MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University will host its first International Elderhostel July 12 - 19.

Elderhostel is in its second year at MSU but this is the first time that foreign citizens will be involved. The group of 50 includes 21 residents of London, England.

During their stay here, the Britishers will study Appalachian heritage and history, folk culture and tour such sites as Red River Gorge, Carter Caves, Cave Run Lake and the Kentucky Horse Park.

The Elderhostel Program is based on the youth hostels and folk schools of Europe, but guided by the needs of older citizens for intellectual and physical stimulation. Participants live on campus and attend classes and other activities.

MSU is among more than 400 colleges and universities in the United States and Canada involved in Elderhostel.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University students MaryEtta Bledsoe and David Tapp haven't lost any friends since they took their last job. In fact, they say their friends are more understanding than expected.

The jobs they accepted are as "student cadets" with the University's Division of Safety and Security.

The "student cadet" program is a cooperative effort involving MSU's professional police officers and University students. Cadets work from 12 to 20 hours per week, relieving officers from chores such as directing traffic, writing parking tickets and checking campus building security at night.

"One of the first tickets I had to write was on a friend's car," recalls Tapp, a sophomore from Morehead. "Of course, he responded when I told him later that I had written a ticket on his car. But he wasn't really upset because he knew he had been illegally parked."

The program started at MSU earlier this summer but planning began two or three years ago, according to Gary Messer, MSU's director of safety and security.

"We couldn't begin the student cadet program until we had our regular security force at full strength," Messer said. "We had been operating with less than a full force and had no men to work with the students. Now the program is going well, judging by these first two students."

(more)

"Now we have only the two students, but we hope to expand to six or eight cadets in the fall semester," he said. "Of course, they all will be paid under the University's work-study programs."

Her work hasn't been difficult, said MaryEtta, a Dayton, Ohio, junior, and she has seen other positions on the University staff that she feels are more difficult to handle than being on the street.

"I worked around the office when I first began the job and I would much rather write parking tickets than be the person at the window where the fines are paid," she said. "The people who get tickets really come up with some far-out stories about why they parked illegally. Collecting is a difficult job sometimes."

Student cadets will have expanded rules this fall when they help with crowd control at athletic events, conferences and musical events. But Messer feels the major part of the cadet role may be unseen.

"Aside from relieving regular officers, I can see where it will help students not even connected with our division," Messer said. "It can't be other than positive, from a student's viewpoint, to see another student helping security officers. The relationship from student to student will be one of more understanding than from officer to student."

It's that student-to-student relationship which caused MaryEtta and David some concern at first, but now that concern has been replaced by a confident assessment of their jobs.

(more)

"I'm already playing a role in helping students understand the people that are here on the security force," said Tapp. "I've even convinced a couple of my friends to apply for a job in the fall."

MaryEtta says her friends think it's funny that she is a part of law enforcement.

"They say they can't believe that I'm that mean," she said. "But they're just joking. I really convince them that the security force is just people out there doing their job."

"I hope to work here until I graduate," Tapp said. "I think it's one of the best jobs I'll ever have."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Lucy Butcher Parker's 78th year has been filled with firsts. The Rowan County resident received her high school diploma through the GED program. She made her first visit to W-Hollow, the home of author Jesse Stuart. She publicly displayed the results of her 68 years of quilt-making experience and, at Morehead State University, she is enrolled in college for the first time in her life.

Mrs. Parker already has completed MSU's first summer session and is as nervous as any other freshman about her grades.

"I haven't received a grade for my speech class yet," she said. "But I feel sure I'll get at least a 'B'."

Born in Johnson County, Mrs. Parker has lived most of her life just outside Morehead. She was a mother to nine children and has 25 grandchildren, 22 great-grandchildren, and two great-great-grandchildren.

Quilting is the craftwork she has pursued most of her life and Mrs. Parker is known as one of the finest and most prolific quiltmakers in the Morehead area.

"I've been keeping a record since 1955," she said. "Since then, I've made more than 220 quilts but most of them have been sold to people who live away from here."

People always are responding to the hand-lettered "Quilts-Gifts" sign in front of her home in the community of Gates. Visitors from across the country stop to discuss quilts with her.

"A couple from Texas stopped the other day and wanted to know if I could make them a 'Lone Star' quilt," she said. "They wanted a particular color and, when they get the material back to me, I'll make it for them."

Mrs. Parker's quilting has come between periods in her life on the MSU campus. A student for one semester 61 years ago at the old Morehead Normal School, she still does not dream of what to do with a college degree but attends for the enjoyment of learning.

"I have bad ankles and I have to use a cane to get to class sometimes," she said. "But the students and professors treated me just like one of the bunch. I don't think I've ever had more fun."

In the fall semester, Mrs. Parker says she will continue her college experience in other classes. She plans to study composition, shorthand, and to take a Bible literature class.

Along with the study, Mrs. Parker has plans to fly to see relatives later this year and she also is going to see the ocean, two more things she has never done before. At the ocean, she plans to wear shorts and a swim suit for the first time. Yes, Lucy B. Parker's 78th year has been a real experience!

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Kentucky craftspeople who practice a craft native to the region and representative of the Appalachian Heritage will get a rare opportunity at Morehead State University on Thursday, July 23.

Buyers from the Neiman-Marcus' Appalachian Crafts Shop (Neiman-Marcus is an internationally famous department store chain) will be on the MSU campus from 4 until 5 p.m., in the Academic-Athletic Complex on Main Street to view a craft show open to all Kentucky craftspeople.

Jointly sponsored by the Kentucky Department of the Arts, Craft Division, and the Appalachian Development Center, the show will provide participants an opportunity to develop a steady market outlet for their wares.

Those who wish to participate need to make available a representative sample of their work, establish a wholesale price for each item, and be ready to make a commitment to the production of a specific number of items within a specified time.

Neiman-Marcus representatives will not make actual purchases at the time of the show but will evaluate works on display, secure information about such items, and secure craftsperson's names and addresses. Orders will be placed at a later date.

Prior to the afternoon show, a workshop, "The Business of Being a Craftsperson," will be conducted in MSU's Adron Doran University Center. Topics to be highlighted include wholesaling, packaging, pricing, and record keeping.

(Back-To-School Special)

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University will open its fall semester on Aug. 24 and the more than 7,200 students who are expected to enroll will find few changes have occurred since the spring term ended in early May.

Students actually will begin arriving on campus on Saturday, Aug. 22, and Sunday, Aug. 23. The three-day registration period starts Aug. 24 and classes begin at 8 a.m. on Aug. 27.

The most significant change is the occupancy of MSU's new $7 million Academic-Athletic Center. Finished late last spring, the facility will be used for physical education and health classes for the first time this fall. It includes an indoor swimming pool and diving well and other facilities for gymnastics, physiology, basketball and tennis. In addition, students will utilize the building for concerts and other events.

Enrollment is expected to be higher than the fall of 1980 in view of record response to MSU's summer orientation program for new students and the highest summer enrollment in the institution's 59-year history.

"We are encouraged by the numbers of students who participated in our early registration and orientation program this summer," said Dr. Rondal D. Hart, director of admissions. "In addition to new freshmen, it appears that we will have a sizable increase in transfer students."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Regional high school students and MSU recently teamed up to win a state championship.

The MSU Upward Bound program, a six-week summer program for 117 high school students from Eastern Kentucky, received statewide recognition when the Scholar Bowl team defeated five other teams for the state title.

Seven members of the team traveled to Frankfort to qualify through competition. Following several hours of questions in such categories as science, mathematics, current events and American literature, the team defeated Murray State University for the trophy.

"The MSU Scholar Bowl team faced stiff competition from the other participating schools," said Diane Tabor, coordinator of the Upward Bound Program.

Other schools with Upward Bound teams in the competition included Berea College, Eastern Kentucky University, University of Louisville, Kentucky State University, and Murray State University.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University will host an Energy Cost Reduction Seminar for restaurant managers on Thursday, Aug. 20, from 8:30 a.m. to 11 a.m. in the Riggle Room of the Adron Doran University Center.

"The purpose of the seminar is to provide help to those involved in full service and fast food restaurants in decreasing their energy costs and increasing their profits," said Suzanne Theis, coordinator of MSU's Energy Management Program.

Assisting with the seminar will be Dr. Charles Derrickson, Dennis Karwatka and Freeman Hamilton and the Kentucky Department of Energy.

More information is available from Ms. Theis by phone at (606) 783-3829 or by mail at UPO 1205, MSU, Morehead, KY 40351.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University will seek $6.7 million in capital construction funds from the 1982 Kentucky General Assembly, according to action taken here Friday by the MSU Board of Regents.

The board approved submission of requests for $4,602,450 in the 1982-83 fiscal year and $2,170,000 in 1983-84. Projects include renovation of two residence halls, upgrading of heat and electrical systems, roof repairs and purchase of an aerial ladder fire truck.

The capital construction requests for the 1982-84 biennium will be forwarded to the Council on Higher Education for review and a recommendation to be forwarded to Gov. John Y. Brown Jr.

In other action, the Regents:

 Approved several personnel actions, including promotion of Dr. Ronald Walke to director of student financial aid, Anna Mae Riggle to dean of students, and Dr. Kenneth Clever to coordinator of veterinary technology.

 Authorized the awarding of "tuition fee grants" to certain out-of-state students as a replacement for the out-of-state fee waiver program which was recently abolished by the Council on Higher Education. Details of the new program will be announced later, according to MSU President Morris L. Norfleet.

 Accepted a series of grants and contracts totaling $654,339, including $199,960 in federal funds for continuation of the Upward Bound program for high school students with college potential.

 Awarded an honorary doctoral degree to Dr. James L. Fisher of Washington, D.C., president of the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE), MSU's summer commencement speaker.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. James L. Fisher, president of the Council for Advancement and Support of Higher Education (CASE), told more than 400 Morehead State University summer degree candidates here Friday that today's society demands a better understanding of the relationship between freedom and discipline.

"In any field of endeavor, from personal relationships to work, failure to adhere to the discipline required and the rules or expectations involved invite anxiety and failure, possibly even disaster," he said.

Dr. Fisher added that success requires a balance between discipline and freedom and that excellence can never be achieved by abandoning either principle.

"During the 1960's and 1970's, many began to believe we had transcended the need for balance," he said. "We have seen the result of this in our economy, in family relations, the arts, politics, and athletics."

Prior to his address, Fisher received an honorary doctoral degree.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Brad Fahrney's biggest decision during the next few months will be whether he will return to the land of kangaroos and koala bears.

The Morehead State University graduate student has spent the last five years teaching in Australia, and he says he's just as content there as in the United States.

"Parts of Australia, especially Melbourne, have the look and feel of an American city," said Fahrney. "There probably aren't many nations in the world where you can feel at home the way you can in Australia."

A former resident of Dayton, Ohio, Fahrney graduated from MSU in 1974 with a degree in journalism and theatre. Following a year of graduate work at MSU, Fahrney left-for Australia.

"I interviewed for several teaching positions around here and one down there," he said. "Much to my amazement, I got the one in Australia. They stopped taking teachers from America about six months after I went there to work, so I just got in under the wire."

The high school level of education that Fahrney taught in Australia is not the same as in this country. There is no middle school and high school is any grade above the sixth. Sixth grade and lower is called primary, rather than elementary school.

But, in Fahrney's opinion, students may not differ, even though they are halfway around the world from each other.

(more)

Fahrney
2-2-2-2

"It's hard to generalize about whether students in Australia are any different from American students," said Fahrney. "They seem to be about the same."

Though Australia is best known for koala bears and kangaroos, Fahrney says he never explored the "outback," the wilderness area that is home to the exotic animals of the world's largest island.

"I actually lived in only two places in the country," Fahrney said. "I lived in Rushworth, a former gold mining town, and Melbourne, one of the nation's largest cities."

Fahrney adds that the similarities of the two countries can be found daily. The cars, music, buildings, and some industry are shared by the U.S. and Australia. Especially prevalent in the country "down under" are several American brands of fried chicken, hamburgers and soft drinks.

During his extended stay in Australia, Fahrney has visited the U.S. only three times. The year-long leave of absence he is using to finish his graduate degree at MSU is his longest visit. It may be the most difficult to end agreeably, too, since Fahrney is undecided whether to return to his teaching job in Australia. The leave ends on New Year's Eve, 1981, and that gives Fahrney almost half a year to decide what to do.

"I just wish Melbourne were in Connecticut," he said.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Chopsticks, floor mats for sleeping, and Oriental art are part of scholarly research of Dr. Bill Booth, head of Morehead State University's Department of Art, who is involved in a month-long visit to Taiwan and Japan.

"This research opportunity provides me with a chance to improve my understanding of Chinese art and gives me time to collect materials to enrich my teaching at MSU," Dr. Booth said before his departure.

This research visit to Taiwan is supported by a grant from the Pacific Cultural Foundation of Taipei, Taiwan. Most of the research will be done in the National Palace Museum in Taipei. Dr. Booth also planned to present a lecture on "Chinese Influences on Western Arts" at the 1981 Asian Pacific Conference on Art Education Symposium in Taipei.

"East Meets the West in the Arts" is the theme of the symposium which involves delegates from Japan, Korea, the Phillipines, Thailand, Taiwan, Canada, the United States and several European countries.

Dr. Booth's paper was submitted to the Symposium jury in June and will be published in Chinese and English.

The opportunity to meet artists and art scholars from around the world appealed to his concern for students at MSU, according to Dr. Booth, an art historian.

"I feel the University has a responsibility to expose students to as many different artistic stimuli as possible," he said. "Students could benefit from periodic exposure to the art of China and Japan."

2-2-2-2-2

Following the research and symposium in Taiwan, Dr. Booth is visiting artists in Japan. He will stay with a friend who lives in the traditional Japanese manner.

"I will sleep on the floor, just as the Japanese tradition dictates," he said. "And I will eat with chopsticks. I won't be able to communicate freely, since I don't speak Japanese, but I will be able to acquaint myself with areas of art not usually covered in university curricula."

Though the visit to Japan is privately funded, Dr. Booth says the possibility of scheduling art exhibitions for MSU's Claypool-Young Art Gallery is always in the back of his mind.

"It is my hope to arrange several exhibits for the gallery while in the Republic of China and Japan," he explained. "An exhibition of 64 Chinese scrolls from the National Palace Museum of Taiwan is already scheduled for February, and I hope to arrange others."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Robert M. (Mike) Duncan, president of Inez Deposit Bank, has become the first person to be named to a six-year term on the Morehead State University Board of Regents.

Appointed recently by Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. to succeed Sam F. Kibbey of Grayson, Duncan will serve through March 31, 1987. He is the first MSU regent to be appointed since a new law took effect to extend the terms from four years to six.

A graduate of Cumberland College and the University of Kentucky College of Law, the 30-year-old banker also serves on the boards of Alice Lloyd College and Highlands Regional Medical Center. He is president of the Martin County Kiwanis Club.

"We are delighted with Gov. Brown's decision to appoint Mr. Duncan to our Board of Regents and we are confident that he will prove to be an asset to the board and to the institution," said MSU President Morris L. Norfleet. "At the same time, we are most appreciative of Mr. Kibbey's faithful service on the board for the past eight years and we extend best wishes for his success in future endeavors."

Duncan is married to the former Joanne Kirk of Inez. They have a son.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Board of Regents have voted to merge MSU's laboratory school, University Breckinridge, with the Rowan County Public Schools, effective immediately.

The demise of the 53-year-old school as a part of the University came on a 9-1 vote of the Regents in response to a recommendation by MSU President Morris L. Norfleet.

The MSU chief executive described his proposal as a most difficult move, but necessary for the future of the University.

Later, the Board voted 8-2 to make the merger effective this school year. The Regents also stipulated that UBS teachers on tenure be protected by the University.

Rowan School Supt. John Brock said Breck would continue to operate in its present building on the MSU campus until a new Rowan County Senior High School is completed and until the present high school is converted to a middle school. The Breck building will be leased to the county system during that period.

∫ Merging the lab school will save MSU about $325,000 this year, and $465,000 next year, according to Budget Director Porter Dailey. The merger also will result in additional state support for the Rowan schools, Supt. Brock added.

In other action, the Regents approved a $686,900 reduction in MSU's 1981-82 operating budget as ordered recently by Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. as part of a $100 million cut in the state general fund.

