

Men's Track Outlook

Youth will be the key for Morehead State University men's outdoor track team this season.

Leading the returnees is junior Jeff "Bullet" Washington in the sprint events.

Washington, last year's MVP at the Ohio Valley Conference Track and Field Championships, is expected to run the 100, 200 and 400-meters, plus both the 400-meter and 1600-meter relays.

Other experienced performers include pole vaulter Mark Richards, Dave Parmley in the high jump and javelin, Eddie Burton in the 800-meters, Kerry Whitman in the javelin and Larry Gardner in the shot put.

First year Coach Oscar Jones feels that experience, and not talent, will be a problem.

"We have a very young team," stated Jones. "If the veterans on the squad provide the leadership then our indoor track season should benefit everyone."

Included on the list of newcomers are Vic Calder, a sprinter-middle distance runner from St. Petersburg, Fla.; Mike Labrie, a hurdler from Roanoke, Va.; and Chris Simon, a sprinter from Columbus, Ohio.

In distance events, junior Dave Bowman and sophomore Steve Gosney should provide leadership. Youth will also be a factor here, as several untested freshmen will be counted on.

Middle distances should be no problem, as juniors Vaughn Thomas, Greg Threat and sophomore Rob Heist return.

Golf Outlook

Lack of talent will not be a problem for Morehead State University's golf team this year, but lack of experience will be a trouble area.

"We'll probably start four freshmen in every meet, and while they have a lot of potential, it should be an up and down year," said Coach Rex Chaney. "In two years we should be outstanding."

The Eagles had ups and downs last season as well.

MSU fared well at the Sunshine Intercollegiate in Miami, Fla. (2nd of 14), the Wright State Invitational (2nd of 8) and the Eagle Classic (1st of 4).

The Eagles ran into trouble in Ohio Valley Conference competition, finishing fourth of four in the OVC Quadrangular and sixth of eight in the OVC Championships.

"It was a disappointing year in some ways," Chaney said. "We lost two of our best golfers from the 1977 Championship Team, and not everyone played well at the same time."

This year's schedule is the toughest MSU has faced according to Chaney. Competition includes the Colonel Classic in Richmond, Ky., the Mid-South Classic in Clarksville, Tenn., the Xavier University Invitational and the OVC Championships, which should be especially competitive.

MSU's No. 1 and 2 golfers, Harold Epperson and Mike Reynolds, return from last year's squad and consistency from them will be a must.

Also returning are two sophomores who were red-shirted last season, Brian Doran and Mike Thomas.

It will be the success or failure of the freshmen that will make or break the Eagles.

The pole vault should be strong for the Eagles with freshmen Chip Mathias and Osborn Wheaton, Jr. challenging Richards for team leadership.

"We know that for us to be a factor in the OVC title race, our freshmen will have to perform well," stated Jones. "We'll just have to wait and see what kind of overall team effort we get."

Baseball Outlook

After posting a 19-18 record last season, Morehead State University Baseball Coach Steve Hamilton enters the 1979 campaign with optimism.

"Last year we entered the season with a lot of green kids," he stated. "Early in the season we didn't play that well, but later on, our youngsters began to mature."

The Eagles produced 11 wins over the last 15 games of 1979, and Hamilton is hopeful that the returning nucleus plus his recruits can pick up from there.

"We felt like we had an excellent recruiting year," Hamilton said. "Now we'll have to wait and see what our players can do."

The key to any baseball team is its pitching staff, and Hamilton is pleased about this area of his squad.

"We have our top four starting pitchers back from last season, plus our top pitchers out of the bullpen," he stated. "Unless we have some injuries, we will be strong on the mound."

Foremost among the returnees are senior Chet LaMay, a righthander who led the staff with a 7-0 mark and 1.62 ERA. Other returnees include righthanded starters Ken Wilfong and Walt Terrell plus lefthander Ed Olwine.

Also returning are juniors Tom DeLuca and Jim Schmidt and sophomores Mark Molitor, Joe Martin and Dan Hoard.

Freshmen on this year's staff include righthanders Glen Napier and Mike Mattox.

Veterans return at nearly all positions for the Eagles with seven starters at non-pitching positions.

Senior Dan Kiser, returning at first base, will be backed up

This year's freshmen include Charlie Bowles of Mt. Sterling; Mark Frauenkecht of Lebanon, Ohio; Bob McCann of Winchester; Bret Walton of Maysville; Scott Wise of Bethel, Ohio; Hubert "Chip" Hall of Maysville; and Donnie Stahl of Maysville.

The Eagles will tee off the 1979 season March 12-16 at the Padre Isles Intercollegiate Golf Classic in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Senior Dan Kiser, returning at first base, will be backed up by sophomore Brian Hawk.

Chris Auer, an all-conference performer, returns at second base and will be pushed for his position by Mitch Trainor, part-time starter from last season.

John McVaney returns at shortstop, backed up by freshman Jamey Bennett.

Third base will be held down by senior Roy Wright. Don Allen of Ashland should get the nod if Wright falters.

The outfield appears strong with two outstanding offensive threats returning in junior Jody Hamilton and sophomore John Combs.

Filling the lone vacancy on the starting unit will be freshman Glen Jones of Frankfort. Providing back-up strength will be freshmen Mark Davis, Robbie Huffman and Torrin Gilbert.

The catching duties will be handled by sophomore all-conference performer Jeff White and freshman David Gaunce. Davis could also see some backstop duty.

"We feel with the experience we have throughout the ballclub, we will be a contender for the conference championship," stated Hamilton. "With the home and home format in the conference this season, it will make for an interesting and exciting race."

Besides play against six Ohio Valley Conference foes, MSU will be in action against Western Michigan, Marshall, Xavier, Louisville, Kentucky, Morris Harvey and Ohio University.

In addition, the Eagles open the 1979 campaign against NCAA Division I leaders Memphis State and Mississippi, plus Division II power Delta State on a March road trip.

"I really feel we'll be a good baseball team this season," Hamilton said. "With the schedule we're playing, we'd better be."

Tennis Outlook

Entering the 1979 campaign, Morehead State University tennis coach George Sadler has reason to be optimistic about his squad.

The Eagles return only three players that competed in last year's Ohio Valley Conference Championships, but a strong recruiting year has Sadler's hopes high.

"We lost some key people in Robert Vigar and Tony Wright," Sadler stated. "But we recruited two new English players and a third decided to come on his own."

Included in the returnees from last year are senior Dhan Shapurji of London, England; sophomore Nickolas Lee of Cardiff, Wales; sophomore Eric Nyberg of Solleftea, Sweden; and senior Rich Hanley of Portage, Ind.

"Shapurji and Lee are very steady players," stated Sadler. "Both have worked hard and the same can be said for Nyberg and Hanley."

Newcomers to this year's team include junior Rich Leslie and freshmen Phillip King and Martin Watts, all from England.

"Leslie and King have been very prominent in club tennis in England," said Sadler. "And Watts comes to us with high recommendations from the same school that produced Vigar."

According to Sadler, team strength is the key.

"We may not have the outstanding individual we had with Vigar," stated Sadler. "But we have more strength through the top five positions than ever before."

Long missed most of the cross country season with an injury and may not be at her best until later in the season. Junior Hopey Caudill, a three-year veteran of track and cross country, should be able to pick up the slack.

Juniors Teri Walker and Karen Ross will be returning to give MSU strength in the sprints.

