MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Registration for the spring semester starts Monday at Morehead State University but graduate students and seniors won't have their customary places at the head of the line.

For the first time in more than 20 years, MSU will register its students by a complete alphabetical system without regard to academic classification.

Scheduled to register on Monday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. are all students whose last names start with A through G. Tuesday's group includes H through N and the registration cycle finishes on Wednesday with P through Z.

All part-time students enrolling in classes offered on campus will register Monday from 4 p.m. to 6:30 p.m.

"The Registration Advisory Committee decided that a complete alphabetical schedule would be more convenient for students and easier to manage," said MSU Registrar Gene A. Ranvier. "However, we will make sure that seniors and graduate students get the classes they need for graduation this spring."

Registration is conducted at MSU's Laughlin Health Building. Classes start Thursday, Jan. 12.

MOREHEAD, Ky.--Area high school teachers can enroll for up to 15 semester hours of classes and qualify for a teaching minor in chemistry through a new summer program to be offered by Morehead State University.

To be eligible for the program, teachers must have taken an introductory two-semester chemistry course and presently be certified to teach biology, physics, earth science or mathematics.

"The program is an attempt to help school districts in which someone may be teaching chemistry without being fully qualified in that subject," said Dr. John C. Philley, head of MSU's Department of Physical Sciences.

The program is similar to another offered last summer in which teachers were helped with teaching certification in physics.

The dates for classes are: Summer I session, June 11 - June 29; and Summer II session, July 9 - Aug. 3.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Bill Rosenberg, director of Morehead State University's Division of Media Services, has been named United States Judo Team manager for the Fourth Canada Cup International meet in Montreal.

Managing the U.S. team in this international competition is another first for the black-belt holder. Rosenberg is one of nearly 200 U.S. judo referees and the only certified Kentuckian.

"I am exceptionally pleased about the appointment," Rosenberg said. "I think it will be a very enjoyable and meaningful trip and I am very pleased about the quality and competitive ability of the athletes. There are some strong contenders among this group for our '84 U.S. Olympic team."

The Feb. 4-5 Canada Cup competition features Olympic-quality teams from Japan, Taiwan, Belgium, Puerto Rico, Algeria and the United States.

The U.S. team consists of athletes who have attained a second- and third-place point standing for their weight division in championships across the country. Three of the 16-member U.S. team are '84 Olympic hopefuls and one has an "exceptionally good chance," according to Rosenberg.

"Each country is free to choose how they select the athletes they want to participate," said Rosenberg, the president of the Kentucky Judo Council. "Our first-place players will go to Europe for three weeks to train before the Olympic Trials at the end of February."

Rosenberg

Rosenberg plays down his role in the international event. Like his other firsts, he places the new duties under his black belt with ease.

"It is my job to make sure the athletes are there and prepared to meet the competitors' schedule in the host nation," Rosenberg said. "The manager arranges for transportation, housing, feeding and uniforms and makes sure everyone has the necessary equipment."

The Canadian competition is not Rosenberg's first experience with team management. This past summer he managed the transportation for the judo delegation of the U.S. Olympic Committee at the National Sports Festival. The Festival, held at the Air Force Academy in Colorado, is considered the premier amateur sports event in the U.S.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- When the temperature drops, and it is time to turn off the air conditioner and turn on the heat, Freeman Hamilton goes to the computer terminal.

Hamilton, assistant to the director of operations and maintenance at Morehead State University, controls heating and cooling systems in 11 buildings from his office. This is possible because of the computerized energy management system which has been in operation since December, 1983.

"We went to this system to save money," says Hamilton. "The digital computer and the software cost $296,000, but we have already saved one-third of that on our electric bills."

The computer slashes the amount of electricity used by controlling three functions: priority load shedding, duty cycling and time-of-day scheduling.

In priority load shedding, as the amount of electricity being used approaches a predetermined point, the computer will begin to shed loads or turn off certain pumps and fans.

"This saves us money because we pay a demand charge based on the largest number of kilowatts used during a 24-hour period," Hamilton explains. "By deciding on the largest number of kilowatts we want to use, and programming the computer to stay below that number, we can control the demand charge."

The computer is programmed to shed loads on a priority basis, with heat or air conditioning turned off first in the least-used buildings.

Hamilton

Duty cycling means that fans are turned off 15 minutes of every hour. A space sensor inside each building instructs the computer to turn the heat or air back on if the temperature gets too high or low.

As long as the temperature stays within a comfortable range, however, the fans will stay off five additional minutes each hour. This too reduces the amount of electricity used.

Time-of-day scheduling allows the heat or air conditioning to be on only when a building is being used.

"We know what hours each building will be used during the entire academic year, and we have programmed the computer to turn off the fans during unoccupied times," Hamilton says. "An hour or so before people start coming in in the mornings, the computer turns the fans back on."

In some buildings, such as the Adron Doran University Center (ADUC), activities are scheduled at various times throughout the year. In these cases, someone notifies Hamilton and puts it into the computer.

"Before, someone would have had to go to ADUC to turn on the fans," he says. "Now, I just do it here. It saves a lot of time and frees maintenance workers to do other things."

Presently, heating and air conditioning in 11 buildings is computer controlled, including the Academic-Athletic Center, ADUC, Combs, Claypool-Young, Ginger, Allie Young, Radar, Howell-McDowell, Lappin, Reed, and the Carroll Tower of the Camden-Carroll Library.

The remaining academic buildings and residence halls are expected to be added to the system.

Coordinators from area schools also will attend the 12-day workshop to learn organization of advanced programs for gifted students.

Project Challenge begins July 15, during MSU's second summer session. The cost is $300 and enrollment is limited to 45 students. Students earn two to three hours of college credit.

The fee covers tuition, room, on-campus meals, instructional materials, lab fees, recreation, health services and an accident insurance policy.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- As part of what would be the smallest percentage increase for higher education in more than a decade, Gov. Martha Layne Collins has asked the Kentucky General Assembly to provide Morehead State University with an increase of 3.6 percent in general fund support for 1984-85 and 5.2 percent for 1985-86.

Recommendations for the state's seven other public universities are similar, particularly for the first year of the biennium, according to Porter Dailey, director of budgets.

In terms of actual dollars, funding of the Collins budget would raise MSU's state support from the current $20,672,700 to $21,421,600 in 1984-85 and to $22,548,300 in 1985-86. The appropriations include a total of $96,400 to MSU for implementation of the state's higher education desegregation plan.

Gov. Collins also asked the legislature to authorize the renovation of Fields Hall at an estimated cost of $2.5 million. However, no state funds would be provided for the project. MSU would have to issue revenue bonds or use other institutional funds if the project were to be realized. State law requires that any building project in excess of $200,000 be approved by the General Assembly, regardless of funding source.

Budget Increase

The budget recommendations for MSU and the other universities follow the new funding formula developed last year by the Council on Higher Education in cooperation with the institutions.

President Morris L. Norfleet said of the Governor's budget recommendations:

"I commend Governor Collins for facing the issue of the need to improve the quality of education now. Some needs of government can wait, but preparing our young people for a productive future obviously cannot.

The specific program proposed to improve elementary and secondary education is a good start toward educational reform but must also have the support of parents, teachers and school administrators. Likewise, other public universities must form partnerships with the elementary and secondary schools, such as Morehead State University has done in Eastern Kentucky, in order to make the reform movement a truly team effort.

The Commonwealth of Kentucky must take action to support a complete high quality public education system from kindergarten to college if our state is to truly progress."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Citing the world trend toward automated manufacturing, Morehead State University President Morris L. Norfleet welcomed 21 employees of Emerson Manufacturing Co.'s Browning Manufacturing plant to the first of a semester-long series of robotics and computerized manufacturing classes.

"Our job at the University is to help the people of this region," said Dr. Norfleet. "We hope this training is just the beginning of our relationship because we learn along with you."

Dr. Norfleet talked to the Rowan County employees of the Maysville-based firm Tuesday at the beginning of their twice-weekly, three-hour class in MSU's Department of Industrial Education and Technology. Dr. Robert Newton, head of the department, said the co-operative training is a pioneering effort.

"Right now, this training is the only one of its type in the state," he said.

