MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Being stranded can be unsettling. Being stranded several thousand miles from home with no definite way to get back is awesome.

Awesome is what has happened to the 18 members of the Montego Bay All Girls Band from Jamaica. They are visiting Morehead State University as part of a 20-city U.S. tour.

"We really don't know much more than we did when Air Florida announced that it was closing," said band director Bruce Gabbard, an MSU alumni and Ashland native. "We really don't have that many options."

The band was scheduled to return to Jamaica on July 12 via Air Florida Airlines. But on July 3, the airline company announced the layoff of its 1,200 employees and the company's subsequent filing for bankruptcy. The band was left with 18 non-useable, non-transferable tickets.

The girls, however, don't seem to mind the extended visit.

One girl in the band told Gabbard that she "didn't want to stay in the U.S. the entire summer, but two or three more weeks wouldn't be bad."

"The parents are a little anxious, wanting to know when the girls will return, but," said Dr. Robert L. Burns, dean of MSU's School of Humanities, "the girls seem excited at the chance to stay a while longer."

All-Girl Band
2-2-2-2-2-2-2

Gabbard has set a goal of July 20 for the trip home, but a roadblock is the lack of the $5,000 needed for return plane tickets. Gabbard plans a series of performances and benefits to help the group meet the cost.

Another option Gabbard mentioned is getting a vehicle to take them to Miami, where airline fare would be lower. Still, that route would be almost $3,000.

Meanwhile, the girls have been keeping busy at MSU with trips and tours to places such as Rowan County High School. They've also been receiving private instruction in musical instruments foreign to Jamaica. MSU faculty members have been donating time to teach the girls instrumental basics.

"We're keeping them busy and their time is well spent," said Dr. Burns.

Despite the circumstances, some good can always come out of a bad situation.

"It's really exciting to be able to spend time introducing these girls to American culture and lifestyles and also to learn about the Jamaican culture," Dr. Burns said. "Plus, it's great to see their eyes filled with excitement."

UPO BOX 1100

MOREHEAD, KY 40351

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- New Morehead State University President Herb. F. Reinhard highlighted his first working week as chief executive by giving parents and students at an orientation/registration his office phone number and telling them he was only a phone call away.

"I've had many people over the years tell me I'm crazy for giving out my phone number that way," he said. "But, if I can help a parent with a problem their son or daughter may have while they're here, then I'm doing my job."

Beginning his administration as MSU's ninth president, Dr. Reinhard said his style is one of an "open, honest administration."

Dr. Reinhard, the president of Slippery Rock University in Pennsylvania since 1979, spent his first two days on campus touring buildings and meeting campus residents.

He introduced wife, Nancy, and daughter, Ann, to the media in a press conference Friday. Ann, 21, is a senior at Pennsylvania State University and is spending the summer with her parents. The Reinhard's have three other children as well.

Herb III, 27, is assistant athletic director at Florida A & M University; Don, 23, will graduate this summer from Florida State University; and Mark, 22 will be a senior at Slippery Rock.

Before becoming president at Slippery Rock, he was assistant to the president at Florida A & M, assistant vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Tennessee, vice president for student development at Western Carolina University and dean of student services at Florida State.

In other activities during his first days, Dr. Reinhard spoke at MSU's Department of Agriculture's Alumni Reunion at the Derrickson Agricultural Complex Saturday. He also flew to Pikeville to address an alumni golf outing Tuesday and visited Mt. Sterling Wednesday for the same reason.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Herb. F. Reinhard spoke to several members of the media during his first few days as MSU's ninth president. Some of the responses were made during a major press conference Friday and others were in private interviews. Here is a sampling of the comments and questions.

Cheryl Truman of the "Lexington Herald-Leader" wrote that Dr. Reinhard said the following about MSU:

"I don't know of anything we've got to hide," he said. "I want us to tell it how it is."

Of the administration, Dr. Reinhard said he hoped to install "a far more responsible and rational administrative structure. It could mean eliminating or combining positions, it could mean combining departments."

After giving his phone number to parents at an orientation session, Dr. Reinhard informed Truman that "I told parents that any time their children had a problem and were unable to resolve it they can call me at my home, at my office--anytime, weekends, weekdays."