"My outlook for the spring is steady, continued improvement," said Shull. "Hopefully we will peak late in April and on through May. We should do well at the Kentucky Intercollegiate Conference meet in April."

Women's Track Outlook

Head Coach Mary Shull has high hopes for the outdoor track season for several reasons.

"We have several outstanding individuals, good depth and our indoor track season will have us ready for the spring," Shull said. "Having the indoor track facility will give us a definite edge, as far as endurance over other area schools.

"We also have a lot going for us as far as the team's attitude. We have supportive team relationships and that makes everyone work harder and makes the season more enjoyable."

If Shull's optimistic outlook comes true, the Lady Eagles should enjoy success for some time to come as this year's squad boasts only one senior.

"Most of our freshmen have already run during cross country season or indoor season, so we won't be lacking in experience," she said.

Jumping events, middle and long distance should be strong points.

Sophomore Diane Villeneuve is expected to do well in the high jump. She qualified for nationals last year and in the second meet of this year's indoor season qualified for indoor nationals.

Freshman Tina Guerin is expected to be strong in the long jump. Freshmen Barb Ferris and Susie Brutscher should be strong in the middle distance races.

The Lady Eagles will be outstanding in long distance races with sophomore Alanna MacCarthy, a nationals qualifier and holder of five school records, and junior Diane Long, who has qualified for nationals for the past two years.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University President Morris L. Norfleet has announced the appointment of Dr. Raymond S? Ferrell as coordinator of regional research at MSU's Appalachian Development Center.

Dr. Ferrell comes to MSU from Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, N.C. where he was associate director of applied research at the Center for Improving Mountain Living.

Dr. James R. Leonard, director of the ADC, said, "We're proud to have someone of Dr. Ferrell's experience and training join the Center's staff. Dr. Ferrell will be responsible for compiling and interpreting data on the demographic, manpower, business and economic conditions of the region. He will also develop and edit a series of publications concerning regional research, position papers, status reports and economic projections pertaining to the Appalachian region of Kentucky."

The new coordinator feels his initial concern will be gathering economic data and "finding out what is in the region in terms of data, identifying strategies that will contribute economic development and developing economic profiles that will give an understanding of what is in the region as well as who is there."

Dr. Ferrell, who has authored or co-authored more than 20 publications, is a former research economist in the Economic Development Center at WCU, assistant professor of forestry economics at Southern Illinois University and forester with the Daniel Boone National Forest at Berea, Stanton and Williamsburg.

He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Missouri and a master's and doctorate from Iowa State University.

Spring semester registration opened Monday on schedule at Morehead State University but officials reported that the turnout was lighter than expected because of travel conditions.

"We are making arrangements for our students to register later this week without penalty because of the adverse weather," said MSU President Morris L. Norfleet.

He added that classes will begin Thursday as originally planned. Students arriving Thursday or later are asked to report to the Office of the Registrar to enroll for spring classes.

"We are in better shape this year than last because almost 5,000 students registered in advance for the first time," President Norfleet said.

MSU was forced to close last winter for two days because of blizzard conditions. It was only the second such shutdown in the school's 56-year history.

from probation and parole officer to working in a maximum security prison, depending on the student's interest."

Reactions by students entering maximum security prisons at Eddyville, Ky. and Lucasville, Ohio are varied. Some students find they have no apprehensions at all while others have "literally had to be hand led" through the facilities.

"The degree of security surrounding the students is quite different in these institutions," adds Frazier. "The Ohio system is extremely concerned about letting us go very far into the prison whereas in the Kentucky system, we are pretty well given a free run of the institution."

The students' fear and indecision are primary concerns as Frazier adds "if the students are afraid to work in a maximum security prison, they should find out while they are freshmen or sophomores and not when they have a degree in hand."

There are four basic programs in the corrections field at MSU including a concentration in corrections. This gives the student as much exposure possible to the overall field of corrections.

Other programs include a major in sociology with emphasis in corrections, a minor in corrections and an associate degree in corrections specifically aimed at those students who want to be corrections officers.

"We feel the visits to the prisons are important," says Frazier. "If a student believes he is interested in the institutional side of corrections, there is no substitute for the actual experience of what it is like to be in one."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Up to 20 Morehead State University students have gone to prisons each semester since 1974.

The students and Gary Frazier, assistant professor of sociology, social work and corrections at MSU, have been visiting prisons in Kentucky to learn what prisons are like and what it is like to work with the inmates.

"The corrections program at MSU began in the spring of 1974," said Frazier. "A program was developed that would best apply the knowledge the students acquired to more practical areas."

After studying various programs around the state and the demands for corrections persons in the state and nation, Frazier, Dr. Alban Wheeler, former head of the Department of Sociology, Social Work and Corrections and now dean of the School of Social Sciences, and Dr. Roscoe Playforth, former dean of the School of Social Sciences, organized a program at MSU.

"There are limits to explaining in the classroom what a prison is like or what it is like to work with inmates," added Frazier. "We try to get our students in a position where they can go see everything from county jails and juvenile institutions all the way to maximum security prisons in as many settings as we can show them."

He continued:

"We've had phenomenal luck with this program and have visited many institutions throughout this part of the country."

A concentrated look at prisons is scheduled in May when Frazier and a group of students will travel throughout the Eastern United States visiting institutions.

"Part of the program we consider to be indispensable is the student's senior year," adds Frazier. "This is when all the correction students spend one semester working in a correctional setting, ranging

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University President Morris L. Norfleet has appointed a 22-member committee to plan and conduct MSU's Founders Day on Thursday, March 8.

Revived last year as an annual event, the observance celebrates the establishment of the institution by the Kentucky General Assembly on March 8, 1922.

John Collis, manager of MSU's bookstore, again will serve as chairman.

Representing the Morehead area are Mary Levee, Bobby Trent, Agnes Williams and Bobby Stamper. Harold Wilson of Mt. Sterling, president of the MSU Alumni Association, is the alumni representative.

Student members are Kevin Porter, president of the Student Government Association, and Susan Davis, president of the Panhellenic Council. From the ranks of retired faculty are Mrs. Oval Hall and Monroe Wicker, both of Morehead.

Faculty and staff members on the committee include Sonny Allen, Dr. Charlotte Bennett, Virginia Caudill, Joyce Chaney, Major Jackie Jones, Dr. Roger Jones, Keith Kappes, Dr. Earle Louder, Nell Mahaney, Hazel Martin, Gail Ousley, Joe Planck, and Anna Mae Riggle.

"I am confident that Mr. Collis and his committee will arrange an appropriate and meaningful observance of Morehead State University's 57th birthday," Dr. Norfleet stated.

The 1978 Founders Day included an appearance by former FBI director Clarence Kelley and presentation of the Founders Day Award for University Service to retired Morehead publisher W. E. Crutcher.

He maintains his interest in folk music by attending folk festivals at Berea, Jenny Wiley, Grayson Lake and the Louisville-Lexington area.

Dobler is also a member of the Lexington Folk Singers who perform a variety of music and are occasionally joined by well known folk musicians such as Jean Ritchie or Cliff Carlisle.

Dobler hopes to further his training in folklore and says that he feels "it is necessary to distinguish between commercial and authentic folk." He adds that he would like to have more training in archiving, analysis, cataloguing and recording of folk music and folk traditions.

"Many individuals have been misled so often in the past by people who are trying to make money off their material, that they are wary of anyone who comes in with a tape recorder," Dobler commented. "Sometimes it really takes a lot of salesmanship just to get these folks to talk to you."

