Industrial Growth

As far as history goes, Glasgow's industrial growth is a fairly recent one. Earlier in the last century industries were established here, but they were relatively small and the area was not a major industrial center. However, the last 10 years have seen a significant increase in the number of industries located in the area. This growth has occurred with the assistance of the Chamber of Commerce and various government agencies.

One of the major factors contributing to this growth has been the development of a number of large manufacturing plants. These plants have not only provided jobs for the local residents, but they have also helped to bring in new residents. The largest of these plants is the Glasgow Daily Times, which is located in the heart of the city. This plant employs over 100 people and produces the daily newspaper for the area.

In addition to the Daily Times, there are several other major industries located in the area. These include a large furniture factory, a steel mill, and a paper mill. These plants employ hundreds of people and provide a steady income for the local economy.

The growth of the industrial sector in Glasgow has had a significant impact on the local community. It has not only provided jobs for the residents, but it has also helped to improve the quality of life for those living in the area. The growth of these industries has also helped to attract new businesses to the area, which in turn has created even more job opportunities.

As the area continues to grow, it is likely that the industrial sector will continue to play a significant role in the local economy. With the right support and resources, the area has the potential to become a major industrial center in the region.

Progress Was Order Of Day

The backwash of the Civil War had been in progress in Glasgow for some time. The town had been a major source of support for the Union during the war, and as a result, the local economy was in shambles. However, the town had not been idle, and a number of businesses had been established in the area.

One of the largest of these was the Glasgow Daily Times. This newspaper had been established in the town during the war, and it was now the official organ of the Union in the area. The newspaper had been printing for a number of years, and it was now the largest in the state.

In addition to the newspaper, there were a number of other businesses located in the area. These included a furniture factory, a steel mill, and a paper mill. These plants were all located in the heart of the town, and they provided a steady income for the local economy.

The growth of the industrial sector in Glasgow has had a significant impact on the local community. It has not only provided jobs for the residents, but it has also helped to improve the quality of life for those living in the area. The growth of these industries has also helped to attract new businesses to the area, which in turn has created even more job opportunities.

As the area continues to grow, it is likely that the industrial sector will continue to play a significant role in the local economy. With the right support and resources, the area has the potential to become a major industrial center in the region.

War Memories Led To Death Of Rebel

Old soldier, who had served in the Civil War, died recently at his home in Glasgow. The soldier, who had been a member of the local Cavalry, had been a fierce opponent of the Union during the war. He had been a captain in the local Cavalry, and he had fought with distinction in many battles.

The soldier had been living in Glasgow for many years, and he had been a respected member of the community. Industrial Growth

The Glasgow Chamber of Commerce was organized in 1947, and its first president was Mr. George Polin. Since then, the chamber has continued to grow and flourish. The chamber now has over 500 members, representing a wide variety of industries and businesses.

One of the chamber's most notable achievements has been the development of the Glasgow Industrial Park, which opened in 1957. The park is located on the city's east side and has become a hub for new businesses and expansion projects.

Another major milestone for the chamber was the opening of the Glasgow Water Works in 1967. The water works was built to meet the growing needs of the community and has since become an essential part of daily life for residents of Glasgow.

The chamber has also been involved in the development of the Glasgow Airport, which opened in 1972. The airport has since become a vital link for trade and travel for the region.

Throughout its history, the chamber has remained committed to promoting economic growth and development in Glasgow. Its members continue to work together to support the community and create a bright future for all.

Early Glasgow Water Works

The Glasgow Water Works, located on Water Street, was opened in 1967. The water works was built to meet the growing needs of the city and has since become an essential part of daily life for residents of Glasgow. The water works has since expanded to include a new plant on Bowling Green Road.

