MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Four journalism scholarships totaling $1,000 yearly have been established at Morehead State University by the Morehead News.

R.J. Caudill, general manager of the newspaper, announced that the annual gift would be split into grants of $250 each for one student at the freshman, sophomore, junior and senior levels.

Recipients will be selected by a three-member committee from applicants living within the area served by The Morehead News and its affiliated publications in Eastern Kentucky.

"We are proud of our university and obviously have a special interest in maintaining a strong journalism program," Caudill said.

In accepting the scholarship funds, MSU President Morris L.

Norfleet commented:

"This will be a stimulus to our journalism program. I commend Mr. Caudill and his company for their support of Morehead State University."

The committee established to award the scholarships includes Caudill, Elmer Anderson, MSU's director of financial aid, and W. David Brown, MSU's journalism coordinator.

All scholarships may be renewed by maintaining an overall grade-point-average of 2.5 and a 2.75 average in journalism courses.

Additional information is available from W. David Brown, UPO 882, MSU, Morehead, Ky. 40351.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- For at least one man attending the U.S. Navy's electrical school on the Morehead State University campus during World War II, the experience gave rise to a career.

Many service men went through the school from its opening in early 1942 until its closing in 1945, and one, Dr. Alfred Silano of Metuchen, N. J., found the atmosphere of a college campus, even in wartime, to his liking.

Stationed in an academic surrounding for 16 weeks, Dr. Silano, an 18-year-old out of New Brunswick, N. J., decided he wanted to become a college professor. As professor of physics at Kean College of New Jersey, he has achieved his ambition.

"The people that taught at the Navy school were members of the college faculty and were highly professional and mannered," he stated. "That really impressed me, and I think it helped me decide to become a teacher."

Another area that impressed him was the friendship shown him while in Eastern Kentucky.

"The people here were as friendly as any I have ever seen," he said. "They were just the type to help keep a lonely 18-year-old out of trouble."

After his service hitch, Dr. Silano used the GI Bill of Rights to begin his college education, receiving degrees from Rutgers University and Newark College of Engineering.

2-2-2-2-2

A veteran of 25 years of teaching, 17 on the college level, Dr. Silano realized another dream recently, as he visited the campus that gave him his start.

"I vowed to myself that I would come back to Morehead to see what the campus looked like," he stated. "It's taken me 34 years, but I made it."

Although greatly expanded, the campus was still familiar.

"The campus is just as lovely as I remembered," he said. "The changes were almost unbelievable, but the old buildings that were there when I was are still around, and they are really what I remembered most."

The occasion for the visit was a family trip to Boulder, Colo., where he made a presentation to a conference on high pressure physics.

"We had to come several hundred miles out of our way to visit Morehead," he stated. "But, the people and campus made it worth the trip. I wouldn't have missed this opportunity for anything."

THIS IS MOREHEAD STATE UNIVERSITY

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Growth -- in quality and quantity -- is the continuing theme at Morehead State University.

From a teachers college little known outside Kentucky, MSU has evolved into a regional university reaching out to serve Kentucky, Appalachia and the nation.

Morehead State stands today on a 500-acre campus in the foothills of Daniel Boone National Forest, an academic community known for its physical beauty, educational excellence and congenial spirit.

Statistically, the rise of MSU in the last two decades has been breathtaking. Enrollment has mushroomed more than 1,000 per cent to more than 7,500 and upwards of $75 million has been expended in capital construction.

The faculty and staff today number more than 900 persons and the fiscal outlay exceeds $25 million yearly. More than 20,000 persons hold MSU degrees.

Physically, the University consists of more than 50 major structures. MSU also owns an agricultural complex north of Morehead, a nine-hole golf course east of the city and an outdoor education center on Cave Run Lake, west of Morehead. Capital construction projects totaling $8 million are underway or in the planning stages.

(MORE)

In recent years, Morehead State's imaginative yet practical building program has produced a series of design awards from the Kentucky Society of Architects. Dominating MSU's campus skyline are the two tallest occupied structures in Eastern Kentucky, 19-story Cartmell Hall and 16-story Mignon Tower.