"My biggest problem is time," says Dobler. "I'm fighting for time to write, read and keep up with my classes plus several other activities that involve my family. But folk music is very important to me, and my love for it and the study of folk traditions will continue to be an important part of my life."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Board of Regents Wednesday received part of a $50,000 gift from Ashland Oil, Inc. for the construction of a coal processing laboratory on the MSU campus.

Presenting the check was Robert L. Welter, director of employee relations at Ashland Oil, who said of the grant:

"We decided this was one of the University's greatest needs and would be a good program for us to assist."

The balance of the grant will be awarded later this year.

The lab will be used by students in MSU's coal mining technology program.

Billy Joe Hall, president of the Mt. Sterling National Bank, was sworn in as a new member of the board, replacing B.F. Reed of Drift, who resigned because of health reasons. Hall's appointment was approved Tuesday by Gov. Julian Carroll. The term expires March 31, 1982.

In other action, the board:

* Established a "Distinguished Researcher Award" to recognize faculty members contributing most to the field of research.

* Approved requests from Dr. James H. Powell, dean of the School of Education, and Dr. Mary Northcutt Powell, head of the Department of Elementary and Early Childhood Education, to relinquish their administrative posts and return to full-time teaching, effective June 30.

* Adopted resolutions commending Dr. C. Louise Caudill of Morehead for her support of public higher education, requesting current special session of the Kentucky General Assembly to forego any reduction in state appropriations to MSU and to provide funding in the 1980-82 biennium to equalize employee benefit programs in state-supported institutions of higher education.

* Learned that Orin Atkins, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Ashland Oil, had accepted the University's invitation to be the spring commencement speaker on May 11.

Other board members attending were Lloyd Cassity of Ashland, Sam Kibbey of Grayson, Jerry Howell of Jackson, Judge James Richardson of Owingsville, Dr. W.H. Cartmell of Maysville, Dr. Charles Pelfrey of the faculty and Evan Perkins, the student representative.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Billy Joe Hall of Mt. Sterling has been appointed by Gov. Julian M. Carroll to the Morehead State University Board of Regents.

Hall, president and chairman of the board of the Mt. Sterling National Bank, will serve the unexpired term of B.F. Reed of Drift, who resigned for health reasons. The term ends March 31, 1982.

Reed, a coal mining executive, served on the MSU board for 22 years.

The new regent holds bachelor's and master's degrees from MSU where he was director of alumni relations from 1959 until 1963. He was selected as "Outstanding Alumnus of the Year" in 1967.

The 41-year old Pikeville native was executive assistant to the commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Highways from 1963-67 before assuming his present position in 1969.

Hall is married and the father of four children.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University will host a Weekend for Country Musicians Feb. 23-25, with a list of performers reading like a Who's Who in traditional music.

The weekend, organized by MSU's Department of Music and Appalachian Development Center, will feature music that reveals the traditional sounds of Eastern Kentucky's mountain melodies.

"This weekend will focus on regional folks exchanging musical tunes and learning from each other about the music of their culture," said Dr. Glenn Fulbright, Head of MSU's Department of Music and coordinator of the weekend activities.

Guest performers include John McCutcheon of Dungannon, Va., former member of the Carter Family, who will present sessions on the hammer dulcimer; Sybil Clark, 30-year veteran dance caller, who will call the dances Friday evening; and J.P. and Annadeane Fraley of Rush who will perform traditional Eastern Kentucky music with Homer Ledford and his band from Winchester.

Other performers include the Ratcliff Family of Martin and the Eagle Country String Band, composed of Leo Blair, Ray Ross, Ken Baldauf and Rusty White of MSU.

Also performing will be Angie Ratcliff, Martin freshman at MSU. She is following in the musical footsteps of her father, Buddy, who performed with the Little Jimmy Dickens Band and Lester Flatt and Earl Scruggs.

"We will emphasize traditional music that the people of the region will know and recognize," added Dr. Fulbright.

Activities include working with live music and dance leaders, supplying theory for dance band musicians, workshops for bands and individual musicians, concerts, dancing and singing.

"Old time traditional music will be performed by most players, with additional training available for individuals interested in dances of Old English tunes which were published around 1651-1730," Dr. Fulbright added.

He continued:

"The weekend is open to anyone interested in learning more about traditional music and who is interested in playing traditional music."

Registration and additional information is available from Dr. Glenn Fulbright, Department of Music, MSU, Morehead, KY 40351.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- An exhibition of 32 pieces of sculpture on loan from the Cast Collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, is on display at Morehead State University.

Featured are examples of ancient Assyrian, Egyptian, Greek, Roman, Renaissance and 18th century European sculpture.

The exhibit, on display in the Claypool-Young Art Gallery until April 27, has been in preparation for more than a year. MSU art students have worked for several months polishing, cleaning and doing some degree of restoration on damaged pieces for display.

"These casts had been in storage in a warehouse in New York City since 1938 along with more than 2,000 casts of sculpture by many masters of European art," said Dr. Bill Booth, Head of the Department of Art at MSU.

He continued:

"Most of the casts were made between 1880 and 1910 and originally exhibited in the Metropolitan Museum. Then as the Museum expanded its collection, the casts were removed from the galleries and placed in storage. These casts were taken directly from the original works which are now on display in museums and galleries throughout the world."

Some of the Egyptian works include two major relief panels of a royal victory procession and a lion hunt from the Palace of Ashur-naisir-pal, King of Assyria from 885-860 B.C. The original stone panels are now in the British Museum in London.

Other Egyptian casts on display include three relief panels from the tomb of Queen Ti, King Tutankhamum's (Tut) grandmother plus portrait busts of the father, grandfather and great-grandfather of King Tut.

There are 13 Greek and Roman pieces including an eight-foot statue of the Greek goddess Athena. The original is in the Louvre Museum in Paris.

"One of the most outstanding pieces of sculpture we have is the statue of David with the head of Goliath by Andrea del Verrocchio," adds Dr. Booth. "Verrocchio was Leonardo di Vinci's teacher and the original bronze statue is now in the Museum Nazionale in Florence, Italy."

MSU is the only institution in Kentucky to exhibit works from this collection and is one of only six schools in the United States selected to show similar works.

The exhibit is open daily. Additional information is available from Dr. Bill Booth, Department of Art, MSU, Morehead, KY 40351 or by calling 606/783-3232

(SPECIAL TO MOREHEAD NEWS)

Training and retraining teachers should emphasize Appalachian culture and courses in Appalachian studies should be a required part of the elementary and secondary curricula.

These recommendations were made during a conference at Morehead State University last summer when more than 400 Eastern Kentuckians discussed ways to better Appalachian Kentucky.

MSU and the Appalachian Development Center recently conducted a workshop for public superintendents at Rowan County High School.

Dr. James M. Gifford, conference planner and coordinator of Appalachian studies at the ADC, encouraged promoting interest in Appalachian studies among teachers.

As a result of the presentation, Dr. Gifford and the ADC conducted in-service training sessions for more than half of Rowan County's 148 teachers.

"The response to learn more about Appalachian heritage has been overwhelming," said Dr. Gifford. "This shows an interest in both professional growth and concern for the students."

Dr. Gifford also stated that Eastern Kentucky's youth have been "negatively affected by stereotyped views of the mountain people of Southern Appalachia."

He continued:

"As young people mature they discover who they are and what contributions they want to make to society. But, an effective plan for the future requires an understanding of the present and past."