The Glasgow Chamber of Commerce is proud to have played a role in the development of the Glasgow Water Works and continues to support the city's water and sewer systems.
Political Battle Marked Creation Of New County

The new county of Monroe, which included the land area which was the old county of Washington, was created in 1834. Nearly a century later, in 1934, it became a new county and was named Monroe. The name was derived from the American statesman and soldier, Israel Monroe, who was a native of the area. The new county contained a large area of land and was formed by the merger of several smaller counties. The new county was home to many local communities, including the town of Glasgow. The creation of the new county marked the beginning of a new era for the area, and it laid the groundwork for the development of the region.

City Welcomed 'Colonel'

The old bank building sometimes called the 'Colonel' building, the place of business for the old People's Bank, was a familiar landmark in the downtown area of Glasgow. It has been called the 'Colonel' building because Dr. George Bridges was called Dr. Colonel when he was superintendent in the 1870s. The building is being restored as part of the life insurance company's plan to build a new office building on the site.

Never Changes.

In one sense The Peoples Bank is old — 77 to be exact — and we have indeed served generations of same area people. But in another sense we're just as young and spry as you would want, for we've changed with the times and provide all the banking services today's fast-paced living requires. But we're still old fashioned' enough to believe in giving the very best in courteous, friendly, confidential service. We started out that way in 1897 and we will still be giving that kind of service when we celebrate our own bicentennial.

Early Stage Coach To Mammoth Cave Recalled By Grandson Of Its Driver

The following article was written by Jerry Smith, grandson of the driver of the early stage coach to Mammoth Cave that operated in the years from 1815 to 1865. The information is based on the personal experiences of Jerry and his family, who have been researching the history of the coach for generations.

Madstone Was An Early Cure

The Madstone Company is located appropriately enough on Madstone Drive.

Glimpses From The Past

In 1815, Peter French built his home and Madstone Drive opened. The early stagecoach then arrived every day. Some old-timers say there were more stages arriving then than there are now. The stages were powered by the horses, and they were quite a sight to see. No doubt, it was a day of excitement and fun.

The Thoroughbred Race track in the Barren County area has received a great deal of attention recently. The track is scheduled to open next month, and it promises to be one of the most exciting events in the area. The race track is a draw for visitors from all over the county, and it is expected to have a significant impact on the local economy.

The track was officially opened in 1875 by St. Vincent's Church, but it is now run by the City of Glasgow. The track is located on the outskirts of the city, and it provides a great view of the city's skyline.

The track is home to a variety of events, including horse races, dog races, and even races for dogs on wheels. The track is also a popular spot for picnics and other outdoor events.

The track's success is due in part to the support of the local community. The track is owned by the City of Glasgow, and it is supported by local businesses and individuals who have contributed to its success.

The track is a great example of how the community has come together to support a common goal. The track has helped to bring new opportunities to the area, and it has helped to bolster the local economy.

Scottie Band Began In Early 20's

THE SCOTTIE BAND [H 715]

The name of the present Scottie Band was that of the Ohio State University Scottie Band, which was considered one of the finest in the country. The band was known for its high spirits, colorful uniforms, and exciting performances.

The band was started in 1920 by a group of students who were interested in music and wanted to create a unique and entertaining band. They started their band with just a few instruments and a group of enthusiastic students who were willing to work hard to make the band a success.

The band's first performance was in a small outdoor venue where they entertained a small crowd with their charming and energetic music. The crowd was so impressed that they asked the band to perform again, and the band's popularity began to grow.

Over the years, the Scottie Band continued to perform at a variety of events, including sporting events, parades, and other community gatherings. They were known for their high energy and their ability to entertain a wide range of audiences.

In addition to their performances, the band also hosted a number of competitions and events, which helped to increase their popularity and raise funds for the band.

Today, the Scottie Band continues to be a beloved part of the Ohio State University community, and their performances are eagerly anticipated by students, alumni, and visitors alike.

Glasgow Times Born Amid Prosperity Of Oil Boom, Never Stopped Growing

In 1884, when the Glasgow Times began publication, it was a weekly newspaper in the tiny mining town of Glasgow, Kentucky. The town was a center of coal mining, and the Times was the voice of the community. For many years, it was the only newspaper in the area, serving a population that was spread out over a wide area, with few other newspapers to choose from.