The class is funded by a $90,000 Job Training Partnership Act grant from the Kentucky Cabinet for Human Resources. The training will prepare employees for operating computerized machines and robots that Browning, Rowan County's largest industrial employer, will begin using by mid-year.

"This type of joint training is a good example of the intent of the JTPA," said Employment Services Commissioner James Daniels in a prepared statement. "While it won't increase the number of jobs at the Browning Manufacturing plant, it will prevent displacement or unemployment of current employees as a result of the company's switch to high technology equipment."

The workers to be retrained will attend either a day or night class twice a week. According to Gary Koch, plant manager, 30 of Browning's 150 employees will be trained by the grant. All will be learning on company time.

Browning Manufacturing makes power transmission parts, including gears, sprockets, bearing units, bushings and gear reducers. Five new robots will be on-line by mid-June, according to Koch. They will load and unload parts into computerized machinery.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Five Women of Kentucky: 1776-1940," an artistic interpretation of the state's founding women, is on display in the Morehead State University Claypool-Young Art Gallery.

Artist Cynthia F. Kelly, who holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Kentucky and a master's degree from the Rosary School of Fine Arts in Florence, Italy, worked for three years to complete the series. The 34 pieces have been exhibited in Kentucky, Italy, Virginia, Maryland and Ohio.

Kelly, a native of Woodford County, researched her subjects in libraries and courthouses. Many of the women lived before the invention of the camera, so Kelly used written descriptions and intuition as painting guidelines.

Featured are Ann Coburn Harrod, wife of Col. James Harrod; Anna Cook Beauchamp, of the Beauchamp-Sharp Tragedy; Delia Ann Webster, the "Petticoat Abolitionist"; Mary James Warfield Clay, first wife of Cassius M. Clay; and Belle Breezing, a Lexington madam.

One arts columnist said the series "brings to mind the sinuous decadence of the late nineteenth-century artist Audrey Beardsley."

The show is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays through March 9. Admission is free.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Lunchtime Forum at Morehead State University may become a thing of the past if the sessions planned this spring don't attract more people, according to a founder of the community discussion series.

"I'm always open to suggestions or ideas," said Dr. Dave Rudy, associate professor of sociology and co-founder of the series. "We are interested in moving into any topic people find interesting, whether it is on campus, off campus, or a political or business interest. Right now, I've given the Forum a good two-year shot. If it's supported we'll continue, if not, well..."

Dr. Rudy and co-founder Dr. John Kleber, professor of history, plan four sessions for this spring semester. Topics range from hemodialysis to Appalachian music.

The schedule includes Joe Szakos, of the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition, addressing "Life Chances and Educational Opportunities of Appalachian Children" on Feb. 15; Dr. Jack Bizzel, professor of government, speaking on "The Kentucky General Assembly: 1984 Legislative Issues" on Feb. 22; Dr. Ron Dobler, professor of English, and Dr. Allen Lake, associate professor of biology, emeritus, presenting "The Dulcimer: Its Tradition and Sound" on Feb. 29; and Mark Jones, a hemodialysis patient, discussing "Hemodialysis: Life Support and Lifestyle" on Mar. 7.

The Lunchtime Forum sessions are each Wednesday from 12:40 p.m. to 1:40 p.m. in the West Rooms A and B of the Adron Doran University Center.

Lunch must be provided individually, but all presentations are free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Internationally-known violinist Nadja Salerno-Sonnenburg continues the Arts in Morehead (AIM) series with a performance at Morehead State University on Tuesday, Feb. 28.

Salerno-Sonnenburg, a 23-year-old Italian native, moved to the U.S. as an eight-year-old to study at the Curtis Institute of Music and The Julliard School.

She has won numerous music awards, including the prestigious Avery Fisher Music Grant. She is also a past winner of Walter W. Naumburg International Violin Competition and the Philadelphia Orchestra Auditions.

The violinist's talents have been displayed in-work with the Chicago and Baltimore Symphonies, the Los Angeles Chamber Orchestra and the New Orleans Philharmonic.

"Philadelphia Inquirer" writer Daniel Webster said Salerno-Sonneburg's performance is "...big and rich and her playing flows with emotion. Her playing sounds as though it were spiced by risk-taking, most of which works and draws attention to itself."

The concert is at 8 p.m. in MSU's Duncan Recital Hall, Baird Music Building.

Admission is by AIM season subscription or valid MSU ID. Tickets will also be sold at the door. Prices are $5 for adults and $2.50 for persons 12 or younger.

The AIM series is sponsored by MSU, Morehead-Rowan County Arts Council, Inc., the Kentucky Arts Commission and the National Endowment for the Arts.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Board of Regents Saturday placed a freeze on all personnel contracts at the Administrative Council level.

The Regents also approved an across-the-board salary increase for faculty and staff and approved upgrading of the campus computer system.

The freeze affects the University's 15 top administrative officials: the four vice presidents, the four directors of independent divisions, the dean of graduate programs and the deans of MSU's six academic schools.

The move will allow a new president to place a "new team, if desired," Board members said. Present vacancies will remain unfilled and no contracts will be extended by MSU President Morris L. Norfleet, whose resignation is effective June 30. Officials in place will serve until the new president replaces them or offers a new contract.

"This in no way is a reflection of any member of this administration," said Harry LaViers Jr., Regent from Irvine. "We just want to allow the new president to place his or her own team, if they please."

According to Circuit Judge James M. Richardson of Owingsville, the move was not intended to embarrass any member of the administration.

"I don't think any member of the Board wants to cast any aspersions that we're dissatisfied with what current administration members are doing," Richardson said. "We are just trying to send a signal that we want the new administration to control things..."

The across-the-board raise is to use 75 percent of any new state appropriations for personnel in 1984-85. The remainder may be distributed as merit pay increases by Dr. Norfleet.

The upgrading of the computer system, to yield 2½ times the power of the present system, will allow the older system to be used entirely for academic pursuits. The upgrade is subject to approval by Kentucky's General Assembly.

In other business, the Regents:

Approved MSU observance of the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as a holiday, effective in 1986.

Authorized the Regents' Audit Committee to pursue a personal services contract for the annual University audit.

Re-elected Jerry F. Howell of Jackson as Regents chairman and Robert M. Duncan of Inez vice chairman.

Approved President Norfleet's preparation guidelines for the 1984-85 operating budget.

Approved several personnel changes. Included were the appointments of Bill Baldrige as head football coach and Rocky Alt, Fred Mariani, Bud Ratliff, Jerry Mayes and Matt Ballard as assistant football coaches; Dr. Donald Applegate, coordinator of veterinary technology; and Ronald Moss, personnel administrator.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A modern interpretation of the Greek tragedy, "Antigone," will open Tuesday, Feb. 21, as the first of two major Morehead State University Theatre productions in the 1984 spring semester. The play will run through Saturday, Feb. 25, with 8 p.m. performances at the Combs Building's Kibbey Theatre.

"Antigone" is described as a "very dark" play by Dr. Travis Lockhart, director for the production and coordinator of theatre at MSU. Dr. Lockhart said this version was written by French playwright Jean Anouilh during the Nazi occupation of Paris.

"The play has the same plot, basically, as the original...but it's done in modern dress and much of the dialogue is clearly modern. In fact, all of the dialogue is in modern prose, using modern colloquialisms and so on. The impression that it leaves is that the same conflict (as in the play) is happening over, and over again. What he wanted to do was write a play to tell the French people; in a sense, 'hang in there, take heart,' and still get past the Nazi censor," said Dr. Lockhart.

The defiance Antigone, played by Pamela S. Hammonds, a communications graduate student from Scuddy, shows when she rebels against her uncle, King Creon, is representative of the rebellion against tyranny anywhere at anytime, according to Dr. Lockhart.

In addition to modern dress and dialogue, the play will also contain slides, shown to strengthen the actual set. The added dimension reinforces the "Greek origins" of the play and grants more credence to the modern references, according to Dr. Lockhart.

Reservations can be made at the Kibbey Theatre Box Office, at 783-2170. Tickets are $3.50 for adults, $2.00 for high school students and free to MSU students with an ID.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Country musician Hank Williams Jr. is scheduled to appear in concert at Morehead State University's Academic-Athletic Center on Wednesday, March 28, at 8 p.m.

