MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Dr. Bill Weikel, past president of the American Mental Health Counselors Association and a Morehead State University education professor, will lead a 30-member delegation of mental health counselors on a trip to the Soviet Union, China and Finland May 24, 1985, through June 9, 1985.

The trip is privately sponsored and organized by the People-to-People Travel Program and their national office, People-to-People International, headquartered in Kansas City, Mo.

Dr. Weikel said the trip is for leaders in the mental health field and will serve to acquaint them with their occupational counterparts in other countries.

Counselors will examine foreign mental health systems, speak one-on-one to their counterparts and attend meetings and seminars. The trip is also intended to improve relations between countries, Dr. Weikel said.

He said most of the 30 openings for the trip have already been filled, but qualified leaders may still submit a resume for consideration.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's 1984 Homecoming activities will offer a special treat for country music fans. The legendary Waylon Jennings will appear in an 8 p.m. concert on Thursday, Oct. 18, at MSU's Academic-Athletic Center.

Known for such tunes as "Mammas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys" and "Amanda," Jennings, a West Texan, has established a niche in the country music world. He has performed with other legends like Willie Nelson, Buddy Holly, Johnny Cash, and his wife, Jessi Colter.

His first platinum album, "Wanted: The Outlaws," won him national acclaim in 1976. Since its release, the album has sold more than 2 million copies. In his musical career, Jennings has achieved such feats as one album reaching quadruple platinum status, another reaching double platinum, three platinums and seven gold records. He also won awards for Male Vocalist of the Year in 1975 and a Grammy with Willie Nelson for "Best Country Performance by a Duo or Group" in 1978.

Jennings' latest album, "Never Could Toe The Mark," contains his newest single of the same name. Other singles include "Settin' Me Up" and "Whatever Gets You Through the Night."

MOREHEAD STATE UNIVERSITY

UPO BOX 1100

MOREHEAD, KY 40351

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University will welcome its alumni back to campus in an eight-day Homecoming celebration for 1984. Beginning Oct. 14 with a Kickoff Karnival, the celebration has everything from country music to an MSU Faculty-Staff Awareness Day.

The Kickoff Karnival will begin the Homecoming '84 activities Sunday, Oct. 14, at 4 p.m. MSU's Alumni Association, Inc., will provide free hot dogs and soft drinks to everyone at the Karnival. Entertainment will be provided by campus groups on the lawn in front of Button Auditorium. The Karnival is open to campus and community residents.

The Homecoming Forum, a luncheon event featuring a well known speaker, is set for Monday, Oct. 15, at noon in the Red Room of the Adron Doran University Center. This year's forum features John Hall, vice president for Alumni Administration for the Council of Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) in Washington, D.C. Hall, also a first vice president of the MSU Alumni Association, Inc., will speak on national trends in education. The luncheon cost is $5.50, payable at the door, and is open to everyone.

Tuesday, Oct. 16, is Faculty-Staff Awareness Day. Students will search campus personnel for individuals wearing buttons indicating they are MSU alumni. Students finding the most number of graduates will be eligible for prizes awarded by the Alumni Association, Inc. Prizes will be given to first- through fifth-place finishers.

Blue and Gold Day, a day of school spirit activities, will be Wednesday, Oct. 17. Members of the University community will be encouraged to wear school colors. During the day, eight people will be designated as "mystery Eagles." Asking the right person if they are a "mystery Eagle" will result in a gift from the Alumni Association, Inc. Culminating the day of school spirit is a pep rally at 7:30 p.m. in front of Camden-Carroll Library. Prizes are to be awarded for the most unusual costumes at the rally. Head Football Coach Bill Baldrige and his staff will serve as judges in the contest.

One of country music's legends comes to campus Thursday. Waylon Jennings will appear at 8 p.m. in the Academic-Athletic Center. One of the original "outlaws" of country music, Jennings and his band will play following warm-up act Tony Joe White. Jessie Colter, Jennings' wife, will not be appearing with Waylon. The concert costs $12 for general admission tickets; student tickets are $2 with ID.

