Harrison County Created From 5 Other Counties

By Tharisa Taylor

Harrison County was created on Dec. 4, 1792, by an act of the state legislature. Its boundaries included all of what are now Harrison, Clark, Floyd, Boone and Grant counties. The county seat was at Highland Court House.

While the act created the county, it was not until later that the actual organizing and creation of the county took place.

On Aug. 1, 1793, the first town meeting was held and the town of Waveland was created. It was at this meeting that the first vestige was set for the county's future:

- 1793, while George Washington was still present, the first town meeting was held and the town of Waveland was created.
- 1794, the first town meeting was held and the town of Waveland was created.
- 1795, the first town meeting was held and the town of Waveland was created.

The town of Waveland was created in 1793, but the actual organizing and creation of the county took place on Aug. 1, 1793.

The present log residence on Court Street was built in "Babies" where they would continue to multiply and develop in more or less favorable environments. German scientists have discovered that the development of "babies" inside the body is more complex than previously thought. They have found that the "babies" are not identical to the "adult" form of the organism, but rather are unique structures that develop from the union of the "adult" and the "baby" forms.

The mechanism of growth and development is not yet fully understood, but it is believed to involve a combination of genetic and environmental factors. Scientists are currently studying the role of the "baby" form in the development of the "adult" form, and the implications of this research for understanding the process of development in general.

"Babies" are also known to be present in other organisms, including plants and fungi. In these cases, the "babies" are known as spores, and they are used for reproduction. However, in the case of the "babies" in the human body, they are not used for reproduction, but rather for the development of the "adult" form.

The discovery of "babies" in the human body has important implications for our understanding of the process of development and the role of the environment in shaping the development of an organism.

Two Abolitionists In Cynthiaa

About the year 1847, a man named William C. Scott, came to Kentucky, and passed through the county in which Cynthiaa was situated. This time, Mr. Graham came home from Ohio, and stopped off at the house of this man. They were both abolitionists, and Mr. Graham had made the acquaintance of Mr. Scott. The former was a pro-slavery man, but had some doubts in his mind about it, and was glad to escape with his life. He went to an old dilapidated house, and was glad to be away from the scenes of slavery. He was startled to see the poor slaves at work. Mr. Graham was glad to escape with his life.

The next morning, our correspondent, Mr. Graham, went to the meeting house, and was glad to be away from the scenes of slavery. He was startled to see the poor slaves at work. Mr. Graham was glad to escape with his life.

Recalls When Burley Buyers Went to Farms

By THOMAS WYATT

The 1960s was a remarkable era in the history of tobacco. The Burley tobacco, grown in Kentucky and Tennessee, was in high demand for cigarette production. The recall of tobacco back to Kentucky was a significant event that marked the end of a long tradition of tobacco production.

The Burley tobacco was grown on small family farms, and the crop was harvested by hand. The buyers would come to the farms and purchase the tobacco, which was then loaded onto wagons and transported to the auction house. The auctioneer would then sell the tobacco to the highest bidder, and the farmers would receive their payment.

The recall of tobacco back to Kentucky was a response to the increased demand for tobacco in the 1960s. The tobacco was in high demand for cigarette production, and the farmers were able to sell their tobacco for a higher price.

The recall of tobacco back to Kentucky was a significant event in the history of tobacco. It marked the end of a long tradition of tobacco production and the beginning of a new era in the industry.

The Commonwealth of Kentucky joins me in extending congratulations to you, the residents of Harrison County on the double anniversary of the City of Cynthiana and the Cynthiana Democrat.

The 175th Anniversary of Cynthiana heralds one of Kentucky's earliest settlements where your first citizens -- James Ruddle, and others -- settled and their community. The birth of Cynthiana and the history of the Commonwealth continued to be intertwined with the turmoil throughout the 19th Century, through the turm of the Civil War and into the 20th Century.

For the past 100 years, this development has been chronicled by the Cynthiana Democrat, which is to be commended for a century of service to the Citizens of Harrison County.

My family and I send our best wishes to you during this week-long anniversary celebration in recognition of your outstanding community.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Metz:

I knew that you and your neighbors are in for exciting times with your double celebration which marks the 175th Anniversary of Cynthiana and the 100th Anniversary of the Cynthiana Democrat.

I feel it is appropriate that these two birthdays should be observed at the same time. A newspaper which attains the age of the Democrat is firmly bound up in the life of its community.

I know that the same bold spirit which has animated the citizens of Cynthiana from the earliest history of your city will continue to be your guiding force. I feel equally sure that your newspaper will continue to carry on the great traditions of journalism which have guided it in the past.

I hope very much that nothing arises to prevent us from being with you during your August celebration.

With kind regards, I am

Yours sincerely,

John Sherman Cooper

Dear Mr. Metz:

How very proud you must be as you celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Cynthiana Democrat. I know that this is a very happy occasion for you.

It must be a very wonderful and rewarding feeling to be a part of the real "heart" of progress in your community. As the leading news publication of the area, the Cynthiana Democrat has provided a running history of the community.

To my many friends in Harrison County, I send very best wishes for a most successful 175th anniversary celebration and the hope that Cynthiana will continue to prosper.

I want also to state that our Washington staff is at your service to assist you with any congressional problem that you might have.

Sincerely yours,

Last Decade Marked A New Era In Journalism

For nearly a decade—January 29, 1930, to December 10, 1939, was a new era in journalism in Harrison County, as the quality of the newspaper was constantly improving. The Midland Democrat, a daily, was established, along with the weekly, The Cynthiana Gleaner. Certainly there was already familiarity with local newspapers, the Log Cabin and the Cynthiana Democrat, but the newspapers were not as professional as they are today. The Midland Democrat, which was established in 1930, was a daily newspaper that was owned and operated by the Cynthiana Democrat.

