KENTUCKY'S NAME SMIRCHED AGAIN

Another smirch has been placed upon Kentucky.

A Senate investigating committee at Washington is now conducting a probe into the lawlessness that has been existing in the Harlan County coal fields, and the findings of that committee has found its way into the front pages of every metropolitan newspaper.

Reports of murders, of wholesale racketeering on the part of officials of the coal companies; tales of the employment of many men as deputy sheriffs and peace officers as they come fresh from the penitentiary, fill the record. Much of the World looks upon this situation as representative of all of Kentucky.

This situation has existed in Harlan County for many years. Apparently the State of Kentucky is unable to successfully cope with it. So far as we know, steps have been taken by state officials to investigate it.

During this regime of terror it is doubtful if Harlan County has had a fair election. Not only are people coerced into voting, but the Washington reports disclose wholesale thefts of ballot-boxes. Evidence of six and seven hundred votes being cast in a precinct where there is only half as many voters are prevalent in the record.

It seems that the United States government is at last coming to our rescue. We want the Federal government's aid, although it bares the source of Harlan County to the entire nation. Our state government can't or won't do anything. Our hope now is that Washington will step in and clean-up this den of crime.

MAKE OUR TOWN SAFE

During 1936, traffic deaths and accidents reached new highs. Yet a number of cities and towns managed to lower casualties in spite of the general trend. Six of these cities, in different population brackets, were the winners of the Fifth National Traffic Safety Contest conducted by the National Safety Council.

The Council has now published outlines of the programs pursued by these communities. The program of the smallest town receiving a prize, Wilmette, Illinois, is of exceptional interest, in that it could be pursued, in a modified or enlarged manner, by practically every community in America.

Wilmette reduced its accident deaths twenty-four per cent—from three in 1935 to none in 1936—and its injuries 31 per cent. It adopted the following plan:

Law enforcement was strict—arrests totaled 152 in 1936 as against 51 the preceding year. Magistrate and prosecutor cooperated vigorously. High school students convicted of dangerous driving were "fined" by making them write thesis on safety.

Traffic checks were made periodically, and when necessary streets were widened and resurfaced. All members of the police force attended classes in accident prevention.

The village conducted a "drivers' safety school" in cooperation with three other nearby villages. All of the police, department was kept free of politics—no one had a "pull."

Extensive accident prevention work was carried on consistently in schools.

Here is a synopsis of the kind of safety program that produces results. No community is too small to follow the principles laid down, in an effective manner. Let's make our town safe!

FIRE—ONE OF MAN'S WORST ENEMIES

Civilization began with the discovery of fire by prehistoric man. And for many a human being civilization, so far as he personally was concerned, has ended with a fire.

It is a curious truth that one of man's essential aids is likewise, under other circumstances, one of man's worst enemies. Controlled fire is a boon. Uncontrolled fire is a destroying demon.

The problem of controlling fire is as old as history. Immense progress has been made in the direction of perfecting fire-fighting equipment, and developing materials that resist fire. The fire department of yesterday is a ludicrous thing in comparison to the amazingly efficient fire department of today, even as the building construction of yesterday offered a veritable invitation to fire.

Aggressive effort has been given in recent years toward educating the public in preventing fires—and here, too, progress has been made, but on nowhere near a comparable scale. Some of us have learned the simple lessons that will eliminate most hazards—many of us have not. It is a safe bet that at least one home out of two—and this includes new as well as old ones—contains flagrant hazards which the owner disregards.

In the law, ignorance is no excuse, and it would be a fine thing if that same principle were extended to cover the harboring of fire hazards. Each year, loss running into the millions results from improper storage of inflammable liquids, from needless accumulations of waste, from amateur tampering with electric fixtures, from carelessness with smoking materials. Such "little" things as these are responsible for a majority of all fires.

Remember that fire is a good friend—employed respectfully. Take no chances with it. Care will save you dollars—and, infinitely more important, perhaps your life.

TOBACCO CROP WILL BE HEAVY THIS YEAR

A trip through the bluegrass of Kentucky bears out the contention made by most tobacco experts sometime ago that farmers would raise a capacity crop of the weed this year.

In the state's famed tobacco and race-horsing region, tobacco beds can be seen every few hundred yards. It seems that there are many more beds than we have seen for years.