Friday's activities range from a candlelight buffet to the 1984 Homecoming Dance. Beginning at 6:30 p.m. on Oct. 19, the Candlelight Buffet will be held in the ADUC Cafeteria. It is open to all; tickets at the door are $6.75 per person. A recognition awards ceremony to honor outstanding MSU alumni is part of the buffet dinner and begins about 8 p.m.

Beginning at 9 p.m., the traditional Homecoming Dance will be held in the Cramer Room of ADUC. A Lexington group, Xanthus, will provide music. The 1984 Homecoming Queen and her court will be presented about 10 p.m. Refreshments will be served during the dance. The dance is open to all; tickets at the door cost $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students.

Homecoming '84

Several new Homecoming activities have been added to the Saturday schedule. President Herb. F. and Mrs. Nancy Reinhard will be hosting a Continental breakfast at their home from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. for all alumni and families. At 10 a.m., a lettermen reunion will be held at ADUC, where all returning graduates may register. Reunions of the classes of '34, '44, '54, '64 and '74 will be held at ADUC at 10:30 a.m. Beginning at noon, the Alumni Association, Inc., will host a chili tailgate party on the east veranda of the Academic-Athletic Center. Head Basketball Coach Wayne Martin and his basketball players will be serving the food. Pre-game ceremonies for the football game with Tennessee Tech begin at 1:30 p.m. and the game begins at 2 p.m.

On Sunday, Oct. 21, the second annual Golf Scramble begins at 1 p.m. at the University course. Entry fee for the event is $5 and souvenirs are provided for everyone participating. The scramble is open to all. To enter, call the MSU Office of Alumni Relations at (606) 783-2080.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Six Morehead State University students brought home trophies from the recent Miami University Novice Speech Tournament in Oxford, Ohio.

The "Novice" category tournament is for students who have never competed in a college speech tournament. There were 12 schools representing 5 states competing in the tourney. The MSU students brought home the second place team sweepstakes trophy as well as individual honors.

Kevin Cockrell, a freshman radio-television major from Jeffersonville, won third place in Poetry Interpretation with a presentation on patriotism in America.

Julie Jones, freshman speech-theatre and radio-television major from Berry, won first place in Poetry Interpretation. She also came in second in Prose Interpretation, with a selection entitled "8-9 Weeks." Jones and partner Brian Waddle came in second in Duo Interpretation, with a cut from the play "Where Are You Going Hollis J.?"

Tara Lail, a freshman radio-television major from Cynthiana, won first place in Duo Interpretation. She and partner Bob Stafford were awarded the honor after a presentation from the play "Farewell to Love." Tara also won second place in Rhetorical Criticism with an analysis of a speech given by Mother Teresa.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- High school students from Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia will participate in the 25th Annual Choral Festival Oct. 29-30 at Morehead State University. Highlights of the two-day event include performances by the MSU Concert Choir and the Chamber Singers and a joint performance of a 250-student chorus of high school students and the MSU Concert Choir.

The MSU Concert Choir and Chamber Singers will perform Monday, Oct. 29, at 8:15 p.m. The groups, led by well known conductor James R. Beane, MSU associate professor of music, will perform compositions by Orff, Rossini, Shultz and others. In addition to English, the presentations will be sung in French, Latin and German. JoAnne Keenan, instructor of music, and Larry Keenan, associate professor of music, will accompany the singers on piano.

A joint chorus of students from the three states will perform Tuesday, Oct. 30, at 7 p.m. A performance of the chorus with the University Concert Choir is planned for the same evening. Dr. Richard Cox of the University of North Carolina is the guest conductor of the performances.

All performances are in Duncan Recital Hall in the Baird Music Hall. Admission is free. For more information, contact Beane at (606) 783-2480.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Kentucky Gamma Chapter of Pi Gamma Mu at Morehead State University has once again earned a place on the national Pi Gamma Mu Roll of Merit.

The MSU chapter of this international honor society in social science, has been named to the Roll of Merit on 12 occasions since its founding in 1970. Lola Crosthwaite, assistant professor of social work, is the chapter advisor.

The Kentucky Gamma Chapter was founded by Margaret DeRouen Patton, associate professor of sociology, who has served as co-sponsor and executive secretary of the chapter since 1970. She was also named Chancellor of the Central Region in 1979.