The National Bank of Cynthiana was organized in June 1857 with a Capital stock of $25,000.00. The business was operated in a small building facing Pike Street at the rear of the present building.

In 1868 the bank was moved to Main Street and occupied the building shown in the photograph above. The banking room was on the second floor reached by metal steps. The ground floor was occupied by various businesses and at times by law offices.

In 1871 the directors purchased the building and at that time the bank was re-organized with a capital stock of $100,000.00. The following persons were the stockholders at that time:

In 1908 the building with steps to the banking floor was torn down and a new building erected with a dome for a roof. In August 1943 a disastrous fire destroyed the building, the dome fell inside the building and left only the walls. The furniture and fixtures were completely destroyed. The vault remained intact with all the cash and records and the next morning the bank opened for business in a vacant building on Pike Street.

A new building was started immediately and was completed in February 1944. In 1957 celebrating the 100th Anniversary the building was remodeled, new heating and air conditioning added with added space for bookkeeping, records and rest rooms.

The four men shown on the steps of the old building are Lawrence Williams, Orie Lebus, John M. Cromwell and George Walden.

Over a period of 112 years of war and peace, drought and floods, booms and depressions, the following figures show something of the growth of the bank.

Recollection of 30 Years On Cynthiana Newspapers

One from the beginning of the newspaper business--by, pound for pound on the news, by the edition--in the back of the newspaper office.

Newspaper men and the paper industry as a whole, as one with a long memory. The industry is vast, the number of papers large. The newspaper business as an industry has been handled in the past, and will be handled in the future.

The newspaper business is a very difficult business. It is one that requires a good deal of skill, a good deal of intelligence, a good deal of experience, and a good deal of effort.

Newspapers have been in existence for many years. The first newspaper was printed in the year 1801. The first newspaper in the United States was printed in the year 1789. The first newspaper in the world was printed in the year 1707.

Railroaders who knew steam engine lore and years later those who had been running over the tracks knew the Kentucky's 19th Century's favorite locomotive, the L&N's M-1, a 4-6-0 type. It was the fastest and largest engine to run on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad.

L&N Station at Cynthiana as it looked in 1915 between excursions. Nine engines and coaches in distance.

Scene From Main Line

Roaring Through Hills

This 1915 scene on the L&N at Cynthiana, shows the building of the Crossland Milling Company. View to farm near the L&N main line.

It's a big year for Cynthiana. One that rates a special tip of the hat from all of us at the Louisville and Nashville Railroad. Our long association with the people of this historic city has been for us a source of pride. All its citizens may be justly proud of the accomplishments of Cynthiana's people through its 175 years. The L&N also extends congratulations to the Cynthiana Democrat on its 100th anniversary of service to the people of this community.

Roaring through the hills of Northern Kentucky, L&N's M-1 steam locomotive, No. 1953 pulls train load of coal on route from coal fields in Eastern Kentucky to Cincinnati gateway. Although some pulled passenger trains, most of its work was for the now legendary M-1 was the hauling of coal.

The L & N Railroad

Recollection of 30 Years

Tom Wilson Tells

The 217-mile Evansville-Western Kentucky Railroad was born in 1897 to link the major population centers of the region. This line was the product of the L & N and Illinois Central Railroad companies. It was once an integral part of the region's transportation network.

In June, 1964, the L & N Railroad published "The Story of the L & N Railroad," a book that chronicled the history of the railroad. It was a celebration of the railroad's 75th anniversary, and it highlighted the many ways in which the railroad had shaped the region's progress.

This image shows the cover of the book, which features a classic train on a route through the countryside. The book was a comprehensive resource for anyone interested in the history of the L & N Railroad.

Less than two miles south of Cynthiana, where the former town of Cynthiana was located, there was a train station. This train station was once a vital hub for the residents of Cynthiana, who relied on it for transportation to other parts of the region.

The train station was a symbol of progress for the residents of Cynthiana, and it helped connect them to the larger world. Today, the train station is a reminder of the past, and it serves as a symbol of the progress that has been made in Cynthiana.

The L & N Railroad was once a vital part of the region's transportation network, and it played a significant role in shaping the progress of the region. Today, the history of the L & N Railroad is celebrated through this book, which serves as a testament to the railroad's importance to the region.

Civil War Railroader Span Found In County

The hundred years ago, the life of a man was very different from what it is today. In the late 1800s, the country was still recovering from the Civil War, and the railroads were a vital part of the region's transportation network.

The old Kentucky Central Railroad was once a major part of the region's transportation network. It was a symbol of progress and helped connect the people of the region to the larger world.

Recollections of 30 Years

Tom Wilson Tells

Miss Page brought another ring to the office, and I was placed on a desk checking the copy after supper that night. As I turned the pages of the paper, I glanced at the clock on the wall as it tolled midnight, and I looked at the faces of those who were working around me. It was a busy time, and I was glad to be part of it.

I had grown up in Lexington, Kentucky, and had always been interested in the news. I started working for the paper at the age of 16, and I was eager to learn as much as I could. I was assigned to the sports section, and I was determined to make the most of my opportunity.

The editor, Mr. Brown, was a strict man, but he was fair. He expected a lot from his staff, but he also knew how to reward us when we did a good job. He was a man of few words, but his actions spoke for themselves.

I learned a lot from working with Mr. Brown. He taught me how to write clearly and concisely, and he showed me how to handle the pressure of deadlines. I was lucky to have such a good mentor.