Attending the special meeting were board members Lloyd Cassity of Ashland, Billy Joe Hall of Mt. Sterling, Jerry F. Howell of Jackson, John Baird of Pikeville, Robert M. Duncan of Inez, Cloyd McDowell of Williamsburg, Ethel Foley of Maysville, Judge James Richardson of Owingsville, Dr. John Duncan of the faculty and Steve O'Conner, the student representative.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Sharon Crouch-Farmer, 26, of Owingsville, has been named coordinator of news services at Morehead State University.

She received her bachelor's degree in journalism from MSU in 1976 and served as communications specialist for the Gateway Area Development District and as an advertising sales representative at the Lexington Herald-Leader.

Farmer completed her master's degree in communications in 1979 while serving as graduate assistant in MSU's Office of News Services. Immediately prior to her appointment, she was a staff assistant in MSU's Division of Public Affairs.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Crouch of Owingsville, she is married to David A. Farmer, formerly of Harlan, who is assistant news director of WMST Radio in Mt. Sterling.

As coordinator of news services, the Bath County resident is responsible for providing information to the news media concerning the University's teaching, research and public service activities and for maintaining a program of internal communications for MSU's more than 800 employees.

"We are pleased to have one of our talented graduates return to the campus to assume this important position," said MSU President Morris L. Norfleet. "We are confident that Sharon will be highly successful."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Eastern Kentucky is to music as Morehead State University is to jazz. Jazz in the midst of Bluegrass country?

A Morehead music buff, Jay Flippin hosts the locally-produced radio program "Jazzline," aired on WMKY Radio at 90.3 FM each Sunday from 9 p.m. until midnight.

There were two things Flippin says he felt were missing from WMKY's four other jazz broadcasts. One was local jazz musicians on radio and the other was jazz musicians talking about what they do and why, on radio.

"There was no way for local musicians, here at Morehead State University, to get their music played on the radio," Flippin explains. "We have some very fine jazz players, both faculty and students; and we have some excellent jazz ensembles."

"Jazzline" features selections by local jazz musicians and interviews with the musicians.

"There are a lot of people who don't know we exist. I'm certain there are a lot of people out in surrounding counties that are reached by our radio station who don't know there is any jazz going on over here. I think there are some jazz fans out there."

The MSU music professor adds that "most people associate jazz with larger metropolitan areas."

(more)

The Stuart, VA, native reports that a dentist from Grayson sent him a card thanking him for doing the show. The dentist, originally from the northeast, hadn't heard any jazz since moving to Kentucky.

The jazz pianist speaks of jazz from a first-hand basis. He started playing the piano at the age of seven.

"I started playing professionally, and I started playing around with 'soul music.' Then I began playing with a gospel church group."

Flippin adds that he tried playing a little blues, too.

The combination of these musical roots led Flippin to jazz, although he didn't consider himself a "jazz musician" until he came to Morehead.

Flippin received a bachelor's degree in music from Mars Hill College in Ashville, N.C.; a master's in music from MSU and also worked and studied at Temple University. He is currently working toward a doctoral degree in musical arts at the University of Kentucky.

When Flippin came to MSU he began to study, read, listen to and practice jazz music.

"That's when I began to find out what it's all about," he explains.

At MSU, Flippin teaches jazz studies, theory of music and private piano lessons and he concedes his favorite jazz musicians include Oscar Peterson, Herbie Hancock, Chick Corea and Joanne Brackeen.

Flippin enjoys getting listener responses to the program and appreciates the musical contributions anyone might have. He can be reached through WMKY Radio, MSU, UPO 903, Morehead, KY 40351.

The telephone number is (606) 783-3371.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "I just didn't want to turn into a carrot."

Joe Duncan, a 54-year-old freshman at Morehead State University, says his reason for entering college runs deeper than that. He has written more than 48 books and numerous newspaper articles but only a few have been published.

"It boils down to just one thing," he says. "I love to write. But most of what I write I leave in file cabinets at home for my descendents to read." Duncan, who can usually be recognized by his green fatigue hat, came to MSU to study journalism and acquire the marketable skills of a trained writer.

The Fleming County native has his wife, Laura, and 13 children and 12 grandchildren behind him in this new adventure.

"Even the grandchildren got into the act and we had a vote," said Duncan.

His youngest child is five years old and the oldest, Sharon, 29, is a nursing student at MSU and is commuting the 21 miles from Wallingford each day with her father.

Qualified as a totally disabled veteran, Duncan finances his education through the GI Bill and by collecting aluminum cans and copper.

"I have applied for various student aid programs but if I don't get them I still plan to finish," he adds.

A typewriter sits by his bedside for those times when he gets an idea at 2 a.m. and gets up to start writing.

Duncan
2-2-2-2

"When I start typing that early my wife doesn't seem to appreciate it," says Duncan. "But I know she is behind me in my writing endeavors.

The former brick contractor isn't exactly sure where he gets his story ideas but he is sure of one thing: "I love Eastern Kentucky and I try to write something appropriate to this area."

He feels that one of the best things to happen in this country is that older, married students are permitted to enroll in college.

"This option wasn't open to older students a few years ago and I'm really glad that it is available now," he said.

With a whole garden of writing opportunities facing him in college, Duncan doesn't need to fear turning into a carrot.

"I'm glad I came," he said with a grin.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's WMKY Radio will be kicking off a unique football program on Sept. 9 for listeners to savor with their morning bacon and eggs.

"Gameplan," a 30-minute show featuring MSU Head Football Coach Steve Loney, will be broadcast live from Jerry's Restaurant on Main Street in Morehead where Loney will field questions from restaurant patrons and listeners.

"We're going to set up a microphone in the restaurant for people who wish to come up and ask Coach Loney a question," explains Rick Hesterburg, WMKY sports director and host of the new show. "We're also going to have a phonenumber into Jerry's so listeners can call in questions and talk with the coach on the air."

The Sept. 9 show comes three days before MSU's opening game at Marshall. "Gameplan" will be aired each Wednesday during the season at 7:30 a.m.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University has some good news for area fishermen.

MSU again has been selected to host a regional Bass Fishing Institute sponsored by Indiana State University and the America Institute of Bass Fishing. The event is set for April 17 and 18, 1982, in the new Academic-Athletic Center.

More than 500 persons participated last spring when MSU first hosted the two-day program. The MSU Institute involves discussion of all aspects of fishing, including casting techniques, use of lures, seasonal patterns, and the use of depth finders, sounders, locators and graphs.

Participants will be shown casting techniques and lure demonstrations.

There also will be a display of fishing equipment by various manufacturers.

A highlight will be the opportunity for area fishermen to get personal tips from and to watch demonstrations by a number of well-known fishermen.

"Last spring, we had Bill Dance and Tom Mann, two of the top fishermen in the country," says Harry Ryan, MSU's coordinator of campus events. "We hope they'll be coming back again next spring."

Dance, of Memphis, Tenn., and Mann, of Eufaula, Ala., have been recipients of several awards in national fishing circles.

"The MSU Institute will have something of interest for all levels of fishermen from beginners to pros, from the once-a-week fishermen on up," notes Ryan.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Camden-Carroll Library has been given a film library with a replacement value of more than $700,000.

The 16-millimeter sound films were owned previously by the Kentucky Department for Human Resources. The more than 1,700 films were housed at the Paris State Hospital where they were loaned to public agencies across the state.

The collection includes films dealing with all aspects of physical and mental health sciences. In addition, MSU received equipment for maintaining and administering the films and cases and shelving for storage.

"This collection will enable the University to provide an outstanding film service to our students and faculty and to our entire region," said Dr. Jack Ellis, MSU's director of libraries.

He continued:

"As the center of a hospital library network, which includes eight hospitals in the area, this collection means a great deal to us. We expect the public response to be tremendous."

The film library is part of MSU's Learning Resources Center on the ground floor of the Camden-Carroll Library Tower.

Films are available for loan to health departments, public schools, medical personnel, nursing homes or other organizations throughout the state, according to Dr. Ellis.

Additional information is available from Helen Williams, Camden-Carroll Library, MSU, UPO 700, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone is (606) 783-4797.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University is hosting the 1981 Gateway Olympics Fall Sports Festival on Friday, Sept. 11.

More than 300 children from special education classes and economically-deprived homes in the five-county Gateway Area Development District will participate in sports events at MSU's various athletic facilities.

The games are sponsored by the United States Community Services Administration and MSU.

"Our idea is that everyone will participate and have a great time," says Dr. Howard Nesbitt, professor of health, physical education and recreation. "These exceptional young people will have an opportunity to come here and enjoy themselves."

Festival events include track, swimming, football, basketball and softball skills. In addition, contests such as wheelchair races and frisbee throws will also be offered.

A carnival of games including bean bag toss, tire walk and dart throw will be a special feature of the Olympics.

T-shirts will be given to each festival participant and awards will be given to the top three contestants in each event.

MSU students volunteer each year to help with the Olympics and Dr. Nesbitt expects more than 100 will work.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Elmer D. Anderson, Morehead State University's director of student financial aid and assistant to the president, has retired after 15 years at MSU but will continue his service to the institution.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet has announced that Anderson, a native of Morgan County, will become the executive director of the MSU Foundation, Inc., on Sept. 15.

He succeeds Dr. Rondal D. Hart, MSU's director of admissions, who has held the foundation post on a volunteer, part-time basis since October, 1979.

Anderson becomes the first full-time employee of the foundation which was established to receive and administer private gifts to the University. Governed by a 15-member Board of Trustees, the Foundation is incorporated in Kentucky as a non-profit corporation and has been declared tax exempt under Section 501 (c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code.

"We are pleased that Mr. Anderson is available and willing to accept this bold challenge to continue his dedicated service to the University," said Dr. Norfleet, who also holds the title of president of the Foundation.

Anderson said of his appointment by the Foundation board:

"I am most appreciative of the board's confidence and I look forward to working with alumni, parents, local citizens and other friends of Morehead State University who are interested in offering their financial support to this fine institution. It should be apparent that fund raising has become a critical factor in the future success of our University."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Division of Continuing Education is sponsoring a Community Education Training Institute from Sept. 15 through Sept. 17.

Dr. Dave Santellanes of Eugene, Ore., coordinator of the Northwest Coalition for Community Education Development, will conduct the sessions at the Adron Doran University Center.

The workshop is limited to 30 persons who work in Community Education programs.

"These people are some of the most active practitioners of Community Education in Kentucky," says George Eyster, MSU's director of continuing education.

The goal of the workshop, according to Eyster, is to expand each participant's knowledge of how to implement basic principles of community education.

"The main purpose of community education is to use all educational and recreational facilities in the community to meet the needs of the whole community, not just youth," Eyster said. "It also brings community service agencies together in the planning and implementation of such activities."

Although the community education concept is more than 30 years old, Kentucky has had organized community education programs for less than a decade. MSU was instrumental in the establishment of community education in Kentucky and, for the past nine years, has worked to expand the program.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University will sponsor a Regional Adult Education Workshop on Saturday, Sept. 19.

About 40 adult education teachers from surrounding counties will attend the all-day training session offered by MSU's Adult Basic Education (ABE) Training Project.

The participants, several of whom are elementary and secondary teachers during the day, spend evenings teaching adults in the area to read or preparing them for high school equivalency (GED) examinations.

Workshop topics will include adult education, student use of a new KET reading series and understanding of GED tests.

In addition, the teachers will learn about a statewide computer system for demographic information on adult education students. The computer system, an MSU and state adult education department pilot project, will measure how well adult students fare in employment and family income increases once their training is complete.

MSU's ABE project aids about two-thirds of the Kentucky adult education teachers and includes sponsorship of regional training workshops in Eastern and Central Kentucky.

C.J. Bailey, ABE coordinator, and Sharon Moore, assistant coordinator, will conduct the workshop which begins at 9 a.m. in the Adron Doran University Center.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Eastern Kentucky's unique history and culture will be the theme of a six-part lecture series, "Our Mountain Heritage," to be presented during the 1981-82 fall and spring semesters at Morehead State University.

Sponsored by MSU's Appalachian Development Center, the series is being funded by a grant from the S & H Foundation Lectureship Program which was established in 1960 as part of the Sperry and Hutchinson Company's Program of Aid to Education.

The primary purpose of the lectureship program is to enrich college and university curricula by providing faculty, students and the public access to the training and expertise of notable scholars and other professionals.

"Our Mountain Heritage" lecture series will enrich Morehead State University's Appalachian Studies Program which has been developed under the direction of Dr. James Gifford, author of the lectureship proposal.

According to Dr. Gifford, the lecture series will help Eastern Kentuckians "understand the reality of their homeland and culture." Each program is free and open to the public.

Dr. Gifford expects the lecture series to also help banish negative stereotypes of Appalachia and its people by providing students, faculty, and the general public with access to the insights of six of the most notable Appalachian scholars, writers and thinkers.

The lecture series begins Thursday, Sept. 17, at 8 p.m., in MSU's Reed Auditorium with a presentation by Dr. Cratis Williams on "The Early Settlement of Appalachian Kentucky."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- She doesn't wear a uniform or ask anyone to commit a few years of their life to a cause but Morehead State University senior Lisa Sayble is out there recruiting.

As editor of MSU's weekly student newspaper, "The Trail Blazer," Sayble is eager to get other students involved.

"When I started working for the newspaper there were six or seven people doing all of the work," she recalls. "Many journalism students were graduating without getting practical experience."

Sayble, a Huntington, W. Va., speech major with a minor in journalism, is a graduate of Boyd County High School near Ashland. She came to MSU in 1977 after being recruited by the speech team.

In her junior year, Sayble took over as managing editor of "The Trail Blazer." She moved up to editor this fall and now faces a new challenge.

"My strengths are not in writing and layout and production," she explains, "but I'm learning that as I go along. My best asset is getting the best out of a person that he or she can possibly do."

"The more eyes and ears we have open then the better our coverage will be," she says.

Her personal goal for "The Trail Blazer" is to leave the paper with a much larger staff than ever before.

"I think the reason I recruit so strongly is that I enjoy seeing someone who doesn't know a lot about something learn and improve and grow," says Sayble.

She is the daughter of Mr. Albert Sayble of Huntington and Mrs. Beverly Webb of Richmond.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Broken roller skates, flowered wallpaper remnants, and a crumpled car door in the snow on a sunny winter day are the subjects of Idelle Weber's 1977 oil painting, "All City," one of many modern art works on exhibit in Morehead State University's Claypool-Young Art Gallery.

On display until Oct. 16, the Sydney and Frances Lewis Collection includes paintings and sculpture, most of which were done by American artists within the last five years.

Entitled "Late Twentieth Century Art," the collection covers styles ranging from the photo realism of Weber's comment on America's throw-away lifestyle to the abstractness of Pat Steir's 1978 "Van Gogh/Goya."

The pop art movement is also represented in the exhibit as a modern art force, as in Andy Warhol's 1975 acrylic portrait of former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir.

Jack Lembeck's 1978 acrylic, "Crista Cross," looms over the viewer with dimensions of nine feet high and eight feet wide.

On loan to the University, the collection will travel to art museums in South Carolina, Mississippi, and Tennessee during the next year.

The exhibit is free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Considering coal's growing importance in the nation's energy future, mining technology and mining safety education should become a major program in Kentucky's colleges, according to Forrest Cameron, coordinator of mining technology at Morehead State University.

"And that's part of the reason for the formation of the Collegiate Association for Mining Education (CAME)," he adds.

Organized recently by Kentucky colleges and universities offering mining-related degree programs, CAME represents a cooperative effort among the 11 institutions.

"The member colleges will share resources, such as technical information and research findings, with each other," notes Cameron, who was chosen as the first chairman of CAME.

"Because of financial cutbacks in education, we have to find ways to coordinate programs and lessen the chance of duplications," he explains, adding that CAME will also be scheduling statewide lectures, seminars and a panel discussions on coal.

Cameron is hopeful that the organization will eventually grow into a national and international group of colleges with mining programs.

As part of his effort to spread the word about the association, Cameron will report on CAME's importance at the International Symposium on Training in the Prevention of Occupational Risks in the Mining Industry in Washington, D.C., this November. Of 800 speeches submitted, Cameron's was among 40 picked for inclusion in the six-day symposium, which will have participants from Germany, Russia and other countries.