Academically, the University is comprised of six schools -- Social Sciences, Education, Applied Sciences and Technology, Humanities, Sciences and Mathematics, and Business and Economics. They offer 145 programs of study from the associate degree through a joint doctoral degree. Almost 50 per cent of the faculty holds earned doctorates.

Administratively, the University operates under a 10-member Board of Regents with eight citizens appointed by the governor of Kentucky. The two other seats are held by elected faculty and student representatives who hold full voting rights. The administrative structure consists primarily of four bureaus -- academic affairs, fiscal affairs, research and development and student affairs.

Dr. Morris L. Norfleet, who took office Jan. 1, 1977, is MSU's eighth president. A graduate of Purdue University and the University of Kentucky, he joined the faculty and administrative staff in 1962 as director of student teaching.

The Pulaski County (Ky.) native also served as director of research and program development, vice president for research and development and as acting president.

Since its founding in 1922, Morehead State University has developed into a dynamic, multi-purpose institution situated on a 500-acre campus in the foothills of the Daniel Boone National Forest.

MSU has grown from a teachers college to a regional university reaching out to serve Kentucky, Appalachia and the nation. In the space of two decades, enrollment has increased tenfold to more than 7,500.

Physically, the University consists of more than 50 major structures valued at upwards of $75 million. Capital construction projects totaling $8 million are underway or in the planning stages.

Academically, the University is comprised of six schools -- Social Sciences, Business and Economics, Education, Applied Sciences and Technology, Humanities and Sciences and Mathematics. Degrees are offered on the associate, undergraduate and graduate level. The faculty numbers 333 and more than 20,000 persons are MSU alumni.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- More than 450 persons received degrees Thursday at Morehead State University's 50th annual summer commencement.

President Morris Norfleet awarded 466 associate, bachelor's, master's and specialists degrees during the ceremony.

Dr. Norfleet presented an honorary doctor's degree to Dr. William S. Hayes, president emeritus of Alice Lloyd College.

Harry Snyder, executive director of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education, delivered the commencement address.

Snyder discussed the future of higher education in Kentucky and defended the Council's recent request for mission statements from the state's eight public institutions.

"I can assure you that each institution's statement was based on a practical, realistic assessment of the institution's current and potential strengths and possibilities for service," he told the graduates.

"Morehead State University's statement, for example, recognizes its strong liberal arts, teacher education, and arts and sciences programs...as well as its potential for selected technical programs and other programs to enhance the economic growth of eastern and northern Kentucky," he continued.

The summer graduates raised MSU's alumni total to nearly 21,000.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Harry M. Snyder, executive director of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education, told a press conference Thursday at Morehead State University that the council's recent moratorium on capital construction was done for purely financial reasons.

"We put a moratorium on construction projects in the planning stages because there is $120 million in planned projects and only $70 million in available funding," he stated.

"We don't feel that three months will add substantially to the cost of any project," he said. "All of the plans we're talking about are at a stage where no definite costs have been mentioned."

"Effects on each campus will differ only in relation to how many projects were in the planning stage," he added. "We're hopeful that the schools will use the three months to re-evaluate their construction needs."

Snyder indicated that this action by the council was not done to set a precedent.

"I certainly hope that the council doesn't get any more involved in capital construction than we already are," he stated. "It's the job of the Executive Department for Finance and Administration to plan and regulate construction projects."

On campus to speak at MSU's Summer Commencement, Snyder had praise for the universities' recent mission statements.

"I feel the mission statements are outstanding," he said. "This was a logical first step in devising a system to give the council and institutions a feel for what we are trying to do."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Budget requests totaling $38.9 million in state appropriations for operating costs during the 1978-80 biennium were approved Thursday by the Morehead State University Board of Regents.

The request, which will be forwarded to the Kentucky Council on Higher Education for review, includes $18.5 million for the 1978-79 fiscal year and $20.4 million for 1979-80.

MSU's state appropriation for the current fiscal year is $14.3 million.

President Morris L. Norfleet identified major cost factors in the request as $2.7 million to keep pace with inflation in salaries and operating expenses, $1.3 million for additional faculty to equalize MSU's faculty teaching load with other state universities, $270,000 for additional library materials to serve off-campus graduate education centers and $136,800 to establish the Appalachian Development Center.

The Appalachian facility would enable MSU to provide additional regional services as specified in the University's mission statement adopted recently by the education council.