Hank, the son of the late Hank Williams, was born in Shreveport, La., in 1949. Growing up in the limelight of his father's success, he began to play the guitar at the age of eight, mostly performing what he referred to as "reincarnations of his father's music."

Disgruntled with the role, Hank Jr. decided to begin performing his own music. He left Nashville and moved to the town of Cullman, Ala. There he met an old fishing buddy who later became his manager, and in 1975 he released his album "Hank Williams Junior and Friends."

According to a Warner Brothers' press release, the album aided in his "proclamation of emergence from his father's legendary shadow and his determination to play music his way."

Shortly after the album climbed the charts, Hank Jr. suffered a tragic accident. While climbing in the Montana Rockies, he fell. The fall nearly killed him; it did kill his spirit temporarily.

After a brief time, his belief that he would never perform again turned into a personal goal of "I will perform again." As soon as he could sit up after the accident, Hank Williams Jr. propped a guitar in his lap and set out to prove a point to himself.

He is called a progressive country rocker and nearly anything can be heard or seen during one of Hank Jr.'s shows. As one critic wrote, "... seeing Hank Williams Jr. live on stage is electrifying."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Richard and Freida Cyrus will bring an unusual distinction to Morehead State University's mining technology program when they graduate this spring. The Lawrence County natives will be the first brother-and-sister team to receive degrees at MSU in the study of coal production.

The unusual distinction was not jointly planned. Freida began her studies in a different field and later came to mining tech. Richard knew what he wanted to study from the start.

"Mining tech had everything I wanted as far as being a growing field," he said. "It's fairly open for new people, and I just enjoyed the work."

Richard came into the program in 1979, when the study area was only nine years old. Freida came a year later with notions of an entirely different career.

She tried classes in accounting and then government. Neither suited her.

"I heard Rick talk about some of his mining tech classes and decided to take one or two of them as electives," said Freida.

She soon was the second member of the family to enter the mining technology program.

The program does not prepare a student for a specific job within the coal industry, but offers study options such as reclamation, health and safety and mining. The classes and lab work give the student a broad overview of the entire coal industry, according to Forrest Cameron, assistant professor and coordinator of the program:

Freida says there were times she didn't feel like a leader, especially when she was the only female in a classroom of male students.

"I remember in one class we took a tour of a mine and we had to crawl on our hands and knees through some of it. The guys teased me and said that I wouldn't make it but," she said, "I did, and I thought it was fun."

Richard or Freida, and other graduates of the program, will have an advantage in the coal job market because of their broad background in all educational areas, according to Cameron.

"If a person goes into the coal industry without the broad overview a college education can bring, they must be trained at company expense," he said. "Then they are likely to be trained only in one particular area, or one particular process or one piece of machinery."

Cameron said Freida and Rick are unique as the first pair of siblings to complete the program together, but as natives of a coal producing area they are typical of most students who enter mining tech.

Richard will return to Lawrence County to find work. He said coal-field management, production, transportation, and purchasing are among the employment areas he will explore.

Freida is undaunted by the male-dominated field, but will not explore the job market right away.

"I just like school. I plan to go to grad school and work on my master's in business education," she said.

She plans to join her brother in Eastern Kentucky sometime in the future.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Phil Kenkel, a 27-year-old agribusiness specialist, is implementing the newest regional service program offered by Morehead State University's Appalachian Development Center.

"Agribusiness" describes both income producing farm activities--such as the sale of crops, livestock, and timber--and farm-related industries such as farm supply stores and marketing services.

Kenkel holds a bachelor's degree in agriculture economics and a master's degree in business administration from the University of Kentucky. He has worked on his father's Jessamine County farm since junior high school, and managed a Lexington horse farm before coming to Morehead.

"Phil's actual farm experience, plus his degrees in agriculture and business, give him a strong and flexible background for this position," said ADC Director Dr. Donald Fogus. "He can relate equally well to the small farmer or the more complex businesses which serve the farmer."

Kenkel's role is to promote agribusiness development within the 49 Eastern Kentucky counties served by ADC. He is currently working to identify agricultural enterprises which can be developed as model programs and offered to the region's farmers. Kenkel works closely with existing state and federal agencies, and relies heavily on the expertise of MSU's Department of Agriculture.

MSU and Educational Excellence: A Regional Commitment

Partnership with the Public Schools: Part 1 of a series.

Morehead State University

Morehead, KY 40351
606-783-2030

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University and 12 Eastern Kentucky school districts aren't waiting for truckloads of money before tackling the drought in quality education.

In a program initiated last fall, educators from MSU and the regional systems have formed a partnership to upgrade the reading and mathematics test scores of area high school students.

The "Partnership with the Public Schools" began with a daylong workshop at MSU which included nationally-known experts, MSU faculty members, and regional secondary school staffers.

Dr. George Troutt, MSU's coordinator of teacher in-service, said the partnership approach was meticulous.

"We invited the chairpersons of the English and mathematics departments and the high school principal from each school system," said Dr. Troutt. "We also invited members of each department so that the teams from each school had four or five members."

Ten school systems attended the first workshop and two have joined since. Presently included are Bath, Carter, Fleming, Greenup, Lawrence, Magoffin, Pike, Rowan, Montgomery and Morgan County School Systems, and the Fairview and Russell independent systems.

"We probably will end up with a partnership of more than 20 districts," said Dr. Troutt.

Many of the problems the school districts identified were similar, some nearly word-for-word.

School Workshop

"More mathematics for the students," said several. "Need a placement-type test for the students preparing for college," said others. "Need assistance in teaching use of computers as a remedial tool in math and reading," said one school system. "Workshop during the summer on reading," said some.

Solutions to the problems are coming.

Dr. Glenn E. Johnston, head of MSU's Department of Mathematical Sciences, and Dr. Ben V. Flora, professor of mathematics, are working with senior high school mathematics faculties in each of the partnership systems. Upgrading teaching materials and methods are the goals of their weekly in-service work.

The department is also developing a senior math course to extend skills of students preparing for college.

For computer instruction, the Department of Mathematics uses 12 transportable microcomputers. The machines are used to introduce secondary faculty to computers as a mathematics teaching tool.

"Many school systems have their own computers, but we have these for those who don't," said Dr. Johnston.

Solutions are also surfacing on the reading side of the dilemma, according to Dr. Troutt.

"We are planning three regional conferences this spring," he said. "One at Carter Caves State Resort Park, another at Greenbo Lake State Resort Park, and the third at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park."

Dr. Diane Ris, associate professor of education, has made plans for reading-in-the-content-area projects with the partnership schools.

School Workshop

"At the regional conferences we will meet with representatives from the schools and find out what they want, whether it's in-service classes on occasion or a regular content area class at their school," said Dr. Ris.

Content area reading skills are taught to students when they are in an unrelated class: history, for example.

"Reading in the content area emphasizes methods of improving students' reading while teaching them in another study area," said Dr. Ris.

Concentrating on improving reading abilities offers tangible results, according to Dr. Troutt. He cites the example of Colleta Grindstaff, assistant professor of education, and her work with pilot projects at Salt Lick and Haldeman elementary schools.

"Colleta Grindstaff has helped raise reading scores at those two schools by four grade levels, in some instances," said Dr. Troutt. "The entire faculty teaches reading; even physical education teachers teach for one hour a day."

The long-range goals of the partnership should not be set in stone, according to Dr. Troutt.

"We will continue to collect needs and suggestions from teachers and build a pool of varying strategies from there," he said. "The only goal we have overall is to raise the skill level of math and reading in secondary schools. Scores will rise in those areas."

MSU and Educational Excellence: A Regional Commitment

Adult Education: Part 2 of a series.

Office of News Services

UPO Box 1100
Morehead, KY 40351
606-783-2030

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- During the past two years, Morehead State University's Appalachian Adult Learning Center has helped more than 125 people earn their high school degree equivalents. Nearly 1,000 students have begun working in the Center's facilities to improve their inadequate or non-existent educational skills.

"People may have never been comfortable with illiteracy, but," said Bonnie Burns, Center coordinator, "now they're doing something about it."