Selection to the Roll of Merit is made by the national Board of Trustees. Criteria for the honor include activity and effectiveness of the chapter on its campus and its efficiency of operation according to procedures suggested by the international organization of Pi Gamma Mu. Local initiative in developing new activities or in methods of operation is especially noted.

The names of the 13 chapters across the nation which have been honored will appear in the next four issues of "International Social Science Review."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The children can't keep the adults out of the toy box at Morehead State University's Child Development Laboratory.

In a project funded by the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC), the laboratory is attempting to increase area child care providers' awareness of good toy selection skills and toy usage techniques. Ten Rowan County child care centers will be participating in the research, which ends next spring, according to Karen Hammons, director of the laboratory.

"It's exciting that all of these licensed day care centers have agreed to take part in the project," said Hammons, also an MSU instructor of education.

"We will develop 10 toy boxes, called Share 'n Care boxes, to rotate among the child care centers every two weeks. We will meet with advisors and discuss toys and their usages. After 20 weeks, we'll have a final meeting and discuss the project," said Hammons.

"We should reach anywhere from 200 to 250 children through the project," Hammons added. "We hope this will increase centers' awareness of a good toy and what to do with them."

After using a pamphlet from the NAEYC as a guideline for toys to be used in the project, Hammons also considered some toy qualifications that would interest a college community the size of Morehead.

Toy Selection
2-2-2-2-2-2-2

"We considered non-sexist child-rearing. The guidelines will reflect a non-stereotyped use for the toys," she said.

Another primary concern was safety. This also included the durability and versatility of the toy.

"Age considerations were also important in our toy selections," she added.

Hammons said her views reflect the work of the MSU Child Development Laboratory and do not necessarily represent the National Association for the Education of Young Children.

She did not say if the adults at MSU's Child Development Laboratory would ever get out of the toy box, as least as long as safe toy research is concerned.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University students are choosing to paint their rooms one of eight colors as part of the new Room Personalization Program, according to James Morton, director of housing.

Under the innovative program, students can get free paint while a $2 refundable deposit at the office of the Division of Operations and Maintenance gets them a pan and roller. The student painters have to furnish rags, masking tape and other material for the work.

Plans call for the program to offer students the chance to build lofts, remove standard furniture and replace it with their own and allow the painting of wall murals, according to Morton.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils have new and separate office space, thanks to MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard.

A former faculty residence on campus was opened as office space for the two coordinating councils of MSU's Greek student organizations during the University's Parent's Weekend recently.

The separate residence was offered to the students as offices after Dr. Reinhard had talked with several students in their residence hall the night before. His talk with them was part of an ongoing plan to meet on a "no agenda" basis with students and discuss their concerns about campus and university life.

Two of the three bedrooms in the house will be turned into offices, and the third will become a conference room. A kitchen will remain intact and a den will become a study area.

The five officers of the Panhellenic Council, coordinators for campus sororities, and the four officers of the Interfraternity Council, the fraternity coordinating body, will be given keys to the new office.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The vice president for Alumni Administration for the Council of Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) in Washington, D.C., will be the featured speaker at Morehead State University's 1984 Homecoming luncheon forum.

John R. Hall, also a first vice president of the MSU Alumni Association, Inc., will speak on national trends in education at noon on Monday, Oct. 15.

Hall was appointed vice president at CASE in July of 1980. Prior to joining CASE, he served as a speech teacher, director of broadcasting, director of alumni affairs and director of public and alumni relations at Freed-Hardman College.

Hall directs the programming and services in the area of alumni administration, two-year colleges, and developing institutions for CASE. A 1966 graduate of MSU, Hall also attended Peabody College and is an alumnus of Freed-Hardman.

The luncheon forum will be held in the Red Room of the Adron Doran University Center. The cost is $5.50, payable at the door, and is open to the public.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Third Floor Gallery of Morehead State University's Camden-Carroll Library will be hosting two exhibitions until Oct. 19.

One of these is an art exhibit collected by Robert Franzini, assistant professor of art. The show is a collection of prints by MSU students. Featured works include those by Sandra Ray, Greg Hopkins, Jeanine Hildebrant and others.