The former Appalachian history instructor at Western Carolina University also stressed the importance of students learning as much as they can about the history and culture of their homeland.

"Appalachian studies would help correct the negative influences and misconceptions that have made the mountain people feel inferior to their big-city cousins," Dr. Gifford added.

He continued:

"Progress for Appalachian Kentucky must go beyond economic indices and the people must understand the reality of their history and culture.

"A curriculum which includes Appalachian studies will allow young people to identify with, and not reject their homeland and culture."

Morehead State University will observe Founders Day on Thursday, March 8, with a series of programs open to the public.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet has announced that this year's observance is being expanded to embrace "MSU Appreciation Week" in Morehead and Rowan County, March 5-10, which will be declared in a joint proclamation by Mayor Crayton Jackson and County Judge-Executive W. C. Flannery.

"Founders Day provides a unique opportunity for the University to honor its heritage and to point to the future," Dr. Norfleet stated. "Our planning committee is working with community leaders to develop a meaningful observance and we invite all friends of the University to join us in celebrating our 57th birthday as a state institution."

Gov. Edwin Morrow signed the bill on March 8, 1922, which led to the establishment of state normal schools at Morehead and Murray. The institutions actually opened their doors in 1923.

John Collis, a member of MSU's administrative staff since 1949, is serving again this year as chairman of the 21-member Founders Day Committee which is comprised of faculty, staff, students, alumni and local citizens.

"This is a very special time for Morehead State University and we are looking forward to sharing the occasion with our community and the region," Collis said.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Two capital construction projects totaling more than $1 million have been initiated at Morehead State University, according to President Morris L. Norfleet.

A contract for $894,400 has been awarded the W. Rogers Co. of Lexington for construction of a utility tunnel from Normal Hall to the new Academic Athletic Center on the east end of the campus. Completion is expected this fall.

The tunnel will extend MSU's coal-fired central heating system to Downing Hall, Allen Field, Jayne Stadium and the new academic athletic facility which is under construction near the stadium.

The three existing facilities currently are heated with natural gas.

Dr. Norfleet also reported that a Flemingsburg firm was the apparent low bidder on the replacement of a horse barn at MSU's Derrickson Agricultural Complex.

Harold Bruner Building Supply Co., Inc. is expected to receive a contract later this month on its bid of $173,749 for the wood and steel structure. Construction will require about three months.

The new facility will replace a barn which burned in September of 1977, resulting in the loss of 27 University-owned horses.

Dr. Norfleet said the new structure will include a fire alarm system.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Veteran television journalist Bill Monroe, executive producer and moderator of NBC-TV's "Meet The Press," will be the featured speaker at Morehead State University's Founders Day convocation on Thursday, March 8.

His 10:20 a.m. presentation in MSU's Button Auditorium will be free and open to the public.

A former newspaper and wire service reporter, Monroe broke into broadcast journalism in the early 1950's as a television news director in New Orleans. He moved to Washington in 1961 as chief of the NBC bureau and became Washington editor of "The Today Show" in 1968.

Monroe has been responsible for "Meet The Press" since December of 1975 when its creator, Lawrence Spivak, retired. It is the longest running television news program in the industry.

Monroe is a past president of the Radio-Television News Directors Association and the Radio-Television Correspondents Association. He received broadcasting's highest news award, the Peabody, in 1973.

The convocation is among three public programs scheduled March 8 as MSU celebrates the 57th anniversary of its establishment as a state institution.

Founders Day activities begin with a Prayer Breakfast at 7 a.m. in the Adron Doran University Center Cafeteria. An awards luncheon is scheduled for 11:45 a.m. in the Crager Room of the University Center.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Board of Regents has adopted a resolution honoring former member B. F. Reed of Drift.

The coal mining executive served more than 21 years on the MSU board before resigning last December for health reasons.

A classroom and office building on the MSU campus was named for the prominent Floyd Countian in 1973.

The resolution text:

"Whereas, Mr. Boyd F. Reed of Drift, Ky., has given more than 21 years of dedicated service to Morehead State University as a member of the Board of Regents, and

Whereas, Mr. Reed has honored the University throughout that period of time by lending his name and reputation to the public support of the institution, and

Whereas, Mr. Reed has achieved prominence as an industrial, civic and church leader and has epitomized Christian principles in his public and private life, and

Whereas Mr. Reed accepted the homage of the University by permitting his name to be affixed to a classroom and office building for posterity,

Be it therefore resolved by the Board of Regents of Morehead State University that Mr. Boyd F. Reed be and hereby is extended the heartfelt gratitude of the University community for his devoted service to Morehead State University."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Does your organization need a guest speaker?

If so, Morehead State University may be able to help. The MSU Speakers Bureau offers the services of more than 130 speakers and performers to non-profit organizations in Eastern Kentucky.

A program directory listing more than 200 topics is being distributed to civic clubs, schools, youth groups, churches and other organizations.

Individual copies of the directory are available by mail from the Director of Public Affairs, Morehead State University, 317 Allie Young Hall, Morehead, KY 40351.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet said of the Speakers Bureau:

"The University is striving constantly to improve and expand its public service efforts and the revitalization of our Speakers Bureau is a good example of that commitment."

Dr. Norfleet is among the faculty and staff members available for speaking engagements through the auspices of the MSU Speakers Bureau.

"I encourage our citizens to take advantage of this opportunity," he added.

Additional information and copies of the program directory also can be requested by telephone at 1-800-262-7474 or 606-783-4672.

The MSU Speakers Bureau is limited to programs for non-profit organizations.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's 1979 Founders Day Award for University Service will be presented here Thursday to retired registrar Linus A. Fair.

Now a resident of Babson Park, Fla., Fair served MSU for 39 years until his retirement in 1971, including the last 21 as registrar. He also was an associate professor of mathematics.

"Few individuals can match the record of professionalism, dedication and integrity which marked Linus Fair's career at this institution," said MSU President Morris L. Norfleet. "The University is pleased to grant this long overdue recognition of his distinguished service."

The award will be presented during an 11:45 a.m. luncheon in the Cramer Room of the Adron Doran University Center as MSU observes the 57th anniversary of its establishment as a state institution.

Fair, a native of Arkansas, came to MSU in 1932 to teach math. A graduate of the University of Central Arkansas and George Peabody College, he is an honorary life member and former president of the Kentucky Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers.

The luncheon is open to the public. Tickets are available at several locations in Morehead and will be sold at the door.

MSU's Founders Day schedule begins at 7 a.m. Thursday with a Prayer Breakfast in the ADUC Cafeteria. Co-sponsored by the Rowan County Ministerial Association, the program involves four local ministers -- Russell Taylor, Dr. Roy Roberson, Frank Fultz, Richard Moon.

Veteran television journalist Bill Monroe, executive producer and moderator of NBC-TV's "Meet The Press," will be the featured speaker at a 10:20 a.m. convocation in Button Auditorium. It also is open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- In an effort to provide services to regional attorneys, the Johnson Camden Library at Morehead State University has recently added a set of Federal Reporter 2d Series to its law research collection.

The series includes cases argued and determined in Circuit Court of Appeals and District Courts of the United States and the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

Dr. Jack Ellis, director of libraries at MSU, says the law library at MSU is still growing.

"We are trying to keep pace with the need so the collection is still growing," said Dr. Ellis. "We hope this collection will benefit the attorneys in the region. We also hope this collection will be a service to those attorneys who are just starting out and haven't established their own library yet."

