for promotion up to the grade of major. From that point promotion should be purely by selection. He is one of the recent physical test of army officers with emphatic approbation and recommends a bill equalizing the pay of officers and men of the army navy, marine corps and reserve cutter service.

The Navy.

"Concerning the navy the president says:
In my judgment, we should this year provide for four battleships. But it is wise to build battleships unless, in addition to providing the means and the means for thorough training, we provide the auxiliaries for them—especially the auxiliary sailing ships. The others and supply ships that they need. We are extremely deficient in coaling stations and docks on the Pacific, and this deficiency should no longer be permitted to exist. Fleets of torpedo boats and destroyers should be built. Both on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts fortifications of the new type should be provided for all our greatest harbors.

Until our battle fleet is much larger than at present it should never be split into detachments so far apart that they could not in event of emergency be speedily united. Our coast line on the Pacific just as much as on the Atlantic. The battle fleet should now and then be moved to the Pacific just as at other times it should be sent to the Atlantic. When the isthmian canal is built the transit of the battle fleet from one ocean to the other will be comparatively easy. Until it is so I earnestly hope that the battle fleet will be thus divided between the two oceans every year or two. The battle fleet is about equal in size to the fleet of Magellan to visit the Pacific coast. Sixteen battleships are going under the command of Rear Admiral Evans, and eight armored cruisers and two other battleships will meet him in San Francisco. Whether certain torpedo destroyers are also going, no fleet of such size has ever made such a voyage, and it will be of very great educational use to all engaged in it. The only way by which to teach an officer and crew how to handle the fleet so as to meet every possible strain and emergency in time of war is to have them practice under similar conditions in time of peace.

The president recommends the increased pay for both officers and enlisted men and advanced promotion in respect above the grade of lieutenant commander.

Foreign Affairs.
In foreign affairs the president says the country's steady policy is to be have toward other nations as a strong and self respecting man should behave toward the other men with whom he is brought into contact. In other words, our aim is disinterestedly to help other nations where such help can be rendered without the appearance of meddling with what does not concern us, to be careful to act as a good neighbor and at the same time to stand in no fashion to make it evident that we do not intend to be imposed upon.

The president refers generally to the Hague peace conference. He declares it accomplished much good work.

Postal Savings Banks.

The president says on postal affairs: A comment to the favorable consideration of the congress a postal savings bank system as recommended by the postmaster general. Timid depositors have withdrawn their savings for the time being from national banks, trust companies and savings banks, in addition have hoarded their cash and the workmen's bank savings, all of which money has been withheld and kept in hiding or in the safe deposit box to the detriment of progress. Through the agency of the postal savings banks such money would be restored to the channels of trade to the mutual benefit of capital and labor. I further commend to the congress the consideration of the postmaster general's recommendation for an extension of the postal post, especially on the rural routes. It would be a most desirable thing to put the fourth class postmasters in the classified service.

Other recommendations are:

Deepening of the inland waterways, especially of the Mississippi river system, to make them great national highways.

The repeal of the tariff on forest products, especially the duty on wood pulp.

The amendment of the public land laws to make them more effective against land grabbers and more favorable to bona fide settlers.

Retention of the government's title to public coal and other mineral lands. Extension of the national forest reserves.

Creer liability for the people of Porto Rico.

Transfer local self government for Alaska.

Encouragement of the merchant marine, particularly of an ocean mail line to South America.

Remission of the Boser indemnity and free entry for Chinese students coming to America.

What Would You Do

If three good physicians should pronounce your case hopeless. If they should decide that you could not live longer than six weeks. And if you should get well, after using only $12.00 worth of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nerve, what would you advise a friend in like condition to do?

If you have to thank you for saving my life, like two years ago. We first consulted with the doctor until the doctor said that nothing could be done for me. That the had better be taken home from the hospital to quietly wait for time which would not be over 4 weeks at the most. I brought her home and then I bought Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and Nerve. I might have had a good bundle of each and some Nerve and Liver Pills and commenced to give them to her. We soon seen an improvement, and encouraged by this we continued trying the medicine. We gave her eleven bottles of each of the medicine. She takes it occasionally now. If she feels the need of it again in the ministry, and have been for 4 years.