The other exhibit, a historical political display, is provided by Dr. Stuart Sprague, professor of history. The oldest item is a rare Douglas political envelope postmarked in Bowling Green, while the most recent item is an autographed portrait of Ronald Reagan. Such articles as campaign buttons from the 1972 Democratic primary race and a letter written by William Jennings Bryan make up Sprague's exhibition.

Both exhibits are open during regular library hours.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- A sweeping reorganization of Morehead State University will reduce administrative costs by more than $600,000 yearly, starting next July 1, and will result in overall savings of about $260,000 annually, according to MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard.

"It is clear that the financial impact of the streamlining of the administrative structure will be greater than we first anticipated and the subsequent reallocation of funds can be fully utilized to further strengthen academic programs and student services," he stated. Earlier estimates had placed the projected administrative cost savings at $400,000.

Dr. Reinhard said the reorganization, which became effective earlier this month, was the result of "an outstanding team effort" involving faculty, staff and administrators. The new structure was approved by unanimous vote of the Board of Regents, as well.

"We developed a proposed organization and asked our faculty and staff to react to it in writing," Dr. Reinhard said. "We were very pleased to receive 105 written responses and to incorporate more than 40 changes because of those comments and suggestions. Our people realized that we had to make the university more cost efficient and more effective in order to fulfill our mission to serve Eastern Kentucky."

The changes represent the first top-to-bottom restructuring of the institution since it became a university in 1966.

MSU Reorganization

Major features of the new organization include reductions in the number of vice presidents from four to three, in academic deans from seven to four, in academic departments from 24 to 17 and in non-academic units from 31 to 26. In addition, the former six academic schools have been converted to three colleges.

"Our common goal was to reshape the University along more functional lines to gain efficiency and effectiveness and to make it easier for everyone to understand how the various components work together," Dr. Reinhard said. "We feel that goal has been achieved in fine fashion."

In addition to abolishing 11 key administrative staff positions, the reorganization also resulted in the elimination of 13 secretarial-clerical positions. The former administrators were reassigned to the faculty and the secretarial staff members were transferred to vacant positions within the same classification.

Six primary administrative units have new names as a result of the reorganization and the number of administrators reporting to the president's office was reduced from nine to six. Now answering directly to President Reinhard are the three vice presidents, executive assistant to the president, assistant to the president for university relations and director of athletics.

The former Bureau of Student Affairs now is the Division of Student Development and the former Bureau of Fiscal Affairs now is the Division of Administrative and Fiscal Services. The former Bureau of University and Regional Services was dropped. The former Division of Alumni, Development and Public Affairs now is identified as University Relations.

MSU Reorganization

Five former academic schools -- Business and Economics, Education, Humanities, Sciences and Mathematics and Social Sciences -- were merged in the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Professional Studies. The former School of Applied Sciences and Technology was redesignated as a college.

The Department of Agriculture and the Mining Technology Program were combined to create the Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources. Three former departments -- Accounting and Economics, Information Sciences, and Management and Marketing -- now exist as the Department of Business and Economics.

The former departments of Curriculum and Instruction and Leadership and Foundations, together with the Office of Professional Laboratory Experiences were combined as the Department of Education. Two former departments were merged to create the Department of English, Foreign Languages and Philosophy.

The former departments of Geography, Government and History were consolidated as one department bearing the three names. The same happened with Psychology and Sociology. The Personal Development Institute now is a component of Home Economics.