"Our faculty members, on the average, have a 20 per cent heavier teaching load than the other schools," Dr. Norfleet told the Regents.

He described the total budget request as "reasonable and justified."

In other action, the board:

Learned from Dr. Norfleet that MSU had recorded its highest summer enrollment in history with 3,884 persons registering for two summer sessions.

Named Elmer D. Anderson as an assistant to the president. He will retain his present position as director of student financial aid.

Approved appointment of Dr. William M. Whitaker as dean of the School of Business and Economics. He had been a faculty member in business administration.

Selected Dr. Louise Quinn to serve a one-year appointment as head of the Department of Business Education. She had been teaching in the department.

Appointed Neal Brittain as director of security. He had been a sergeant in the Kentucky State Police.

Designated Steve Young as coordinator of library science and instructional media. He had been a faculty member in the department.

Attending the meeting were board members Lloyd Cassity and Sam Kibbey of Ashland, James Richardson of Owingsville, Jerry Howell of Jackson, Dr. W. H. Cartmell of Maysville, Dr. Charles Pelfrey of the faculty and Evan Perkins of the student body.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A 54-foot houseboat, valued at more than $40,000, has been donated to the Morehead State University Alumni Association, it was announced here Thursday.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet said the gift from Delbert Burchett of Grayson provides the University with "a splendid connection with Cave Run Lake" where the 1976-model craft is docked.

"Mr. Burchett's generosity will make it possible for the Alumni Association to sponsor more summer activities for our graduates and also will help promote tourism in the Morehead region," Dr. Norfleet said.

He added that the boat would be supervised by the Office of Alumni Relations and that operating costs would be borne by the Alumni Association through special gifts and other external funds.

"No state funds will be involved," Dr. Norfleet stated.

The houseboat was accepted from Burchett at the request of the Alumni Executive Council and with approval of the MSU Board of Regents, according to Alumni Director Don Young.

"We are appointing a special committee to determine when and how the boat is utilized," Young said.

He said several local and regional development groups would be offered use of the boat, including the Morehead Chamber of Commerce, Gateway Area Development District, Morehead-Rowan County Industrial Foundation, Cave Run Development Association, Kentucky Highlands Association and the tourism division of the Kentucky Department of Public Information.

Marvin Rammelsberg of Cincinnati, president of the MSU Alumni Association, said the boat had been named the "MSU Alumni Flying Eagle" and that it would be "a super addition" to MSU's alumni programs.

"This gift has great potential as a means of attracting alumni back to the campus and in showing outsiders the beauty of Cave Run Lake," he said.

Rammelsberg said the boat was one of the most popular items during a recent alumni weekend when it was used in a "trial run" on the lake.

"We are very excited about the prospects of additional alumni activities which will utilize this beautiful vessel," he added.

Major personnel appointments include Elmer D. Anderson as assistant to the president and Dr. William M. Whitaker as dean of the School of Business and Economics.

Neal Brittain, formerly of Winchester, is the new director of security and Dr. William Moore of Glade Spring, Va., now heads the Department of Agriculture.

Elevated to head of the Department of Business Education was Dr. Louise Quinn. She will serve a one-year appointment as MSU embarks on its first rotating academic chairmanship.

James Morton has become director of student housing and Ken White is the new associate director of housing for men. Charles (Chuck) Lee has succeeded Dr. Robert Hawkins as director of MSU'S marching band, the state's largest.

Better medical care for students has been added with the opening of the Wilma Caudill Health Clinic in the newly renovated Allie Young Hall. Other services gaining new facilities in the same structure were placement, field career experiences, TRIO counseling center and the Trail Blazer, student newspaper, and Parnassus, student magazine.

Work on the Julian M. Carroll Library Tower, an $2.1 million addition to Johnson Camden Library, is progressing with expected completion in March, 1978.

Improved ventilation and lighting systems will result from a partial renovation of Kibbey Theatre which will be completed this fall.

Other improvements which students will find include additional parking in residence hall areas, television cable outlets in individual rooms, rental television sets, increased funding and staff support of the University Center Program Council, more "open house" visitation in residence halls, abolition of the $10 per semester special events fee, more convenient scheduling of campus facilities for student activities and expanded recreational facilities at the University Center.