The Center, a part of MSU since 1971, approaches the problems of adult education in several ways. Most obvious, of course, is the attention given to people who walk into the offices on Second Street. Anyone asking for help gets it. Burns, Assistant Coordinator Jennifer Cogswell and a work-study student take care of the growing number of applicants.

"We figure that about 300 people a year come in," she said. "That number is growing all the time. People are becoming more aware of their need for education."

The visitors to the ALC are offered several options, depending on their educational level and goals. While the General Educational Development tests and the resulting High School Equivalency Certificate is the goal of many, others need more preparation. Burns uses a basic test to determine direction.

Adult Education

"We give many adults the Test of Adult Basic Education, or TABE," Burns said. "This places them at a need level, so we know where to start with them."

The TABE is for non-reading adults and higher on the educational level. Various self-help study programs and individual coursework taught by ALC employees are available for most of the tested students. For those whose educational level is below the fifth-grade reading level, another program was started in the fall of 1983.

The Rowan County Adult Volunteer Adult Literacy Program reaches students in MSU's immediate vicinity who need more direct attention.

A retired teacher is coordinator of the program and volunteers make up the staff of the one-to-one approach to improve reading skills.

Burns said the program began quietly and with little available facilities other than the ALC. Now, local churches and the public library have offered facilities for study areas and reading rooms.

Another unique offering, the "Sentence to Read" School-Court-Reading Consortium, is a one-of-a-kind program in the state. The Center is one of many organizations supporting the program, according to C. J. Bailey of Mt. Sterling.

"It's a consortium of school systems, district court judges, the Job Training Partnership Act, or JTPA, and Pathways," said Bailey, a Pathways, Inc., counselor and coordinator of the program. "Essentially, instead of placing truant or misbehaving juveniles in conflict with the judicial system, we teach them to read."

Adult Education
3-3-3-3-3-3-3

The Bureau of Manpower Services and the TEN-CO Private Industry Council, which administrates the JTPA grant money, also support the "Sentence to Read" program. Burns said the ALC offers technical assistance and space for the paraprofessional who works with the juveniles in the Rowan County segment of the program.

"Sometimes the students just need a little tender loving care," Burns said. "We offer them the space to study and the attention they need to improve."

The "Sentence to Read" program is also offered in Bath and Montgomery counties. Bailey said the program does what is necessary.

"If it's teaching ABC's or just improving existing reading skills, we do it," he said. "So far, I would say the program is very successful."

Another adult educational offering of the ALC also takes the unconventional approach. "Homebound Teachers," a program that features "house calls" in the name of literacy, covers eight counties and reaches hundreds of students a year.

The 13 paraprofessionals who are the homebound teachers make up the second-largest staff of its kind in the state. And they don't lack students.

"We probably average about 25 students per instructor," said Burns.

Burns and the ALC supply technical advice and materials like paper, pencils, and books to the paraprofessionals. The group combats adult illiteracy in Bracken, Fleming, Lewis, Mason, Morgan, Robertson, Carter and Rowan Counties.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- When Bill Rosenberg left the U.S.A. on March 18, he was set to travel several thousand miles. But the mileage is small when compared to the pride which the trip is bringing him.

Rosenberg, director of Morehead State University's Division of Media Services, was traveling to Europe to assume a new title: manager for the U.S. Olympic Judo Team European Training Mission. The month-long training exercise preceding the 1984 Olympic games is designed to give U.S. athletes the chance to compete internationally.

Rosenberg said his managing duties include "logistics, such as feeding and housing the athletes."

"The manager takes care of everything that the athletes would have to contend with, so that all they have to worry about is the competition itself," he said.

With this appointment, Rosenberg assumed his third national-level manager's title. In 1983, he was manager for the prestigious National Sports Festival and in 1982, he managed the U.S. team during the Canada Cup competition. Though each of these has brought him a degree of pride, Rosenberg admitted that the Olympic appointment was "an honor."

"I feel very honored and very proud to be selected for this duty. I feel that this is probably the strongest team the U.S. has ever fielded and each of the athletes were chosen through a very competitive process," Rosenberg said. "And of course I am very proud of the task involved in my position as manager... to represent a nation, in any capacity, which I feel so strongly about, is an honor."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Nearly 58 years of educational efforts will be commemorated Thursday, March 29, when the Breckinridge School Archives Room is dedicated as part of Founders Day at Morehead State University.

The third-floor room at MSU's Camden-Carroll Library is filled with athletic trophies, yearbooks, scrapbooks, charts and graphs, artwork and other memorabilia relating to the former laboratory school which merged with the Rowan County Public School System following the 1981-82 school year.

Elizabeth Anderson, a retired faculty member at MSU and Breck, is the chairperson of the Breck Archives Committee. She describes the permanent storage and display area as "a remarkable result of hours and hours of hard work."

"More than 50 years of memories are in this room which President Norfleet, Dr. Jack Ellis and the library staff made available to our committee," she said. "Here we will preserve some of the rich heritage that Breck developed through the years."

At the 1 p.m. dedication, Mrs. Anderson will welcome visitors and introduce a brief program, including James D. Reeder, assistant principal at Rowan County High School and author of "Breckinridge: The Name We Honor," a history of the school.

Though the work of the Archives Committee will be seen for the first time, Anderson emphasizes that the display will continue to grow.

"I'm really happy that we have this room for the archives," she said. "The collection is one we want to continue to build. We hope that former Breckinridge students and staff members who have memorabilia will come forward to add to these materials."

Anderson said prospective displays should be brought to the attention of the committee. Other members include John (Sonny) Allen, Shirley Blair, Frank Burns, Larry Dales, Harlen Hamm, Hazel Martin and John Vanhoose.

The laboratory school was organized in 1924 and named "Breckinridge Training School" when it moved in 1931 into a new building honoring Robert J. Breckinridge, former state school superintendent. The name was changed to "University Breckinridge School" in 1966 following the approval of university status for MSU. The school building was renamed "Breckinridge Hall" in 1982.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The 1984 "Great Clean-Up" of Morehead and Rowan County is set for Saturday, April 14, with a rain date of April 28. Volunteers may register in advance, or sign up between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. on "Clean-Up" day at Morehead State University's Appalachian Development Center.

This will be the sixth annual "Great Clean-Up" coordinated by Shirley Hamilton, ADC's assistant director for community services. Graduate student Arnie Bradway is assisting coordinator for the 1984 effort.

"What we need most is for all groups and individuals interested in working during the clean-up to call us, or come by ADC and pre-register," said Hamilton. "We will be identifying areas in the county--dump sites and other areas where litter is a problem--and will assign specific work crews to each trouble spot."

Area residents aware of dump sites in need of "Great Clean-Up" attention should call such information to Rowan County Judge/Executive Jim Nickell, 784-5151; Morehead Mayor John W. Holbrook, 784-8505; or Shirley Hamilton, ADC, 783-2077. Senior citizens needing assistance with cleaning should call these same numbers to request a free pick-up during the "Great Clean-Up."

Free trash bags will be provided to volunteers, as will rakes and shovels to those who need them. Several MSU groups, including the Environmental Studies Club, will assist with the "Great Clean-Up."

All workers will compete for cash prizes awarded to those who collect the most litter. City and county trucks will provide free pickup, and landfill owner Leroy Hodges will allow free dumping of litter collected during the "Clean-Up."

Community contacts, residents who will coordinate the cleanup effort in each neighborhood, will be named for each area of the community and county.

"The 'Great Clean-Up' is a total community and University cooperative project," said Hamilton. "School children, scout groups, neighborhood groups, and MSU students and staff all work together to clean up our city and county. Last year, they collected over 2,000 bags of litter, plus several truckloads of old appliances. Work starts at 9 a.m. and we're usually finished by early afternoon."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Five Morehead State University students are grand prize winners in the 21st Annual National Student Production Award Competition for their broadcasting documentary, "The Blind on Campus: Problems, Pressures and Myths." The competition is sponsored by the National Broadcasting Society, Alpha Epsilon Rho, and included over 400 entries.

The winning team includes four students and one graduate assistant in an audio production class: sophomore Ann Marie Pope-Baker of Indianapolis, Ind.; junior Paula Pope of Ashland; sophomore Jeff Ray of Owingsville; junior Anna Emanoff of Fairborn, Ohio; and graduate student Tami Greene of St. Paul. The class instructor is Dr. Michael Biel, associate professor of radio-television.