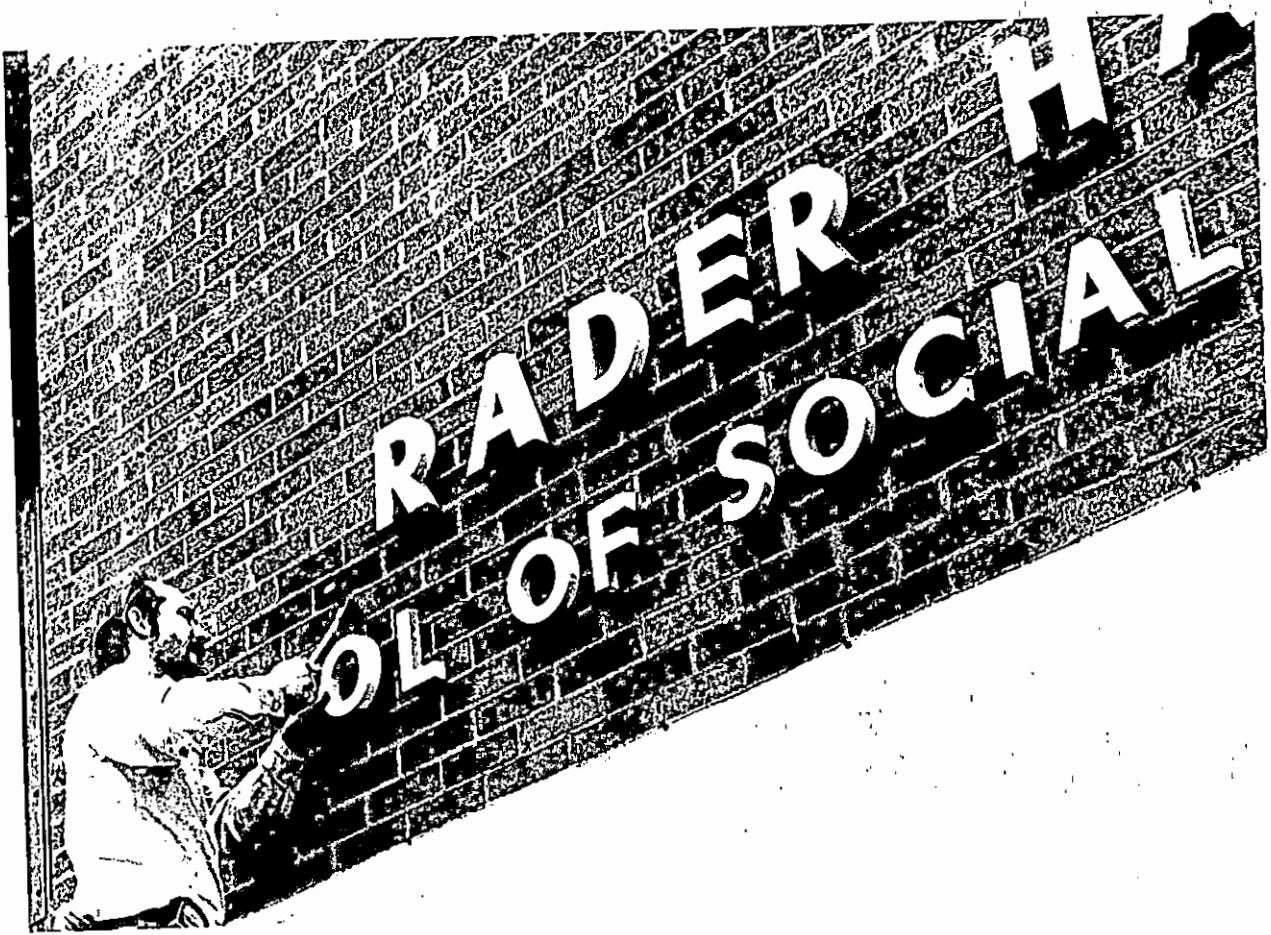

"We already have seen that the new organizational structure is paving the way for creative and imaginative leadership which will make the University more responsive to the needs of students, faculty, staff, and the citizens of this region," Dr. Reinhard stated. "The reorganization will prove to be a vital factor in the University reaching its full potential for the benefit of all."

#####

CHANGING TIMES --- Morehead State University maintenance personnel removed the name of the former School of Social Sciences from a campus building to reflect MSU's recent administrative reorganization which converted six academic schools into three colleges as part of a "streamlined" structure.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Tamra Rase believes in sharing and she feels good about Morehead State University.

As a result, the senior data processing major from Circleville, Ohio, recently made a substantial gift to MSU's Rondal D. Hart Memorial Scholarship Fund.