The tobacco farmer has never been able to successfully cooperate with each other. Well-laid plans of mass marketing and co-operative enterprise, so as to benefit all, have always failed. Last year climatic and economic conditions enabled Kentucky tobacco farmers to obtain a high price for his crop. This year, it seems that all tobacco farmers are raising more weed than they have in the past. This over-supply is bound to result in lower prices, possibly as low as one-third of last year's high.

This situation has happened almost every year in the past and we may safely assume that following every year of good prices will come several of low-marketing values. The tobacco farmer apparently does not have it in him to form and cooperate with a marketing union.

OUTLAWING INVESTMENT IGNOREANCE

J. M. B. Hoxsey of the New York Stock Exchange, recently described some of the Exchange's requirements for listing securities, picking them from a long and exhaustive list. Here are some of them:

The Exchange refuses to list non-voting common stock. It demands that the ultimate corporate control of subsidiary companies applying for listing be fully disclosed.

It requires that corporation statements be audited by independent accountants, except in the case of corporations which are publicly regulated.

It requires that all corporations disclose their depreciation policy, and not change it without notice.

It requires that corporate accounts be kept in accordance with clear, accepted principles of accounting.

It requires disclosure of any change in the collateral financing listed bonds.

It is apparent that each of these stipulations, like the scores of others laid down by the Exchange, was born of but one idea—to give the fullest protection to the investing public. As Mr. Hoxsey said, "The affairs of companies listed on the Exchange are given publicly to greater extent, I believe, than anywhere else in the world." The investor who wishes to, can provide himself with all essential knowledge concerning a corporation.

New rulings are constantly being studied and periodically adopted. Even as the Exchange has outlawed misinformation, it is doing its utmost to outlaw ignorance on the part of the security buyer and seller.

THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

Three federal judges of the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals of the Sixth circuit have taken under advisement the future of the Tennessee Valley Authority. They are Judges Charles H. Moorman, Florence H. Allen and Charles G. Simons. In Cincinnati this week they heard a full presentation from the TVA and from the 19 power companies that are seeking to limit the power of the TVA.

Originally one of the prime purposes of the TVA was to furnish electrical power but under the laws the TVA was granted the right to undertake flood control, resettlement, social development and many other things.

The flood of this year has emphasized flood control to such an extent that much more interest has centered upon the flood control feature than on the electric power development under TVA.

Since the flood it has been proposed that eight other regions be designated and that Authorities similar to the Tennessee Valley Authority be developed to create programs for water control. The sponsors of this development all prefer the word "water control" to flood control because actually their aim is to control the water for all possible uses. They think that the production of electricity should be included but not made paramount.

Of course if the courts should determine that the Tennessee Valley Authority can not produce electricity then this would limit the water development for possible future electrical production as it is undertaken in other regions. It would seem unwise to go to large expenditures in constructing dams to water control without making such projects convertible in case of future necessity and adaptable for production of electricity.

However the prime objective now is flood control, with the development of all recreational possibilities, the best use of land, prevention of stream pollution and navigation development all in prospect as corollaries in the program which envisions the control of water for all possible uses.

Morehead -- This Week

SPEECH: Ben Williamson, who has served a short term as United States Senator from Kentucky declared at Ashland last week at a Jefferson Day dinner that Fred M. Vinson is the best Congressman in the United States.

We are inclined to agree with Senator Williamson, for we have attempted to follow Congressman Vinson's work at Washington and have seen him in action numerous times. Regardless of how anyone

Dr. McCormack, the state health director, recently told us that Fred Vinson was the biggest Congressman in Washington. Dr. McCormack should know for much of his time is spent in the Capitol.

It may be that we are all over-estimating our Congressman's ability, because the people of his district are so fond of him, but we can certainly be safe in saying that he is the leader of the Kentucky delegation, and without question, one of Kentucky's best liked men.

Jobless In Nation Held Smaller Than Estimate Of Bureau

Senator Vandenberg Declares There Are 5 Million Less Than Figured

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, Monday asserted that the number of jobless "is perhaps being overestimated by as much as 5,000,000.

"He urged "an accurate, authentic, current census of the unemployed."

Vandenberg estimated in a statement that only 2,975,000 persons are now out of jobs, adding that his calculations "would seem to indicate vastly less unemployment than is constantly asserted by the labor department."

Analysis Challenged

His analysis was promptly challenged by Dr. Isador Lubin, Labor Statistics Commissioner, who asserted the labor department has never made any estimate whatever of unemployment.