Members of CAME include Morehead State University, Cumberland College, Hazard Community College, Pikeville College, Southeast Community College, University of Kentucky, Lees College, Madisonville Community College, Murray State University, Union College and Western Kentucky University.

Cloyd McDowell, a member of MSU's Board of Regents, is the vice chairman of CAME. He heads the mining program at Cumberland College.

Associate CAME memberships are available to coal mine operators and others involved in the mining industry. The next meeting of the organization will be in December at Lexington.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Gary Wolf of the University of Central Florida will present a guest recital in Morehead State University's Duncan Recital Hall on Tuesday, Sept. 29, at 8 p.m.

Described by music critics as a "highly gifted pianist who possesses a rare combination of scholarship and artistry," Dr. Wolf plays frequently at recitals and chamber music performances across the country. He holds a master's and doctorate degrees from the Eastman School of Music.

As a Fulbright Award winner, he studied in Salzburg, Austria, where he appeared as guest soloist with the Mozarteum Orchestra in the annual Mozart Festival.

Dr. Wolf's MSU program will include Schumann's "Kinderszenen (Scenes from Childhood)," and works by Serge Rachmaninoff and Max Reger.

The 8 p.m. recital is free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The banjo, smaller than your hand, leans against the rocker on the porch. A full coal scuttle and double-edged ax stand nearby. If the entire scene wasn't small enough to slip into a drawer, you might expect Grandpa back any moment.

The scene is just one of more than 20 miniatures created by Morehead State University senior Dave Moore.

A son of Everett and Betty Moore of Louisville, the industrial education major has built a tiny blacksmith shop, guitar workshop and other scenes to a scale he developed himself.

He keeps a tackle box full of scraps of wood and metal discarded from his completed class projects, among other sources. The copper strings on the banjo, for instance, were retrieved from an old radio transformer.

"I never built anything big until I came to MSU," says Moore, who works part-time as a resident advisor in a campus residence hall.

Full-size projects he has constructed include a guitar and an oak treadle wood lathe that he designed.

"A lot of his soul went into that lathe," says Shirley Mathews, wife of the director of the building where Moore works.

Dr. Bill Booth, head of MSU's department of art, has worked closely with Moore on his skills as a craftsman and artist.

"My miniatures seem more like art than anything else," says Moore, who acknowledges the personal concern Booth has shown.

But Moore, who says he "came to college to explore the things I always wanted to do," doesn't feel he does anything which others cannot do.

"There is a great deal of individual in each of us that is never realized," he adds.

But Dave Moore is developing his big talent, in miniature.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A slow, drizzling rain was coming down outside as he leaned back in his chair and lit his pipe.

"I don't care how much it rains. I haven't seen a rain in over a month. It just doesn't rain in Egypt," said Dr. Joe Copeland, associate professor of economics at Morehead State University.

Dr. Copeland, coordinator of MSU's Egyptian Training Program, has trained middle-level Egyptian government employees on the MSU campus in how to administer agricultural and developmental projects in their villages. He recently spent three weeks in Egypt visiting and evaluating some of the projects of his former students.

While in Egypt, Dr. Copeland toured the Pyramids, the Sphinx, and visited the homes of his former students.

"One of the students got a government car and drove us around," Dr. Copeland said, adding that he noticed a lot of changes since his last trip two years ago.

"When I was there before, I saw more donkeys than I have ever seen, or ever will see in my whole life. Now instead of seeing pack animals, you see pickup trucks," he said.

Automobiles are scarce, Dr. Copeland explained, because they are so expensive. "A new Fiat, which is the most common car there, would cost four or five years salary and only about 10 percent of the people own one. Luckily, public transportation is widely available and cheap in the urban areas."

(more)

Copeland
2-2-2-2-2

Although most work is in agriculture, Dr. Copeland found manufacturing and service industries becoming more numerous, and that wages had gone up in the last two years.

"In rural areas, work and marriage come early," Dr. Copeland said, "but in the cities where people can afford it, many go to college first."

Those who go to college would be surprised at how different college life in the United States is to what they are accustomed to.

"Students who do not live near campus live either with relatives or friends of their parents," Dr. Copeland explains. "I met a girl in Egypt who is a sophomore there in college and she thought going to live in a dormitory was unbelievable."

Egyptians are beginning to break away from the traditional parent-arranged marriages and some young people are beginning to date.

Dr. Copeland observed some of the country's nuptial customs when he attended a wedding party.

"They build an arbor for the bride and groom to sit under. While tamborines and bongo drums are playing, men and women come out and dance around the couple. Old women, with their tongues going in and out, make loud, shrill noises."

Ten Egyptian administrators will be coming to Morehead in October for training with Dr. Copeland. They, in turn, will be exposed to American culture on a college campus.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Three persons escaped injury here Sunday afternoon when fire destroyed a poultry house at Morehead State University's Derrickson Agricultural Complex, three miles north of Morehead.

University officials estimated the loss at $100,000, including 10,000 caged layers valued at $30,000. The building, equipment and chickens were "fully insured," according to John Graham, MSU's vice president for fiscal affairs, and Jack Graves, general manager of Valley Poultry Farms of Ashland.

The University had operated two poultry houses, each with 10,000 layers, as a laboratory for students in agriculture. Chickens and feed are provided by Valley Poultry Farms and MSU supplies the facilities and the labor and then sells the eggs to Valley on a state contract.

The blaze leveled the single-story structure and destroyed several hundred dozen eggs in a storage room. Graves reported that the layers had been producing about 9,000 eggs daily.

Bradley Gray, MSU's farm manager, was supervising two student workers in a feeding operation about 1:30 p.m. when a motorized feed cart erupted in flames. A fire extinguisher was used in an effort to smother the fire but the cart's gasoline tank apparently ruptured and flames shot to the ceiling, forcing Gray and the students to retreat through a door on the opposite end of the 100-foot long building.

By the time firemen from Morehead and Cranston arrived, the facility was engulfed in flames. The firefighters prevented the blaze from spreading to an adjacent house which also contains 10,000 caged layers.

"We are most grateful to the two volunteer fire departments for their timely response and for their efforts in saving the other building and its contents," said MSU President Morris L. Norfleet. "And, of course, we are thankful that no one was injured."

Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, dean of MSU's School of Applied Sciences and Technology, said the Morehead firemen used generator-powered exhaust fans to save the chickens in the adjacent building from suffocation after the fire interrupted electrical service. MSU workmen rigged a temporary electrical connection and the building's ventilation system was restored about two hours after the fire started.

Dr. Norfleet indicated that he would recommend to the University's Board of Regents that the insurance proceeds be used to rebuild the facility.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- When the lights come up on Morehead State University's stage, 20-year old senior Todd Hensley will be....behind them.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Hensley of Independence is better known for his appearances in front of the lights at MSU. He performed in many MSU theatre productions, competed on the speech team and was news anchor for MSU-TV's Newscenter 12.

"I just found I was going in too many directions at once," says Hensley.

Although he will continue acting and singing for fun, Hensley now is concentrating on lighting.

"To me," says the communications major, "theatre lighting is the embodiment of the theatre art. You have to know everything the director has to know, be a script analyzer, set designer, stage manager and know all the technical aspects, too."

Hensley is familiar with these roles. Along with acting and singing, he has designed lights and sets, worked as stage manager and is directing a play written by fellow MSU student Bill Callihan. Also, his sophomore year saw Hensley take on the writer's role and write a musical for MSU's Theatre Ensemble.

After working his way up from "set pusher" to crew chief at Kings Island amusement park near Cincinnati, he returned this past summer as stage manager for the park's production of "Rock Around the Clock."

MSU Student Journalist

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Well, you know, sometimes you get a feeling everything's going to click."

For Ron Osborne, Morehead State University journalism student, that "click" feeling came at the first meeting this fall of MSU's "Raconteur" yearbook staff.

"There's no doubt in my mind, this year's 'Raconteur' is going to be one of the top college yearbooks in the country," says Osborne, recently named "Raconteur" editor.

"When I came for that first meeting and found out what kind of experience everybody had and saw their enthusiasm, I became sure of that. We're looking for a theme specifically to fit MSU perfectly this year," he says.

A junior from Harlan, Osborne is concentrating on photojournalism in his studies, but that doesn't mean he's going to cram the yearbook full of pictures alone.

"The trend is toward more copy, more features, so that 10 years from now when you take out the yearbook to see what college was like, you won't just see a lot of pictures, because pictures won't tell the whole story of what happened at Morehead State that year," Osborne explains.

He continues:

"A lot of people think a yearbook isn't a journalistic experience, but it definitely is. Some people think you have to have a newspaper

(more)

Osborne
2-2-2-2-2

coming out every week for it to be journalism. The yearbook gives the students a lot of experience in photojournalism, and the writing part of it is very similar to writing for a feature magazine."

Also, the layout and design work done on the yearbook could be applied to newspaper or magazine layouts, he added.

Describing Osborne as "very competent," Carolyn McClure, the yearbook's faculty advisor, says the staff's "primary goal this year is to keep up the high standards the 'Raconteur' has had in the past."

The 1980 "Raconteur" was rated one of the top 20 yearbooks in National Scholastic Press Association competition. Osborne was photo editor for the 1981 yearbook, which will arrive from the publisher next month and be entered in the national contest.

After finishing school, Osborne wants to shoot photos for a newspaper or magazine. "I'm not all that interested in art photography," he says. "I like pictures that tell a story."

A member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, Osborne is the son of Ronald Osborne, Sr. of Harlan. His brother, Tony, is a sophomore pre-med major at MSU.

Hensley
2-2-2-2-2

"I learned a lot about how people get along," Hensley says.

Upon graduation from MSU in December, Hensley hopes to design lighting next summer for the South East Theatre Conference, a clearinghouse for college talent. And, eventually, Hensley wants to design lights for a regional theatre.

At MSU this semester, he is hanging lights for the University's first production and will design lights for two other shows, "The Importance of Being Earnest" and "Medea."

"The neat thing about MSU is that you learn it all," says Hensley. Now, after experience in the spectrum of theatre positions, Hensley says this year is going to be "lighting, lighting, lighting."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "If you had asked me back then, I would have said I can't stand it. I just hadn't given it a chance. Then I discovered what I had been missing all those years."

The "it" Kurt Pickering negatively refers to is now his favorite--- country music. Today he says, "Country music is the greatest. I love it!"

The Morehead State University junior hosts the weekly country music program "Country Sunshine" on WMKY, public radio from MSU.

October is country music month, which means the 25-year-old country music enthusiast has several special events planned for "Country Sunshine," aired each Saturday from 6 until 9 a.m.

Incorporated in the three-hour program each week is a countdown of the top 20 country music hits.

A native of Wapakoneta, Ohio, Pickering first ventured into country music while in the U.S. Air Force in Thailand. Part of his job was to host a country music show on the USAF radio station.

Pickering says that is when he discovered what he had been missing "all those years."

"Where I grew up country music was not the least bit in fashion. If you listened to country music, you were not in," he reveals.

Since his enlightening discovery, Pickering has worked at several country music radio stations including KAOH WDSM in Duluth, Minnesota, and WAXU in Georgetown, Kentucky.

Pickering
2-2-2-2-2-2

His involvement in country music spurred him to become a member of the Country Music Association. As a member, Pickering is entitled to vote for country music artist awards, receive helpful information for country music disc jockeys and participate in contests among the disc jockey members.

"It's kind of a status thing," Pickering says, "and it's nice to be able to say I'm a member. It gives me credibility."

When asked what is so appealing about country music Pickering says, "Country music is more reflective of life than any other type of music."

He continued:

"It's a whole lot more real---stories about real people. It can be depressing if you're in a sad mood, but it reflects real life which isn't all peaches and cream."

Pickering's favorites include Hank Williams, Roy Acuff, and Johnny Cash. On the contemporary end, his favorites include T. G. Sheppard, Moe Bandy, Roseanne Cash, and Lacy J. Dalton.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Former U.S. Rep. Dan Kuykendall is coming to Morehead State University later this month to visit with students, faculty and interested members of the community.

Kuykendall served in the U.S. House of Representatives from 1966 to 1974, representing the 8th district of Tennessee. He served as a campaign consultant for the Reagan-Bush presidential campaign in 1980 and for the Reagan transition team.

He currently is serving as a consultant in congressional relations for professional groups and associations.

The visit, scheduled for Oct. 19-21, is funded through a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities, corporate sponsors and the Association of Former Members of Congress. The itinerary includes meetings with more than a half-dozen American history classes and two junior-senior history major seminars.

A reception for faculty and the public is set Wednesday, Oct. 21 at 10:20 a.m.

"The reception will provide a good opportunity for those who would like to meet Rep. Kuykendall," says Dr. Jack E. Bizzel, head of MSU's Department of Government and Public Affairs and the official host for the visit.

Additional information is available from Dr. Bizzel at (606) 783-2260.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- For Morehead State University students Amy Stamper and Colleen Bromagen, "hands-on experience" is what "makes all the classroom work become real."

Ms. Stamper, a medical assisting student from Columbus, Ohio, works 12 hours a week for a doctor in Flemingsburg.

As part of her work, the MSU junior prepares patients before the doctor sees them, takes their temperature and finds out what their symptoms are. After the examination, she gives medications and sets up x-rays and lab appointments, working closely with the doctor's medical assistant.

"Everything she does, we observe," Stamper says. "Sometimes we take the initiative, but she's always right there with us."

"Interning is what makes the program so worthwhile," she says, adding that she interned at St. Claire Medical Center in Morehead during the fall semester of 1980 and with the Flemingsburg doctor during the spring of 1981.

"I'll know what to expect once I get a job, but if I had only done classroom work, I wouldn't know this," she added. "The internship really puts the sparkle in the last two semesters."

Bromagen, a student nurse, has been working in community day care centers, kindergartens and pediatric offices this semester. As part of her training, she observes children as they play together, giving special attention to their growth and development.

Soon the Sharpsburg native will start working at St. Claire and will spend three weeks in pre-operative and post-operative care.

"My job will be to prepare patients, both psychologically and physically, for surgery," she says. "I'll tell them what to expect, get the papers signed, explain the details of the surgery to them by using diagrams and charts and prep them before they go into the operating room."

Another important part of her job will be to help prepare families for surgery and changes that may result. Afterward, she will provide supportive care, changing bandages and helping the patients get back on their feet.

After working in the pre- and post-operative wards, Ms. Bromagen will work with adults and then children.

"I've learned more in clinical experience than in any of my classes," she says. "It's the experience that makes a nurse."

Dr. Leroy Overstreet, head of MSU's Department of Allied Sciences, agrees. "The clinical experience gives students an opportunity to actually work with the day-to-day problems in health care. It gives them hands-on experience in the field they have been studying. It's invaluable because a student doesn't get the real feel of anything until he goes into the clinic."

The "Monthly Labor Review" has predicted that health care jobs will grow extremely fast during the 1980's, according to Dr. Overstreet.

"MSU hopes to add new health care programs to meet the growing health manpower needs of Eastern Kentucky," he concluded.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "The Political Tradition of Appalachian Kentucky" will be the subject of a public lecture by Gordon McKinney in Morehead State University's Reed Auditorium on Thursday, Oct. 15 at 8 p.m.

Second of a six-part series, "Our Mountain Heritage," sponsored by MSU's Appalachian Development Center, the lecture will focus upon the American myth of the isolated "ignorant, violent, and poor southern mountaineer," a myth consistently perpetuated by federal poverty programs, radio, television, and even by the "comic pages of daily newspapers," according to McKinney.

The lecture series is funded by a grant from the S & H Foundation Lectureship Program which was established in 1960 as part of the Sperry and Hutchinson Company's Program of Aid to Education.

The primary purpose of the series is to provide MSU students, faculty, and the general public with access to insight and understanding concerning the reality of the Appalachian heritage and experience.

Dr. McKinney is the author of a study of political developments in the Southern Appalachian mountains from the Civil War until the turn of the century.

He holds a doctorate in history from Northwestern University and currently is associate professor of history at Western Carolina University.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The afternoon sun was shining through the glass roof and falling upon the leaves of the exotic tropical plants as the woman walked through the greenhouse.

"Plants are a lot like we are," says Martha Norris. "They're sensitive to all the things we are. They don't have a soul, but there is definately something there."

Mrs. Norris should know. She has been working with plants since 1974 when she started teaching horticulture at Morehead State University. An associate professor of agriculture at MSU, Mrs. Norris reportedly was the first woman in Kentucky to get an agriculture degree and become a horticulturalist.