As the years went by, I moved up the ranks at the paper. I became a reporter, then a feature editor, and finally a top editor. It was a long and difficult journey, but I never lost my love for the newspaper business.

I remember the day when I became the editor in chief. It was a momentous occasion, and I wasAlexandria, Kentucky, thanks to the efforts of several local politicians and citizens. The new facility was built with the help of a grant from the state, and it was a source of pride for the community.

I also remember the day when I retired after 30 years of service. It was a bittersweet moment. I was happy to have had the opportunity to work for such a great newspaper, but I was also sad to leave my colleagues and the newspaper behind.

I retired from journalism in 1992, but I still follow the news today. I'm proud of the work that I did, and I know that I made a difference in the lives of many people. I hope that the next generation of journalists will continue to carry on the tradition of excellence that I tried to uphold.

I've had a fulfilling career, and I'm grateful for the experience. I'm looking forward to the future, and I hope that the newspaper business will continue to thrive.

The end is not yet. The newspaper is a vital institution in our society, and it plays a crucial role in informing and educating the public. I hope that future generations will continue to value the work of journalists and editors.

I'll never forget the thrill of seeing my name in the paper, or the pride I felt when I received a Pulitzer Prize. But above all, I'll remember the people I worked with, and the friendships I made. They were the true treasures of my career.

I'm proud to have been a part of the newspaper business, and I hope that my recollections will inspire others to follow in my footsteps. The newspaper is a noble calling, and I can't imagine doing anything else.

Church Started
In 1963

Central Christian had Begun in Homes and Store Buildings

Central Christian, a church with roots in an old frame house, was not always the scene of pleasant memories. It has been the location of many carillons and life-changing events. It has also been the scene of numerous disappointments and conflicts. Yet, it has always been a place of great hope and promise.

Over the years, the church has been the setting for many events, both positive and negative. It has been the site of weddings, funerals, and memorial services. It has been the location of countless church meetings, Bible studies, and community gatherings. It has also been a place of controversy and conflict, with many disagreements and disagreements on key issues.

Despite the challenges, Central Christian has always been a place of hope and promise. It has been a place where people have come together to worship, to learn, and to grow in their faith. It has been a place where people have found strength and support in times of need. It has been a place where people have shared their joys and sorrows, their successes and failures.

Central Christian has always been a place of great beauty and grace. It has been a place where people have felt the presence of God and have been reminded of the love and compassion of others.

Central Christian has been a place of great strength and resilience. It has been a place where people have learned to persevere and to overcome. It has been a place where people have found the courage and determination to continue on, even in the face of adversity.

Central Christian has been a place of love and hope. It has been a place where people have found a sense of belonging and a sense of purpose. It has been a place where people have found the strength and support to overcome their challenges and to live life to the fullest.

Central Christian is a place of great beauty and grace. It is a place of love and hope. It is a place of strength and resilience. It is a place of great beauty and grace. It is a place of love and hope. It is a place of strength and resilience.

Wishing the church continued success and growth in the years to come.

The dedication of the old Mt. Vernon School, made in 1854, was attended by a number of persons gathered in the schoolhouse. The dedicating minister, Dr. J. R. Rogers, was assisted in his work by Rev. W. L. Bell and Rev. W. L. Hall.

When groups of Catholic priests began to come to Kentucky by way of the Ohio River and the Ohio Canal, they were not always well received. The group of priests from the Diocese of Cincinnati was formed in 1839, and the old Mt. Vernon School was a place where they could find refuge.

The first church built in the area was the St. Edward's Catholic Church, which was dedicated in 1854. It was a small wooden building located on the corner of Main and Commerce Streets. The church was built on land donated by Rev. Joseph G. Hurst, who was the first pastor of the church.

The church grew over the years, and by the early 1900s, it had become a large stone building. The church has been the center of Catholic life in the area ever since.

Shelbyville

The more things change ... THE MORE THEY STAY THE SAME ... In 1794 ... In 1869 ... In 1969 ...

The more the community has changed, the more it remains the same. Whether it’s the way people live or work, the economic drivers, or the transportation systems, many elements of the past have persisted into the present.

Shelbyville, a town with a rich history, exemplifies this continuity. Its architecture, with its mix of old and new buildings, reflects the town’s evolution while preserving its heritage. The Shelbyville Heritage Commission, established in 1993, works to protect and maintain the town’s historic buildings and sites.

One of the most prominent landmarks in Shelbyville is the Old Shelby County Courthouse, built in 1837. It now serves as a museum, offering a glimpse into the town’s past. The courthouse stands as a testament to the resilience of the community, surviving through generations of change.

The era of steam has given way to electric power, but the last steam engine still runs on the tracks, providing a glimpse into the past. The annual Steamtown Festival celebrates this heritage, drawing visitors from around the country.

In conclusion, while the modern world continues to evolve, Shelbyville maintains its connection to the past. It’s a place where history and tradition meet the present day, offering a unique blend of old and new that makes it a special place to live and visit.

And yet, although the workmen are not doing it, the dust is flying for the workmen. The workmen are not doing it, because there is no work to do. But it is not the workmen who are doing it, but the dust. The workmen are not doing it, but the sun. The sun is doing it, because it is hot. The workmen are not doing it, but the wind. Scotty Claims He Had...

By W. C. Smart

Scotty Johnson, a mine owner in the Death Valley, has been claiming for the past year that he has a deposit of rich ore on his claim. The story is that he found the vein in 1906 while working on his claim. He says that he has found gold, silver, copper, lead, and zinc in the deposit.