"I think the best description of the documentary is that it has empathy for the subject, but definitely not pity," said Dr. Biel.

"The Blind on Campus" is a fifteen-minute audio documentary that contains narration and interviews with several blind students and some administrators that aid handicapped students. Much of the piece's insight came from Pope-Baker, who is blind.

"I think that really helped the other three students having spent the semester with her and seen all that she could accomplish," Dr. Biel said. "From the beginning the other three members had a better understanding of the situation so they really weren't starting from scratch. She was blind, but she wasn't handicapped."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The 21st annual Northeast Kentucky Regional Science Fair is scheduled at Morehead State University Saturday, April 7.

Students in grades one through 12 who are enrolled in any northeast Kentucky school are eligible to enter a science project. According to Dr. Ron Fiel, MSU professor of science education and director of the fair, students in grades one through six may enter either group or individual projects, while students in grade seven and up must enter individual projects.

Plaques and medals will be given to winners in the various divisions. Two students judged as having the best overall exhibits will be given an all-expenses paid trip to the International Science and Engineering Fair in Columbus, Ohio, sometime in May.

In addition, the top two senior exhibitors will be given a scholarship from MSU. One of the scholarships will be an annual $400, four-year award. The other will be a $400, one-year scholarship.

"We want to dedicate ourselves to excellence and intellectual competition," said Dr. Fiel. "This is why we sponsor the science fair from year to year. It's a good way to stimulate intellectual competition."

The exhibits will be displayed Saturday, April 7, beginning at 2 p.m. in the Laughlin Health Building. The event is free and open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A U.S. Army film crew will be at Morehead State University for three to five days, beginning April 9, to shoot scenes for Army-ROTC recruiting commercials. MSU's campus and ROTC program were chosen for the national television spots from among 68 schools, including the University of Kentucky and Eastern Kentucky University.

"The national visibility and the fact they will be showing Morehead State University as an example of the ROTC college program is great for us," said Lt. Col. Bruce Miller, professor of military science. "It will really showcase the beauty of our campus and the quality of our program."

The Department of Military Science is staging scenes for the spots according to scripts from the film crew.

No date for televising the commercials has been released yet.

The crew will be operating out of a van containing "state-of-the-art" equipment, according to Miller. He said any interested student may "come by and view the equipment."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The musical "Brigadoon" will be performed April 26-28 at Morehead State University's Button Auditorium. Presented by MSU's theatre program and the Department of Music, it is the last major production on the 1983-84 schedule.

"Brigadoon" was written by Alan Lerner and Frederick Loewe, who wrote the Broadway hits "My Fair Lady" and "Camelot."

The story is of two American hunters in Scotland who stumble onto the magical, 18th-century village "Brigadoon," according to Dr. Travis Lockhart, coordinator and assistant professor of theatre at MSU. Since the village only appears for one day every one hundred years, complications result when one of the hunters, played by Paris senior Terry Cain, and a village girl, played by junior Rhea Spicer of Portage, Ind., fall in love.

The orchestra, comprised primarily of MSU music majors, will be conducted by James R. Beane, associate professor of music. Beane is also musical director for the show. Sylvia Layne, adjunct professor of theatre, is the choreographer.

All performances begin at 8 p.m. and reservations are available through the Kibbey Theatre Box Office, (606) 783-2170. Tickets are $3.50 for adults, $2 for high school and college students, but free to MSU students with an I.D. card.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. David K. Hylbert's "Geologic Structures and Mine Roof Falls in Selected Coal Beds Within Appalachia" is the newest research report published by Morehead State University's Appalachian Development Center.

Dr. Hylbert, professor of geoscience, undertook the study to help prove that precautionary measures can be taken to prevent some coal mine roof falls. His studies of mines in five Appalachian states indicate a 50-65 percent coincidence between specific geological conditions and reported roof falls.

This 82-page document is the eighth research report from ADC's Regional Research program, directed by Dr. Douglas Dotterweich. Other reports in the series have dealt with business opportunities in Eastern Kentucky, macroinvertebrates of Big Sandy River basin, and the impact of federal regulations on Appalachia's small coal mines.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The eighth annual Appalachian Celebration, Morehead State University's weeklong tribute to its mountain heritage, is set for June 24-30.

Concerts by the McLain Family Band, J.D. Crowe and The New South and Lily May Ledford highlight the week of workshops, films, dance, and study. The McLain Family Band, featured in last year's nationally televised Country Music Awards show, will perform Monday, June 25, at 8 p.m. A $3 admission is charged to the McLain and Crowe concerts, all other Celebration entertainments are free.

The Appalachian Celebration is sponsored by the ADC as a tribute to the past, present, and future of Appalachian Kentucky. ADC Director Dr. Donald L. Fogus, who oversees programs in Appalachian Studies, Business Development, Regional Research, and Human Services, terms the Celebration "...one of our most visible, accessible activities, a week which offers a unique experience to the entire family."

The Celebration also includes Mountain Dance Week, the Jesse Stuart Symposium, resident scholar Cratis Williams, craft workshops for children and adults, the Appalachian Arts and Crafts Market and ongoing displays and demonstrations which spotlight Appalachian culture. Also scheduled are a banking workshop, the fifth annual Conference On Appalachian Children and Families, an Elderhostel, and a series of tours and hikes.

According to Celebration Coordinator Dr. James M. Gifford, ADC assistant director for Appalachian studies, the Celebration is a family event.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Appalachian Development Center has published a memoir about a former MSU president's friendship with one of the country's foremost Appalachian scholars.

"William H. Vaughan: A Better Man Than I Ever Wanted To Be," a memoir by Cratis Williams, relates his friendship with Vaughan. Vaughan was president of MSU, then called Morehead State Teachers College, from 1940 to 1946. He was also Williams' high school principal in Lawrence County and a lifelong friend and mentor.

An introduction by Dr. James M. Gifford, ADC assistant director for Appalachian Studies, places the memoir into historical context. According to Dr. Gifford, Williams' memoir provides "a beautifully written insight into the lives of two of Southern Appalachia's most outstanding educators."

Williams, now special assistant to the chancellor of Appalachian State University in Boone, N.C., will be at MSU June 24-30 as Scholar-In-Residence during the eighth annual Appalachian Celebration. Williams will present a lecture, "My Relationship Over the Years With Morehead and Morehead State University," at 8 p.m., June 26, in Button Auditorium.

"William H. Vaughan: A Better Man Than I Ever Wanted To Be" sells for $3 per copy or $5 for two copies. For orders of 10 or more, the price is $2 per copy. Proceeds from the sale of the first edition will be used to publish a second edition which will be distributed free to libraries in Southern Appalachia.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Lawrence County beef producer Jim Skaggs said the new herd improvement association formed during a March 24 meeting at Morehead State University is the "best and most promising thing to happen in a long time."

"This new program will let us bring our best bulls to Morehead State University for testing," said Skaggs. "Here, the animals will be feed tested over a specific time, and directly compared to other bulls. We will be able, with the information gained, to better predict herd growth and to improve our herds. The association will help producers find a better market, and will improve Eastern Kentucky's stature in the beef cattle business."

Over 30 beef cattle producers from 10 countries attended the organizational meeting March 24 at MSU's Derrickson Agricultural Complex. The meeting was hosted by the University's Department of Agriculture and Appalachian Development Center.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- From the vice president to the students who hold the positions now, Morehead State University's year-old Admissions Fellowships' program is described as a "key" in the admissions process.

The Division of Admission's personnel see the honorary post as a "key" to reaching high school students, to showcasing two recent and successful MSU graduates and to giving the admission's staff some student-formed perceptions.

The day-to-day activities of the position are close to a job description for an admissions recruiter or counselor. Fellowship recipients visit area high schools and make presentations, meet with prospective students and their parents for campus tours and interviews and deal with high school groups visiting campus.

From the perspective of Harold Moore and Donna Totich, the first and current Admissions Fellowship holders, receiving the award speaks well of their undergraduate record. To be considered for the year-long Fellowship, a student must have had a distinguished academic and extra-curricular career, in addition to completion of bachelor's or master's degree requirements at MSU.