MSU's collection has recently added 48 titles or approximately 3,000 volumes donated to the University from the private collection of Sandridge and Sandridge of Owensboro.

Dr. Ellis describes the MSU collection as "very extensive" and adds that this is "probably one of the best research collections in the region available."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Bill Monroe of NBC-TV's "Meet The Press" told a Morehead State University Founders Day audience here Thursday that "the original Camp David agreement got us tantalizing close to an Israeli-Egyptian peace and may yet get us the rest of the way."

The veteran journalist said the achievement was based on risks taken by President Jimmy Carter of alienating Jewish voters, traditionally important to the Democrats, by providing arms to the Israelis and Arabs and by prodding Israel for concessions to Egypt.

Monroe described Carter's trip to Cairo as "a considerable risk" taken in hope that he can achieve a peace treaty."

He added that the bulk of the Washington press corps may be wrong in "casually dismissing" Carter as a one-term president and also said Camp David's "promise of a Middle East settlement" may have turned around the feelings toward the president's abilities to do the job.

"The United States has the wealth, the knowhow and the democratic vigor to provide more constructive leadership from one nation than this world has ever see," continued Monroe. "I think that 100 years from now many historians will look back on the period we are now entering and call it America's greatest century."

Monroe addressed a morning convocation as part of MSU's annual Founders Day observance. At a noon awards luncheon, former MSU registrar Linus Fair of Babson Park, Fla. received the 1979 Founders Day Award for University Service.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Creation of a foundation to seek private funding to assist the cultural and economic development of Kentucky Appalachia was approved here Tuesday by the Appalachian Development Council.

The Council is an advisory body created last year by Gov. Julian Carroll and Development Secretary William L. Short.

Authorized by a unanimous vote at the conclusion of the Council's two-day session, the foundation would coordinate the funding of local projects among the state's 49 Appalachian counties.

"Our plan is for the foundation to seek private funds to be used in conjunction with public resources for the preservation of our cultural treasures and to spur economic development," said G.B. Johnson of Ashland, council chairman.

He added:

"It is abundantly clear that the citizens, organizations, agencies and institutions of Eastern Kentucky need a funding vehicle to assist their efforts in the preservation of our cultural legacy and with the stimulation of economic growth."

Johnson cited Greenup County author Jesse Stuart as an example of the region's cultural resources which should be maintained for the benefit of the current and future residents of Kentucky Appalachia.

"This great man's contributions to the literary history of the world must be preserved right where they were created, in W-Hollow, the Stuart homestead, in the hills of Greenup County," Johnson stated. "It would be wrong to take the artifacts of this region to another place. Our cultural heritage can be preserved right here and still be available for the enjoyment and enlightenment of others."

State Rep. Bill Weinberg (D-Hindman), council vice chairman, also endorsed the foundation concept, calling it "a means of allowing the private sector to return a share of their prosperity to Appalachian Kentucky."

Although the foundation would operate on a regional basis, it would concentrate on local projects, according to Johnson.

"Many of those who desire to underwrite such projects do not have a mechanism in most of our region," he added. "The foundation could channel those gifts to where they are specifically intended or, in the case of unrestricted gifts, to the area of greatest need."

The official name of the agency will be the Appalachian Cultural and Economic Development Foundation.

Ralph Coldiron, the council's executive director, said detailed planning for the formation of the foundation would begin immediately.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "I believe I could just about talk my way in or out of any situation," says Michael Wayne Shelton, Morehead State University senior from Louisville. "I've been debating for so long that arguing a case, any case, seems almost second nature to me."

Shelton, a graduate of Fairdale High School, and debate partner Dwaine Hemphill, Louisville, Ohio junior, recently defeated a top Harvard team to win the Dean Rusk Invitational Debate Tournament at the University of Georgia and will compete in the national championship tournament in April at the University of Kentucky.

"I started debating in junior high and have been debating ever since," says the 21-year old Shelton.

"I've participated in about 50 tournaments since coming to MSU and I'm proud of our record," says Shelton. "This makes the second year we've received an open bid for the national tournament."

There are more than 2,000 college debate teams in the United States and a consensus of coaches ranks MSU among the top five.

"It's always enjoyable to beat one of the top teams in the nation," says Shelton, and added that Harvard is only one of several important debate schools MSU has beaten this year. "We've also had victories over UCLA, the University of Southern California, Northwestern University, and recently won the DSR-TKA (Delta Sigma Rho-Tau Kappa Alpha) tournament in Atlanta. It's sort of like the NIT of debate."

The National Debate Tournament will be Shelton's last tournament as a member of the MSU team and he says he has mixed feelings about it.

"It will be nice not to have to spend endless hours researching, filing and working up cases," he said. "But I think I will miss a lot of it too. You get to know a lot of the rival team members personally because you're together so much during a tournament. I've built friendships with people from Harvard and other schools."

The debate team begins researching the topic that has been picked by a national committee in the middle of the summer and continues until the first debate in October.

"Research and filing is the most time consuming part," says Shelton. "We go through hundreds of books and periodicals that most people have never heard of. We have 20 file drawers full of material on this year's topic (guaranteed employment for all U.S. citizens) and we debate each topic from every pro and con position possible."

Shelton plans to go to law school and says he feels that his debate experience will be valuable.

"Debating keeps you interested in law and government and broadens your knowledge and insight about ideas and facts," he adds. "You get accustomed to looking at every issue from all sides. You're directed toward more sources of information and get insight into how new ideas and programs might be instigated."

He added that he thought that is why so many ex-debators are now in public life or positions of leadership.

John F. Kennedy, Walter Mondale, J. Edgar Hoover and John Wayne are all ex-debators. Who knows what the future holds for Mike Shelton.

President Morris L. Norfleet announced Monday that he has requested that the Bureau of Academic Affairs develop plans for the reinstatement of finals week, effective at the end of this semester.

"It is obvious that our students and faculty members desire to return to the previous system of committing a week or part of a week to examinations on a standardized schedule at the end of each semester," Dr. Norfleet stated.

Dr. William White, vice president for academic affairs, recommended the action to Dr. Norfleet, citing a recent survey in which students voted on a 20-1 ratio and faculty members voted on a 10-1 basis to return to finals week.

Dr. White said the schedule for exam week would be released as soon as possible.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Marla Kalb, a senior from Maysville, is the 1979 Miss Morehead State University.

She will be MSU's representative to the Miss Kentucky Pageant in June at Louisville. Five judges considering beauty, talent and poise chose Miss Kalb from 23 contestants Thursday evening in the 12th annual pageant.

A music education major, the new titlist is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kalb of Maysville. She is vice president of Cardinal Key honor society and soloist for the Concert Choir and Chamber Singers.

Tammy Joe Worthington, Greenup sophomore, was named first runner-up. Suzanne Smith, Pikeville junior, was named second runner-up. Kim Hall, Degraff, Ohio sophomore, was named third runner-up and Lynette Walker, Maysville junior, was fourth runner-up.

Elizabeth Battisti, Morehead junior, received the non-finalist talent award.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Marla Kalb, Maysville senior, was crowned 1979 Miss Morehead State University Thursday evening in the 12th annual pageant.

She will be MSU's representative in the Miss Kentucky Pageant in June in Louisville. Five judges considering beauty, talent and poise selected Miss Kalb from 23 contestants at the end of two nights of competition.