Johnson claims that the deposit is worth $14 million. He has been trying to interest investors in the mine, but so far he has been unsuccessful. He has been negotiating with several companies, but they all seem to be interested only in the possibility of finding more ore.

Johnson has been working on his claim for the past year, and he says that he has made several important discoveries. He has been working with a team of experts who have been helping him with the exploration.

Johnson says that the deposit is located in a remote area, and that it will be difficult to get equipment in to work the mine. However, he believes that it is worth the effort, and that he will be able to make a profit from the mine.

Johnson has been living in the area for the past year, and he says that he is prepared to stay for as long as it takes to work the mine. He has been living in a tent, and he has been working hard to keep the mine in good condition.

Johnson has been working with a team of experts who have been helping him with the exploration. He has been working with a group of engineers who have been helping him with the design and construction of the mine.

Harrison Hospital Has Kept Pace With Needs

Any change that has been made in their hospital has been done to benefit the patients who overhear the needs of the people of the county. There are now better conditions in the hospital today than there were years ago.

It is a very small hospital and there are only a few patients in it, but the medical staff is very efficient and gives the best care possible.

Before the new hospital was available, a patient had to go to the Far West Hospital for surgery. There was no anesthesia used, and it was a very painful process. After the new hospital was built, the patient could be operated on with the best anesthesia available.

One of the main benefits of the new hospital is that it has more modern medical equipment. This equipment allows for more accurate and efficient medical procedures.

In 1789, Moses Eastman brought from Richmond Young, Ohio, a Baptist church with 100 acres of land and a school. In 1872, the church was moved to Maysville and the school was moved to New Hope. The school was later sold and the church building was used as a community center.

The following is an excerpt from the book "History of the Churches of Harrison County, Indiana, 1872-1972."}

Old Church Built in 1883

In 1883, a church was built in the town of West Harrison. On the same day, the building was dedicated and the congregation was organized. The church was built to accommodate the growing population of the area.

It is unclear what the inside of the church looked like, but it is known that the church was built with wood and stone. The church was used for church services and community events.

The church was later sold and became a private residence. It is unknown what happened to the church building after it was sold.

Before the church was built, the town of West Harrison had no church. The town was very small and the people did not have a place to worship.

In 1890, the church was sold and the money was used to build a new church. The new church was larger and had more room for the growing congregation.

Serving Harrison Co.
For Over 60 Years

The original hospital known as the Harrison County Hospital was located on Penn Street on the site of the old Banneker school and was originated in 1906.

In 1920 relocation and additions were made to a building on Pike Street and the name changed to Harrison Memorial in memory of World War I deaths. A End wing was added in 1950 dedicated to boys who died in the Second World War. On May 25, 1968, the hospital was moved to a new facility constructed on Millersburg Pike.

There was at one time a training school for nurses, and some of the nurses on the staff today were trained in that school.

When the Mt. Pleasant Presbyterian Church was organized, there was a great deal of support from the community. The church was originally located in the town of Cynthiana, but it was later moved to a new location in the town of Mt. Pleasant. The church continued to grow and prosper, and it eventually became one of the largest Presbyterian churches in the state of Kentucky.

Indian Creek Baptist Church

Oldest Baptist Church of Alleghenies

Compiled and read by Mrs. F. H. Webb, the 18th anniversary of the congregation of the Indian Creek Baptist Church was held at its request. The church was organized under the administration of James Garrard, Baptist preacher, who was elected Governor in 1798. Gov. Garrard appointed him a colonel of militia and he was given the title of "Elder". He was later ordained to the Baptist ministry and served as pastor for many years, until his death in 1825.

Four miles east of Cin-ni- nati, and near the border of Kentucky, is the Indian Creek Baptist Church. Founded in 1801, it is one of the oldest Baptist churches in the state. The church was organized by Thomas Williams, who moved to other parts of the state or into other sections of the country. Some people came from England, and others came from the South, for example.

In January, 1871, G. T. looked up to God and down on grounds of his beam was placed. He was an excellent man, and for his contributions to the church, he was given the title of "Elder". He was later ordained to the Baptist ministry and served as pastor for many years, until his death in 1825.

The church was organized by Rev. Daniel Carrington, who was a minister in Kentucky. He was also a member of the First Baptist Church in Louisville, and for the next few years, he was the main person in the congregation. The church was built in 1801, and it was the first church in the area. The church was a small building, and it was originally formed by the members of the church who met there. The church was later moved to Dry Ridge, and it became the oldest Baptist church in the area.

In 1803, the church was moved to the second location, and it was named "The Second Baptist Church". The church was built of oak and was considered to be one of the most authentic buildings in the area. The church was later moved to Dry Ridge, and it became the oldest Baptist church in the area.

Battle of Cynthiana

General John H. Morgan, bandit of the South, was just north of the town of Cynthiana, Kentucky, when he heard that a small Federal force, numbering 200 or 300 men, was encamped near the town. He immediately dispatched a reconnaissance party to determine the exact location and strength of the Federal force. Upon returning, the party reported that the Federal force did not exceed 125 men.

Morgan believed that the Federal force was not a threat and decided to attack the town. He ordered his men to move through the countryside and arrive at Cynthiana from the east.

The Union forces, under the command of Colonel Morgan, were surprised by the Confederate attack. They were not prepared for a surprise attack and were caught off guard. The Confederate forces quickly overwhelmed the Union forces, and Morgan was able to capture the town.

It was a desperate battle, and many lives were lost on both sides. However, the Confederates emerged victorious, and the town of Cynthiana fell into Confederate hands.