"If Senator Vandenberg's calculations were correct," he said, "4,000,000 more people would be at work in the United States than there were employed at the peak of the 1929 boom."

Downtown, Secretary Perkins meanwhile made public figures which she said showed private placements by the employment service reached the highest level during March for the past thirty-three months and the second highest in the history of the service. In that month, she said, 485,422 private placements were made which was an increase of 22.5 per cent over the preceding month.

These series of week-end developments came as Congress waited for a revised budget, estimate from President Roosevelt, including recommendations for 1938 fiscal year relief appropriations.

Senator Vandenberg conceded that his represent would "represent the greatest number of persons employed in our history," but said it would mean an increase of only 2,167,000 over the 1929 maximum.

Lubin explained that the department made no effort to calculate the number of jobless, but that it estimated 33,000,000 persons were holding jobs in February. Vandenberg put the figure at 38,145,000.

Fifty-six Elliott county club members will grow strawberries and grapes this year, in addition to carrying regular projects. Thirty-eight hundred strawberry plants and 180 grape vines were ordered for them.

Official Magazine Will Be Published

Kentucky Plans Edition Replacing Old Progress Edition; To Portray Derby

"In Kentucky," the new official state magazine, is expected to be in the mails by April 20, issued for the first time as a pre-Derby number.

The magazine, successor to the Kentucky Progress Magazine which did an excellent job in publicizing Kentucky far and near, is in the modern manner—filled with illustrations of beauty spots, parks, shrines, forests and other attractions for which the state is noted, with considerably less reading matter than formerly.

The purpose of the magazine is to attract more visitors to Kentucky, especially in the vacation period; to inform the world at large of Kentucky's beauties, her highways, industries and other attractions. As a secondary consideration, the publication is expected to give Kentuckians themselves new insight into their rich heritage.

The Derby, Derby Festival, Kentucky horse farms, Old Kentucky Home, Keeneland, Kenton State Forest, the 19 State parks and other Kentuckians are featured in story and with abundant illustrations in the 50-page booklet.

Historical Film Is Coming To College

"Daniel Boone" Is Title Of Cinema To Be Shown On Friday

For Friday, April 23rd the College brings to the screen a thrilling historical drama entitled "Daniel Boone."

With scenes depicting Boone at Boonesboro and many other sights reminiscent of Kentucky history, this feature will possess a peculiar appeal to Kentuckians.

The story shows Boone leading a party of thirty families from the Yadkin River in North Carolina, up through Cumberland Gap into the Blue Grass. It shows his settlement at Boonesboro and the fights with the Indians and the treachery of one of the party, Mr. Marlowe and the activities of the renegade, Simon Girty.

Finally Girty and Boone come to grips and Boone wins the battle. Marlowe treacherously steals title to the property of the settlers and Boone, having fallen in love with Virginia Randolph, a lovely young lady of the party, moves on with her into the wilderness to establish a home.

The show for Friday, April 30, will feature Edward G. Robinson in a gripping drama entitled "Thunder in the City."

Vaughan Lists Aims Of College Students

(Continued from Page 1) feated in many of these; in some success will crown his efforts. So on and on, the process of self-understanding goes.

"The college student is surrounded by a vast number of new acquaintances. Old friends have been left behind; new friends are as yet unmade. Much depends on how wisely he chooses his friends. In college, as in all life, friends are either helpful or harmful. That college student who has used sound judgment in the selection of his friends is very fortunate; because these friendships last through life, and they determine to a very marked extent his acting, his thinking, and his general behavior. It is, therefore, important that the college student take time in the selection of his friends, that he understands them and that he chooses friends because of their finer qualities and their sturdiness of character. This is valuable training in the development of judgment, mental and moral.

"Another opportunity for the development of judgment in college is the selection of activities on the college campus. Each college student should engage in some sort of extra-curricular activity. He should choose the activity best suited to his physical, mental, and social development. There are many more activities on the campus than he can well engage in. He has lost touch if he fails to engage in any; it is a serious mistake if he tries to engage in all. The final test of what activity he should join and take part in is a test of judgment. He must decide the question on the basis of his own interests and his own inner longing for development. No one can know just what he can do. The college student, therefore, is forced to decide the question for himself, and thus comes another opportunity for the development of judgment."