A music education major, the new titlist is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kalb of Maysville. She is vice president of Cardinal Key honor society and soloist for the MSU Concert Choir and Chamber Singers.

For her talent presentation, she sang "Art Is Calling For Me."

Tammy Jo Worthington, Greenup sophomore, was named first runner-up; Suzanne Smith, Pikeville junior, was second runner-up; Kim Hall, Degraff, Ohio sophomore, was third runner-up; and Lynette Walker, Maysville junior, was fourth runner-up.

Elizabeth Battisti, Morehead junior, received the non-finalist talent award of a $100 scholarship and official stick pin.

The new Miss MSU receives a $800 scholarship, $300 wardrobe, trophy, official crown, charm bracelet and a bouquet of flowers.

Other semi-finalists included Kim Batey, Middleport, Ohio freshman; Vicki Collins, Morehead sophomore; and Teresa Conley, Ashland sophomore.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "It's easy enough to complain and find fault. I say let's try to find a better way to listen to the people themselves and inform them so that we can conform more to Lincoln's idea of government--government of the people, by the people, and for the people."

This, says Kenneth E. Hoffman, associate professor of government and public affairs at Morehead State University, is why he wrote his recently published book, "Rx For U.S., A Revitalized Constitution: Increased Democracy."

The book is basically a revision of the Constitution of the United States with facts, opinion, and other information citing reasons for the added or revised portions.

"If you're going to make changes, you have to look at the Constitution as a whole," says the 62-year old professor. "People are constantly tearing into bits and pieces of the Constitution, but most don't consider the other areas that might be affected by a change."

Hoffman's past experience with the workings of government qualifies him as a revisionist. As a senior at the University of Vermont, he ran for the legislature. Elected in 1941 and 1945 at the ages of 23 and 27 he was the youngest member of the Vermont legislature in two sessions. At 27 he was the chairman of the Social Security Committee and between the two sessions he was Field Representative of the Vermont Department of Public Welfare.

After completing his master's degree in political science at the University of Nebraska in 1948, he taught at Oklahoma State University and was research consultant to the Oklahoma legislative Council. The following year he was executive secretary to the Oklahoma Children's

Kenneth Hoffman
2-2-2-2-2-2-2

"In political science it is not only important to study what is but also what ought to be," says Hoffman. He added that he felt the people of the United States would benefit more from our democratic form of government by having a greater input into its workings.

"I don't think we have adequate representation as the Constitution now stands," he said. "There needs to be a greater opportunity for the people to take part in picking electors and in giving a vote of confidence."

One major change Hoffman advocates is having a president-elect for 2 years working with the incumbent president then holding the office of the presidency for 6 years. "Too much time is taken up breaking a new president in and preparing for the following election with the present system," he says.

Hoffman says that most of his changes have been received well by colleagues and students who have read the book.

"A few think I'm a little crazy and ask who I think I am tinkering with something like the Constitution," he says, "But I tell them someone has to quit complaining and get on with trying to bring about the necessary changes so why not me?"

He says that when he retires from teaching, he might go around to all the states and try to interest people in drafting proposals for changing the Constitution.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A $25.7 million operating budget for the 1979-80 fiscal year was approved here Friday by the Morehead State University Board of Regents.

Primary source funds include $17.5 million in state appropriations and $4 million in student fees.

The 1979-80 figure represents a $1.6 million increase over the current budget.

The Regents also raised three student fees and adopted a new policy on faculty tenure.

Starting this fall, resident hall charges will be $10 higher per semester and the student activity fee will increase by the same figure. Also, occupants of married student and faculty-staff housing will face monthly rent increases of $10, effective July 1.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet said the housing fee increases were necessary to copy with inflation, particularly in utilities.

The new tenure policy establishes a clearly-defined appeal procedure for tenured faculty members who might be faced with termination and it reduces the maximum probationary period to qualify for tenure from seven to five years.

In other action, the board:

* Authorized the formation of the Morehead State University Foundation and named Dr. Rondal Hart as its executive director.

* Approved the addition of women's softball as an intercollegiate sport for the 1979-80 academic year.

* Okayed the development of an agreement with Samoyed Mining Co. to provide laboratory experiences for MSU's mining technology students at the firm's Johnson County operations.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University is currently playing a role in the future development of rural areas in Egypt.

Seven employees of the Egyptian government, working for the Organization for the Reconstruction and Development of Egyptian Villages (ORDEV), have been at MSU since March 1 studying accounting, finance, economic development and enterprise development to learn new and better methods of developing the rural areas of their country.

"Our State Department, through the Agency for International Development, is helping ORDEV set up a loan fund that the villages can borrow from to set up money making enterprises and farming projects," says Dr. Joe Copeland, associate professor of economics and program coordinator. "What we're doing here is helping the representatives learn the best financial methods of making their proposals and projects work to the best advantage."

The MSU program will end May 31. The group will then receive on-the-job training at the Bluegrass Area Development District in Lexington.

"We are the first of several groups to come here under this program," said ORDEV representative Amin Mansour. "We want to learn development from the bottom up, including planning, development, results, success and reward."

Ahmed Mourad added that each of them comes from a different province and four are directly responsible for local development in their provinces.

"Egypt's rural areas have long been underdeveloped and their

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Gloria Ann Napier, Hazard junior at Morehead State University, has been selected to participate in the Summer Study in Britain Award.

The award, funded by the creative writing program, the linguistics program, the Inez Humphrey Endowment, and contributions from faculty and friends, provides round-trip airfare to London, plus tuition, room, and meals for six-weeks study at Trinity College, Oxford University.

"This is an extraordinary experience for any student, and we're very proud to be sending Ann," said Dr. Robert Charles, head of the Department of Languages and Literature at MSU. "She more than exceeds the qualifications necessary to participate in the program and will represent MSU well."

More than 120 students from colleges and universities will participate in the program.

As part of her study at Oxford, Miss Napier will visit the Royal Shakespeare Company at Stratford and the Bodleian Library.

She says she was stunned when she found out she had been chosen.

"I'm really looking forward to meeting the students and teachers," she said. "I'm a little apprehensive about the classwork. I also hope to do some sight=seeing, especially in London and Paris."

"We determined as a group that Gloria would be the best choice to represent MSU," said Dr. G. Ronald Dobler, professor of languages and literature at MSU, and Miss Napier's academic advisor. "We wanted someone who could make full use of the opportunity that Oxford offers and profit from the arts as well as literature. It will be a good cultural exchange."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University President Morris L. Norfleet has appointed a special committee to study ways of helping the institution and its employees cope with inflation.

The Economic Advisory Committee will explore means of cutting MSU's operating costs without reducing efficiency, according to Dr. Norfleet. In addition, the group will offer suggestions on "money-stretching" programs for individual faculty and staff members.

"I have asked the committee to look at every factor which affects the cost of living for individuals and the cost of operating for the University," he stated.

Dr. Norfleet said the committee's first priority will be to investigate means of lowering food costs for faculty and staff members and their families.

"We attempt to be cost-conscious in the daily administration of the University and will continue to do so but the inflationary squeeze is getting so tight that additional measures have become necessary," Dr. Norfleet said. "Coping with inflation requires the assistance and cooperation of the entire University community."