In the aftermath of the battle, the Union forces were forced to retreat. The Confederates occupied the town and established control over the area. The battle marked a significant victory for the Confederates in the ongoing war.
Confederate Officers’ Reports On Battle

Army of the Ohio

These reports are from the perspective of Confederate officers who were present during the Battle of Perryville, which took place on October 7, 1862. The reports provide insights into the conduct of the battle, including the actions of different units and the challenges they faced.

Captured Memento

This Union Army banner was found recently by Miss. Elizabeth Miller. It was among items stored in a building belonging to her grandfather, Jasper N. Spiegel, who was a Confederate soldier. Mrs. Miller believes the banner, which has the emblem of the fourth battalion of a Union Army, was a souvenir taken by the army. It is the type banner which might have hung on the wall of a barracks.

THE BEGINNING

Remember that day. Remember the brave lamps, and carrying heavy iron box and forth between the stone and iron bar. Remember bowing with all might, or carrying it to the side to keep it from spilling.

Cynthiana's Sentiments Divided In War Between States

Lt. Col. Landrum, Union Leader, Tells Of His Defeat At Cynthiana

The fighting on both sides was terrific. The very next morning, June 13th, the Union forces, having been awakened by the firing of guns from the Union arsenal, discovered that the enemy had poured into the town and gathered around the arsenal. The Americans, who were well armed, and under the command of General Morgan, dealt the Confederates a severe blow on the following day. The town was completely destroyed, and the Union forces pursued the fleeing Confederates, who were forced to retreat. The battle was finally ended by nightfall, and the Union forces had the victory.

Cynthiana's Demons And Celebration

Many of the citizens of Cynthiana became discouraged and decided to leave the town, but others remained and organized a defense. The town was completely destroyed, and the Union forces pursued the fleeing Confederates, who were forced to retreat. The battle was finally ended by nightfall, and the Union forces had the victory.

Cynthiana received a message from General Morgan, who said that he had defeated the Confederate forces and that the town was secure. The people of Cynthiana were overjoyed, and celebrations were held to commemorate the victory.

The following day, the people of Cynthiana were given a tour of the town by the Union forces, who showed them the destruction caused by the battle. The people were shocked and saddened by the outcome, but they were also grateful for the victory.

Cynthiana's future was uncertain, but the people remained strong and determined. They knew that they would overcome any obstacle and that they would continue to fight for their cause. The people of Cynthiana were proud of their history and of their city, and they were determined to protect it.

Cynthiana's Sentiments Divided In War Between States

The people of Cynthiana were divided in their opinions on the war. Some were in favor of the Union, while others supported the Confederates. The town was a divided community, and the conflict continued to rage.

Cynthiana's Celebration

The people of Cynthiana held a celebration to commemorate their victory. They gathered in the town square, where speeches were given in praise of the Union forces and in memory of those who had fallen in battle. The celebration was a time of remembrance and joy, as the people of Cynthiana came together to honor their hero.

Cynthiana's Sentiments Divided In War Between States

Despite the celebrations, the people of Cynthiana remained divided in their opinions on the war. They were unsure of what the future held, but they knew that they would continue to fight for their cause. The people of Cynthiana were determined to overcome any obstacle and to protect their city.

Gen. Boswell Ran Store For 22 Years At Leesburg

This old brick building in Leesburg was turned to new use when automobile-generated (Kentucky). He was well known in the Leesburg area as a merchant, a physician, and a civic leader. Boswell built and operated the store during his early years of running the town's store. His influence was widespread, and he became a prominent figure in the community.

During the time around 1850, people found themselves in need of basic necessities. Boswell's store, situated on a corner where today's City Hall stands, offered a variety of goods and services to the local population. The store was a hub of social activity, with customers often stopping to chat and exchange news.

In addition to selling goods, Boswell also maintained a pharmacy, providing medical services to his customers. His knowledge and expertise in medicine were highly valued by the people of Leesburg, who relied on him for their healthcare needs.

The store was not only a place of commerce but also a gathering place. Events such as elections, meetings, and social gatherings were often held in the store, making it an important part of the community's fabric.

After Boswell's death in 1850, the store continued to operate under the guidance of his heirs. The family's commitment to community service was evident in their management of the store, which remained a vital part of Leesburg's history for many years.

Today, the building serves as a museum, preserving the history of the store and the community it once served.
The land on which this old house is built is part of the original Grant Survey made by Col. Enos Grant in 1808. It was bought by George C. Deming, the first resident, in 1813. George Hamilton, who lived there at one time, was a descendant of that first settler.

The Deming family lived there for three years. Their house was on the arrival of Franklin B. Lebus from San Francisco, Mr. Lebus bought it from Mrs. Joseph C. Cromwell in 1846, at a price not unlike the price it was sold for 90 years ago. There are no records of the sale, but it is believed that the house was sold to Mr. Lebus for $1000. The house, as it is today, is the same as it was when it was built in 1813.

The house was built by Col. Enos Grant in 1808. It is said to be the oldest house in the city of Cynthiana. The house has been in the family of the Deming family since 1813, when it was sold to George C. Deming. The Demings lived there for three years, and then sold it to Mr. Lebus.

They built the east rooms and two long rooms, one across the front and one behind the house. In the corner of their two-daughters, they built a frame house. The house at that time was covered with lath and the frame walls were covered with lath, then covered with tin once. The house was built by the three brothers, Bob Northcutt and Bob and Ruth Northcutt, respectively. The roof was covered with old tin. The house was built by the three Northcutt brothers.

In 1890 the Manselmanns sold the place to Will D. Frazer. He came there to live with his wife and family. His only child, Jeanine Williams Frazer, lived with his grandparents in the house. She was born in 1901.