Mail delivery will be changed this fall to enable all students living in residence halls to receive mail directly rather than through the University Post Office.

The adjustment problems of new students will be attacked through a "personal approach team" (PAT) experiment which utilizes students in counseling situations. Two dozen incoming freshmen with leadership skills are participating.

Nearly 40 activities have been scheduled for "Welcome Week" during the first seven days of the semester. Designed for students, faculty and staff members, the events are sponsored by the Student Government Association and various student groups.

(more)

In academics, MSU students will need a higher grade point average to qualify for the Dean's List. The qualifying average will be 3.4 on a 4.0 (A) scale, effective this fall.

The Kentucky Council on Higher Education has been asked to approve a new master's degree in adult counseling with emphasis in vocational rehabilitation.

Students participating in the University's honors program are eligible to live in so-called "quiet areas" of certain residence halls during the fall semester.

MOREHEAD, KY. --- Morehead State University's "Big Band from Daniel Boone Land," directed by Chuck Lee, is preparing for a regional television appearance as another chapter of its continuing success story.

Dr. Robert Hawkins, director of bands, came to MSU in 1967 and laid the foundation for one of the top marching and musical organizations in the nation.

The band, featuring more than 240 members, built its reputation with performances at the 1973 Presidential Inaugural Parade, the 1975 Kentucky Derby, and two nationally-televised appearances at Cincinnati Bengal football games.

Dr. Hawkins stepped down as marching band director this year but remains responsible for the entire band program.

Lee served as drum major, graduate assistant and assistant director before assuming the director's baton this year.

Serving as assistant marching band directors this season are Eugene Norden and Frank Oddis. Mrs. Kate Hawkins coordinates auxilliary units.

Student personnel featured with the band in 1977 are freshmen drum majors Susie Jarvis of Livermore and Jackie Smith of Tompkinsville. Freshman Tammy Jo Worthington of Greenup is the featured twirler.

MOREHEAD, Ky.---Growth -- in quality and quantity -- is the continuing theme at Morehead State University.

From a teachers college little known outside Kentucky, MSU has evolved into a regional university reaching out to serve Kentucky, Appalachia and the nation.

Morehead State stands today on a 500-acre campus in the foothills of Daniel Boone National Forest, an academic community known for its physical beauty, educational excellence and congenial spirit.

Statistically, the rise of MSU in the last two decades had been breathtaking. Enrollment has mushroomed more than 1,000 per cent to more than 7,500 and upwards of $75 million has been expended in capital construction.

The faculty and staff today number more than 900 persons and the fiscal outlay exceeds $25 million yearly. More than 20,000 persons hold MSU degrees.

Physically, the University consists of more than 50 major structures. MSU also owns an agricultural complex north of Morehead, a nine-hole golf course east of the city and an outdoor education center on Cave Run Lake, west of Morehead. Capital construction projects totaling $8 million are underway or in the planning stages.

In recent years, Morehead State's imaginative yet practical building program has produced a series of design awards from the Kentucky Society of Architects. Dominating MSU's campus skyline are the two tallest occupied structures in Eastern Kentucky, 19-story Cartmell Hall and 16-story Mignon Tower.

Academically, the University is comprised of six schools-- Social Sciences, Education, Applied Sciences and Technology, Humanities, Sciences and Mathematics, and Business and Economics. They offer 145 programs of study from the associate degree through a joint doctoral degree. Almost 50 per cent of the faculty holds earned doctorates.

Administratively, the University operates under a 10-member Board of Regents with eight citizens appointed by the governor of Kentucky. The two other seats are held by elected faculty and student representatives who hold full voting rights. The administrative structure consists primarily of four bureaus-- academic affairs, fiscal affairs, research and development and student affairs.

Dr. Morris L. Norfleet, who took office Jan. 1, 1977 is MSU's eighth president. A graduate of Purdue University and the University of Kentucky, he joined the faculty and administrative staff in 1962 as director of student teaching.

The Pulaski County (Ky.) native also served as director of research and program development, vice president for research and development and as acting president.

Students returning for the 1977 fall semester at MSU found changes on campus in the areas of administrative personnel, construction and student services.

Major personnel appointments include Elmer D. Anderson as assistant to the president and Dr. William M. Whitaker as dean of the School of Business and Economics.