Members of the committee are Dr. Thomas Morrison, head of the Department of Economics and Finance; Dr. James Martin, associate professor of agriculture; Dr. James Gotsick, professor of psychology and special education; Dr. Ronald Fiel, associate professor of science education; Dr. Gary Cox, head of the Department of Geography; Dr. J. E. Duncan, dean of the School of Humanities; Dr. Raymond Ferrell, director of regional research; Robert Stokes, director of purchases; Sherman Arnett, associate director of student financial aid; and Martin Huffman, manager of printing services.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Department of Psychology and Special Education has received a $13,000 student originated studies grant from the National Science Foundation.

The grant is being used for a research project entitled "Father Absence on Social Attitudes and Physiological Development in Children."

Research conducted by seven MSU students through Aug. 11, will be reported to the National Science Foundation in Washington, D.C. in December.

"The competition is very stiff for these grants," said Dr. Alan Childs, assistant professor of psychology and special education at MSU and project advisor. "MSU had one of 69 projects accepted from over 200 submitted by universities in the United States. There are very strict guidelines that must be met and panels of scientists and experts in every field judge the merit of each study submitted."

Survey material and test results from third and ninth grade students of selected families in Rowan County is being used in the research.

"We hope we can get some usable information for parents and teachers," said Dr. Childs.

He added:

"What we're hoping for most of all is that the students will get valuable experience in conducting research rather than just reading about what has already been done. The students do all the planning, research, compile the information and present the material."

MOREHEAD, Ky: --- "The Carnival," an oil painting by Maurice Strider, associate professor of art at Morehead State University, is currently among the national traveling exhibition "Black Artists/..South" which opened in March at the Huntsville, Ala. Museum of Art.

The painting, which won the John Hope Purchase Award in 1960, is an abstract oil painting of a carnival and is on loan from the Atlanta University Museum.

The carnival theme is a favorite subject of Strider who has done several works on the theme including a seven foot acrylic-oil which is now on display at the University of Massachusetts.

"I believe my work reflects the many varied contacts and experiences I have enjoyed or have been inspired by in my life," says Strider.

His experiences have indeed been varied. He has done extensive research in black art, Afro-American art and culture, black history and race relations. He is a cooperating artist for the Ethnic Art Slide Bank at the University of South Alabama and the Lowie Museum of Anthropology, University of California at Berkley, for the preparation of a catalogue on "200 Years of Black Art."

He is a member of the Kentucky Human Rights Commission-Black History Committee which published a textbook, "Kentucky's Black Heritage," to supplement the Kentucky history texts used in elementary schools and has taught black history at Kentucky State University.

Strider's interest in black awareness also carries over to his accomplishments in photography and journalism. For 25 years he was a staff correspondent-photographer for the Pittsburgh Courier and the Louisville Defender.

He received the Chicago Defender award for newswriting in 1958 for his articles "Improving Race Relations in the South" and his photographs of the burial of Whitney Young, Jr., were viewed by more than 300,000 when they were displayed at Carnegie Institute in 1972.

A native of Lexington, the 66-year old artist-professor was recently elected Vice President of the Kentucky Art Education Association. He has served as president of Lexington Teachers Association and Lexington Education Association and is a member of the Kentucky Committee for Educational Television.

Strider is now putting together a hand book for teaching Afro-American art, a subject which he has researched extensively. He has served as art consultant for NEH African-American cultural institutes (sponsored by the Ford Foundation and the National Endowment for the Arts) at Southern University, Alabama and Kentucky State University.

His art work has been exhibited at Fisk University, University of Kentucky, Atlanta University, The High Museum of Atlanta, DuSable Museum of Chicago, Illinois State University, Carnegie Institute, Kentucky State University, The Ashland and Lexington Public Libraries.

Strider, who retires this year after 45 years teaching, says he has a great love for the student/teacher relationship.

"My most exciting reward has always been the success of former students," he said. "A lot of them are art teachers or illustrators and they keep in touch with me."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Ashland executive Orin E. Atkins told the Morehead State University spring commencement audience here Friday that the next ten years will be the most challenging in history.

The Board Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Ashland Oil, Inc., told the more than 1,000 degree candidates that "as the educated elite of our nation" they have the ability and "obligation to critically examine each situation and to make yourself heard."

He added:

"As you move from the University into the world of business, education and government, you must continue the tradition established by those who have gone before you of initiating change."

Atkins also discussed the current energy situation and Kentucky's future role in challenging the problem.

"Kentucky is in a unique position to respond to the challenge of the nation's current energy problem," he said.

He continued:

"Kentucky has the largest and most valuable coal reserves in the world. With coal standing as the only immediately available substitute for petroleum or nuclear fuel for generation of electrical power, Kentucky's coal reserves promise to become more and more crucial and valuable in the next decade."

Atkins added that the timber industry may also be a major factor in Kentucky's future economy.

"Many of our energy experts see wood and plant life as a constantly renewable source of energy," said Atkins. "With its strategic location close to markets and many miles of potentially valuable forest land, Kentucky can become a leader in this new biomass technology."

He added that over the next several months, many of the nation's problems will emanate from the unrest in the Mideast and because of the Mideast situation, the world's problems for the next six months will not be the price of oil or profits of the oil companies but the availability of oil.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet presented the President's Cup for Achievement to Phil Simms of Louisville, the first round draft choice of the National Football League New York Giants.

The President's Cup for Leadership was presented to Kevin Porter of Bricktown, N.J., president of the Student Government Association.

Honorary doctorates were awarded to Atkins, Russell Williamson of Inez and retiring faculty member George T. Young.

Special recognition was given Patricia Peterson of Cincinnati and Barbara Finelli of Mentor, Ohio for their perfect 4.0 grade point average; Dr. Jack Bizzell, head of the Department of Government and Public Affairs, recipient of the 1978-79 Distinguished Faculty Award; and Dr. Victor Howard, professor of history, 1978-79 Distinguished Researcher Award.

A true feeling of Appalachia, its mountains, people, and its heritage can be experienced when visiting the Appalachian Collection in the Julian M. Carroll Library Tower on the Morehead State University campus.

The fifth level of the tower, where the Appalachian Collection is housed, offers a panoramic view of the mountains and valleys surrounding Morehead, adding to the enjoyment of the wealth of material inside.

History is relived in the books, pictures, films and art of the Appalachian people. The Rare Books Room offers a collection of early books about Kentucky and by Kentucky authors. Many are first editions, dated and autographed. There is an original edition set of "The War of the Rebellion," which was put out by the U.S. Government and is the official record of the Civil War, with the earliest volume dating back to the 1870's. There are also several rare and expensive editions of English and Scottish ballad collections, as well as other rare books.

The University Archives located here offers a collection of M.S.U. yearbooks dating from 1927; bound editions of the schoolpaper, the Trail Blazer, from the original edition in 1936 to the present; and bound editions of Morehead newspapers dating from the 1920's to the present.

A collection of thirteen paintings of one-room school houses in Eastern Kentucky by the late Cliff Johnson are on display on the central wall, along with pictures, letters and other memorabilia belonging to him.

Rooms dedicated to Kentucky writers James Still and Jesse Stuart are part of the Appalachian Collection and offer photographs, notes, early manuscripts, original editions of their works (some of them signed and dated) and other memorabilia of these two prolific Eastern Kentucky writers.

Two faculty members received individual recognition at the recent spring commencement ceremonies.

Dr. Jack E. Bizzel, head of the Department of Government and Public Affairs, was the recipient of the 1979 Distinguished Faculty Award and Dr. Victor B. Howard, professor of history, received the first Distinguished Researcher Award.

Dr. Bizzel, who received his bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from Southern Illinois University, joined the MSU faculty in 1966 and has been the head of the political science department since its creation in 1969.