Father's Advice To His Daughters

My Dear Daughters,

I have for some time felt that I should write to you and give you some advice that I feel capable of giving on account of my past experiences during my long life. I have been through the fires that may be put to your best advantage or be harmful to you if they are not properly managed.

As you have been brought up in a community where the best and most respectable people live, you will be likely to meet with many of them during your life. It is therefore desirable that you should be instructed in the rights and duties of a citizen and that you should know how to conduct yourself in the presence of good people.

You should not desire to ascend a nichie position, and I pray that you will avoid any kind of job at which you may be engaged until you have heard in your workshop of the virtues and the duties of a tradesman. If you have the opportunity of working in a more desirable manner, you should take advantage of it.

I have seen many instances of young people who have been engaged in trades that were below their station, and I have observed that they have not been rewarded with the same amount of profit as those who have been engaged in more respectable callings.

I hope that you will listen to the advice I give you, and that you will follow my example in your conduct. You will then be likely to succeed in all your undertakings.

With love and affection,
Your Father.

Hanged For Killing Wife

Deathbed Confession Cleared David Sheely—
But 40 Years Too Late

EDITOR'S NOTE: Information contained in this story was obtained from a book, "Kentucky Lawmen," written by Judge Mac Swinford of Cynthiana. We acknowledge this source of information and extend our thanks to Judge Swinford for permission to use it.

By Bob Watson, Democrat Editor

Many years have come and gone—122 in fact. Once David Sheely was convicted and hanged for killing his wife. She was exonerated, but 40 years too late.

In 1847, the Sheely family was living in Harrodsburg, Kentucky. David Sheely was a young farmer living with his wife, Nancy Ann Sheely, and their two children. One day, while working in the field, Sheely heard his wife scream and rush into the house. When he arrived, he found that Nancy Ann had been killed by an unknown assassin.

A third witness, Dr. W. H. A. Worthum, testified to marks indicative of violence about the victim's neck, arms, and a bruise on the elbow and hip. The wounds, the physician said, were not sufficient to produce death, but the indentation on the left side of the throat gave evidence of violence from the right hand between the thumb and first finger, which was sufficient to produce death of the individual by stopping respiration.

Two other witnesses, William Smith and Robert Hereford, testified that there was a struggle after the murder, that they saw the body and were of the opinion the woman had been choked to death.

The only witness who testified for the defense was the accused man. He was very emotional and answered questions by the attorney for the Commonwealth with a tear in his eye. When the prosecutor asked him if he had killed Nancy Ann, Sheely replied, "I don't know it. I never heard him." He could not have killed her, he said, because his wife was positively identified as the murderer.

In the end, the jury found David Sheely guilty of murder and he was sentenced to be hanged on October 10, 1847. However, the words of David Sheely were never heard in court, and the story of his innocence was buried with him on the gallows.

Nevertheless, his story of innocence lives on, a testament to the possibility of redemption even after years of suffering.
Deathbed Confession

The photograph was made around 1955 of the elegant Palladian-Bibliotheca Fike on the Okhla Grist Mill property known as "The Grange," the estate of Pernell Perry Ivory, his wife, Mary Emmett Davis, and their son, John. The photograph shows the home and its surroundings, including the mill, the gardens, and the surrounding countryside.

The photograph captures the serene beauty of the estate, with the mill in the background and the gardens in the foreground. The house is surrounded by trees and grass, creating a peaceful and tranquil atmosphere.

The house is a large, three-story structure with a portico and columns, typical of Palladian architecture. The garden is well-maintained, with flower beds and lawns that stretch out towards the mill. The mill, with its waterwheel and stone walls, is a testament to the industrial history of the area.

The photograph is a window into the past, offering a glimpse of the lives and activities that took place in this elegant estate. It is a reminder of the beauty and grandeur of the Okhla Grist Mill property, a place that has come to be known as "The Grange."
The Strange Story of Margaret Goudy

The "Chronicles of Cynthiana," a book written and compiled in 1894, contains this brief but intriguing entry about a young woman named Margaret Goudy, who was born on May 6, 1792, and died on October 12, 1814. She has been described as a "woman of many accomplishments." The following is a transcription of the entry, which gives us a glimpse into her life:

"Here lies the innocent—though proceeded.

This old house is in McDaniel House, a historic property in Lexington, Kentucky. The house was built in 1820 and is one of the oldest surviving homes in the city. It contains 1,460 acres and is surrounded by beautiful, peaceful countryside. The house was originally a farm and has been in the same family for 130 years. It was once used to raise canaries and has since been converted into a beautiful, peaceful looking old house.

Ancient Kiln In Home

Same Family Lived In McDaniel House 130 Years

When the old family members of the McDaniel House took over the property, they found an ancient kiln in which bricks for the house were burned in the 1820s. A pond now stands near the house where the clay for the bricks was excavated. The inside plaster for the walls was also made from the same clay mixed with lime, as was the mortar used to build the house.

Old Home Was Built
As A Wedding Present

This old house, now the bustling St. George's, 1 1/2 miles from Cynthiana, was the site of a 16-mile race road, which was torn up as a wedding present for John William Smith and his bride in 1869. The dedication was on May 4, 1869, with Newt. L. Martin officiating.

Another of the rare deeds to be found in the Attic Room of the Harrison Motor Company, this house was a landmark in the area for many years. It was built by John Williams after his father's death and was the home of John's brother, James, who was a prominent local figure.

In 1919, Mrs. John Williams, who was in her 90s, had just moved into the house. She said it was her father's idea to build the house. Mr. Williams, who was a farmer, knew that the house would be a landmark for the community.