Other qualities are also needed for the positions. Before being chosen from among the entire 1983 class--including the fall, 1982 and spring and summer, 1983, graduates--Totich and Moore showed good writing and speech skills. They also displayed outstanding public relations and organizational qualities.

Admissions Fellowships

Totich was formerly president of the Student Association and a member of MSU's nationally ranked speech team. Moore was a radio-television major and a sixth man for MSU's 1983 OVC tournament champion basketball team.

Diversification, according to Philip W. Conn, vice president of the Bureau of University and Regional Services, is part of the consideration in choosing any two students for the positions. For example, the final applicant screening committee would probably want the two Fellowship recipients to be from entirely different regions. Moore is from Lexington, the central part of the state, while Totich is a native of Morehead.

The applications' final screening is by a committee composed of the president of MSU, the vice president of the Bureau of University and Regional Services and representatives of the Division of Admissions--including the present Fellowships.

Diversification is also a "key" in the Fellowship naming process.

"Each Fellowship must bring their own talents into the way they handle the position," said Conn.

With the end of the first Fellowships' term approaching, Conn said he is pleased with the program.

Recommendations from faculty and staff for the second set of Fellowships are being accepted for 1984-85. All recommendations must be submitted to the Division of Admissions, in Breckinridge Hall, by April 19.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Two wide-spread and still not fully understood eating disorders, anorexia nervosa and bulimia, are the subject of a documentary produced by WMKY-FM. The Morehead State University public radio station's half-hour look at anorexia, an affliction which causes people, usually women, to starve themselves in order to achieve some elusive goal of thinness, and bulimia, gorging and then purging by vomiting, using laxatives or fasting, will air Wednesday, April 18.

"Shadows of Their Eyes: Experiences with Anorexia and Bulimia" will air at 8 p.m. on WMKY (FM 90.3) and on the following area radio stations: WLKS-AM, 1450 in West Liberty; WKKS-FM, 1570 in Vanceburg; WFTM-AM, 1240 and FM 95.9 in Maysville; WMOR-FM, 92.1 in Morehead; WKCA-FM, 107 in Owingsville; and WUGO-FM, 102.3 in Grayson. WMST-AM, 1150 in Mt. Sterling, will air the documentary at 9:30 a.m. on April 18.

"Shadows of Their Eyes" includes comments from the MSU self-help group for eating disorders, insights from a self-help group in Wisconsin and a recovered anorexic who lives in Cincinnati. Also included is an interview with Vivian Meehan, president and founder of National Association of Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders (ANAD). The self-help groups are all affiliated with ANAD, PO Box 271, Highland Park, IL 60035.

Following the documentary, there will be a panel discussion and live call-in program led by Mary Jo Netherton, associate professor of French at MSU, and four members of the MSU self-help group.

Three of these students suffer from bulimia and are former anorexics. The fourth is still anorexic. They are willing to answer questions and share their experiences in an effort to create greater awareness of the problem and its many implications.

Some of the issues to be covered are the role self-image plays in being female today, men's perceptions of femaleness, the role of advertising in establishing our perception of ourselves, the actual symptoms of eating disorders, and the process of change necessary for their cure.

According to a WMKY spokesperson, the documentary and call-in show are attempts to locally address a problem that's been recognized nationwide.

Listeners are encouraged to call with questions and comments following the documentary. The numbers are (606) 783-2001 in Rowan County and (606) 784-5303 for collect calls outside the county.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's 13th annual golf camp will tee off June 10-15. The camp is for anyone interested in polishing their game or learning the basics, according to Dr. Rex Chaney, men's golf coach and associate professor of health, physical education and recreation.

There is no minimum age for applicants, while 18 has been the upper limit of participants.

NCAA recruiting rules prevent the camp from accepting male high school seniors because of MSU's golf team for men. MSU has no women's golf team so female high school seniors may attend.

"It's a chance for golfers to work from 7 o'clock in the morning until 8 or 9 o'clock at night on their golf swing," said Dr. Chaney.

The number of participants is limited to 40 and all applications must be received before June 1. For more information contact the MSU Golf Camp, Dr. Rex Chaney, Morehead State University, UPO Box 717, Morehead, KY 40351.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Two leading prospects for the presidency of Morehead State University have been invited to the campus this week, it was announced Monday by MSU's Board of Regents.

Board Chairman Jerry Howell Sr. of Jackson identified them as Dr. Herb F. Reinhard Jr., president of Slippery Rock University in Pennsylvania, and Dr. William F. Dorrill, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Ohio University.

Reinhard will visit Tuesday with faculty, students, alumni and others, starting at 11 a.m., and Dorrill will follow the same schedule on Wednesday, according to Howell.

Howell also announced that the next meeting of the Regents, originally set for 4 p.m. Wednesday, has been postponed until 10 a.m. Saturday.

Dr. Reinhard, 53, holds a doctorate in higher education from Indiana University and master's and bachelor's degree in psychology from Florida State University.

President of Slippery Rock, a public institution, since 1979, he previously was assistant to the president of Florida A & M, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Tennessee, vice president for student development at Western Carolina University and dean of student services at Florida State.

A native of Covington, Ky., Dr. Reinhard is married to the former Nancy Warner of Tampa, Fla. They have four children.

Dr. Dorrill, 52, has a doctorate in political science from Harvard University. His master's degree in foreign affairs is from the University of Virginia and he received a bachelor's degree in philosophy, history and political science from Baylor University.

Dean of Arts and Sciences at Ohio University since 1977, Dr. Dorrill previously was chairman of the Department of East Asian Languages and Literatures at the University of Pittsburgh. He also held research positions with the RAND Corp. and the Research Analysis Corp. and as a foreign affairs analyst for the federal government in Washington, D.C.

A native of Dallas, Texas, Dr. Dorrill is married to the former Martha Brawley. They have four children.

In announcing the visits, Howell said of the search:

"The Board of Regents has identified these two prospects to come to the campus. At this point, they have attracted the most interest among the board members. The purpose of the campus visits is to enable these individuals to become better acquainted with the University and for the University's constituencies to be further involved in the search process. We fully expect to appoint a new president by our original May 1 deadline."

Howell said the search for a successor to President Morris L. Norfleet, who has resigned effective June 30, has involved the board members in "thousands of miles of travel and hundreds of hours in interviews and meetings." Nearly 200 applicants and nominees have been considered since the search began last December.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Top graduates of Kentucky's mining technology programs may have the opportunity to attend a five-week training program if owners of small coal mines hire the graduates for a six-month internship, said Wes Blakely, chairholder of mining, technology and research at Morehead State University.

Blakely said the training period would cover four key areas: electrical problems, roof control, mine ventilation and mine permitting. The program is primarily geared to coal mines which produce around 200,000 tons of coal per year.

"This is an answer to a current need," Blakely said. "Essentially many of the problems encountered by operators of small mines involve the day-to-day running of the mine. Their time is cut so thin that the operator often does everything from the mine's books to the actual mining."

"Small operators have more problems than larger mining organizations that have full-fledged engineering and safety departments.

"These students enrolled in this intensive training period will have an advantage. They may not have the actual mining experience but they will possess much valid background information," he said.

Finalization of the Student Intern Assistance Plan is incomplete at present, Blakely said, because the organizers are still determining the mining locations where the interns will work. Under the plan, students would work as regular employees of a company for a six-month period, earning 12 hours of credit from MSU.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- An estimated 2,000 academically gifted high school students have been invited to visit Morehead State University on Wednesday, May 2.

The students, chosen as academically gifted students by their school district guidelines, will participate in MSU's first-ever "Academically Talented Rally Day."

According to Dr. George Troutt, MSU's coordinator of teacher in-service, the schools in the 22-county area involved use "multi-criteria for judging academically gifted students." The criteria can include a student's I.Q. and academic achievement, for example.

Activities for the rally day begin at 9 a.m. in MSU's Button Auditorium with an introduction of honors students. In the morning, students will be given the chance to attend interest sessions, including MSU faculty members speaking on subjects ranging from robotics to mining technology and energy. Forty sessions will be held in the morning and most will be repeated in the afternoon.