Neal Brittain, formerly of Winchester, is the new director of security and Dr. William Moore of Glade Spring, Va., now heads the Department of Agriculture.

Elevated to head of the Department of Business Education was Dr. Louise Quinn. She will serve a one-year appointment as MSU embarks on its first rotating academic chairmanship.

James Morton has become director of student housing and Ken White is the new associate director of housing for men. Charles (Chuck) Lee has succeeded Dr. Robert Hawkins as director of MSU'S marching band, the state's largest.

Better medical care for students has been added with the opening of the Wilma Caudill Health Clinic in the newly-renovated Allie Young Hall. Other services gaining new facilities in the same structure were placement, field career experiences, TRIO counseling center and the Trail Blazer, student newspaper, and Parnassus, student magazine.

Work on the Julian M. Carroll Library Tower, an $2.1 million addition to Johnson Camden Library, is progressing with completion expected in March, 1978.

Improved ventilation and lighting systems will result from a partial renovation of Kibbey Theatre which will be completed this fall.

Other improvements which students will find include additional parking in residence hall areas, television cable outlets in individual rooms, rental television sets, increased funding and staff support of the University Center Program Council, more "open house" visitation in residence halls, abolition of the $10 per semester special events fee, more convenient scheduling of campus facilities for student activities and expanded recreational facilities at the University Center.

Mail delivery will be changed this fall to enable all students living in residence halls to receive mail directly rather than through the University Post Office.

In academics, MSU students will need a higher grade point average to qualify for the Dean's List. The qualifying average will be 3.4 on a 4.0 (A) scale, effective this fall.

Students participating in the University's honors program are eligible to live in so-called "quiet areas" of certain residence halls during the fall semester.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "The people in charge of the security of the United States have reviewed the Panama Canal treaty and they support it."

Speaking was foreign service officer Richard C. Barkley, who appeared Thursday as a guest lecturer at Morehead State University.

Executive assistant to Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker from 1974 to 1977, Barkley was directly involved in the treaty negotiations.

"In effect, two treaties were signed," he told an overflow audience. "One deals with operation and defense of the Canal which expires Dec. 31, 1999, and the other is a permanent neutrality treaty."

Barkley answered critics who questioned future Canal security with references to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and their endorsement of the accord.

He added that the AFL-CIO had approved the pact as being in the best interests of Americans working on the Canal.

Barkley noted that the Supreme Court has ruled in customs cases that the U.S. has no sovereignty in the Canal Zone.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "I've been in 93 countries and there is not a more beautiful place on earth than Kentucky. It is no wonder people write poems about it."

Speaking was Kentucky's poet laureate, Jesse Stuart, who kicked off Inaugural week activities Tuesday morning at Morehead State University with a lecture and readings to an overflow audience.

Stuart, who holds an honorary doctorate from MSU, said much of the inspiration for his style and subjects resulted from advice he received in college.

"They said that I shouldn't try to write like someone else but should go back to my native soil and write of things I knew," said Stuart, perhaps the state's most celebrated literary figure.

The poet and novelist said he was "thrilled and honored" when Gov. Julian Carroll declared "Jessee Stuart Day" on his 70th birthday.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Amid the pomp and ceremony of ancient academic ritual, Dr. Morris L. Norfleet was inaugurated here Friday as the eighth president of Morehead State University.

The 46-year-old Pulaski County native received the President's Medallion from Lloyd Cassity, chairman of the MSU Board of Regents.

In his 21-minute inaugural address, Dr. Norfleet called for a return to humanistic concerns.

"We, as teachers and administrators, must be a mirror for the human values of life, if we expect to teach and bring about a behavioral change in our students," he said.

Commenting on the contributions of the seven men who preceded him in the MSU presidency, Dr. Norfleet said:

"It is my hope that we can continue to build on the strengths of my predecessors and shape the Morehead State University of the future."

In his closing remarks, to the more than 1,200 persons attending the ceremony in Button Auditorium, the new president said:

"I love my God, my family, my country and Morehead State University. I pledge to you today to work to preserve and protect the heritage and integrity of this University...."