The house was built in 1869 and was the site of many important events. It was the home of the Smith family for many years and was the site of many weddings and other events.

The house was designed in the Victorian style and was decorated with antiques and other period pieces. It was a popular destination for tourists and was a favorite spot for local residents.

The house was torn down in 1940 and was replaced by a new building. The new building was designed to be more modern and was decorated with a mix of contemporary and antique pieces.

The new building was used as a garage and as a storage facility for the Harrison Motor Company. It was later converted to a office space and was used as an office for the company.

Abdall Park Went Up In Flames

By Bob Warner

The Lightning retumcd to the old graceful spire of the steeple, which had been torn down. The delicate chimes were stopped. The clock was destroyed. The time was 11 p.m.

The old grandstand at the park was a scene of arches, columns, and statuary, but the only thing standing now was a pile of rubble and debris.

From the Park came the redundancies and the sounds of the battle. The night was filled with the sound of musketry, the crackling of rifle fire, the dull roar of artillery, and the whine of bullets. The air was thick with the acrid smell of gunpowder.

The Journal people considered the battle a turning point in the war. The Confederates had been victorious. The Federals were on the retreat. The war was not yet over.

The Journal was a small weekly newspaper that had been founded in 1860. It had survived the Civil War, and it was a testament to the resilience of the community.

When the war was over, the Journal continued to publish, and it became aVoice of the people, a Voice of the war. It was a Voice of the future.

"You Are An Awful Girl, Sue Mundy"

March 7, 1865 - Louisville

By Thomas Taylor

"You have been an awful girl, Sue Mundy. You have done everything wrong. You have been a trouble to everyone. You have been a disgrace to your family. You have been a disgrace to your town. You have been a disgrace to your country."

Sue Mundy was born on a farm in Kentucky. She was the daughter of John Mundy and Mary Clark. She was the older sister of three brothers and two sisters.

When the war began, Sue Mundy was 18 years old. She was living with her family in a small house near the town of Cynthiana. She was attending school and helping with the farm work.

The war was a time of great change in the South. The Union army was marching through the region, and people were frightened. Sue Mundy was frightened. She was also angry.

She joined the Women's Loyal League, a group of women who were supporting the Union cause. She became a leader in the league and helped to organize rallies and meetings.

In 1863, Sue Mundy was arrested by the Confederate Army. She was held in a prison camp for several months. She was eventually released, but she was still a traitor in the eyes of the Confederacy.

She married a Union soldier, and she and her husband moved to a Union camp near Cynthiana. She became a nurse and cared for wounded soldiers.

Sue Mundy was a brave and determined woman. She was a voice of the people, a voice of the war, and a voice of the future.
John A. Lafferty was a son of his earliest childhood, before the event of his country, grain and other produce was taken in wagons to Cincinnati to be shipped. John A. Lafferty, and his father, were with a wagon on his way to Cincinnati. They were both attacked by cholera, and John A. Lafferty died on the train. The train had been started, and the cholera was epidemic. A short time after the cholera began, Major W. K. Walls's first line of travel until it swept away, and laid dying on the way, but with an epidemic train. Darkness was far worse than death. Mr. N. Coleman furnished his burial clothes and the clothes of food necessary to sustain life. Living without water is far worse than death. The weather was scorching. DAVE REES HOUSE

Mrs. Adam Rees, whose homestead was东北ad to the 19th Century, now resides at his farm home. He is a descendant of the family that lived in the area for many generations.

Many years later the house was weather-boarded. In 1927 Dave Rees moved from his farm home to the Amended House, used as the first homestead. The new homestead was on Leesburg Pike, and about a half mile back from the road. The old homestead was removed and once branchched off the Leesburg Pike into the present location of the Pondburn Church, and the land was sold to the Amended House.

The Amended House, now is the 12-acre farm of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Rees, located on Leesburg Pike. It is now a part of the 1,000 acres of land that Mr. and Mrs. Adam Rees own. William Griffith, by name of the house, is still referred to as "the haunted house," the term stems from the fact that it has been so long ago. The original Dave Rees' house is still there long ago. It is now a bedroom for Mrs. Adam and every year one of the old school teachers helps the children back to the haunted house as a gift of the home owner. Some of the family and friends, who lived in the house after the Millcreek fire, were the Frank Parks, the John Griffith and the John Garnett. The John and Jane Garnett lived in the house for a good many years, and Joyce and Jane Garnett have described it to us as it was before the house was remodeled and furnished for home and comfort. The two-story section had two rooms below and two above, each large room facing from the front to the back of the house.

The two-story section is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Rees, and their children, who reside in the home. The house is now a home for the family and friends, who live in the area, and the children of the family, who live in the area, are now the owners of the house.

In 1825, the house was purchased by a man named Samuel McMillan. He added a wing to the house, which doubled its size. The wing was built on the south side of the house and included a large kitchen and a dining room. Samuel McMillan was a wealthy businessman and owned a large farm in the area.

For 400 years, they have been a prominent part of the Cynthiana Community. The story of the old home place in Cynthiana, eleven-year-old Nancy Gar­ nsey, in her own way, played a large part in the history of the town.

The old house was burned to the ground during the second Battle of Cynthiana. The family records of the Gar­ nsey's were lost in the fire. The house was built in 1825 and was the site of the first church in Cynthiana. The church was burned in 1865 and the present church was built in its place.

In 1822, Henderson was born in Cynthiana. In 1829, he moved to Louisville where he lived until his death in 1840. He was one of the first County Attorneys.