In addition to the sessions, students will have the chance to attend one of several regular classes. During lunch, the students will be entertained by members of the MSU Academy of Performing Arts.

The rally day is scheduled to end at 3:30 p.m. According to Dr. Troutt, "if the rally is successful, then it may become an annual event."

Also included are outlines for competency levels in music, reading, science, social studies and reference skills.

According to Dr. George Troutt, MSU coordinator of teacher in-service, the forum is being held in order to "react and express concerns about the skills package."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. John Kleber, professor of history and director of Morehead State University's Honors Program, is one of twenty Kentucky high school and collegiate educators selected as instructors for this summer's Governor's Scholars Program.

The program, now in its second year, will be held at two campuses this year--Eastern Kentucky University and Centre College.

Approximately 600 Kentucky high school juniors, selected because of their outstanding achievements and academic background, will participate in the program.

Kleber will work with the history program at ECU. Kleber will deal with the variety of regional backgrounds among the students.

"We will study the history of Kentucky and the reasons for regionalism," he said.

Kleber is the first MSU faculty member to participate in the program.

Dr. Walter Emge, MSU vice president for academic affairs and a member of the statewide faculty selection committee for the Governor's Scholars Program, said he is "pleased to see MSU represented" and "hopes this will encourage other faculty to apply."

Selection of the instructors was primarily based on their applications, three letters of recommendation and written essays discussing how the instructor would deal with the students.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Citing the diversity of Kentucky agriculture state Commissioner of Agriculture David Boswell said at a Morehead State University seminar Wednesday that he "wholeheartedly" supported regional universities and their agriculture programs.

"I very much support the agricultural departments of the universities of our state," said Boswell. "We in Kentucky are unique in agriculture--we have a little bit of everything when it comes to crops. Our regional universities help support this diversity."

The 34-year-old Boswell said at the MSU Department of Agriculture seminar that his record as a three-time Kentucky legislator shows his interest in the vocational agriculture educational area.

"I have helped ensure vo-ag in high schools across the state," he said. "I have also worked with universities in their vo-ag programs. It is my belief that a student with an agriculture degree has a well-rounded background."

Boswell, who became Kentucky's 28th commissioner of agriculture early this year, said the diversity of crops in the state must become even more so because of the recent disclosures about tobacco, the largest cash crop in the Commonwealth.

"We do need to open our eyes to the fact that, yes, cigarette smoking can be harmful to certain people's health," he said. "What we need to do is find alternate uses for tobacco."

The Western Kentucky native cited tobacco's possible retardant effects on some diseases and the high protein content of the plant as use areas to be explored.

Boswell congratulated MSU for its research foresight in the Martiki project, a 4,000-acre agriculture research project in Martin County.

"The Martiki project is a classic example of what we can do in this part of the state to develop agriculture in the region," he said.

The Martiki-Morehead State University Mountaintop Agricultural Complex is a 15-year joint project to research agricultural reclamation possibilities of strip-mined land in Eastern Kentucky, MSU's Department of Agriculture is working with Martiki Coal Corporation and the Pocahontas Kentucky Corporation, a railroad company, to develop the land.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "On the Road Again" would probably be a proper theme song for 16 members of Morehead State University's geology club, but the harmony is bound to "rock" a little more than the original tune.

The group left MSU Monday, May 14, to begin a 21-day trip across the U.S. The trip will give the members an opportunity to view geological features and formations outside Kentucky. They will also visit other schools and meet current geology professionals.

According to Charles E. Mason, associate professor of geoscience at MSU, the trip is "75 percent geology, plus a little bit of history and some study of wildflowers and wildlife." Students participating in the field trip will also receive three college credit hours.

The trip will concentrate mainly on classical geology and geological monuments.

"We plan to take the southern route on our way to the Grand Canyon and take the northern route back," Mason said. "Students will be able to hit a lot of different things on both parts of the trip."

Mason said that although the group will be visiting the Grand Canyon, that this stop was not the only one planned during the journey.

"We plan to visit such places as Carlsbad Caverns, the Sunset Crater, the Zion National Park, and a whole lot of other places between here and there," he said.

Mason also outlined plans to visit state geological surveys, and to study several igneous, or volcanic-type, rock formations which are almost non-existent in Kentucky.

"It'll be a good time," Mason said. "There's just so much in-between, including the chance to meet and be exposed to other geology students and programs and see how they operate, as well as the opportunity to visit other areas."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Former Kentucky governor Edward T. Breathitt told more than 1,000 degree recipients in Morehead State University's 61st commencement ceremony today that "...no night is endless...the light is never far."

Breathitt, vice president for public affairs with Norfolk Southern Corp., advised the graduates to remember the Biblical story of Adam, the first man, and the "long terror" of the first night's darkness.

"And then Adam could begin to see how much light remains in the sky at night; the stars and their enduring promise of the sun, the returning star of day," said Breathitt.

Breathitt also discussed the Martiki-Morehead State University Agricultural Complex in Martin County. The project, jointly funded by MSU; MAPCO, Inc.; and Pocahontas Kentucky Corp., a subsidiary of Norfolk Southern, is a 15-year effort to research agricultural possibilities of strip-mined land. Breathitt said the work is a "shining example" of MSU fulfilling its public service and research mission.

Breathitt was one of four to receive honorary doctoral degrees in the ceremony. Also honored were Bert T. Combs, former governor of Kentucky; Dr. Cratis Williams, special assistant to the chancellor at Appalachian State University, who received the degree in absentia; and Jerry F. Howell Sr., former member and chairman of MSU's Board of Regents who had served for 16 years.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Eastern Kentucky farmers whose tobacco plant beds were destroyed by the recent flooding and tobacco producers with excess plants should contact an emergency clearinghouse program initiated by Morehead State University's Appalachian Development Center.

The MSU effort, coordinated by Agribusiness Specialist Phil Kenkel and graduate assistant Mark Dixon, will link farmers with extra tobacco plants with the Eastern Kentuckians whose beds were destroyed by the floodwaters.

"This is a crucial time," said Dixon. "Planting season is here, and many beds were totally washed away. We want to locate any tobacco plants available in Kentucky or southern Ohio and relay that information to farmers in the flooded areas."

Both those who need help and those with plants to offer should immediately contact Kenkel or Dixon at (606) 783-2077. There is no charge for the clearinghouse effort.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Fleming County farmer Danny Mattox was not satisfied with the way his bell pepper marketing program was being handled. He had a better idea. Danny's idea and the cooperative effort of the Buffalo Trace Area Development District and Morehead State University led to a new pepper growing and marketing program which will serve 25 Fleming and Lewis County farmers this summer.

Danny and wife Carolyn have been farming in Fleming County for 15 years, raising bell peppers under contract for 12 of those years. Last summer, dissatisfied with the decline of prices and services he and his Pea Ridge neighbors were receiving, Danny organized a direct, cooperative sales effort and sold 10 trailer loads of peppers. Mattox had the better idea--the suppliers and the market--but needed help in developing a solid business plan to secure the necessary financing.

The Mattoxes called Wilson Grier, assistant director for business development at Morehead State University's Appalachian Development Center. He and the ADC staff worked with Danny and Carolyn to develop budgets and projections and to request a loan from the Buffalo Trace Area Development District (ADD).

"Our role at ADC," said Grier, "is to do whatever we can to help large and small businesses in Eastern Kentucky. The Appalachian Development Center is MSU's regional services arm, the outreach program which coordinates the University's resources with the area's needs. Danny had the idea, a proven success record, and the potential for a project with tremendous economic impact."

The Buffalo Trace ADD agreed. The Maysville-based ADD, which serves Mason, Robertson, Lewis, Bracken and Fleming Counties, works to assist units of local government with projects involving the use of federal or state funds. Projects include sewer and water systems, housing renovation, and the business loan program which helped Danny and Carolyn Mattox.

"Danny Mattox impressed us," said Buffalo Trace Senior Loan Officer Robert Money. "He came in with a good idea, and the knowledge to make it work. He and Carolyn are hard workers. Also, the pepper program is one alternative to the declining tobacco industry."

A revolving loan fund from Buffalo Trace was approved for Mattox Enterprises. The capital will help finance the 1984 growing and marketing of 50 acres of peppers in Fleming and Lewis Counties.