Dr. Reinhard described his leadership style as "informal, humorous, sometimes autocratic and very often democratic."

"I am one who simply becomes a total part of a place," he said. "I should be interested in every single thing Morehead does. I can't do it all myself, but I can give some leadership."

Interviews
2-2-2-2-2-2..

"The University is my hobby," he said.

In an interview with Joe Lamb of "The Morehead News," Dr. Reinhard discussed several topics, including the chancellor for corporate relations position.

He pointed out that he was never involved in the discussion about the position, but said that "...there were some things that were involved that, maybe even from a legal standpoint, the general public is not aware of. Because it's a personnel matter, I'm not sure that the executive committee or the full board can talk about it."

"Giving somebody a sabbatical leave is not unusual at all," he said. "It may be a little unusual to give somebody that much of a salary, but nevertheless that's been his (Dr. Norfleet's) salary."

"My guess is that the board felt that if he took this year working with the American Association of State Colleges and Universities that could be, in turn, valuable to this institution."

In relation to his stated policy of an open administration, Dr. Reinhard told Lamb that "I want people who want to work hard, I want people with some creativity and I want people who are open and honest."

In "The Daily Independent" from Ashland, writer Paul Gottbrath described Dr. Reinhard as a "workaholic" in huge headlines. At one point during the press conference from which Gottbrath took his story, Dr. Reinhard said that he was a "workaholic--I think I played golf twice last year and once the year before that."

Interviews
3-3-3-3-3-3

"If there are people here who are used to backing up to the pay window, I'd advise them to look for another job," he said.

Dr. Reinhard said that one of his major jobs was marketing the University.

"That's what I want to do here, to sell Morehead State University. I want to break down the imaginary walls between the community and the school. I want people to realize what they have here in the University. I think we've got a real good place here. If some people don't think so, they better look again."

As far as committment, Dr. Reinhard said he and his family are certain of their future.

"We're here to stay," he said. "I hope to retire here. I don't plan to move again."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Twelve years ago, while reading an article on a national sports camp being instituted in the U.S., Dr. Earl Bentley had the idea that he could bring one of the camp sessions to Morehead State University.

Six years later, his dream was realized. Dr. Bentley, the head of the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, took his idea to a meeting in Atlanta. MSU became the first of nearly 150 camps nationwide that was begun in a predominantly rural area.

Now MSU's National Youth Sports Camp, in its sixth year, is rated one of the top three camps in the program.

"The camp has gone beyond any of our expectations," Bentley said. "I knew that our camp was among the tops, but I didn't expect such a high rating."

The camp, which will remain in session until Aug. 3, serves Rowan County youngsters between the ages of 10-16.

"I feel as though it's serving its purpose for the community. It's something for youngsters to do," said Dr. Bentley in a recent interview. "MSU gets the grant money, but it works for Rowan County."

MSU receives no remuneration for sponsoring the camp. As a matter-of-fact, the University adds about "three times the amount of the national funding," according to Dr. Bentley.

The youngsters spend about 10 percent of their daily time in recreational activities. The other time is spent on education about sports and other forms of enrichment programs.

Youth Sports Camp

Melissa Davis, enrichment director for the camp, said the national organization mandates that the youngsters receive education in three major areas: drug and alcohol abuse, nutrition and personal health and careers.

For the careers portion of the enrichment activities, Davis has enlisted the help of area business people. The campers have toured several area businesses to hear about job opportunities in various careers. Also, several professionals have spoken to the youths on subjects from make-up to litter to rappeling.

"Most of the people who come in and talk to the kids are doing so on their own lunch break," Davis said. "I haven't had anyone in the community tell me 'no'. They have all been most cooperative."

Dr. Bentley echoed the appreciation for community assistance.

"There are no programs without problems, but there are no problems inherent with this programs, thanks to the help of the community and especially the Rowan County Board of Education," said Dr. Bentley. "This program would not be possible without them."

Another person who shares this optimistic view of the camp is Dr. Howard Nesbitt, professor of health, physical education and recreation and the camp's activity director.