The Times was established by a group of local men who were concerned about the needs of the community. They wanted a newspaper that would provide news, entertainment, and information to the people of Glasgow and the surrounding area. They also wanted a newspaper that would promote the interests of the town and its residents.

The Times has always been proud of its role in the community. It has been a voice for the people, and it has been a source of information and entertainment. It has been a source of news and events, and it has been a source of local history.

The Times has been through many changes over the years. It has grown and changed with the times, and it has been a part of the community for 136 years. It has always been a part of the fabric of the town, and it has always been a part of the life of its readers.

The Times is proud of its past, and it is proud of its present. It is proud of the people who have supported it over the years, and it is proud of the people who continue to support it today. It is proud of the role it has played in the community, and it is proud of the role it continues to play.

The Times is proud of its history, and it is proud of its future. It is proud of the way it has served the community, and it is proud of the way it will continue to serve the community in the years to come.

CAPITOL BUILDING

The Capitol building was completed in 1891 and was dedicated on October 10, 1891. It was designed by architect George W. Shober and built by the contractor Joseph E. Griswold. The building was constructed of local materials and was designed to resemble the U.S. Capitol in Washington, D.C.

The building was used as a courthouse until 1927, when the new courthouse was completed. It was then used as a meeting place for the city council and as a community center.

Terrible Tradegey Brings
Glasgow's Original Ghost

Glasgow has been noted down as an excellent place for its pharmacists, particularly by a Dr. Brown. "The world of commerce," he notes, "is in the hands of pharmacists." The city is a haven of commerce for those who seek its history and culture. It is also a place of commerce for those who seek its natural beauty and tranquility.

A number of months earlier a very remarkable and sinister figure had been observed by some citizens. This figure was observed by the town's pharmacists, as well as by city officials. The figure was seen to be wearing a hat and carrying a bag.

Finally, a beauty of Barren, the first known in and around the city, was born. She was born to a man who had lived here all his life and remained here for quite some time. She was a beautiful woman, and a very sophisticated one. Her beauty was known to everyone, and she was regarded as one of the most attractive women in the city. She was often seen walking through the streets, and was always dressed in the finest clothes.

We join Barren County in celebrating the bicentennial. We join in the celebration.

dead snake and mischievous boys add up to bad scare for former barren clerk back in 1990

"one of the best movies was the best movie," says denny, a former barren clerk back in 1990.

denny had a job as a clerk in a local bank, but he got bored and decided to quit his job. he then went to the airport and bought a ticket to go to new york.

the plane was packed with people, but denny was the only one who seemed to care about what was going on.

he landed in new york and walked around the city, feeling lonely and lost.

then, he met a girl named susie. she was a photographer and was shooting pictures of the city for a book.

she asked denny if he wanted to help her, and he agreed. they spent the whole day walking around the city, and denny learned a lot about photography.

the next day, denny went back to the airport and bought a ticket to go back home.

he landed in his hometown and went back to his job as a clerk.

but he still had the memories of his trip to new york with susie.

J. B. Hatcher Co. & Square Deal Partner's In Serving This Area For More Than 75 Years . . .

J. B. Hatcher Co. and Square Deal Lumber Co. have been a family business, a partnership for more than 75 years. In 1898, James B. Hatcher started J. B. Hatcher & Company in Glasgow, Kentucky, with a small team and a vision to serve the community. "The store" as the family has always called it was a place where you could buy clothes, shoes, household goods, hardware, and other necessities needed for living.

In 1915, Sam W. Crump, a son-in-law became a partner in the company. That same year, the founder's son was added as a partner and the company began its expansion. Mr. Hatcher and Mr. Crump continued to grow the business and became successful in the community. In 1930, the company built a new building in Cave City, which was moved to Cave City in 1965, and expanded with the addition of a new lumber mill in Cave City.