413,445 Acres In Cumberland Forest

The work of tracing titles and abstracting the various tracts in this area is tedious and requires much time, the result of which is that it will be a period of several years before the entire acreage is acquired. The acreage already acquired by the government is scattered in blocks over the entire territory planned for the national forest.

Each step in ownership of the land from the founding of the state in 1792 until the present time must be traced, and some of the titles must be traced to land grants from Virginia even before 1792. Because of division of the counties since some of the deeds were recorded, it sometimes is necessary for the title examiner to visit several county seats to trace the title.

Reba Robinson, 23, Succumbs To Burns

The funeral services were conducted Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock at the First Baptist church in Russell. John A. Gilpin, pastor of the church, officiated at the last rites. Burial was made in the Woodmere cemetery at Huntington.

Camp Cook Blamed For Slaying Of Camp Superintendent In State 24 Years Ago

Commonwealth Attorney Says That Jealousy Caused Inez Man's Death

Commonwealth's Attorney John L. Harrington, Paintsville, Ky., this week expressed the opinion that "jealousy" over the cook at a Kentucky mountain log camp was the motive for the slaying twenty-four years ago of James Watterson, 60, camp superintendent.

The Martin County grand jury indicted Harvey Hardin, about 45, on a murder charge after determining Watterson died from a bullet wound and not a heart attack.

"There is no doubt in my mind," Harrington asserted, "but that it (the killing) was jealousy over the camp cook."

The cook, he said, was Mrs. Polly Hunyon, mother of Mrs. J. F. Bailey, said Watterson's death was termed a "heart attack" by a physician. Harrington, however, quoted an unnamed witness as testifying before the grand jury that no verdict as to the cause of death was ever reached by a jury formed by a magistrate to investigate the case. The witness, Harrington added, identified himself as a member of the jury.

The Commonwealth's Attorney denied Mrs. Harless had shared the grim secret of the killing with her husband, adding:

"The first information came from Mrs. Harless herself while testifying before the grand jury on another case."

Harrington said the witness explained her long silence by saying she was "hushed up" when she attempted to relate what she had seen in the bunkhouse.

Mrs. Harless testified, Harrington said, that she was sleeping in the same room with Watterson and that she saw Hardin enter with "a small gun and a small light," and after shooting the superintendent, placed his head up on the floor, leaving his feet on the bunk.

"She said she became 'scared' and 'covered up' her face and did not tell anybody about it until morning, then she told her mother, who notified others in the camp."

Harrington said he "understood" Mrs. Runyon since had married a man named Kankoskey and was living near Logan, W. Va.

After Mrs. Harless' sensational disclosure, Harrington said the body of Watterson was exhumed and the skull taken into custody by authorities.

He said it bore a small hole through the skull and that two examining physicians said it might have been caused by a bullet.

Mrs. Harless said she saw blood on Watterson's head as his body lay in the casket.

Favorable Weather And Post-Easter Buying Keep Spring Trade On Upgrade

Commerce Reports Indicate 1937 Will Top Last Year By Substantial Margin

With many cross currents immediately affecting retail trade last week as measured with the same period last year, an accurate comparison of the two periods is not possible. However, in a surprising number of instances, trade for the week surpassed that of a year ago even though the 1936 period fell immediately before Easter, is revealed in Department of Commerce reports from 37 key cities throughout the country, just received by the Louisville District Office. Unusually favorable weather, vigorously exploited post-Easter sales and some important cities, nevertheless, notably New York, the week's results were disappointing. Wholesale trade on the whole continued its advance movement. The commerce reports were featured by figures from many cities indicating heavy increases in building permits issued in those places during March compared with last year. These favorable figures already were being reflected in stimulated demands for building supplies.

Lunch Date Won Beauty Important Film Assignment

A chance meeting in a Hollywood cafeteria is responsible for the fact that pretty Helen Burgess makes her debut in one of the most important pictures of the year, Cecil B. DeMille's "The Plainsman," which begins on Sunday at the Cozy Theatre.

Miss Burgess, who is cast as the wife of "Buffalo Bill" in this saga of the west, which brings some of the most famous American names of the plains days to the screen, was acting in a Hollywood "little theatre," when a talented scout saw her and induced her to take a film test. DeMille saw her shortly later at a luncheon date in the cafeteria and, struck by her natural charm and simplicity, asked her to take the role of Mrs. Cody, one of the most important in the film. She did, and DeMille gave her the role.