He is a member of the American Society for Public Administration, American Public Personnel Association, Kentucky City Management Association, Kentucky Chapter of Public Administration and Phi Kappa Phi. He has also published several articles on the application of data processing to local and state governments and their organizations.

The 1979 presentation was made by Dr. Jack Whidden, last year's recipient.

The Distinguished Research Award was presented with the intent of publicly acknowledging the importance of research at an institution of higher learning.

Faculty members were nominated within each department and school of the University with a committee making the final selection based on the nature and significance of the research, degree of involvement of the individual and the impact of his/her findings.

Dr. Howard, a native of Wallins, Ky., has done extensive research in American history with emphasis on slavery.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Looking back, at times we rushed through too quickly."

That's how Jess W. Murray, chairman of Richmond's planning and zoning commission, describes Morehead State University's Kentucky Historical Tours class during a recent visit to Cassius Marcellus Clay's "White Hall" estate in Richmond.

The class takes five Saturday tours to get a first-hand look at Kentucky's historical heritage with instructor George T. Young, associate professor of government at MSU.

Stops include My Old Kentucky Home, Shakertown, Fort Harrod, the old and new capital in Frankfort and Lincoln's Birthplace.

Since its beginning in the fall of 1977, class enrollment has grown from 12 to 51.

"You have an opportunity to see all of the things you've always heard about and read about in history books," said Tonya Underwood, Garrison senior.

The class, taken for graduate or undergraduate credit, has also been beneficial to public school teachers.

"I've been using a lot of this material in my classroom so it's been a lot of help to me," said Clara Ellis of West Liberty Elementary. "We did a unit on Kentucky and my experiences on the tour were very helpful."

The Saturday dates have assisted commuter students Phyllis Guthrie, Carlisle junior and Juanita Lawson, Ezel junior. Both took the class because meeting only five times a semester eliminates a lot of travel, but both say they had other reasons for enrolling.

"I'm taking the class because I'm from California and I know nothing about Kentucky," Guthrie said. "I wanted to learn about the state and heard Mr. Young knows everything about Kentucky."

Lawson echoed Guthrie's remarks.

"I had Mr. Young for two classes last semester and I heard him talking about this class," Lawson said. "It sounded interesting so when I enrolled I told my friends to come."

Young, who retired in May after 47 years at MSU, received an honorary Doctor of Political Science from the University at the spring commencement.

When asked how he became so knowledgeable on Kentucky, Young says he's lived a long time and has been to most of the places before.

The idea for the class came from two of Young's former students.

"Two teachers in the Montgomery County School System were in my 20th Century Kentucky History class in the summer of 1977 and they asked me to include a tours class," Young said. "The enthusiasm of those two women got me started."

"The class began in the fall of 1977 and I've received strong support and encouragement from Dr. Don Flatt, head of the Department of History and Dr. Alban Wheeler, dean of the School of Social Sciences."

Although he retired in May after almost half a century of service at MSU, Young will be back to teach the tours class in the fall.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Gov. Julian M. Carroll told more than 1,800 older Kentuckians that "just like you, I'm not retiring from life," when he leaves office in December.

Carroll made the comments in Wednesday's opening session of the 1979 Governor's Conference on Aging at Morehead State University.

He added that he had talked to President Carter about aging programs and "that Kentucky was fortunate to have a voice in matters affecting the aged in Washington."

Carroll described the conference as the people's way to talk about aging programs. He made a commitment to the audience by saying, "I promise I will personally be your lobbyist in the hallways of the general assembly when I leave office."

Earlier in the afternoon Fannie B. Dorsey, chairperson for the Institute of Aging; MSU President Morris L. Norfleet; Cyrus Bayer, founder of the Bluegrass Council of the Blind; Charles F. Cain, commissioner, Bureau for Social Services, Department for Human Resources; and Thomas S. Catrell, director, Division for Aging Services, Department for Human Resources, welcomed the group to the third annual conference.

The conference is supported by the Governor's Accent on Elderly Program and funded through the Department for Human Resources. It is hosted by MSU's Appalachian Development Center and continues through Friday with workshops, entertainment and an address by Edward E. MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Tonya Ray Underwood, Morehead State University graduate from Garrison, does not waste a lot of time accomplishing things.

She graduated with honors this spring, earning her degree in elementary education, a program that normally takes four years to complete, in only two years.

"I had graduated from Lewis County High School in 1975 and spent a couple of years working when I decided I wanted to go back to school and get my degree in elementary education," said Tonya, who began her studies at MSU in the spring 1977. "There wasn't any strange or unusual reason that I wanted to finish in such a short time. I just wanted to hurry and get finished so I could begin teaching."

She hasn't wasted a lot of time doing that either. Tonya will begin teaching in Lewis County in the fall and says she is looking forward to the challenges of her career.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dorse Underwood of Garrison.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Kentucky Attorney General Robert F. Stephens told more than 350 high school coeds Tuesday that "achievement of the past can only mean better achievement for the future."

Stephens added that "great achievement of the past and even greater of the future were and will be made by men and women willing to pay the price" during the general assembly of Kentucky Girls State at Morehead State University.

The week-long exercise in democracy is sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary, Department of Kentucky.

Each delegate becomes a citizen of a mythical 51st state. Elections will be held Thursday to select government officials and will culminate in the election of a Kentucky Girls State governor.

Stephens added:

"If you want to leave this world in a little better shape than you found it, get involved. Get involved with your school, your family, your community, your church, the continuing education process and it's important that you get involved in the political process."

The Attorney General told the audience that "the rent you and I pay for living on this earth is the service you and I render to our fellow man."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Summer Theatre at Morehead State University offers something unique in the way of programming this year.

In addition to performances on campus, MSU's thespians will perform "South Pacific" and "Pippin" on the beach at Cave Run Lake.

A stage, designed by Dr. William Layne, associate professor of communications, has been constructed on the beach area along with seating for 235 people. An area for lawn chairs and blankets has also been designated.

The U.S. Forest Service (Daniel Boone National Forest) has also assisted in installing power for lighting and sound equipment.

The summer season opens June 22 and 23 in MSU's Kibbey Theatre with "South Pacific." Song and dance highlight the performances of Cindy Karns, Dayton, Ohio graduate student; Keith Conn, Morehead graduate student; Blaine Robison, New Castle junior; and Gregg Etter, Louisville senior. Bill Burkes, Louisville senior, is directing the production.

"South Pacific" moves to Cave Run Beach for performances on June 29 and 30, July 6, 14, 20 and 27.

"Vainities," a long-running off-broadway comedy about three high school cheerleaders and their progression into the adult world, is scheduled at MSU June 27 and 28, July 11, 12, 17 and 26.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- More than 15 scholars from six states met at Morehead State University Thursday and Friday for the first "Invited Symposium on Children in Appalachia."

The symposium, co-sponsored by MSU's Appalachian Development Center and Department of Psychology and Special Education, focused on research on child and family development in Appalachia and the rural South.

"The planning sessions went very well and were all very stimulating," said Dr. James Gifford, coordinator of Appalachian studies at MSU. "This symposium brought together individuals who have researched specific problems concerning Appalachian children and families."

Gifford also stated that MSU plans to host a similar symposium in June, 1980 in conjunction with the 1980 Appalachian Celebration Week.

"Our focus next year will be on academicians and practitioners who are responsible for the actual delivery of social services in the community," added Gifford.