In 1950, H. W. Hatcher and J. W. Crump purchased the business and continued to expand the company. The company now sells a variety of building materials, tools, and home improvement products.

Mr. Crump was active in the business for more than 40 years until his death in 1950. Mrs. Crump, as a board member, continued to work in the business with her husband.

In 1965, a Ready-Mix Concrete plant was added to the horse cave operation, which became the business of Southland Building Supply.

Tragic History Is Recalled From Happy Valley Section

The doings of the war are the last things one thinks of when one drives across the bridge from Glasgow to Doctors Hospital. For most of the men and women who live in Happy Valley, the war is a blurred thing, a thing that happened somewhere else, and it is strange to think that in the years between the wars, the Valley was the center of a struggle.

The happy Valley was the birthplace of John C. Pemberton, the man who invented the gum and the soda. He was a man of the war, and the war is a part of him.

The Pemberton family lived in the Valley until the war, and the war is a part of them. The Pembertons were a family of the war, and the war is a part of them.

On December 12, 1901, Marconi sent the first radio message across the Atlantic...seven months later we began selling insurance.

On June 28, 1902, Elvin Pedigo began selling insurance to the people of Barren and adjoining counties. His product was a service. And as people came to know and love Elvin Pedigo, they also came to realize that he was a man who could be trusted, a man who would live up to his word. He'd travel the rough and rugged roads of Southern Kentucky in his horse 'n buggy. He'd arrive in a rural community and stay for several days; in 1902, when it was a day's drive to Tompkinsville or sometimes even to Horse Cave, Mr. Pedigo would have to stay in town that extra couple of days in order to see and visit with all his friends and clients. He would always spend the night with one of those friends. And, the story goes, after each night's dinner, Mr. Pedigo would leave a dollar under his plate—a substantial amount for one evening's lodging and meal. But Elvin Pedigo never mentioned it. That was the kind of man he was: a gentleman and a friend, as well as a respected businessman.

In 1921, Mr. Pedigo was joined in business by another well-known Barren-Countian, Morris Lessenberry. Together, they successfully strengthened an already prospering agency. Their knowledge of Southern Kentucky and their understanding of its people were the vital elements of their success. They enjoyed people. They understood their needs. And they helped when help was needed.

Mr. Morris died in 1955, after more than thirty years in the business. Mr. Pedigo was to live only two more years. But both men knew that their agency would continue. And Morris’ son Buddy was just the man—at 19—to keep it going. The road was difficult for Buddy. He was young. And in Kentucky in 1955, a nineteen-year-old couldn’t legally transact business. But Buddy Lessenberry was never a man—even at 19—to let something like that stop him. He kept plugging. He kept serving the people his father and Elvin Pedigo had served. And he maintained that same trust and confidence which had become the trademark of the Pedigo-Lessenberry Insurance Agency.

Under Buddy’s direction, Pedigo-Lessenberry became the largest single agency in Southern Kentucky. But with that growth, Buddy Lessenberry never lost touch with the people he dealt with. He was, like his father and Mr. Pedigo, a good and decent man, a man who helped people when they needed that help. He did it quietly. Without fanfare. His sincere voice and manner were reassuring even during the most rugged of times. It was then that he’d put that great arm around a friend and say: “Everything’s going to be O.K., brother.”

And so today, after more than seventy years, after almost three quarters of a century, after living with and dealing with the people of this area, we are continuing to offer that arm of friendship and security to those we serve. It's a rewarding job. And we're proud of it. With the heritage of men like Elvin Pedigo and Morris and Buddy Lessenberry, we have no choice but to be proud of it.

Oil Strike
Lights Fuse

The discovery of a large oil field in 1974 has set the stage for a new era of economic growth and development in the area. The discovery was made west of Glasgow, near the town of Newburg, and has the potential to provide a significant source of revenue for the local community. The oil company, known as “Glasgow Oil Co,” plans to begin drilling operations in the near future, and is expected to create dozens of new jobs for area residents.