"Agriculture pushed women back as long as they could, until they just couldn't do anything about it any longer," she says.

When she attended her first summer meeting of state agriculture teachers at Harrodsburg in 1974, she was the only woman there.

"They didn't know what to do with me," she says, explaining that the meeting was held at a camp with cottages for overnight stay. Since two people share a cottage, Mrs. Norris had to stay in a motel and drive in each day for the meeting.

The next year she returned with a group of students---all female!

"They put us up in the lodge," she recalls. "Now when I go to the meeting, I stay in a cabin."

"I graduated from high school during the depression years, she explains, "and couldn't go to college. But I never lost the thought that I'd go to college someday. Once you get started learning, it's like eating peanuts. You just can't stop."

She continued:

"I was reared on a farm and while I was raising my children and working as an interior designer, I always knew that if I ever got to go back to school, I would study agriculture."

Mrs. Norris says the key to doing good work with plants is understanding them.

"I teach plant science in relation to our bodies because plants are so much like us. When students understand this, they take their work more seriously and take better care of the plants," she added.

Although it only takes two years to get a degree in Agricultural Science with a specialization in horticulture, she says many of her students take the two additional years of classes required for teacher certification.

At home, she is also surrounded by plants. Her white Spanish house has a court in the front filled with flowers, and skylights in the living room and the front hallway. Underneath the skylights sit big pots of ferns and a four-foot Jade plant.

Although she doesn't have a greenhouse at home, she does have a long concrete slab where her greenhouse will be someday.

"I just don't have time right now to take care of a greenhouse," she says. "But when I retire, I'm going to have one built. I'd like to have a skylight put in my bedroom, too."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Carefully spooning out and weighing a gram of finely crushed coal, Morehead State University seniors Sue Moore and Ed Southwood begin one of several tests conducted daily in MSU's Energy Research Laboratory.

The coal is a sample they picked up at an Elliott County mine, ground into a fine dust and are now going to test to learn coal analysis firsthand.

"The main purpose of the lab right now is to familiarize students with analysis, so they won't be at a loss when they get out on the job and somebody mentions BTU or ash content to them," says Sam Kumar, lab director and assistant professor of mining technology at MSU.

Moore and Southwood, originally from Breathitt County, worked over 100 hours in the lab last summer, earning credit and learning how to measure the burning and heating power, sulfur and ash content, and moisture of coal samples. This fall, they are doing some additional analysis under Kumar's guidance.

Over the summer, Kumar contacted area coal companies and arranged for the students to pick up samples and run analyses on them for comparison with each company's own test results.

Mining companies must know their coal's qualities and specifications to sell it to a buyer who, for example, needs a coal with a good heating quality but a low sulfur content.

When asked how they got interested in working with coal, Southwood smiles. Moore laughs, "When you grow up in Breathitt County, coal's all there is."

(more)

Moore, whose parents have since moved to Lexington, wants to work in a coal-related industry, perhaps in surveying or coal laboratory work.

Southwood says he'd like to work as a coal lab technician in a field lab, maybe back in Breathitt County.

"A lot of coal companies in Eastern Kentucky are beginning to set up field labs so they can test their coal there rather than send it off," he adds.

Few labs in Kentucky are equipped to run a complete analysis of coal, according to Kumar, although several mining companies have their own field labs to run a few tests.

"The equipment is very expensive for some tests, so companies have to contract their coal analysis," he notes.

"There are a lot of prospects now for coal lab technicians, especially with the field of synthetic fuels becoming important," Kumar says, adding that a lab technician needs not only a knowledge of the analysis equipment but a "strong background in chemistry."

Kumar hopes that MSU's lab soon will be used for coal and energy research. A grant proposal is being prepared in hopes of making it possible.

Kumar taught the first class in the new lab during the spring of 1981. The class is offered during the final semester of a student's two-year mining technology program. Prior to construction of the lab, which was funded through a gift from Ashland Oil, Inc., the class was taught in a regular classroom.

Sue Moore is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Moore of Lexington and Ed Southwood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Southwood of Clayhole, Breathitt County. Both already have received associate degrees in mining technology and now are doing further work as four-year industrial technology majors.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Mining Technology Program will exhibit Oct. 27-29 at the Coal Conference and Expo VI at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center in Louisville.

The theme of this year's exposition is "Dollar Saving Strategies for the Coal Industry." The event is sponsored by "Coal Age" magazine.

MSU's mining technology exhibit will feature films produced by MSU, including "Roof Control: Your Responsibility;" "The New Coal Miner;" and "Land for the Future."

"We will provide information about our curriculum and our associate degree program in mining technology, as well as explain our other coal and mining related programs such as reclamation technology," says Forrest Cameron, coordinator of MSU's Mining Technology Program.

"We are very fortunate to be able to participate in this exposition and conference," Cameron adds. "We at MSU feel we have something important to add to the coal industry, and being in Louisville will give the national and international coal community an opportunity to become familiar with our program."

Educators and students interested in attending the Coal Conference and Expo VI may obtain tickets by contacting Cameron at UPO 801, MSU, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone is (606) 783-5158.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- In 1975, the Morehead State University chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity was raising cane. Now they've given that up to get into the sauce.

The fraternity decided six years ago to use some of the land on its 22-acre farm to grow crops as a fund raiser.

They first tried sugar cane, which was processed into sorghum molasses.

But, because of problems with transportation and sale of the products, the SAE's converted their operation to bell peppers last year. The peppers are purchased and used in sauces by the Moody Dunbar Co.

The operation begins in May when the fraternity picks up the plants from the Dunbar pepper station in nearby Owingsville and, at the same time, signs a contract committing the crop to Dunbar.

"This year it took three days to set the plants out," says Barry Ellington, Clearfield sophomore. The members worked 12 hours a day using equipment loaned by local farmers, active members and alumni of SAE and the Campus Club, SAE's forerunner as MSU's oldest student organization.

Picking begins in August, not the best time for a college organization.

"During the summer it was a little discouraging at times," says Ellington. "We only had a handful of guys who lived here in the area who were available to work."

Now SAE's 51 members are in town spending two or three afternoons each week on the farm picking peppers. So far this year, they have picked over five tons of the red and green vegetables.

(more)

The SAE chapter earned about $3,500 from the 23 tons picked last year, according to the groups advisor, Martin Huffman. "All money earned is put back into the farm," Huffman said. "The members built a new house, replacing an old farmhouse on the property as their headquarters, and all-purpose room now is under construction. A dorm room addition also is planned."

"The best thing about the house is that every foot of concrete and every nail was put there by an SAE brother," says Ellington.

The SAEs also use their energy for the benefit of others, sponsoring about a dozen fund raisers each year. Past projects have included setting the world's record for stretcher carrying to raise money for the purchase of a special wheelchair for a local quadriplegic and manning the telephones for the Muscular Dystrophy Telethon this past Labor Day.

"Being in a fraternity isn't for everyone," says Huffman, "but it does provide a good outlet for those people who join to grow and develop leadership skills which cannot be developed anywhere else."

And, if you belong to SAE at Morehead State, you'll also learn how to grow peppers.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A prominent Pike County alumnus of Morehead State University has been appointed to the Board of Trustees of the MSU Foundation, Inc.

Selected for a three-year term was John B. DuPuy III, vice president and general manager of East Kentucky Beverage Co., Inc. A two-term president of the Pike County Chamber of Commerce, he also serves as president of the Pikeville Kiwanis Club.

The 35-year-old executive joined East Kentucky Beverage in 1973 as assistant to the president. He advanced to his current post a year later. The firm has bottling plants in Pikeville and Hazard and markets soft drinks throughout Eastern Kentucky.

DuPuy is a member of the Pikeville Methodist Church and a past president of the Kentucky Pepsi Cola Bottlers Association. He is a former band director at Campbell County High School.

"We are delighted to have John as a member of the foundation board and look forward to his continued service to the University," said MSU President Morris L. Norfleet. "He understands the special mission of the University to serve the people of Eastern Kentucky."

The MSU Foundation, Inc., is a non-profit, tax-exempt organization established in 1979 to receive and administer gifts to the University. It is governed by a 15-member Board of Trustees.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Two evenings of choral music will highlight the 1981 Morehead State University Choral Festival for High School Singers on Oct. 26 and 27.

MSU choral organizations--University Chorus, Chamber Singers, and Concert Choir--will perform Monday at 8:15 p.m.

The Festival Chorus, which includes high school vocalists from several different schools, is scheduled Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Larry D. Wyatt, choral director and coordinator of the vocal department at Loyola University in New Orleans, will direct various clinics for high school students during the two-day event.

The University Chorus, under the direction of Vasile Venettozzi, associate professor of music at MSU, will lead off the Oct. 26 program. Todd Spangler, Middlesboro junior, will accompany on organ and piano, with Angie Ratcliff, Martin senior, and Gene Ostenkamp, Cincinnati senior, assisting on violins.

Following the University Chorus will be the MSU Chamber Singers and Concert Choir directed by James Ross Beane, associate professor of music at MSU and director of choral studies. Debra Howe, Williamstown senior, will accompany the Chamber Singers and Concert Choir on piano, harpsichord and organ.

On Oct. 27, the Festival Chorus, directed by Wyatt and accompanied by Jay Flippin, associate professor of music at MSU, and Mary Nevin, Roswell, Ga. junior.

All performances in Duncan Recital Hall are free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD; Ky. --- Morehead State University's Board of Regents Monday night ratified a budget request of $11.7 million in new state funds for the 1982-84 biennium.

The request, adopted earlier by the board's executive committee, has been submitted to the Kentucky Council on Higher Education for review.

MSU Budget Director Porter Dailey said the proposed 22 percent increase in state general fund support would be used primarily to cope with inflation, increase faculty and staff salaries and supplement student financial aid programs being reduced at the federal level.

For the current fiscal year, MSU is receiving $18.3 million from the state general fund.

In other action, the Regents approved:

*Submission of an additional capital construction and equipment request totaling $1.3 million for a new campus telephone system and renovation of an auditorium.

*The constitution of the newly-organized MSU Parents Association as an affiliated organization.

*Development of plans for the reconstruction of a poultry house which was destroyed by fire last month at the university's agricultural complex. Costs would come from insurance proceeds.

*Various personnel changes, including the appointment of Dr. Walter G. Emge as academic vice president and Dr. Leroy Overstreet as department head in allied health sciences.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- How many kids want to be a detective when they grow up?

Dr. Victor Howard, professor of history at Morehead State University, wanted to be a detective, too, and his current work is not totally removed from his childhood dreams.

"Research is a lot like being a detective," says the Harlan native. "You have clues and hunches and, if based on knowledge and good instincts, they prove to be true about 50 percent of the time."

With many hours of research in the form of articles and book reviews printed in various periodicals, Howard's first book recently was accepted for publication by the University Press of Kentucky, the scholarly publishing consortium of 12 universities and colleges and two historical societies in Kentucky.

Dr. Howard's book, tentatively titled "Black Liberation and the Death of Slavery in Kentucky," is the result of more than 10 years of research in the libraries of numerous states.

The work examines the effects of the Civil War and Reconstruction on blacks and whites in Kentucky.

"The subject had never been treated before," says Dr. Howard. "Most of the publications available ignore blacks or just treat them as landscape, like trees. But blacks played an important part in the war."

He continued:

"I don't consider it black history. I consider it integrated history. It can't be separated."

(more)

Dr. Howard
2-2-2-2-2-2

Dr. Howard explains that the book is not Kentucky history, but is a treatment of a national problem within one state. He cites similar works by others in his field in Louisiana and Tennessee, describing his book as "a piece in the national jigsaw puzzle."

"In time, I hope there will be studies of this type in every state," he adds.

Although he has paid some of the research costs out of his own pocket, the American Philosophical Society and MSU have been instrumental in funding his efforts.

"This book could never have been done without their help," Dr. Howard says.

Dr. Howard has received several awards for his research, including the first Distinguished Researcher Award ever given at MSU, the Harry Pratt Memorial Award and the Robert Digges Conner Award.

He also is the lone remaining member of the founding publication board of the University Press of Kentucky.

Currently at work on two pieces concerning the impact of religion on politics and the law during the Civil War and Reconstruction, Dr. Howard divides his time equally.

"I never just work on one thing at a time," he says. "If I do all I have planned, I'll have to live to be 110 years old."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- More than 1,000 high school students are expected to attend the 10th annual World of Technology Day on Thursday, Nov. 5, under sponsorship of Morehead State University's School of Applied Sciences and Technology.

"World of Technology Day is a means of acquainting high school students with our school through a series of programs, exhibits and demonstrations," explains Sanford Hill, co-chairman of the event.

Activities will be designed to familiarize students from high schools in Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia with academic programs and facilities at MSU.

Tours of the campus greenhouse and the Energy Research Laboratory will be conducted. Other laboratories in Reed Hall and the Lloyd Cassity Building also will have various demonstrations.

"Each department will have its own projects to spotlight particular programs," Hill said.

The Department of Industrial Education and Technology, among other projects, will produce jump peg games as a cooperative effort.

"They'll go into the woods lab where they will be given a wooden, triangular blank," explains Hill. "Then each program will add something. For instance, in the metals lab, the holes will be drilled in the blank. Then they will go to the graphics lab, where the games will be screen-processed or hot-stamped with a design, and in the plastics lab, the pegs will be made. Finally, they will go to drafting, where they will be given the solution to the game."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- An audio fest of bat's wings, vampire screams and other macabre sounds awaits listeners this season as National Public Radio's NPR Playhouse presents a classic thriller, "Dracula."

The 90-minute Halloween special, produced by the National Radio Theater of Chicago, will be aired on WMKY, public radio from Morehead State University on Saturday, Oct. 31, at 10:30 p.m.

Since it was first published in 1897, there have been some 20 film versions of Bram Stoker's "Dracula," three stage plays and several radio versions including one with Orson Welles. The National Radio Theater's version is faithful to the original, portraying the infamous Count from Transylvania Mountain.

Dracula took three months to complete, due to the painstaking efforts of producer-director Yuri Rasovsky.

"The hardest part was finding sound equivalents for all the fangs, stakes-through-the-heart and animalistic transformations that horror fans have come to expect and relish," says Rasovsky.

Some of the techniques Rasovsky used to create the desired sounds are eerie enough in themselves: biting into a raw chicken breast for a vampire's jugular repast, a coat sleeve being yanked for flapping bat's wings, the sucking of a lemon for the bat's squeal, a mallet striking a wood block and a piece of crinkled cellophane representing the demise of the vampire and the crushing of his ribs.

(more)

Halloween Special
2-2-2-2-2-2-2-2

Rasovsky's productions move considerably faster than the 1940-style radio dramas that undoubtedly served as NRT's inspirations.

Rasovsky puts it, "In the 1940's, you at least had a fancy-looking radio to look at." His advice: "Listen to this program either flat on your back in bed, or while driving."

This program is made possible in part by grants from the National Endowment for the Arts and Illinois Arts Council.

Rowan County High School's football game with Lewis County on Friday, Oct. 30, will be played at Morehead State University's Jayne Stadium.

The change was announced in a joint statement issued by RCHS Principal Marvin Moore and MSU Athletic Director G. E. (Sonny) Moran. Kickoff time is 8 p.m. for the regular season game, originally scheduled at the RCHS Field.

"We are pleased to report that details have been worked out for the game to be played at Jayne Stadium," Moore and Moran stated. "We anticipate that this will be the first of several cooperative ventures involving the athletic programs of our institutions."

RCHS will retain gate and concession revenues and will reimburse MSU for utility costs, according to the announcement.

It will be the first Viking football game to be played at MSU since 1975 and the first night game at Jayne Stadium since 1978.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Walter G. Emge, formerly of Lexington, has been appointed vice president for academic affairs at Morehead State University.

A native of Evansville, Ind., he previously served five years as vice president and dean of the college of Transylvania University in Lexington. Earlier, he was assistant to the provost and assistant dean of Trinity College of Arts and Sciences at Duke University and a faculty member at Boston University.

Dr. Emge has a doctoral degree from Yale University, a master's from the University of Toronto and a bachelor's from Bellarmine College.

"We are pleased to have such an experienced academic administrator with Kentucky ties in this important position," said MSU President Morris L. Norfleet. "Dr. Emge has an outstanding record of teaching, research and service and excellent academic credentials."