The Mattoxes have already signed their limit of producers for the 50-acre commitment.. They provide pepper plants and continuing assistance to growers. They have leased a building in Flemingsburg as a distribution center, and have firm market commitments for this year's production.

"The fresh market will consume 5,000 bushels per week during the harvest season," said Mattox. "The rest will be shipped to wholesalers and canneries."

"We grow two types of peppers," explains Mattox. "The bell and Hungarian Wax varieties. We're bringing in machinery which will wash, sort, and grade the peppers. We've agreed to buy 100 percent of every producers' peppers which pass inspection."

Danny's thoughts on the future of farming extend beyond Fleming County.

"The American is strong," he insists. "Perishable, consumable products must be grown close to the marketplace. Non-perishable goods--such as tobacco--can be easily and cheaply imported. But food has to be grown close to home."

Processing peppers in Fleming County is a possibility for Danny and Carolyn Mattox, as is the introduction of crops such as purple-topped turnips. The Buffalo Trace loan, renewable as it is repaid, opens the door for future expansion.

According to Dr. Donald L. Fogus, director of ADC, the assistance to Danny and Carolyn Mattox is a prime example of the center's mission in Eastern Kentucky.

"Our goal, said Fogus, "is to work in partnership with the people and institutions of Appalachian Kentucky. We were able to help bring the Mattoxes and Buffalo Trace ADD together, to work as partners with both, and the result will be a significant boost to the economics of Fleming and Lewis Counties."

For information on the Appalachian Development Center, contact Dr. Fogus at Morehead State University, Morehead, KY 40351, or phone (606) 783-2077.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Faye Belcher, associate director of libraries at Morehead State University's Camden-Carroll Library, has been awarded a $760 grant as part of the American Library Association's (ALA) 1984 Carnegie-Whitney grant.

Belcher will use the money to help complete a coal bibliography. The bibliography, a continuation of a 60-page holding of coal and coal-related subjects currently on file at the Camden-Carroll Library, is expected to contain about 500 individual listings.

"It was a pleasant surprise," Belcher said about the grant. She also said that she thinks sending a copy of the first coal bibliography helped to get the grant.

In addition to the grant from the ALA, MSU's Division of Grants and Contracts has allocated $420 to help with the bibliography's printing and typing costs. Because of this, Belcher said the holding may be finished as early as July 1. About 380 copies of the bibliography will be printed.

"We are very delighted to receive this grant from the ALA," said Dr. Jack Ellis, Camden-Carroll Library director. "It was very competitive because it was national and there were applications from all over the country. We feel very fortunate to have received the grant."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A new, six-month pharmacy technician training program begins July 1 at Morehead State University's Appalachian Development Center.

Students will be trained to assist registered pharmacists with packaging, maintaining records, filling orders and serving customers, and will enter into an emerging new profession upon course completion.

Other six-week training classes, set to begin July 16, are tourism/retail sales, food service management and account clerk/data entry. All four classes are part of a new Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA) program designed to train or re-train workers for the changing job market.

The pharmacy technician program is limited to four students who will train for six months in formal classes and on-the-job experience at the St. Claire Medical Center, Battson's Drugs, Begley's or the Morehead Clinic. Classes start July 1.

The tourism/retail sales program trains students for employment in the retail and hotel/motel areas. Food service management students learn restaurant administration, with on-the-job training at Hardee's. Account clerk/data processing students are trained to enter into the rapidly growing career area of computer processing.

In addition to the classes beginning in July, new classes will start on Oct. 1, Dec. 17 and March 18, 1985.

JTPA classes at MSU are frequently-offered, short term, intensive technical training sessions coupled with personal development and job placement assistance. On-the-job training is part of every class, with cooperation from numerous Morehead area firms, and the program helps students develop more effective work and communications skills.

Anyone over 18 who is certified by the Kentucky Department For Employment Services is eligible for the training. Those just out of school and in need of skill training, workers whose current skills to earn outside income are examples of those who would benefit from JTPA. The program pays for transportation and child care.

JTPA programs are funded through the TEN-CO Private Industry Council, and are open to qualified residents of Bath, Boyd, Bracken, Fleming, Greenup, Lewis, Montgomery, Mason, Robertson and Rowan counties. An eight member advisory board of private industry representatives assists ADC with the job training programs.

"We're working with private industry, offering short term, intensive training to the unemployed and underemployed," said Shirley Hamilton, assistant director for Human Services at ADC.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Academy of Arts at Morehead State University will host a summer Celebration of Chamber Music July 9-20, 1984.

The Celebration provides an opportunity for college music faculty members and other professionals to read and perform a variety of chamber literature in a relaxing and ideal setting.

"The Celebration is a loosely structured event in which chamber groups form and then rehearse and perform as their inclinations dictate," said Milford Kuhn, executive director of the Academy and associate professor of music at MSU. "The schedule is flexible enough to allow adequate time for recreation and side trips in the Daniel Boone National Forest."

The six resident chamber music ensembles, including a jazz quartet, will serve as the core of the experience. Some chamber orchestra performance may be possible depending upon the number and interest of participants.

The cost per applicant for the two-week celebration is $100, or $70 for one week. Other expenses depend on choice of housing and meals.

"The entire family can stay in one of MSU's air-conditioned residence halls at a modest cost per person ($12.50 a day for room and board)," said Kuhn. Reduced rates for children and individual meal tickets are also available.

"Participants and their families won't be locked into just Celebration activities," said Kuhn. "While here, they can participate in other things happening on campus, like computer, NCAA youth sports or other camps."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- U.S. Senator Wendell H. Ford of Kentucky told more than 300 students at the 44th annual Boys State at Morehead State University that democracy and freedom demand involvement for continued success.

"You've got to understand the rules of the game and how your moves affect the outcome of the game in order to be a winner," Ford told the high school juniors from across the state in comparing government to sports.

Ford, a former Kentucky governor, spoke at the Boys State inaugural banquet in MSU's Adron Doran University Center Friday evening. In reference to members of the American Legion, Department of Kentucky, who sponsored the weeklong event, Ford said "democracy and freedom are dear to these men who are here with you this week."

"Patriotism is the best thing we have going for us," said Ford, who was given a standing ovation several times during his 30-minute speech. "We are a compassionate, generous and honorable nation, committed to its citizens and other nations as well."

MSU President Morris L. Norfleet and Morehead Mayor John Holbrook spoke briefly and thanked the students for visiting MSU and the area.

The week of activities introduced the students to Kentucky's political system with committee meetings, lectures, elections of officials to fill positions for fictional towns and a state and formations of political parties complete with platforms. Holbrook and the Morehead City Council held their regular meeting last Monday on campus. Following the meeting, the council held a question-and-answer session for the students. (more)

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's School of Humanities and the Appalachian Development Center are co-sponsoring an exhibit of Appalachian arts and craftwork at MSU's Claypool-Young Art Gallery.

The exhibit, "New Traditions-Appalachian Arts Today," is a mix of traditional and contemporary Appalachian works.

On display are traditional works, including woven baskets, hand-made musical instruments and pottery and a 31 foot by 31 foot quilt that was made by about 300 people throughout Appalachia. Joining the traditional pieces are "fantasy drawings," sculpture, and other contemporary regional art.

"So much of what's traditional and what's contemporary is borderline," said Stephen Graves, curator of the exhibit. "The Appalachians were founded by all kinds of people who brought their crafts with them. After a while, their works began to develop an Appalachian flavor, sometimes out of necessity of life, such as having to make baskets larger to carry heavier loads, or out of the availability of materials for their crafts.

"Even today, the Appalachian area has people moving into it from larger cities and bringing their crafts with them. I think that's the way it's always been."

Graves said the show offers an opportunity for visitors to see and experience this "melting pot" art through the exhibit.

Plans are to continue the display on a year-to-year basis, coinciding with the MSU Appalachian Celebration.

"We've been trying to get a show like this together for two or three years," Graves said. "It was this year that we talked to Dr. Robert L. Burns, dean of the School of Humanities. He liked the idea and he and the Appalachian Development Center joined to co-sponsor it."

The exhibit is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. through Aug. 3. Admission is free.