"This program is the best that I've ever been associated with," Dr. Nesbitt said. "It's important to the youngsters, and that's why MSU stays with it."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- In a major personnel shift, Morehead State University President Herb. F. Reinhard announced Monday that Bureau of Fiscal Affairs Vice President John Graham is being reassigned to a faculty position.

Porter Dailey, director of the Division of Budgets, will act as vice president for fiscal affairs until the position is filled permanently.

President Reinhard said the move is being made because of several "shortcomings" in Graham's area of responsibility. The Bureau of Fiscal Affairs includes MSU's accounting, operations and maintenance, payroll and personnel and purchasing activities.

Graham, MSU's chief fiscal affairs administrator since 1979, will be an assistant professor of business education in MSU's School of Business and Economics. He will teach commencing with the fall semester in late August.

Graham will continue receiving his vice presidential salary until July 22, 1985. This, said Dr. Reinhard, is in "order to be fair and live by the spirit of an administrative tenure" granted to Graham and other administrators by MSU's Board of Regents in 1971. Graham receives $49,215 annually as vice president.

Following the year of administrative tenure, Graham's salary will revert to an amount corresponding to his faculty rank. That figure would be recommended by the School of Business and Economics dean.

Dailey will continue as budget director while acting as fiscal affairs head. He will serve until a national search, to be underway in the next few weeks, places a permanent vice president. Dailey, who receives $42,473 annually as budget director, will get an annual addition of $3,000 while acting as vice president.

Graham holds a bachelor's degree in accounting and a master's degree in higher education from MSU. He came to MSU in 1967 from the Internal Revenue Service and has held posts as the director of fiscal affairs, comptroller and director of accounts.

Dailey, who holds a bachelor's degree in business administration from Eastern Kentucky University and a master's degree in the same field from MSU, has been with the University since 1978. He is a former policy advisor for the Office of Policy and Management, Kentucky Department of Finance.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University Board of Regents Chairman Robert M. (Mike) Duncan today named a three-member committee to pursue renegotiation of an agreement with former MSU President Morris L. Norfleet.

Named to the committee were Walter Carr of Morehead, student regent Michael Fox of Olive Hill and Dr. Forrest Skaggs of Lynch. Dr. Skaggs will chair the group.

Duncan, of Inez, asked MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard and University attorney F.C. Bryan of Mt. Sterling to serve as advisors to the committee.

The Regents authorized the committee in a July 24 meeting to seek a "downward" revision of a four-year agreement naming Dr. Norfleet to the newly created position of chancellor for corporate relations at MSU.

Under that pact, Dr. Norfleet would receive $72,000 for the first year and $49,500 annually for a nine-month position for the final three years. Included was more than $18,000 for office supplies, transportation and housing and a sabbatical leave for the first year.

In the July 24 meeting, Dr. Norfleet offered to revise the pact. He offered to accept a change of the 12-month sabbatical to 10 months at the same monthly salary. That effectively lowers the first-year salary to $60,000. He also offered to give up the $400 monthly housing allowance.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A major conference, "Kentucky Coal: A Look at the Future," is scheduled this fall in Lexington. Sponsored by Morehead State University and the National Independent Coal Operators Association (NICOA), the conference will be held Oct. 4-5 at the Holiday Inn-North just off I-75.

The meeting will afford coal industry people a real "in-depth look at what they can actually expect to see or expect to happen in the near future and in three major areas of concern; the market place, technology, and in the human factor," according to J. Wes Blakely, conference coordinator and chairholder in mining at MSU.

"This conference won't involve speculative opinions," he said, "but will depict dramatic new technologies and ways and means that now exist to help Kentucky's coal industry to remain competitive and healthy in the face of growing foreign competition."

Blakely said the conference will be open to anyone interested in energy production and usage and would be especially informative to "mining owners, operators, coal sales people, engineers and personnel people."

Presentations on mining technological advances will be made by representatives of major equipment manufacturers, the U.S. Bureau of Mines and coal company officials. They will project what mining equipment and mining systems of tomorrow will look like for surface and deep mines, Blakely said, including the comprehensive use of computer technology.