Dr. Norfleet said the new chief academic officer was selected from nearly 100 applicants. He succeeds Dr. William F. White who is now a full-time faculty member.

Dr. Emge is a former editor of "The Philosophical Forum" and former managing editor of "The Review of Metaphysics." He is the son of Mrs. Richard Emge of Evansville.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University President Morris L. Norfleet has announced the appointment of William H. Redwine, formerly of Sandy Hook, as university development officer.

A 1979 graduate of MSU, Redwine had been serving as an instructor/counselor with the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program (EKCEP).

"We are confident that Bill will be an asset to our fund raising program and that he and other members of our development staff will continue to build on last year's excellent record," said Dr. Norfleet.

Redwine, 24, will be primarily responsible for raising private funds in support of university activities which are not related to athletics.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Redwine of Sandy Hook and is married to the former Susette Dalton of Dayton, Ohio, who is MSU's associate director of student activities and organizations.

Redwine is a shriner and a member of Sigma Nu fraternity. He was selected in 1980 for inclusion in "Outstanding Young Men of America."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A Morehead State University faculty member has been recognized for "faithful service" to Pi Gamma Mu, the international honor society in social science.

Margaret Patton, associate professor of sociology, founded the MSU chapter of the honor society which "encourages excellence in the social sciences among undergraduates and graduate students." She has been a member of the MSU faculty since 1960.

Since the local chapter was chartered 12 years ago, 328 members have been initiated. The chapter also has appeared several times on Pi Gamma Mu's Roll of Merit and Roll of Distinction.

"Good faculty officers like Margaret Patton are of primary importance in an effective chapter of Pi Gamma Mu," said Scott D. Johnston, international president of the society.

Patton holds a national office in the society, serving as chancellor of the four-state Central Region since 1977.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- If you are on a bus somewhere between Alabama and Kentucky and find the script of a very funny play, call Bill Callihan.

Callihan, a Morehead State University senior from Olive Hill, lost the first draft of his latest play, "Rigor Mortis," but, he says, "It may have been a really good thing."

After working on the play all summer, he lost it on his trip home and rewrote the play in just two weeks.

"The parts I wanted to keep I remembered and the parts I couldn't remember probably weren't any good anyway," says the 21-year-old speech and theatre major.

"Rigor Mortis" was the second play Callihan has had produced at MSU out of six he has written. The other, a comedy called "Dodge the Alligators," was presented in a series of one acts last year.

Comedy is a natural vehicle for Callihan.

"I can say what I want to say a lot better through comedy. When you get an audience laughing, whether they realize it or not, you've got'em."

Callihan has only been writing seriously for about two years. Previously, he concentrated on his first love, acting.

"I've always been a ham," he admits.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Callihan of Olive Hill, he came to MSU because of its proximity and the diversity that students develop in the theatre program.

(more)

Callihan
2-2-2-2-2-2

He has appeared in several plays during his four years at MSU and also has helped behind the scenes. This year he will appear in "The Importance of Being Earnest" Dec. 2-5 and operated lighting for  "Hansel and Gretel" Oct. 23 through 25.

His well-rounded background in theatre enabled Callihan to land a job as an actor/technician with the touring Children's Musical Theatre in Mobile, Ala., the past two summers.

"We were totally self-contained," says Callhan. "The neat thing was that we could set up anywhere."

The troupe performed in city and state parks throughout Georgia, Alabama and West Florida.

Now, however, Callihan is dividing his time between acting and writing.

"I might as well be in two professions where it's hard to make money as in one," he says with a grin.

After graduation from MSU, Callihan plans to attend graduate school in theatre.

"Grad school will be a good time for me to define my talents," he says, adding "I will always find time to write."

As for losing scripts on buses, Callihan says reconstructing his rewrite from memory worked out very well.

"After I make the first draft of my next play, I might just destroy it."

RICHMOND, Ky. --- Administrators of Eastern Kentucky University and Morehead State University met here Friday to explore areas of continued and expanded cooperation between the two institutions.

In a joint statement, EKU President J. C. Powell and MSU President Morris L. Norfleet said that the purpose of the meeting was "to help determine where increased cooperation will help maintain the levels of academic quality and service in our two universities."

The two presidents, along with EKU's Administrative Council and MSU's Cabinet, examined several areas which could serve the needs of the two institutions during times of "decreased state funding for higher education, and in the face of a proposed funding plan that would further erode the financial support for Eastern and Morehead State."

The latter reference was to a recommendation that will be presented to the Council on Higher Education by the Council staff on Nov. 12. The recommendation, which addresses funding for Kentucky universities for 1982-84, has been described as a proposal for the reallocation of state support.

The joint statement released by Presidents Powell and Norfleet said:

"Today's meeting between representatives of Eastern Kentucky University and Morehead State University was designed to help determine where greater cooperation will help maintain the levels of academic quality and service in our two universities as well as other public and private institutions."

(more)

"This conference came following decreased state funding for higher education, and in the face of a proposed funding plan that would further erode the financial support for Eastern and Morehead State."

"We believe that the first aim of the Council on Higher Education should be to achieve increased funding for public higher education. The primary function of instruction should receive priority in allocation of these funds with improvement of faculty and staff salaries and meeting the impact of inflation as objectives."

"We have looked at the meeting as a forum to examine means to use available funds to better advantage. It would be our goal to extend and maintain the services of the respective institutions through closer cooperation while, at the same time, preserving the individual autonomy of Eastern Kentucky University and Morehead State University."

Some of the areas of cooperation discussed included joint efforts in scheduling lecturers, concerts and other performing artists to help prevent increases in costs to students for those programs; the granting of academic credit by both institutions for extended campus classes in which they cooperate; sharing of television programming, library resources and facilities; repair of instructional equipment and the use of certain natural areas by both institutions.

The administrators also planned for expanded cooperation in such areas as travel, alumni activities, data processing, research equipment and job placement where there have been previous mutual efforts. In addition, the two institutions pledged continued mutual cooperation with business and industry in maintaining relevance of academic programs and services.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Coal is in the news and predictions are that it will stay in the news for years to come. Historically, labor-management relations often have dominated news of the coalfields of Appalachia.

Possible trouble from within the "rank and file" union membership and the reports of miners and operators working together for a common cause are indicators of significant change in the social and economic atmosphere of the East Kentucky coalfields over the past 50 years. It provides a new perspective for East Kentuckians to look at the history of the UMWA's notorious 1930's struggle to organize the Harlan County coalfields.

The Harlan County struggle has been described by historians as "one of the most bitter labor-management conflicts in the nation's history" and won the county the title of "Bloody Harlan". As with any social struggle involving violence on a large scale, historical fact was destined to become intermingled with exaggerations, half truths and plain old wistful thinking.

The Harlan County story may have remained forever in the realm of myth had it not been rescued by the painstaking research of Dr. John W. Heavener. In 1978, the University of Illinois Press published Dr. Heavener's "Which Side Are You On? The Harlan County Coal Miners, 1931-39."

This scholarly work recounts the bloody, violent days of the dramatic decade during which 13 people died, as union miners and operators battled for dominance in the coalfields. It is the first booklength study attempting to separate myth from fact.

Dr. Heavener, a native of West Virginia, has a longstanding interest in the Appalachian coalfield labor movement. His doctoral dissertation was entitled "A New Deal for Harlan: The Roosevelt Labor Policies in a Kentucky Coal Field, 1931-39." He has been contributing editor to the "Biographical Dictionary of American Labor Leaders" which includes 37 of his brief biographies of mine-and-machine-worker labor leaders. He currently is an associate professor of history at Ohio State University.

"Labor Conflict in Appalachian Kentucky" is the subject of a public lecture to be presented by Dr. Heavener in Morehead State University's Reed Auditorium on Thursday, Nov. 12, at 8 p.m.

The lecture will be the third of a six-part series, "Our Mountain Heritage," sponsored by MSU's Appalachian Development Center. The programs are funded by a grant from the S & H Foundation Lectureship, established in 1960 as part of the Sperry and Hutchinson Company's Program of Aid to Education.

The primary purpose of the series is to provide MSU students, faculty and the general public with access to insight and understanding concerning the reality of the Appalachian heritage and experience.

The lectures are free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Michael Davis, dean of the School of Education at Morehead State University, has been named chairman of MSU's Teacher Education Council.

The 16-member group is the governing body for all of the University teacher education programs.

"Members of the Council must periodically review each teacher education program to make certain that we are meeting accreditation standards of the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE) and the Kentucky Department of Education," according to Dr. Davis.

The council consists of teacher educators from each of MSU's six schools, as well as education practitioners from the public schools.

"We are charged with reviewing policies of admission to teacher education programs, retention, exit assessments and follow-up studies of graduates of our programs," Dr. Davis added.

In addition, he reported that the council plans to draw up a new teacher education model for each program.

"We need to isolate what everyone must take to be a professional teacher, with no omissions or duplications," Dr. Davis continues, "With this, we can begin to turn teaching into a profession." x

-- (more)

MSU personnel on the Council include Dr. John Payne, coordinator of professional laboratory experiences; Dr. Joe Bendixen, professor of agriculture; Dr. Louise Hickman, head of the Department of Information Sciences; Dr. Ron Mersky, associate professor of education; Dr. Larry Griesinger, professor of education; James D. Reeder, education; Harlen Hamm, coordinator of speech; Dr. William R. Falls, coordinator of the Center for Science Education; Dr. Don Flatt, head of the Department of History; and Jerry Franklin, assistant professor of education and teacher certification officer.

Other members are Mrs. Billie Jean Clayton, director of pupil personnel, Rowan County Schools; Mattie Wilson, teacher at Earle D. Jones Elementary School, Maysville; and Brice Thornbury, secondary teacher at Catlettsburg Junior High School.

MSU students on the Council are Joel Clifford, Reading, Ohio, seniör, and Kermie Hodge, Morehead senior.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Adoption of a new funding plan for higher education will make "official stepchildren" of the state's regional universities, according to Morehead State University President Morris L. Norfleet.

Budget recommendations to be considered by the Council on Higher Education on Nov. 12 are "extremely untimely and unwise," the MSU chief executive told two meetings of faculty and staff members here Friday.

Dr. Norfleet said approval of the plan proposed by the CHE staff would enhance the state's two largest universities at the expense of the other six.

"The new budgetary approach appears to be an attempt to make satellites of the regional universities and I don't believe the people of Kentucky will buy such a bill of goods," Dr. Norfleet said. "These recommendations already have caused divisions between the institutions and the Council staff at a time when higher education should have a united front in support of its legitimate funding needs."

"Make no mistake about what all of this means to you," he continued. "Approval of the recommendations will support the apparent premise among Council staff members that the teaching missions of regional universities are less important than the research and service activities of other state institutions." If and when that occurs, regional universities will have become the official stepchildren of higher education in our state."

(more)

Dr. Norfleet also questioned the Council staff for recommending reallocation of new general fund dollars at a time when the eight universities have not yet recovered from "painful" budget cuts.

"Public higher education in Kentucky is greatly underfunded and rectifying this serious situation should be the primary focus of the 1982-84 biennial budget process," he stated. "Instead, we are faced with a proposal which substantially reduces the level of general fund support for regional institutions and markedly increases the support of two other universities."

Concerning recommended tuition increases of 15 percent in each year of the biennium, Dr. Norfleet said:

"It is regrettable that the Council staff is urging our state to join the federal government in turnings its back to the financial needs of Kentucky's college students. This cruel combination of higher tuition and reduced student aid could close the doors of educational opportunity to many of our current and future students."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Frankfort attorney Edward F. Prichard Jr., chairman of the blue ribbon committee which recently released the "Prichard Report" on Kentucky higher education, is coming to Morehead State University on Monday, Nov. 16, to discuss the impact of the 197-page document.

Scheduled at 1:50 p.m. in the Crager Room of the University Center, Prichard's appearance will be the first event in a six-part symposium titled "Kentucky Higher Education in the 80's -- The Promise of Renewal or The Politics of Retrenchment?"

The programs are free and open to the public under sponsorship of MSU's Division of Public Affairs.

"We are delighted to have Mr. Prichard open the symposium with his personal perspective on the 17 months of deliberations by his committee and the recommendations which touch all aspects of higher education in this state," said MSU President Morris L. Norfleet. "Mr. Prichard is recognized as our state's foremost layman in public higher education and we are honored with his acceptance."

Dr. Norfleet also announced that Lexington attorney William H. McCann, current chairman of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education, will be featured in the symposium on Wednesday, Dec. 9, at 3 p.m. He will discuss the role of the CHE, Kentucky's statewide coordinating agency for higher education.

Other programs will examine institutional autonomy, financing of higher education, student financial aid and state and federal legislative issues.

(more)

"These programs are intended to provide opportunity for all segments of the higher education community and the general public to gain insight into the problems and potential of our higher education system in this decade and beyond," Dr. Norfleet said in announcing the symposium. "We are faced with critical issues which never existed before in Kentucky and the decisions to be made on the state and federal level in the next several months will chart the course of higher education well into the next century."

Dr. Norfleet said the format of each program would consist of a presentation by the featured speaker and a question-and-answer session involving the audience.

Travel and other costs related to the symposium will be financed through a gift to the University from the MSU Foundation, Inc., according to Keith Kappes, MSU's director of public affairs, who is coordinating the programs.

"We hope to publish the proceedings of the symposium and make them available to interested persons at little or no cost, depending on available resources," Kappes added.

Details of the other four programs will be released soon, he said.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Tim Siegel, Morehead State University's 1981-82 "Fighting Eagle" mascot, is no stranger to the school spirit business.

Siegel was dressed as a swashbuckling pirate last year at West Carrollton High School in West Carrollton, Ohio.

"I just acted nutty," the freshman pre-med major says. "I used to make paper dummies of our opponents and stab and slice them up with my sword."

As MSU's Eagle, Siegel will be hamming it up on the sidelines at all home football and basketball games, performing routines with the cheerleaders and flying across the 50-yard line as the MSU Marching Band booms out the fight song.

Dressed in the large white head, oversized beak and long, flopping tailfeathers which make up the 14-pound Eagle costume, Siegel will be eliciting support for the MSU sports teams from the home crowd.

In the 13 years since MSU's first mascot took the field, the men beneath the bulky costume have had various personal performance styles. Some have flapped their wings high and low, others have kicked their heels, and a few have made major productions out of salutes. Siegel says his individual style of "eagling" will probably develop early in the season.

"I feel honored to be chosen," says Siegel, adding with a laugh that a major qualification in the mascot tryouts was "how goofy you could act."

Physical stamina, knowledge of music, ingenuity of performance and dependability are also considered in the choice of the "mascot man."

Siegel has a lot of experience being out in front of large crowds. As a high school student, he participated in theatre and was a member of the cheerleading squad, in addition to performing antics as the school mascot in his senior year.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Despite the importance of economics in everyday life, a majority of Americans are "economically illiterate," according to Green Miller, director of Morehead State University's Center for Economic Education (CEE).

Miller, an assistant professor of economics, is working through the CEE to improve economic understanding in Eastern Kentucky.

"Each of us makes economic decisions everyday," Miller says. "And whether we understand them or not, these decisions influence our lives."

He maintains that most people go straight from high school to work with no economic education and, as a result, are ill-prepared for making the decisions facing them daily. But college graduates are in the same situation because economics is not a required course and few students choose it as an elective.

"What this means is that leaders in business and labor are making decisions everyday that affect our lives, yet many don't have an elementary understanding of economics," explains Miller.

Miller, director of the MSU center since 1979, believes that economics should be taught during elementary and high school years.

"But most teachers," he adds "have a limited understanding of economic principles. Add to this the lack of suitable classroom materials and you have a situation where good economic education is impossible."

The Kentucky Council on Economic Education was created in 1967 to train teachers in the teaching of economics and to make available a wide variety of curriculum materials.

Operating through centers at seven universities in the state, the non-profit educational organization hopes to create a learning environment where, through high school education, young people can gain an understanding of the major economic issues they will be facing.

At MSU, with funds from KCEE and gifts from various sources, the center provides economic education and teaching materials for teachers, conducts workshops and teacher in-service days for schools throughout Eastern Kentucky, maintains a speakers bureau and participates in career days at schools in the region.

The center awards more than 45 grants to teachers each year to allow them to attend workshops at no personal cost.