Gov. Julian Carroll, an honorary alumnus of MSU, voiced support of the Norfleet administration, saying:

"It is clear that Dr. Norfleet is eminently qualified to lead and guide this University as it fulfills its unique role in Kentucky's system of higher education."

He continued:

"I know that the students and alumni of this institution, the citizens of this city and region and the taxpayers of the Commonwealth can count on President Norfleet to hold Morehead State University to a steady course of growth and development."

Gov. Carroll described the new president as "a man of integrity and dedication."

"The University is in good hands -- hands that will be firm, yet gentle and hands that are old enough to be experienced, yet young enough to be energetic," the governor said.

Gov. Carroll voiced his support of MSU's request for funds to establish the Appalachian Development Center next year to promote economic growth in Eastern Kentucky.

Delegates from more than 150 colleges and universities, learned societies and associations and student organizations witnessed the ceremony.

Dr. Norfleet joined MSU's administrative staff in 1962 and served eight years as vice president for research and development before being appointed president.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Ever wondered what it would be like to compete with a computer?

Members of the Morehead State University community are learning how it feels at MSU's Education and Research Computing Center in Reed Hall.

Open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m., the Center offers services ranging from research on the doctoral level available through the Kentucky Educational Computing Network to games for elementary school children.

According to Dr. Charles Hicks, director of planning at MSU, wide use of the system is encouraged.

"When students play games on the computer for entertainment value, they gain in the sense that they learn how to operate the machines," Dr. Hicks said.

Even though games are very popular, MSU's data processing students are the primary beneficiaries.

"The principal function of this facility is the instructional program in computer science," Dr. Hicks stated. "Being on the KEC network, students have the advantage of training on four totally different machines and using different computer languages."

He continued:

"In the past, our students were handicapped because they could not train on an IBM system. IBM, of course, is the largest manufacturer of computer hardware and someone in the computer field eventually will work with an IBM unit."

The Kentucky Educational Computing Network combines different types of computers across Kentucky by means of a telephone link so that different programs and languages can be used.

Currently, MSU has 82 students involved in its four-year computer program with another 32 in two-year programs.

Perhaps more indicative of the computing Center's use, however, are figures that show 372 students enrolled in computer-related courses at MSU this semester.

Dr. William Whitaker, dean of MSU's School of Business and Economics, reports that the enrollment represents an expansion of data processing programs.

"The courses of study in data processing have experienced substantial growth as a direct result of the excellent computing facilities in Reed Hall," Dr. Whitaker stated. "The Center is extremely well suited to computer instruction."

Traffic in the computing center is heavy, according to Mike Gresham, computer operator.

"We average about 200 people a day who come to the center for instruction, research or to play games," he stated. "And the demand is growing."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Wonder Woman" on the Morehead State University campus?

That is not a rumor, at least when Tammy Worthington performs with MSU's "Big Band from Daniel Boone Land."

A Greenup freshman, Tammy is the featured twirler with the marching band. And, according to Band Director Charles Lee, who gave her the "Wonder Woman," nickname, it is a job she does better than anyone.

"I feel Tammy is the outstanding featured twirler in the United States," Lee stated. "She adds a definite dimension of excellence to every band performance."

Lee's words are big but Tammy's credits tend to back them up.

A 10-year veteran of baton twirling, she was the winner of Kentucky's state competition four years in a row and captured the national championship in 1976. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Worthington developed up the desire to be a baton twirler at an early age.

"I always used to watch majorettes in a parade," she recalls. "I decided that was what I wanted to do someday."

Her success has been due largely to desire and hard work.

"In getting ready for a contest, I usually practice from three to six hours a day, depending on how I am doing and how I feel," she said. "During the year, I practice during marching band practice and an extra hour a day."

Although majoring in business at MSU, Tammy hopes to make baton twirling a career.

Worthington

"I hope to open a studio at home and teach baton twirling and gymnastics," she stated. "My business major should be a tremendous help in setting up the studio."

"Accounting has always interested me," she said. "I am considering a four-year degree in accounting and using that in my business, too."

Regardless of the degree she chooses, baton twirling and marching band will never be forgotten.

"I received lots of offers in high school but I always liked MSU's marching band," she stated. "We really have a great band and as long as I am in school, I hope to be in it."