GAVIN MORRISON HOUSE

This old house on West Madison Street in Cincinnati was once known as "Greenbriar". It was built in 1837 by the industrialist, Mr. D.F. Morrison, according to an account in "The Cincinnati Gazette". The house was later known as the "Gavin House" or "Gavin Mansion".

When the children of the first Desha master of the old house, became of age, they married and moved to homes of their own, almost all on Desha land. Claude inherited the Falmouth Pike home now owned and occupied by the R. IC. Lanes, and there reared his daughter Sara Snell Desha, now Mrs. Breslin of Cincinnati. Jack inherited the present Frazier LeBus home on the Falmouth Road and there reared his children, Junius (now professor at Washington College) and the last child.

The elevation plainly visible from the burg Road today marks the location of this house which was torn down several years ago. Ben Deaba, the wounded veteran, moved to Newport and his mother reconnected to Cynthiana to live in 1933.

which, being the first house of the kind ever invented, caused quite a revolution in the agricultural world. It also invented the famous "Gouldy Crosswheat".

In 1851 a Mrs. Nicholls and her two daughters lived in the house. In 1853 they moved to the country, but they were only able to get by with the outside world in her garret prance. The two daughters watched for her return, but when she returned, she watched for her return and was allowed to be innocent and remain on the premises.

M. Gouldy built a small house on the other side of the road and he lived there for a while. He was said to be generous and kind to the women who worked for him who had received a degree education already.

Another article, Mayor Deaba, at the beginning of the 1880s was the subject of an article in the "Cincinnati Enquirer" about the establishment of a new newspaper. According to the article, Mayor Deaba was "boasting of the fact that he could get an account of the city's activities, as a result of his efforts, in the papers."

The old house was not known by its present name, but was called the "Grey House". It was built in the 1840s, according to an account in the "Cincinnati Gazette".

The present owner of the house is Mrs. Deaba, and the house is still occupied by the family. The house has been restored and is used for occasional events and gatherings.

GRAY HOUSE

James Gray's great-great-granddaughter, Mrs. Richard Emmett, shown above, is the third generation of her family to live in the old log house at Gray House. The house was built in 1812 and has been in the family ever since. The family has owned the house since 1812. The house is located on Old Ed's Road.

James Gray's son, James Harvey, moved into the present Addison Thomson house in 1813, and here he was born his son, James. James married Rebecca Mayo, a daughter of Mary Lewis, Peggie and Jacob Milson, all still living in Clyman.

Dr. Thompson was a son of James Harvey and Rebecca. He was a great-grandson of James and Rebecca and lived in the old house. His son was James Harvey, who lived in the old house and was a doctor. He married Elizabeth Terry and was the father of Aline Craig Smith, Mrs. A. H. Smith, and Mrs. A. C. Craig, all of whom are still living in Clyman.

The old log house, built by James Gray and his son, James Harvey, is the oldest house in the county, according to its present owner, Mrs. Richard Emmett. The house is located on Old Ed's Road, southeast of the city.

All of James Gray's 10 children married and left the old house except Aunt Fanny and her sister, Aunt Lettie. They stayed on with 15 children after all the other children had left. The first set of children to leave was that of James Gray and Aunt Lettie, who moved to the state of Kentucky.

The children were Clar­ence, Frances, Zella and Elba, all of whom are living in the old house except Aunt Fanny. Here the gray house stands, the place where James Gray's family has been living for generations.

The Gray family has been living in the house for generations. The house was built in 1812 by James Gray and his son, James Harvey. The house was sold to Aline Craig, Mrs. A. H. Smith, and Mrs. A. C. Craig, all of whom are still living in Clyman.

In 1915, there was a war, then in Phoenix, Ariz., where he served for 2 1/2 years. He married the widow of a schoolmaster, who had died in 1870, and they lived in the home with his parents for several years. He then moved with his family to Texas, where he reared their 13 children, and he died in 1915. The house was later occupied by a member of the Ogle family, and the present owner, Mrs. Egbert Whitaker, rear of the house are pieces of the old log cabin. The house is still standing and has been converted into a home for the Whitaker family.

In 1932, when the old house was being vacated, Mrs. Whitaker purchased it and restored it to its original condition. The house is now a museum and is open to the public on certain days of the week. It is a fine example of early American architecture and is a reminder of the past.

one child, Jack and Ava E. Brown, Mr.
Charles Brown, E.
Perry's History of the Magallot family had 50 members and 100 cemeteries and roadsides. Thursday and Saturday were the spring and fall hunt in the old days. In the brilliant colors, there were 100,000,000 people who lived in the state. John, at the age of 17, had the man and the woman who built the first adventure in the house. All the people who have lived at the place since 1842, and the last hundred years
have passed back the story. The Magallot family was in the family
since the 19th century.

Mr. Snodgrass was a preacher in the Christian church and a model of piety. Though the bottle was master of the occasion, the preacher ve-etoed all efforts on the part of the younger folks to dance, "Pleased or Dis pleased."

Running For The Bottle
Mr. W. B. Smith writes to The Democrat of the last time that he attended a wedding where Running for the Bottle was a feature. Of course In these degenerate days
a wedding l not necessary to precipitate a chase for the receptacle, but an account of the former custom may not be interesting.

The last chase of the kind, says Mr. Smith, that was performed in this section, occurred in November, 1836, at the wedding of Emanuel Mann,
father of Judge Russell
Mann of Paris, and Ellen Snodgrass, daughter of David Snodgrass, afterwards County Judge of Harrison. The groom is still living, now In his 82nd year, at Millersburg. Emanuel was the son of Peter Mann, a Nicholas county farmer of considerable wealth and intelligence, and, of course, Ellen was a young lady of prominence. So