Other expert speakers will address the equally important future market requirements, the ultimate impact of foreign coal development, and human relations development in mining, something Blakely said "has been woefully underdeveloped until now as far as the overall coal industry is concerned."

Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, dean of MSU's School of Applied Sciences and Technology, said "We hope to see a conference of this type become an annual affair, and we're glad that we can assist the state's coal industry in preparing and presenting such an important meeting."

"Most of the time," Dr. Derrickson said, "Kentucky coal people often have to travel and spend two or three days in such distant places as Chicago or San Francisco in pursuing the state-of-the-art on vital areas concerning their day-to-day operations. This conference, with the expert speakers involved, will bring valuable and needed information to their doorstep, so to speak, and not involve extended travel and three or four days of their valuable time away from their operation."

Pre-registration for the conference and a reception is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 4, while the conference begins at 8:30 a.m. the following day. For additional information, contact Lou Hunter of the National Independent Coal Operators Association (NICOA) or Wes Blakely at (606) 783-2644.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Lumberjacks will compete with the axe, crosscut saw, chain saw, and knuckle boom loader during the second annual Kentucky Logging Show, set for Sept. 22 and 23 at Morehead.

Cash prizes and bragging rights for the coming year are on the line as contestants chop, saw, throw, and split in head-to-head competition. Men, women and "Jack and Jill" teams will compete. Scheduled events are Horizontal Chopping, Two Person Crosscut, Jack and Jill Crosscut, Stock and Modified Chainsaw, Axe Throwing and Rail Splitting.

Prize money totals over $2,000, with cash awards to first through fourth place finishers in each event.

Two overall champion lumberjacks--a Kentucky and Open winner-- will be crowned, based on total points earned during the individual events. The 1983 Kentucky champion, Steve Weaver, was challenged by Champbellsville's Billy Joe Kerr, who says he competes for the thrill.

"Danger is part of living," Kerr said during last year's contests. "You could cut your foot off, or your saw could blow up." Kerr, a 30-year-old dairy farmer, competes in lumberjack contests about once a week.

"It's a sport you don't have to spend a lot of money on," he said, "and you use old fashioned basic skills."

The reigning Open Champion of the Kentucky Logging Show is West Virginian Arden Cogar, holder of over 30 world titles.

Country comedian Jerry Clower, the musical group "Atlanta" and singer Sandy Powell will appear in concert in Morehead State University's Academic-Athletic Center at 8 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 22. Advance tickets are $7, adult and $5, student while gate admission is $12, adult and $10, student.

The Kentucky Logging Show is co-sponsored by the Kentucky Forest Industries Association and Morehead State University, and is held-- except for the Saturday concert--at MSU's Derrickson Agricultural Complex three miles north of Morehead on Kentucky Highway 377.

MOREHEAD, KY 40351

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Two years of volunteer work can seem like a long time, but if you're Marvin and Rosalee Smith, the outcome is worth the work.

The Smiths were in attendance at the recent Morehead State University Arts and Crafts Market, one of about 12 they attend each year. But unlike the other craftspersons, the Smiths won't be making money from their sales.

The couple works through the Morris Fork Presbyterian Church in Booneville, and their goal is to sell crafts and return most of the profits to the producers.

"We try to help people help themselves," Mr. Smith commented. "There are people in and around our area who have skills, and this encourages them to preserve the skill and also to pass it on to others."

In helping preserve skills that have been passed from generation to generation already, the members of the Morris Fork Presbyterian Church also act as "non-profit agents." When a craftsperson's work is sold from the Morris Fork stand, the producer receives about 80 percent of the money, with the church receiving the rest.

So far, the church's efforts have resulted in craftspersons from Breathitt, Lee, Knott, Perry and Owsley Counties joining forces with the crafts cooperative.

In addition, the project has purchased several looms for use by those interested in weaving. The key to the church's work, however, is not that the arts and crafts are sold, but that the skills are preserved.

"Some of the things we deal with are old art forms, some are adaptations of old art forms, but," said Mr. Smith, "they are art forms, and they should be preserved."