Fans of MSU's marching band are pulling for a four-year degree for Tammy to keep "Wonder Woman" in front of the "Big Band" as long as possible.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Former television news direction Bos Johnson, a member of the journalism faculty at Marshall University told the 54th annual convention of the Eastern Kentucky Education Association here Friday that teachers too often use one-way communication.

"If you are going to send a message by means of mass media, you must find a method of gathering feedback as soon as you can," he stated. "People in education are as guilty as anyone of communication without feedback. This means your message can be misunderstood and you won't be aware."

Johnson, former president of the National Radio-TV News Directors Association, conducted a seminar entitled "P.R. for Teachers."

Eileen Ramey of Johnson County was installed as EKEA president. Elected Friday were Ruth Payne of Ashland, president-elect; Viola Wright of Pike County, vice president; Lena Smith of Maysville, John Jones of Russell, Arlene Franklin of Ashland and Janice Allen of Floyd County, EKEA Board of Directors; and Blanche Dingus of Floyd County, member of the Teacher Retirement Nominating Committee.

The group voted to continue meeting at Morehead State University and to oppose the proposed inclusion of teachers under mandatory Social Security.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Pro and con views of the Equal Rights Amendments were exchanged Tuesday at Morehead State University as two nationally-known figures on the issue addressed a women's conference.

Karen DeCrow, former president of the National Organization for Women, told the morning session that the ERA is necessary for "true equality."

"We need the ERA because we live in a generation which keeps women in silence," she stated. "Anyone who believes in full justice under law has to back the amendment. Women should have no boundaries in any field of endeavor."

Speaking Tuesday afternoon, ERA foe Phyllis Schlafly told the group that physical differences between men and women are the basis of her opposition to the proposed amendment.

"The two main reasons that the ERA should not be ratified are that women bear children and men do not and that women are not as physically strong as men."

She continued:

"The ERA will mandate changes which override the natural physical differences between the sexes."

The two-day conference was funded by the Kentucky Humanities Council and MSU's Concert and Lecture Series.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Board of Regents has officially breathed life into MSU's plans to create the Appalachian Development Center.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet said the facility would enable the University to fulfill its state-assigned mission to "enhance the economic growth of Appalachia."

He reported that the University is seeking funds to operate the Center and to renovate a residence hall to provide physical facilities for its programs.

The Regents unanimously approved the project and authorized staff members to proceed with detailed planning.

"Depending on the level of state funding, the Appalachian Development Center can be fully operational within two years," Dr. Norfleet said.

In other action, the board approved policies reducing the scope of MSU's horse program, particularly horse show competition by students and MSU staff members, and officially focusing the program on its academic and recreational benefits for students. Dr. Norfleet said the University would maintain only the number of horses needed for instructional purposes.

The Regents also approved a five-year development plan for MSU's Crosthwaite Outdoor Educational and Research Center at Cave Run Lake.

Seven administrative functions were transferred from the academic bureau to form the Division of Institutional Services, under the office of the President. Affected are admissions, school relations, alumni relations, placement, engineering services, media services and communications services.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Marvin Philips believes one should practice what he teaches.

The associate professor of theatre and speech at Morehead State University is convinced that his teaching skills are strengthened by periodic professional performances, ranging from ballet to motion pictures.

For example, Philips recently finished his second movie role in less than a year. He had a part in the remake of "Black Beauty" which be shown early next year on NBC-TV.

Philips also was in the cast of last year's production of "The Thoroughbreds" which, like "Black Beauty," was filmed in Kentucky.

"I like to do at least one professional engagement each year to keep fresh my own creativity," he stated. "I see the roles I play as an opportunity to put into practice the concepts that I teach my students."

He is quick to add that his performing experience gives his classroom work a boost.

"I like to think of myself as a performer who teaches, rather than a teacher who works only on theory," he said. "Students seem to have a more positive attitude toward the subject matter because they know I practice what I teach."

A native of Pittsburgh and a two-time graduate of Carnegie-Mellon University, Philips feels movies can be difficult for someone trained for the stage.

(more)

"An actor in the theatre is taught to develop a character over the course of a production," he said. "In making a movie, you have to turn emotions on and off at the whim of a director."

He continued:

"But, in movies, actors have the security of the retake, and don't have to project across the footlights to a critical audience."