"Economic education is essential to everyone," Miller concludes, "and this realization by the public will improve the quality of our education."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. C. Louise Caudill of Morehead has been named national chairperson of Morehead State University's 1981-82 Annual Giving Campaign.

In announcing the appointment, MSU President Morris L. Norfleet described the Morehead physician as "a person of the highest integrity with a lifelong record of dedicated service to the people of Eastern Kentucky."

"We are privileged to have Dr. Caudill's strong leadership in this year's campaign," Dr. Norfleet added. "Her wholehearted support of our institution and her success as a manager of volunteer efforts make her well prepared to provide direction to our fund raising program."

A native of Morehead and an MSU alumnus, including an honorary doctoral degree, Dr. Caudill has been practicing medicine in Morehead since 1948. She served nine years on the MSU faculty, including the directorship of women's physical education.

She holds a master's degree from Columbia University and the doctorate in medicine from the University of Louisville.

Dr. Caudill spearheaded the drive to establish a hospital in Morehead and St. Claire Medical Center was named in her honor when it opened in 1963. She was selected in 1979 as Kentucky's "Woman of the Year."

In addition to being active in various medical and civic organizations, Dr. Caudill served eight years on the Kentucky Council on Higher Education. She has been president of the Peoples Bank of Sandy Hook since 1968.

"It is my hope that we can convince others who love and appreciate Morehead State University that private gifts are needed now more than ever," Dr. Caudill said of her appointment. "Recent changes in state budgeting procedures and reductions in state

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Edward F. Prichard Monday termed the financial situation of Kentucky's higher education as "critical and a season of anxiety" at a public symposium at Morehead State University.

Prichard, chairman of the Governor's Committee on Higher Education in Kentucky's Future which authored the "Prichard Report," said that recent budget cuts had cut into "muscle, bone and had drawn blood."

"We feel that this must be turned around. It is critically necessary and vitally important that this be done," Prichard said.

He encouraged Kentucky's colleges and universities to hang together in the fight for adequate dollars, adding that "now is the time for unity."

"But, there is no way to deal with the needs of higher education unless we're ready at this time to deal with two dirty little words -- revenue and taxation. There is no way to slice this pie thin enough to take care of the needs of higher education and the other needs of state government."

In addressing the thrust of the report, Prichard said that the byword for higher education in the next decade will not be as it was.

"It will not be, as in previous decades, growth - growth - growth. But rather quality and excellence."

Prichard also stated the need for Kentucky's colleges and universities to prepare for an influx of non-traditional aged students who will have a different set of needs.

(more)

On the question of revised admission standards, Prichard said the committee felt there was a great burden on colleges and universities because of inadequate preparation of students for college work.

Prichard's visit was one in a six-part symposium being held at MSU during the next month, entitled "Kentucky Higher Education in the '80's: The Promise of Renewal or the Politics of Retrenchment."

The symposium continues on Monday, Nov. 23, when Dr. J.C. Powell, president of Eastern Kentucky University will address "Institutional Autonomy" at 3 p.m. in the Crager Room of the Adron Doran University Center.

All programs in the symposium are free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Department of Art may be receiving the next best thing to an airplane ticket to Taiwan.

Dr. Bill Booth, head of the department, has acquired a collection of Chinese art replicas for MSU's permanent collection.

The University is expected to receive the collection, valued at $50,000, next spring after it is exhibited in New York City, according to Dr. Booth.

The 54 pieces include bronze porcelains, manuscripts, landscapes and scroll paintings which are exact duplicates of art works stored at the National Palace Museum in Taiwan. The collection spans 3,000 years of Chinese history.

While in Taiwan recently on a research mission, Dr. Booth scheduled the collection for exhibition in New York and then requested that MSU be considered for a gift of the collection.

"They agreed to give it to us and let us send it on exhibits," Dr. Booth said. "Their main concern is that the collection be widely exhibited in our country."

"The exhibit will be on campus for a short period of time in late April and then travel across the country," he added. "The museum is paying to have the collection shipped here."

Because MSU's Claypool-Young Art Gallery is already booked for exhibits throughout April, the Chinese collection will be here for only a few days following its April 2-9 showing at the National Art Education Conference in New York City.

(more)

Dr. Booth says he does not yet have an exact date for the collection's arrival at MSU.

Richard Wang, curator of exhibitions at the Taiwan museum, will travel to Morehead with the collection and make a formal presentation to MSU. Wang will also present a lecture on the history of the National Palace Museum.

In addition to the collection, Dr. Booth also received a grant from the Pacific Cultural Foundation (PCF) in Taiwan to set up a Chinese Art and reference materials center in the art department. The center will include books, slides, and other research material Dr. Booth acquired during his trip.

"The research center will give students the opportunity to study Chinese art independently," said Dr. Booth, adding that any MSU student will be allowed to use the materials.

PCF financed Booth's trip to Taiwan enabling him to study art at the National Palace Museum and to attend an international art symposium where he lectured on Oriental influences on Western art.

As an art historian, Dr. Booth describes the museum as the "national treasury" of Taiwan, containing over 600,000 objects which were brought to Nationalist China from mainland China, now the People's Republic, in 1949.

"The National Palace Museum is the repository of cultural history for an entire people for the past 3,000 years," says Dr. Booth. "Through the exhibitions of the 54-piece collection, we can convey a better understanding of the cultural and artistic richness of China."

"It's what I call a Catch 22--no job without experience and no experience without a job. This gets your foot in the door," Ms. Fannin adds.

Most students come out of RCOI with valuable experience in an unskilled position but Layne will enter the job market with a skill.

"Jeff is a press operator. He can make plates, cut paper, print a job, package it, take care of the paperwork and get it out the door," says his supervisor, David Miller, MSU's printing production supervisor.

Dana Trent and Tammy Thomas, 16-year-old juniors at RCHS, also are working on the MSU campus through RCOI.

Trent wants to go to college "for sure" but hasn't yet chosen a career.

"I've had a hard time deciding what I want to do, so I want to get some experience in different areas," says Trent, who is working in the University Store this semester.

Thomas is working in MSU's Office of Photographic Services. She pursued the position as a darkroom technician because she "likes to take pictures." But she feels she has gotten more than darkroom experience through RCOI.

"I'm more responsible now," she says, "more willing to do things on my own, instead of having someone tell me to do it."

Does the program make a difference?

Billie Jean Clayton, director of pupil personnel for the Rowan County Schools, believes in numbers. Since the program began, the county's dropout rate has dropped 13 percent.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Are Kentucky's state universities fighting a losing battle with state and federal regulations and the widening authority of the Council on Higher Education?

Eastern Kentucky University President J. C. Powell will be the speaker on Monday, Nov. 23, when institutional autonomy is the featured topic in Morehead State University's six-part symposium on the future of public higher education in Kentucky.

The 3 p.m. program in the Crager Room of the Adron Doran University Center is free and open to the public. The symposium is entitled "Kentucky Higher Education in the 80's: The Promise of Renewal or the Politics of Retrenchment?" Other programs include Nov. 30, Financing Higher Education; Dec. 2, Student Financial Aid; Dec. 9, The Role of the Council on Higher Education; and Dec. 10, Higher Education Legislative Issues.

The symposium opened with a presentation by Frankfort attorney Edward F. Prichard Jr. on "The Prichard Report," a series of higher education recommendations from a blue ribbon citizens committee.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- No matter how much a librarian helps with research, he or she seldom gets kissed for the effort.

But that's exactly what happened to LOIS, the new computer-based search system adopted by Morehead State University's Camden-Carroll Library.

"One patron saved so much time and got so much more information than he had expected that he actually kissed LOIS," says Helen Williams, one of six MSU librarians trained to run the system.

LOIS, which represents "Library Online Information Services," can search over 50 data bases for the sources and abstracts needed to start research projects.

"LOIS saves a tremendous amount of time," Ms. Williams explains. "It allows the researcher to spend time on the actual research instead of spending hours finding sources."

Another advantage is the computer's capability to search for a specific topic which may have citations under several different headings.

LOIS can also be restricted to finding information in a specific language, such as German, or for a certain year, month or day.

The system has revealed many new sources for researchers and, as a result, has increased inter-library loan requests dramatically.

"This eventually will result in changes in inter-library loan policies and procedures," predicts Ms. Williams, a native of Morgan County.

By FANNIE GRIDER
MSU Student Journalist

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- College students, like other people, occasionally experience personal problems and, when that happens at Morehead State University, there always is someone willing to listen.

A network of trained counselors is available to help students deal with anything from a quarrel with a roommate to serious therapeutic problems.

Dr. Stephen Taylor, MSU's director of Counseling, Testing and Evaluations Services explains that the University has four levels of counseling. Available in the residence halls are peer counselors, better known as "resident assistants."

On call 24 hours a day, the "RA's" are advanced students who "have an open ear and know how to listen well," according to Dr. Taylor. "They are trained to counsel other students because it is often easier to talk with someone your own age," he said.

A more formal counseling relationship exists between students and their academic advisors who help with class scheduling, career planning and job opportunities.

"A student can expect a commitment from his or her advisor who usually is willing to talk about any kind of problem, not just academics." Dr. Taylor adds "and if the advisor can't solve the problem, the student will be referred to either Special Services or the University Counseling Center."

(more)

Student Counseling

Betty Moran, MSU's coordinator of special services, says that program is designed to "assist students with problems which interfere with classroom performance."

Staffed with professional counselors, Special Services deals with personal, social and academic problems. Also available are learning and writing labs for students experiencing difficulty in English composition. Tutoring is offered in several academic areas and study skills and career planning classes also are offered.

Emotional and therapeutic problems are handled by the University Counseling Center which is staffed by two psychologists. One of them, Mr. Larry Bart, says they see more than 50 students each week, many with anxiety or suffering from stress.

"Any college campus is stressful in the beginning because people are in a new environment without familiar faces and with no best friend yet to talk with," he explains.

"But any student with a problem should feel free to come to us," Mr. Bart said. "We can sit down, have a cup of coffee and talk things out until we reach a solution."

A major difference between manual research and use of LOIS is that using the computer system costs $1 per minute, with a minimum cost of $5 to the user.

"It's a tradeoff, time for money," Ms. Williams explains. "When someone comes in for a search, I make it clear that they can do the same thing manually. But in our fast paced world, people are willing to spend the money."

"It was worth it for me," says Maysville graduate student Susan Clarke. "My subject has such a limited scope that it is difficult to find existing information."

Before a search begins, the researcher spends up to an hour with the librarian to pinpoint the subject.

"We want to be as specific as possible so we do not have to be online for that entire hour," Ms. Williams says.

More than 60 students, faculty members and local citizens have used the system since its installation last August and Ms. Williams sees great things for the future.

"There is a changing clientele here," says Ms. Williams. "The students today demand accountability from the faculty and librarians and we better know what we're doing when we help them. The concept of a library as a place that hoards books just doesn't fit anymore."

Additional information about LOIS is available from Helen Williams at MSU, Camden-Carroll Library, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone is (606) 783-4797.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Eastern Kentucky University President J. C. Powell warned here Monday that the state's public universities "must jealously guard those matters of institutional autonomy which affect teaching and learning processes" against the encroachment of external forces.

Dr. Powell also told a higher education symposium at Morehead State University that the state's public institutions "should always be vigilant in protecting the opportunity for a good, sound college education."

The ECU chief executive identified the staff of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education as among those involved in "creeping intrusions" into the internal affairs of the institutions, particularly through the agency's statutory authority for review of academic programs and budgets.

"The (CHE) staff gets awfully concerned about faculty qualifications, where you are going to get the money to handle these things, about course sequences, about curricular matters that I think are none of their business," said Dr. Powell, ECU's president since 1976. He said that the actual Council membership "had not intentionally infringed" on the institutions but that the staff had, in certain instances "gone beyond what I think the legislature intended for them to do."

Asked if the controversial budget recommendations recently approved by the CHE would be adopted by the General Assembly over the objections of the regional universities, Dr. Powell replied, in part:

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Eastern Kentucky University President J. C. Powell warned here Monday that the state's public universities "must jealously guard those matters of institutional autonomy which affect teaching and learning processes" against the encroachment of external forces.

Dr. Powell also told a higher education symposium at Morehead State University that the state's public institutions "should always be vigilant in protecting the opportunity for a good, sound college education."

The EKU chief executive identified the staff of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education as among those involved in "creeping intrusions" into the internal affairs of the institutions, particularly through the agency's statutory authority for review of academic programs and budgets.

"The (CHE) staff gets awfully concerned about faculty qualifications, where you are going to get the money to handle these things, about course sequences, about curricular matters that I think are none of their business," said Dr. Powell, EKU's president since 1976. He said that the actual Council membership "had not intentionally infringed" on the institutions but that the staff had, in certain instances "gone beyond what I think the legislature intended for them to do."

Asked if the controversial budget recommendations recently approved by the CHE would be adopted by the General Assembly over the objections of the regional universities, Dr. Powell replied, in part:

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "The Importance of Being Earnest," the second production of Morehead State University's 1981-82 theatre season, opens Wednesday, Dec. 2, at 8 p.m. in Kibbey Theatre.

First presented in 1895, the Oscar Wilde play is a comic poke at society and Victorian values.

Its witty plot ignites a misunderstanding over the name "Earnest" and the theme satirizes hypocrisy and the Victorian notion of earnestness.

The cast includes David Hereford, Louisville sophomore, as Jack; Gwendolyn R. Gardner, Lebanon, Ohio junior, as Gwendolyn; Jackie Wayne Salley, Hazard junior as Algy; and Tammy L. Blankenship, Russell junior, as Cecily.

D. Scott Cooper, Independence senior, is directing the production.

"The Importance of Being Earnest" is scheduled through Dec. 5.

Ticket information and reservations are available from the MSU theatre box office at (606) 783-2170.

Cash, property and pledges totaling more than $179,000 were received last Saturday as Morehead State University launched its 1981-82 Annual Giving Campaign.

Dr. C. Louise Caudill, Morehead physician and campaign chairperson, described the initial response as "a tremendous beginning."

In her challenge to nearly 100 volunteers at the Kickoff Brunch, Dr. Caudill called on those who support the University to "give and give and cause others to give."

"This is no time to be bashful about talking money," Dr. Caudill said. "The University does not have the state support it needs and we must help make up the difference. Every person in this region needs the university and the university needs us. It is time to stand up and be counted."

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet announced that the campaign would give special attention to building the University's student aid endowment to finance scholarships and work-study programs.

"The University has lost nearly $2 million in state budget cuts and we obviously have many pressing financial needs," he stated. "Our most critical need is to improve our ability to counter the reductions in federal student aid programs. We must have more resources for scholarships if this is to continue to be an institution of opportunity for the people of Eastern Kentucky."

(more)

Of the total given and pledged, about $67,000 went into the Eagle Athletic Fund to support intercollegiate athletics. Student financial aid received more than $33,000. Nearly $32,000 was committed to the University's greatest needs and $20,000 will go to support programs in the Department of Agriculture.

"We are most grateful for these gifts and pledges and for the others to be received during this campaign," Dr. Norfleet said. "And we are especially thankful for the dedication, hard work and generosity of our volunteers."

The largest single gift received at the brunch was $20,000 from Ashland Oil, Inc., for greatest needs. Several friends of MSU's agriculture program combined their gifts totaling $20,000 in livestock and farm equipment.

Scholarship gifts of varying amounts totaling $14,000 were presented by Dr. Ron Walke, chairman of MSU's Scholarship Committee. The funds came from individuals, families and businesses.

Instructional equipment valued at $11,000 was given by Tri-State Testing Co. of Ashland and the E. O. Robinson Mountain Fund of Berea contributed $8,800 for scholarships and research.

Robert Nally of Louisville gave $5,625 in art works to be sold for greatest needs. Kentucky Publishing Co. of Morehead donated $5,000 for journalism scholarships, athletics and greatest needs.

Gifts from the Pyramid Society of Lexington and the Morehead Art Students League totaled $4,163 for art scholarships. Faculty members, students and parents involved in music at MSU gave $3,400 to benefit memorial scholarships in honor of the late Mary L. Albers, Dr. Helen Fulbright and Richard Thier.

(more)

C. Roger Lewis and sons contributed $2,300. Woody May, Allen's IGA and the MSU Quarterback Club each gave $2,000. Presenting gifts of $1,500 were Harold Bellamy, Gary Bishop, Ed Mabry, Citizens Bank and Peoples Band of Morehead.