The role is second only to that of beautiful Jean Arthur, who portrays "Calamity Jane," the frontier beauty who fell in love with "Wild Bill" Hickok, peace officer, enacted by Gary Cooper.

The role of "Buffalo Bill" is played by James Ellison, while McCall, notorious frontier character, is enacted by Porter Hall; John Litterer, gun-runner, is Charles Bickard, and a 3,000 Cheyenne braves, 250 United States Army cavaliers, and a host of others give the traditional film produced in the traditional DeMille "epic" manner.

The Story Thus Far: The services of Nick Charles, noted detective, and his wife, Nora, are enlisted by Selma Landis, Nora's cousin, to help her find her missing playboy husband, Robert. The Charleses come on Robert in a Chinese night club, but she slips away with Polly Byrnes, a cabaret singer, to keep a rendezvous with young David Graham. The latter gives him $25,000 in bonds on the promise he will divorce Selma. Robert then goes for his valise, Selma follows him, finds him shot dead. David finds her standing by the body and takes away the revolver she is carrying. She rushes home, persuades Nora to go secretly to David and tell him she is innocent.

CHAPTER SIX

David was standing listening nervously to the radio. New Year's gaily mingled over the air with terse, dramatic news flashes of the killing of Robert Landis. The fact that his family was one of the oldest in San Francisco gave the whole matter a vastly sinister significance.

Th bell rang David involuntarily jumped back. He tried to control himself when he stepped to the foyer and asked who was there.

"It's me—Nora," came the voice from outside.

David affected an air of casual surprise. He opened the door.

"Why, Nora," he said, "Nick with you?"

Nora shook her head. She stood staring at him. How much did he know? What did he suspect? Selma had told her nothing.

"Just let me sit down," she said.

David's face was a perfect mask as he watched. Perhaps the visit it was a perfectly innocent one. Perhaps she knew nothing yet. Her next words dispelled that idea.

"Don't you know what's happened?" continued Nora.

"Why, no," said David cautiously. "What?"

"Robert was killed," replied Nora.

She tried to read the true meaning of his abrupt change of expression. Then, out of the corridor, a check of the door.

Abrams shook his head disjunctedly. He looked at Nick but didn't get any help there. Then he turned to Dancer. "All right," he said laconically. "Where were you?"

"I went out to get some air," Dancer was defiant and belligerent. "What city ordinance does that break?"

"I went with him," Lum Kee volunteered.

"Where did you go for all this air?" cut in Abrams sharply.

"Air pretty much same every where," said Lum Kee, with a bland, innocent smile. "We go by my car. Ride around."

"You rode around, eh?" flung out Abrams. "New Year's Eve. The place is full and you're riding around!"

The incongruity was too much even for Abrams. He flung his arms up in the air.

"Phooey!" he commented.

There was an interruption at the door. A little, dwarflike, sun-haired figure was on the threshold. The two clotheshommes were bending over to hold him back.

"He's our lawyer," said Dancer. "Come in, Casper."

The new arrival bowed in several directions at once, as he bustled over to Dancer.

"Well, well," he buzzed, "what is this?"

"Do I know?" countered Dancer. "A guy comes in and buys a drink. He goes out and somebody kills him. What are we supposed to do? Give the customers til about the time she and Landis left." "He was just waiting for me," exclaimed Polly. "He wouldn't kill Robert, Mr. Charles. He wouldn't have no reason?"

"I'm not accusing anyone," said Nick. He glanced at Abrams. "I just think you ought to find him."

"If that little rat tries to hang anything on me—" cried Dancer, unable to contain himself longer.

"You leave my brother out of this!" snapped Polly in rejoinder.

Casper tried to inject himself into the breach. He was a fanciful figure as he weaved back and forth.

"Take it easy!" he cautioned. "That's what they're trying to do, get you at each other's throats. Don't answer anything unless you want to."

Abrams dug his fingers into his head and turned wearily again to Polly.

"Where is that brother of yours that didn't kill anybody?" he asked her.

He lives in a hotel on Turk Street," said Polly. "I don't know just where."

"You don't know much of anything, do you?" replied Abrams.

"Phil's always moving," answered Polly.

Dancer looked around for an ash tray. He found it on a table near the wall. He edged carefully over there.