Although he enjoys performing, Philips does not want it as a career.

"I don't see acting for monetary rewards," he stated. "But I would like to do more performances with larger parts because it's something I enjoy doing."

A one-time personal appearance double for Duncan Renaldo, television's "Cisco Kid," Philips likes to act but not at the expense of teaching.

"Hopefully, one day I'll be able to devote all of my time to performing after I stop teaching," he said. "But I won't stop teaching because I enjoy helping others succeed in dramatic activities."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Lamond Godwin, special assistant to the U.S. Secretary of Labor, told a news conference at Morehead State University Tuesday that the new minimum wage law signed by President Carter is "good but not all we hoped to get."

Godwin added that "the people who will benefit from a higher minimum wage are those who need it most."

Appearing under sponsorship of MSU's Concert and Lecture Series, Godwin said the goal of the Department of Labor is to create jobs as quickly and cheaply as possible to stimulate the American economy.

In response to criticism that job programs add to inflation, Godwin stated:

"We feel unemployment is highly inflationary. It makes much more sense to pay people to work, rather than not to work."

Dave Kerchner, state director of Kentucky Special Olympics, said of the selection:

"I am most pleased to award the games to Morehead State University. The dedication of President Morris Norfleet and his faculty and staff, combined with the school's excellent facilities, will insure a tremendous event."

Dr. Robert Monahan, assistant professor of psychology and special education at MSU, and Mike Mayhew, counselor in the MSU Center, have been named co-directors of the state games. Dr. Monahan has been instrumental in the growth of Special Olympics in Eastern Kentucky.

More than 1,500 athletes are expected to compete in a variety of events including track and field, swimming, soccer, gymnastics, frisbie and wheelchair competition.

Special Olympics has become the world's largest sports program for mentally retarded citizens. In Kentucky, more than 10,000 athletes are training for the opportunity to represent their communities in the state games at Morehead State.

Completely volunteer, Special Olympics has grown from a one-day event with 200 competitors in 1970 to a year-round program of physical education and training in every county in Kentucky.

Special Olympics are sponsored by the Kentucky Department for Human Resources.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's associate degree program in veterinary technology has been accredited by the American Veterinary Medical Association, MSU President Morris L. Norfleet announced Tuesday.

"We are delighted to join the two dozen other fully accredited veterinary technology programs in the United States," he said. "As the only program in Kentucky for the preparation of animal technicians, we feel that professional accreditation is of vital importance to our current and future students and to our graduates."

MSU was notified that the AVMA approved the accreditation on Nov. 14. Initially, the program's accredited status runs through Dec. 31, 1978.

Started in 1974, MSU's "vet tech" program produced its first graduates in 1976 and a second class last spring. The faculty for the associate degree program consists of two veterinarians and three animal technicians. MSU admits 30 students to the program each fall.

Graduates are eligible to take the state examination to become a registered animal technician in Kentucky. The position is identified in certain other states as "animal health technician" or "veterinary technician." They function as para-professional assistants to licensed veterinarians.

Veterinary technology students at MSU are trained to deal with large and small animals, according to Dr. Jerry Slaughter, director of the program.

"We are very pleased to receive full accreditation on our first visit," said Dr. Charles Derrickson, dean of MSU's School of Applied Sciences and Technology. "This is a great accomplishment and we will continue to improve this program."

Dr. John Duncan, MSU's vice president for academic affairs, said of the announcement:

"We believed our program was of excellent quality and it is gratifying to learn that the AVMA has confirmed that opinion. Full accreditation is a fitting tribute to the faculty members and administrators who have worked so hard to build the program."

MSU's facilities for veterinary technology are located primarily at the Derrickson Agricultural Complex, north of Morehead on Ky. 377.

MOREHEAD, KY --- Dr. Jerry Slaughter, director of the nationally-accredited Veterinary Technology program at Morehead State University, will coordinate the continuing education program for veterinary technicians at the Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association's 1978 Convention.

The convention, to be held in October, will be an all-day session on veterinary medicine with technicians from several states attending. The veterinary technology faculty at MSU will be involved in the convention, according to Dr. Slaughter.

The program is required for animal technicians who wish to maintain their registration with the Kentucky State Board of Veterinary Medical Examiners.