Gifts of $1,000 were provided by Elaine Kirk, Peoples Bank of Olive Hill and Jerry Howell Sr. At the $500 level were Elmer D. Anderson, Spring Grove Dairy and The Kroger Co.

"One of my faculty members reminded me recently that the opera ain't over till the fat lady sings."

In addressing the state's concern over "unnecessary duplication" of academic programs in higher education, Dr. Powell pointed out that a conflict exists over the definition of the terms.

"I am for eliminating unnecessary duplication, but I do not subscribe to the theory that we should limit the access of Kentuckians to academic programs they need."

Dr. Powell said that the matter of institutional autonomy versus the state's interest results in "adversary roles" of each party "because our interests are completely different."

"We think of institutional autonomy as a device for quality," he added. "The coordinating council acting for the state says we can't afford to provide all of these programs so we must coordinate you and by that they mean restrict you."

The EKU president was the featured speaker for the second program in a six-part series entitled "Kentucky Higher Education in the 80's: The Promise of Renewal or The Politics of Retrenchment?"

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A state budget official said here Monday that Kentucky's public universities have legitimate funding needs but must compete with other "worthy causes" in government for state resources.

Larry Owsley, executive assistant in the Office of Policy and Management, Kentucky Department of Finance, appeared at a higher education symposium at Morehead State University to represent state Cabinet Secretary George Atkins.

Owsley said that the Department of Finance is considering "all of the legitimate needs of state government" within available resources.

"There are many considerations and we need a clear articulation of what is most important," he stated. "Higher education must make its case and it needs to be as united as possible."

He called for "substantial, informed public debate" on higher education issues related to financial matters.

Owsley did not comment on the budget plan recently submitted by the Council on Higher Education (CHE), but did note that the Department of Finance will submit its budget recommendations and those of the CHE to the governor.

Owsley said that secretary Atkins does not support increased funding of specific universities at the expense of other institutions in the state's higher education system.

Owsley was the featured speaker for the third program in a six-part symposium entitled "Kentucky Higher Education in the '80's: The Promise of Renewal or The Politics of Retrenchment?"

The symposium continues Wednesday with U.S. Rep. Carl D. Perkins of Hindman, chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, addressing federal student aid legislation. Also appearing will be Paul Borden, executive director of the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority.

The 3 p.m. program in the Crager Room of the Adron Doran University Center is free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's speech team recently made the biggest sweep in the history of the Ohio Valley Conference Forensics Championships.

Winning more than three dozen trophies, the team surpassed several OVC landmarks in competition at Murray State University.

"Never before has a school so dominated the OVC," says Chip Letzgas, instructor of speech and speech team coach at MSU. "They were simply outstanding."

MSU won the tournament with an OVC record number of points and had the highest number of finalists ever, 30 out of 56. MSU had more finalists than all the other schools combined.

MSU team members also won the most first place awards ever, taking eight out of 10 competition categories and totally dominated two of the categories, by winning first through sixth places.

Rachel Holloway, Morehead junior, established the record for the most first places for a single student by winning six categories.

Individual MSU results are:

*Pentathlon -- Holloway, first; Donna Totich, Morehead junior, second; Lesly Reisenfeld, Cincinnati freshman, third; Belinda Stambaugh, Salyersville junior, fourth; Keith Murphy, Grayson freshman, sixth.

*Persuasion -- Lori Glass, Parkersburg, W. Va. sophomore, first; Totich, second; Reisenfeld, third; Holloway, fourth; Murphy, fifth; Stambaugh, sixth.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- More than 35 persons representing 23 coal companies recently participated in a mine rescue instructors seminar at Morehead State University.

The three-day training session, sponsored by MSU's Mining Technology Program and the U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration, featured new techniques in mine rescue training.

Although the seminar was the first of its kind on campus, several other programs dealing with mining are held at MSU throughout the year, according to Forrest Cameron, coordinator of mining technology.

The Collegiate Association for Mining Education (CAME) will conduct its 1982 annual meeting at MSU, Cameron said. The date for the meeting has not been set. The session will include seminars and meetings for CAME members, the schools, universities and colleges in the state offering mining courses and degrees, according to Camerson, current CAME president.

Last year, MSU's Mining Technology Program hosted a safety analyst program for the Department of Mines and Minerals. MSU also sponsored a seminar series on coal, covering personnel relations, reclamation techniques and mine safety training.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Reagan Administration came under sharp criticism here Wednesday as a Morehead State University audience heard U.S. Rep. Carl D. Perkins offer little hope for the immediate future of federal student aid programs.

Joining the veteran congressman in rapping the recent and pending reductions in federal student aid was Paul P. Borden, executive director of the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority (KHEAA).

"In the space of a few months, the Reagan Administration has destroyed the progress we had made over 10 years in helping young people get access to higher education," said Borden, who has headed the state student aid agency since 1974. "We apparently are on a federal course which will dismantle the effective aid programs which Congressmen Perkins and (William) Natcher and others have been so effective in building."

Perkins and Borden were featured at MSU's higher education symposium which is examining the future of Kentucky's public university system.

In reference to his efforts to oppose funding cuts, Perkins said: . . .

"We are fighting hard to hold the fort but at this point we are losing the battle. Every student, regardless of their station in life, will feel the effects of these cuts in a big way by 1983."

The Hindman democrat cited student aid as an example of domestic programs which are "being sacrificed" for foreign aid and other priorities of the Reagan Administration.

Perkins said that he and other democrats on the House Education and Labor Committee would continue to oppose the budget reductions.

"I promise you that I will hold fast as long as I can under the circumstances," Perkins told the students in the audience.

Both officials said that Kentucky's college students and their parents should express their concerns to the state's congressional delegation and to members of the General Assembly.

"We at the state level recognize the need for additional state funding of student aid programs but the revenue to finance it simply is not available," added Borden.

MSU's symposium continues Dec. 9 when William H. McCann, chairman of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education, addresses the role of the CHE. The program is set for 3 p.m. in the Adron Doran University Center and is free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Julie had always been a straight A student, a member of several clubs and very popular at school. In her junior year of high school, a friend suggested she run for prom queen, then added that perhaps she should lose a few pounds first.

For Julie, losing weight came so easy, that she kept dieting until she weighed only 80 pounds and was too weak to do her homework. She was starving but refused to eat.

Her problem was diagnosed as "anorexia nervosa," an eating disorder which strikes one out of 10 young women in the U.S.

"What makes anorexia so hard to deal with is that people refuse to admit that they have a problem, making it very important for families to be alert to the early signs of the illness, so they can support the victim and help her recover," says Mary Jo Netherton, assistant professor of English at Morehead State University and a former anorexia victim.

Ms. Netherton has organized a self-help support group at MSU which is open to anorexia victims, their friends and families.

"Finding someone to talk with about anorexia relieves a lot of the anxiety and allows people to learn from each another how to help a family member with the disorder," Ms. Netherton adds.

Although men occasionally become anorexic, it usually strikes high school and college age women with little self confidence and a need to please other people, according to recent studies.

Anorexia victims generally are high achievers with extreme willpower which allows them to ignore the pangs of hunger and continue strict dieting until more than 25 percent of total body weight is lost.

Anorexia
2-2-2-2-2

The first step in overcoming anorexia is admitting that you have it, according to Ms. Netherton.

"People with anorexia also need to open up with their families and express what they really feel. They need to become more assertive, more accepting of themselves and less dependent on the approval of others."

Those recoving from anorexia often need counseling or assertiveness training, she added. Mr. Larry Bart, a clinical psychologist in the MSU Counseling Center, is available to students needing such help. He also works with the self-help group.

Affiliated with the national organization, Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders, the MSU group offers information to any interested person. Requests should be directed to Ms. Mary Jo Netherton, MSU, UPO 1215, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone number is (606) 783-2171.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- It happens every Tuesday and Thursday as the control room clock approaches 5 p.m.

With smiles beneath their mustaches, two anchormen, Ray Keeton and Ed Arnold, ready themselves to go on the air as they hear the opening music for "NewsCenter 12," Morehead State University's student television news program.

"NewsCenter 12" is the only MSU-TV production totally staffed by students, including engineering, writing and on-the-air talent," says Keeton, Morehead senior. "That's important because it gives everybody a chance to see how a show operates from the ground up."

The show, broadcast to city and campus cable viewers on Channel 12, covers community and university news. Some stories are rewrites from local newspaper stories and press releases but many are videotaped reports from the show's field reporters and writers.

"We're trying to use more videotaped reports," says Keeton. "NewsCenter 12" averages about three videotaped stories in each half-hour show, ranging from interviews to feature shots." Also included are videotaped MSU and area high school sports stories from sports anchor Susie Brutcher, Louisville junior.

Aside from sports, most of the stories go through Lisa York, assignment editor and East Bernstadt sophomore.

"I make the assignments to the reporters, then they set up their own appointments for interviews or arrange when to shoot a story," notes York, who also does writing and reporting for the show.

Compared with the usual classroom education working at "NewsCenter 12" feels "like a part of the real world," says reporter Flora Jackson, Paris

sophomore. "In the classroom, we read about things, do assignments and have a teacher telling us what to do. But here each of us holds a position and we have a job to do and we get along well."

"NewsCenter 12" has about 20 staff members, including announcers, writers, reporters and cameramen.

Some work for internship credit and others, like co-anchorman Ed Arnold, New Liberty senior. do it "for fun and something to do."

Gaining college credit and "hands-on" experience, the production crew members are students who also work on other MSU-TV programs, such as "MSU at Large," "Our Appalachia," "You and the Law," "MSU Report," "Dianoia," and various shows relating to MSU's athletic programs.

"I'm really pleased with the newscasters, the writers, the cameramen and everyone," says advisor Dave Collins.

"They do a terrific job, and that makes everything a little better."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The second annual "Fun Horse Show" is scheduled Sunday, Dec. 13, at Morehead State University's Derrickson Agricultural Complex.

Students currently enrolled in riding classes will participate in preparation for the regular show held each spring.

"This show is comparable to a piano recital for piano students," says Mary Eckerle, graduate assistant in charge of the show.

Each student will show in three of the 11 classes offered, which include hunt, stock and saddle seats, five-gaited and jumping events. Cindy Smith, an MSU graduate, will judge the show.

"It's a good time for all involved," says Eckerle. "It can be very comical at times and we have some good competition, too."

The 1 p.m. show will be staged in Richardson Arena on Ky. 377, two miles north of Morehead.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Is Kentucky moving toward a "super board" to govern its public higher education system? Does the present concept of "coordination" really work?

Answers to these and related questions will be sought here Wednesday when the role of the Kentucky Council on Higher Education (CHE) is the featured topic in Morehead State University's six-part symposium on the future of public higher education in Kentucky.

Lexington attorney William H. McCann, chairman of the CHE, will be the principal speaker.

The 3 p.m. program in the Crager Room of the Adron Doran University Center is free and open to the public. The symposium is entitled "Kentucky Higher Education in the 80's: The Promise of Renewal or the Politics of Retrenchment?"

The final program is Thursday at 3 p.m. when area legislators discuss higher education issues expected to face the 1982 Kentucky General Assembly. That session also is scheduled in the Crager Room and is open to the public.

The symposium is sponsored by MSU's Division of Public Affairs with funds provided by the MSU Foundation, Inc. Proceedings of the six programs will be made available to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Rowan County High School basketball teams will play three doubleheaders this season in Morehead State University's Wetherby Gymnasium.

The games were announced in a joint statement issued by RCHS Principal Marvin Moore and MSU Athletic Director G. E. (Sonny) Moran.

The dates include Tuesday, Dec. 8; Friday, Jan. 8; and Tuesday, Feb. 16. Each represents a doubleheader involving the RCHS boys and girls teams. The Dec. 8 game involves the girls against Lexington Bryan Station and the boys against Bath County. The girls face Woodford County and the boys play Lexington Henry Clay on Jan 8. Both squads go against Russell on Feb. 16. Tipoff time is 6 p.m. for the girls and 8 p.m. for boys. Admission will be $2.50 at the gate.

"We are pleased to report that all of the details have been worked out for these games to be played at Wetherby Gym," Moore and Moran stated. "These arrangements will result in additional convenience for players and fans of all schools involved."

Use of the campus facility for the RCHS games has been approved by the Kentucky High School Athletic Association.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Kentucky's public universities are "walking a tightrope between the need for statewide coordination and their own institutional autonomy," State Higher Education Council Chairman William H. McCann said here Wednesday.

The Lexington attorney told a Morehead State University audience that the Council on Higher Education has all of the statutory authority it needs as a coordinating agency.

"The Council has no power to run an institution but we must insure that unnecessary duplication is avoided," he stated. "I do not believe that we need any more power."

McCann defended the recently-approved "mission model" funding plan which has been submitted to the Kentucky Department of Finance, describing it as "necessary to accomplish each institution's individual mission."

McCann called for the separation of budgets for teaching hospitals from the balance of the state's higher education allocation. He suggested that indigent patient care costs be budgeted to the Department for Human Resources instead of the two universities with medical schools.

McCann was featured at the fifth in a series of six programs in MSU's higher education symposium entitled "Kentucky Higher Education in the 80's: The Promise of Renewal or The Politics of Retrenchment?"

The series ends Thursday at 3 p.m. when area lawmakers discuss higher education issues expected to face the 1982 General Assembly. Scheduled in the Adron Doran University Center, the program is free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- This year has been declared the International Year of Disabled Persons, a group often overlooked, but for some students at Morehead State University, care of the disabled is an integral part of education.

Ties have developed between MSU's psychology and vocational education programs and the Eastern Kentucky Comprehensive Rehabilitation Center in Thelma, near Paintsville, which tests, evaluates and trains handicapped Kentucky residents.

Opened in 1973, EKCRC is among six such centers in the United States which approaches the plight of the trainable handicapped in comprehensive fashion, according to Dr. Charles Morgan, EKCRC psychologist and a faculty member at MSU.

Dr. Morgan, whose salary is shared by the two institutions, spends about two days a week in Thelma providing clinically-based supervision for EKCRC interns and staff adjustment counselors.

"The comprehensive approach used at EKCRC calls for complete testing of potential students to determine personal, physical and occupational needs so that a consistent approach to rehabilitation can be implemented," explains Dr. Morgan.

Assisting in testing and evaluation is one of the responsibilities of MSU interns at the facility.

"The program gives our student interns a real taste of what it is like to go out and do program evaluation and to apply their research skills to problems in the real world," says Dr. Morgan.

(more)

EKCRC
2-2-2-2

Interns also assist in counseling, serving as "junior adjustment counselors."

"We learn a lot from interns, too," says Karen Granger, adjustment counselor and on-site supervisor for the interns. She explains that Thelma's remote location means that EKCRC staff members benefit from the "new thinking" interns bring with them from MSU.

Granger, a graduate of MSU like many other EKCRC staff members, came to the facility nearly four years ago as an intern and subsequently was hired.

Another tie between EKCRC and MSU involves vocational education. EKCRC students are offered instruction in appliance repair, drafting, business and cosmetology, among other professions.

Many of the vocational instructors at EKCRC were certified at MSU and many are taking night classes.

In addition, EKCRC has sponsored workshops at the facility during the last two summers to teaching MSU vocational education students how to work with and evaluate the handicapped.

State Rep.-elect Walter Blevins of Morehead declared his "wholehearted" support of Morehead State University and public higher education during an MSU symposium.

Joining him at MSU's higher education symposium were Rep. Lowell Cline of Olive Hill, Rep. Pete Worthington of Ewing and Sen. Benny Ray Bailey of Hindman for the sixth program of "Kentucky Higher Education in the '80's: The Promise of Renewal or The Politics of Retrenchment?"

"Eastern Kentucky has made great strides in the recent past," said the Morehead dentist, "and the quality of education at MSU is a part of that. I will continue to support higher education in general and Morehead State University in particular."

Dr. Blevins described MSU as "more than a regional university, but also a vital part of the community and of Eastern Kentucky."

He added: "A strong educational base is an important factor in attracting industry to our region and MSU provides that support in fine fashion."

Rep. Worthington, whose district includes three precincts in Rowan County, said he is "very confused with the direction of public higher education at the state level." He predicted that the legislature would give special attention to the role of the Council on Higher Education.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Geography programs of six major universities in Kentucky, including Morehead State University, have formed the Kentucky Geographical Consortium.