He bent down too quickly for anyone to do anything. The next second the room was plunged in darkness.

"Stay where you are!" yelled Abrams.

But nobody did. There came two shots. The sound of a door crashing. Glass smashing. Feet scuffling. Voices raised in a confusing shout. At the same time the telephone on the desk next to Nick began to ring.

The youth, James Vance Swift, of New Albany, Ind., stands only 2 feet, 10 inches high and weighs "wringing wet," only 34 pounds, but his intelligence is not impaired by his lack of stature. He has finished the eighth grade of grammar school and is described by hospital attaches as "exceptionally bright."

Civil Service For State Employment Is Held Probable

All Positions, With Duties and Classification Being Studied by Department

The division of personal efficiency of the Department of Finance of the state government at Frankfort has undertaken to classify all state jobs under the provisions of the 1936 reorganization act. A letter has gone out to all state departments under the name of Governor A. B. Chandler calling on all departments to cooperate with Paul L. Garrett, director of personnel efficiency. He will classify all positions, with a statement of duties, qualifications and probable lines of promotion, and this department must determine the appropriate salary ranges of the various classes of positions.

The actual study is being conducted by Joseph Pois, of the public administration service of the state government. All employees on the state payroll will be classified with the exception of the teaching staffs of the University of Kentucky, the teachers' colleges and unskilled workers on the state highways. "Classification and compensation plans will be submitted to the state government," are the objectives.

This may indicate that there will be a real civil service system for state employes based on merit, following out the plans instituted by Professor J. W. Manning of the University of Kentucky, who created the department of personnel efficiency, then retired from the position to return to teaching.

Jefferson Banquets Successful

Thomas Jefferson was well feted at the state at the suggestion of State Chairman Robert Humphreys of the Democratic central and executive committee. In Lexington acting Governor Keen Johnson spoke before the Democratic Women's Club, and he spoke again in the evening at Frankfort. The only other banquet to be held in the Sixth congressional district was held in Harrodsburg. A letter has just been received about the Harrodsburg banquet from Judge Charles A. Hardin, now county chairman of Mercer county.

Tom Watkins, retired Government Gauger, who spent over 40 years supervising American distilleries, says:

"Nowhere did I find more rigid standards of scientific accuracy than at Glenmore"

"I've been assigned to a good many distilleries at one time or another. What I remember best is Glenmore. I like their way of making their popular priced Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey—Mint Springs. They use the same grain, same process, same experienced men - - - in making their most costly whiskeys."

Tom Watkins' judgment is sound—Glenmore was one of only seven distilleries permitted by the Government to make medicinal whiskey throughout Prohibition.

OLDHAM FARMERS SOW MORE ALFALFA

With nearly 7 per cent of their crop land already in alfalfa, Oldham county farmers added large acreages this spring, says County Agent William B. Howell. Several farmers sowed 20 to 40 acres each. Mr. Howell believes the county should have three times as much alfalfa as it now has, although it is one of the largest orchard grass counties in the state.

MAKES BIG FIGS IN SHORT TIME

Twelve hogs that averaged 206 pounds when sold at the age of 168 days, is the record made by Eugene Shuffert, a Green county farmer. County Agent H. H. Dickerson points out that they were raised on clean ground. The ration for the first two-thirds of the feeding period consisted of corn, wheat middlings and skim-milk. The latter part of the period tankage was substituted for milk.

Sixty show and saddle horses brought $13,605 at an auction in Lexington, Ky.

Tom Watkins, retired Government Gauger, who spent over 40 years supervising American distilleries, says:

"Nowhere did I find more rigid standards of scientific accuracy than at Glenmore"

Glenmore's Mint Springs

"I've been assigned to a good many distilleries at one time or another. What I remember best is Glenmore. I like their way of making their popular priced Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey—Mint Springs. They use the same grain, same process, same experienced men - - - in making their most costly whiskeys."

The following verses are from a Fifteenth Century manuscript in the library of Mr. George A. Plimpton. As a man rode fast by the way To him these words his horse did say "Up ye will always spare thou me, And down ye hill beware both me and thee

"And ride apart in the plain way So that to sale ye let me stay Yet after watering ride not so fast, Lest that thou chance my wind to blast—

"And finally when thy journey Should be well sped by night or day See me well fed and set also In Saddle, nail, girth and shoe Nor is that false to see such payme Full well in need I will requite again."