This marks the first time in Kentucky that a university academic discipline has formed a continuing statewide cooperative network. The overall objective of the organization is to promote a greater degree of cooperation in geographic instruction, service and research.

The idea for the consortium resulted from a meeting of departmental chairmen during the annual meeting of the Southeast Division of the Association of American Geographers.

Participating in the "Atlanta Compact" were Dr. Gary Cox of Morehead State University, Dr. Stanley Brunn of the University of Kentucky, Dr. William Dakan of the University of Louisville, Dr. Wayne Hoffman of Western Kentucky University, Dr. Ron Marionneaux of Eastern Kentucky University, and Dr. Neil Weber of Murray State University.

Drawing upon the resources of the six departments, the consortium will have access to the Geographical Studies and Research Center at ECU, the Cartographic Lab at UK, the Mid-America Remote Sensing Center at Murray State, and the Kentucky Climate Center at WKU.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Would you learn anything while taking care of more than 15,000 livestock during an 18-day show and auction?

About 40 students from Morehead State University's veterinary technology program said they did during the recent North American Livestock Exposition (NALE) in Louisville.

"There was no way I could give livestock owners good service 24 hours a day without help," says Dr. Newell Hicks of Versailles, NALE veterinarian who was responsible for the health of the cattle, sheep, horses and swine from 25 countries.

Dr. Hicks first took responsibility for the care of sick animals at the NALE when the show began seven years ago. At that time, he enlisted the assistance of students in MSU's vet tech program, the only such program in Kentucky accredited by the American Veterinary Medical Association.

"It's a great program," says Dr. Hicks, a member of the board of the Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association who became familiar with MSU's program during its accreditation. "The concept of a veterinary technician is relatively new with only 52 accredited programs in the nation."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dwayne Ansley, Morehead State University senior from Ridgeway, Ohio, has been selected for a professional internship at the Pittsburgh Energy Technology Center (PETC).

"Dwayne was in national competition and only 12 students were chosen," says Dr. Wayne A. Morella, MSU's director of field career experiences. "He is the first student to be accepted from MSU."

Ansley, a data processing major, will be working in PETC's ADP Systems Coordination Branch, which provides computer services for center researchers. He will assist in data entry, output distribution, consulting and programming.

The six-month internship program, sponsored by the U.S. Department of Energy, Office of Fossil Energy, trains undergraduate students in a variety of fields.

PETC is internationally known for research and development emphasizing energy conservation in the industrial use of coal and its derived fuels.

The interns receive a monthly stipend for expenses and can earn a maximum of six credit hours.

Ansley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ansley of Ridgeway.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Donald H. Cunningham, professor of English at Morehead State University, has received national recognition for two of his recent publications.

The National Council of Teachers of English, Committee on Technical and Scientific Communication, has designated his textbook, "How to Write for the World of Work," as the best book designed for technical writing classes at two-year colleges.

Another Cunningham book, "The Practical Craft: Readings for Business and Technical Writers" was named the best collections of essays for 1981.

A native of Columbia, Mo., Dr. Cunningham received bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from the University of Missouri. He has been a member of the MSU faculty since 1972.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Department of Music has been reaccredited by the National Association of Schools of Music.

"We are very pleased about this," says Dr. William Bigham, head of the department. "We feel this recognition is important to the continued progress of our programs."

Reaccreditation means MSU's music programs meets NASM standards and that all music educational services advertised to the public are, in fact, being offered.

MSU first was granted full membership and accreditation by NASM in 1971. Reaccreditation evaluations are scheduled at 10-year intervals.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- State Rep. Walter Blevins of Morehead recently declared his "wholehearted" support of Morehead State University and public education during an appearance at MSU.

He was a participant in the final fall symposium program of "Kentucky Higher Education in the 1980's: The Promise of Renewal or The Politics of Retrenchment?"

"Eastern Kentucky has made great strides in the recent past," said the Morehead dentist, "and the quality of education at MSU is a part of that. I intend to strongly support public education in general and Morehead State University in particular."

Dr. Blevins described MSU as "more than a regional university, but also a vital part of the community and of Eastern Kentucky."

He added: "A strong educational base is an important factor in attracting industry to our region and MSU provides that support in fine fashion."

Dr. Blevins, a dentist, is an MSU graduate. He is a native of Morgan County.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- State Rep. Pete Worthington of Ewing questioned the statewide direction of public higher education in Kentucky during a recent appearance at Morehead State University.

Joining him at MSU's higher education symposium were Rep. Gene Cline of Olive Hill, Rep. Walter Blevins of Morehead and Sen. Benny Ray Bailey of Hindman.

Worthington, who represents the 70th District, predicted that the 1982 General Assembly would give special attention to the role of the Council on Higher Education (CHE).

"It just doesn't make sense to adopt substantial fee increases in the face of reduced student aid," Worthington said of the CHE's recent 15 percent tuition hike. He also questioned the wisdom of making "dramatic changes" in budgeting and other aspects of the state's higher education system without "good justification."

Worthington, an MSU alumnus, said the financial needs of the state's public universities would receive "a fair hearing" during the upcoming session.

He added that student financial aid programs would be of particular interest to the lawmakers.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Sen. Benny Ray Bailey of Hindman affirmed his support for public education during a recent appearance at Morehead State University.

Joining him in a discussion of legislative issues for 1982 were Rep. Gene Cline of Olive Hill, Rep. Pete Worthington of Ewing and Rep. Walter Blevins of Morehead.

"Those who wish to attend college should have the opportunity to do so," Bailey said:---"If we need to raise taxes to support quality education, then the governor should take the lead and propose the measures."

Bailey, who represents the 29th District, predicted that educational needs on all levels would receive "a fair hearing" during the 1982 session of the General Assembly. However, he was pessimistic about the prospects for major new revenue sources.

"First, we will have to do a better job of using the resources now available to state and local government," Bailey added. "No one will support tax measures until they are convinced of the real need."

"For years, veterinarians had to take the time to train their assistants, who usually came with the desire but no experience," explains McLynn Swah, an assistant instructor in MSU's program who completed the training a few years ago.

Accredited by the AVMA in 1977, the program requires intensive classroom and laboratory study for two years and an actual working experience of its 47 students currently enrolled.

The experience includes work with large and small animals from horses and cows to laboratory rats and rabbits. This exposes students to knowledge applicable in veterinary practices and research laboratories which are the chief employes of veterinary technicians.

The students, who earn associate degrees, get actual experience at NALE.

"For some of the first-year students, this is their first exposure to animals," Swah says. "The second-year students get to apply their knowledge and become more confident and eager to learn."

Lisa Santangelo-Applegate, Hartford, Conn., sophomore, says she has learned much from the program, especially the experience at NALE.

"We're exposed to on-the-spot emergencies at the Expo. We're shown the technics we've studied and Dr. Hicks always explains why everything is done a certain way. It's a great experience."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- If losing weight or improving your physical stamina are on your list of New Year's resolutions, then Morehead State University has good news for you.

A new adult physical fitness program called "Run for Your Life" is being offered by MSU during the spring semester.

The non-credit course will be geared toward persons in the community and MSU students who want to enjoy physical activities and benefit from exercise.

"The program sets the individual participant's pace, based on a battery of physical tests beforehand, so nobody will overexert themselves," explains Dr. Mike Brown, associate professor of health, physical education and recreation at MSU. "Too many times, people don't know what they're doing when they start an exercise program, and they sometimes end up injuring themselves," he added.

The course, which includes loosening up, stretching, running and jogging exercises, requires each participant to have a physical examination at the Morehead Clinic on Jan. 18 and receive a doctor's permission.

Participants then are tested for fitness, body fat, flexibility and strength, and postures are evaluated at MSU's human fitness laboratory.

(more)

"We will then prescribe an individual program for each person, how many laps to run or swim in a certain amount of time," Brown explains. "At the end of the course, we give a post-test to check their progress and give another prescription for them to work for more improvement on their own."

A $100 fee to cover the physical exam, the exercise testing, textbooks and T-shirts will be charged at the course's registration, Jan. 11 through 15 in Room 158 of the Academic-Athletic Center.

The 15-week course meets Monday, Wednesday and Friday, from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. at the Academic-Athletic Center. The class is limited to 25 adults, 18 or older.

For more information, contact Dr. Brown, MSU, UPO 724, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone number is (606) 783-2120.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Stephen S. Taylor has been appointed executive assistant to the president of Morehead State University.

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet announced that the appointment is effective immediately and will extend through June 30, 1982.

Dr. Taylor assumes his new duties on a part-time basis while retaining his current position as MSU's director of counseling, testing and evaluation services. He also is a part-time faculty member at the rank of professor of education.

Appointed to the MSU faculty in 1973, Dr. Taylor was named director of testing services in 1976. His responsibilities were expanded in 1980 to include counseling services.

A native of Walton, W. Va., he is a graduate of Glenville State College, Stetson University and Florida State University. He came to MSU after holding teaching and administrative posts in the public schools of St. Augustine, Fla., Monroe, Mich., Gallipolis, Ohio, and Parkersburg, W. Va.

Dr. Taylor is married to the former Carolyn Dotson of Pennsboro, W. Va., who is acting head of MSU's Department of Home Economics. They have two children.

He is the son of Mrs. Dorothy Taylor of Walton, W. Va.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Are robots taking over?

Not totally, but industry is turning to robot labor as advances in microcomputer technology have made robotics financially advantageous, according to Meade Roberts, associate professor of industrial education at Morehead State University and a robotics enthusiast. "However, very few people know much about robotics," he says.

As a result of his interest and a student project, MSU has become one of the less than 20 U.S. institutions involved in industrial robotics.

He reported that the University is working with industry representatives to keep pace with robotics through workshops and a new course.

Roberts recalls that he became interested in the field about a year ago when a student built a robot as a special project.

"In our computer electronics course, several students asked what they could accomplish with computer technology outside of data processing," Roberts stated. "That led us into examining robots as realistic industrial tools."

To help MSU get into robotics, representatives from Rockwell International and Detroit Reamer and Tool met with faculty members and students to answer questions and plan for the future.

Roberts says the major concern of students seems to be the fear of being replaced by workers demanding no wages or fringe benefits and willing to work 24 hours a day.

(more)

Robots
2-2-2-2

Although Roberts says we may be on the edge of a robot age, he interprets it differently. "Clothes used to be made by hand but when sewing machines began to be used, they didn't put people out of work," he said. "Instead, it created different jobs. Robots will eliminate the need for certain types of jobs but, in the long run, they will create more employment."

MSU is offering a course in industrial robotics during the spring term to prepare students to work with robots in industry. Students will design, construct and improve a robot to demonstrate the principles of robotics. One of the robots to be built will screw indicator lights into auto dashboards and another will be a welder.

"We can teach our students how to actually work with robots, unlike engineering schools which are just concerned with research and design," Roberts says.

David Drake, Campton junior, already is working with robots in school and in his free time. He feels the opportunity to work with the machines will be to his advantage.

"When I came to MSU, I planned to become a radio and television repairman," says Drake. "But working with computers has changed my career goals and my future is robotics."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Michael Biel, assistant professor of radio television at Morehead State University, loves recordings. In fact, he owns 35,000 of them.

That's right, 35,000 recordings!

In addition to 45 rpm phonograph records, there are thousands of long-playing albums and old 78's as well as tapes, recording wires, cylinders and player piano rolls.

They're not all songs, either.

"I'm a generalist," Dr. Biel says. "I have all types of things but I specialize in spoken-word and comedy recordings."

The recordings form a unique history of the 20th century. Dr. Biel's oldest items are a few cylinders from 1901 or earlier and one disc record from 1900.

"It is more than a casual collection," Dr. Biel explains. "It's a research collection. It helps further my knowledge of the history of the phonograph, the record industry and broadcasting."

This knowledge is passed on to his students in MSU classes.

"I illustrate what we're learning with original recordings of broadcasts to show the kind of programs, the announcers and what their styles were."

The recordings from decades ago show students the development of today's broadcasting styles, Dr. Biel notes.

He also writes research columns and articles for national collector publications and regularly gives talks at record conventions.

(more)

Dr. Biel
2-2-2-2-2-2

Dr. Biel's interest in recordings goes back to his childhood "when I found my father's collection up in the attic. There were 250 old 78's dating back into the twenties and earlier. That formed the nucleus of my collection and some of those are still my favorites."

Since then, Dr. Biel has added to the collection through garage, flea markets, advertised mail auctions, antique stores and record conventions. He has added more than 1,000 LP's, 300 45's and 300 78's to his collection since moving to Morehead four years ago.

But the collection is not yet all in Kentucky. About a fourth of it is in the Biel home. The rest is in New Jersey, some at his parents and the remainder in a warehouse.

So, what does a man with 35,000 recordings listen to when he goes home after a day of teaching?

"I listen to whatever I need for research. But I also listen to the radio for the news, and I watch a lot of television because that's my business. If there's something on I should watch or listen to, the recordings will wait."

He added:

"I've often thought that when I grow old and retire, I'll finally get a chance to listen to all my recordings."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University received a $20,000 Christmas present this week in the form of an anonymous gift to its scholarship endowment.

Representing the largest cash gift from an individual in the University's fund raising history, the money will be added to MSU's investment base with the earnings used to finance scholarships, starting in the fall of 1982.

The gift was announced by MSU President Morris L. Norfleet and Dr. C. Louise Caudill, national chairperson of MSU's 1981-82 Annual Giving Campaign.

"We are most grateful for this wonderful expression of support for the University and for the students who need financial assistance now and in the future," Dr. Norfleet stated.

Dr. Caudill added:

"This generous gift is especially timely in view of the federal cutbacks in student aid which could have a serious impact on the University's ability to remain an institution of educational opportunity for the people of Eastern Kentucky."

Gifts for scholarships and work-study assistance have been identified as priorities in this year's giving campaign, according to Dr. Caudill.

Persons interested in giving to MSU for any purpose are invited to contact the Office of Development, MSU, UPO Box 1000, Morehead, KY 40351. The telephone number is (606) 783-4747.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Sounds of the Season," Christmas music and drama, are featured this month on WMKY, public radio from Morehead State University.

The "New Swingle Singers" is the recreation of the world famous group which put Johann Sebastian Bach on the hit parade in the 1960's. This Christmas special ranges from "Jingle Bells" to a "Hymn to the Virgin" and will be aired Thursday, Dec. 24, at 8 p.m.

Thea Musgrave's "A Christmas Carol," scheduled Friday, Dec. 25, at 2:30 p.m., provides a vivid, moving musical experience. The opera is entirely faithful to the original Dickens story, presenting all the familiar characters: the Fezziwigs, Bob Cratchit, Tiny Tim and the Ghosts of Christmas Past, Present and Future.

"Tis the Season," to be aired Sunday, Dec. 27, at 12:30 p.m., is an hour-long radio drama by Jeff Sweet. On Christmas Eve, a man whose marriage has recently broken up cannot bring himself to admit that he wants and needs the sympathy of others.

A half-hour radio play set on a slave ship in the Sea of Galilee dramatizes an unusual aspect of the Christmas Story. "Nightwatch," is set for Dec. 25, at 9:30 p.m.

"The First Nowell," scheduled Monday, Dec. 21, at 7:30 p.m., is a nativity play with words adapted from medieval pageants.

Handel's "Messiah" performed by the Independence Messiah Choir from Independence, Mo., will be broadcast Thursday, Dec. 24, at 9 p.m.

Taped on location in Colonial Williamsburg, "Christmas in the Colonies: A Williamsburg Celebration" captures the holiday spirit of 18th century America on Christmas Day at 1 p.m.

WMKY also will broadcast "Music of the Black Church" on Christmas at 7:30 p.m. This program combines music with commentary to illuminate the origins, style, and development of Christmas gospel music.

James Thurber's hour-long adaptation of "Thirteen Clocks" is a delightful fairy tale for children and a mischievous parody for adults. It can be heard Sunday, Jan. 3, at 12:30 p.m.

Another holiday special, "Markheim," is set in the year 1845. A dealer is disturbed by a visitor on Christmas Day who eventually brings death to them both but, perhaps, salvation for the visitor. "Markheim" will be aired Monday, Dec. 28, at 7:30 p.m.

WMKY operates at 90.3 FM from 6 a.m. to midnight on a daily basis.