The story began earlier this fall when Tamra, one of nine children, won a $1,000 "shopping spree" at a Morehead jewelry store. She bought a ring for herself but spend the bulk of the prize on Christmas gifts for relatives and friends.

A few days later, she learned that she had won another $1,000 worth of merchandise from the same store. However, the store had a rule against duplicate winners and, instead, Tamra was offered the option of designating a charity to receive the money.

"Good things are happening on campus this year and I felt good about the University," she recalled. "So, I decided to give the money to the scholarship fund in Dr. Hart's name. He helped me with a problem a few years ago and I wanted to help honor his memory."

Dr. Hart was serving as MSU's director of admissions at the time of his death last June.

Tamra is a graduate of Circleville High School and is the daughter of Mrs. Carol Stevenson of Circleville and Gene Rase of Colorado Springs, Colo. She is serving as president of Mignon Hall and is active in the Residence Hall Association and Student Association.

Her gift is the largest in cash received by MSU from a currently-enrolled student, according to Bill Redwine, director of development.

When the time came for her to present the gift to MSU, Tamra said to President Herb. F. Reinhard as she handed him the check:

"You are trying to improve the University and I want to do my part."

Dr. Reinhard said of the gift:

"The University is proud of Tamra's decision to think first of others and we know that her family and friends share that pride in such an outstanding young woman."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Weigh-in for the new Eastern Kentucky bull performance testing program is Saturday, Oct. 27, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Morehead State University's Derrickson Agricultural Complex.

The testing program is sponsored by the Northeast Kentucky Beef Improvement Federation (NKBIF), a non-profit organization of area beef producers headed by Jim Skaggs of Lawrence County. The on-farm test is open to purebred or recorded percentage bulls born between Jan. 1 and April 30, 1984. Animals should be brought to the MSU farm on Ky 377 where vaccination is also available for the cost of medicines. MSU Department of Agriculture personnel will offer advice on bull feeding and management during the test.

Bull performance testing, according to MSU Appalachian Development Center Agribusiness Specialist Phil Kenkel, is a nationally approved method of beef herd improvement. Also, says Kenkel, the beef industry is of particular new value to Eastern Kentucky as population pressure and the horse industry push beef production out of Central Kentucky.

Benefits of performance testing to the producer include better potential markets and, likely, higher prices. NKBIF will sponsor an auction of tested bulls next March, and buyers from across the region will attend. The tests also provide an accurate, documented evaluation of each beef producers' management efforts.

Bull Performance Test
2-2-2-2-2

The NKBIF program is especially geared to Eastern Kentucky, with on-farm testing to measure performance in typical farm and herd conditions. The program is closer to the farms and less expensive than other test projects. MSU's role is limited to running the test procedures and compiling the results.

"The unique thing about this test," says Dr. Andrew Boston, head of the MSU Department of Agriculture, "is that the beef producers themselves organized the effort. They came to us for technical assistance. This test was conceived and is operated by the Northeast Kentucky Beef Improvement Federation."

The $100 registration fee, payable Oct. 27, is applied toward the sales commission due after the 1985 auction. Part of the auction proceeds will also go toward building a permanent NKBIF testing facility.

At the conclusion of the test, there will be an awards dinner to honor those producers with the best test results.

Bulls may be consigned to the testing program up to and including the weigh-in day. Pre-registration is recommended but not required.

For information on the test, contact Phil Kenkel, Appalachian Development Center, Morehead State University, Morehead, KY 40351, phone (606) 783-2077.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Of the 25,000 or so graduates since the program began 62 years ago, only 54 have made the elite list. Now, during today's Homecoming Candlelight Buffet, two more outstanding former Morehead State University students will be inducted into MSU's Alumni Hall of Fame.

The two alumni, Columbus E. (Kai) Norris and Dr. Roger W. Barbour, will be honored at 8 p.m. The Candlelight Buffett begins at 6:30 p.m. in the Adron Doran University Center Cafeteria.

Norris, a former football Eagle, is the owner of Howell's Motor Freight, Inc., in his hometown of Roanoke, Va. He has parlayed the trucking firm into a $6 million business.

He and his wife, the former Betty Lee Grubb of Huntington, W. Va., have four children and seven grandchildren.

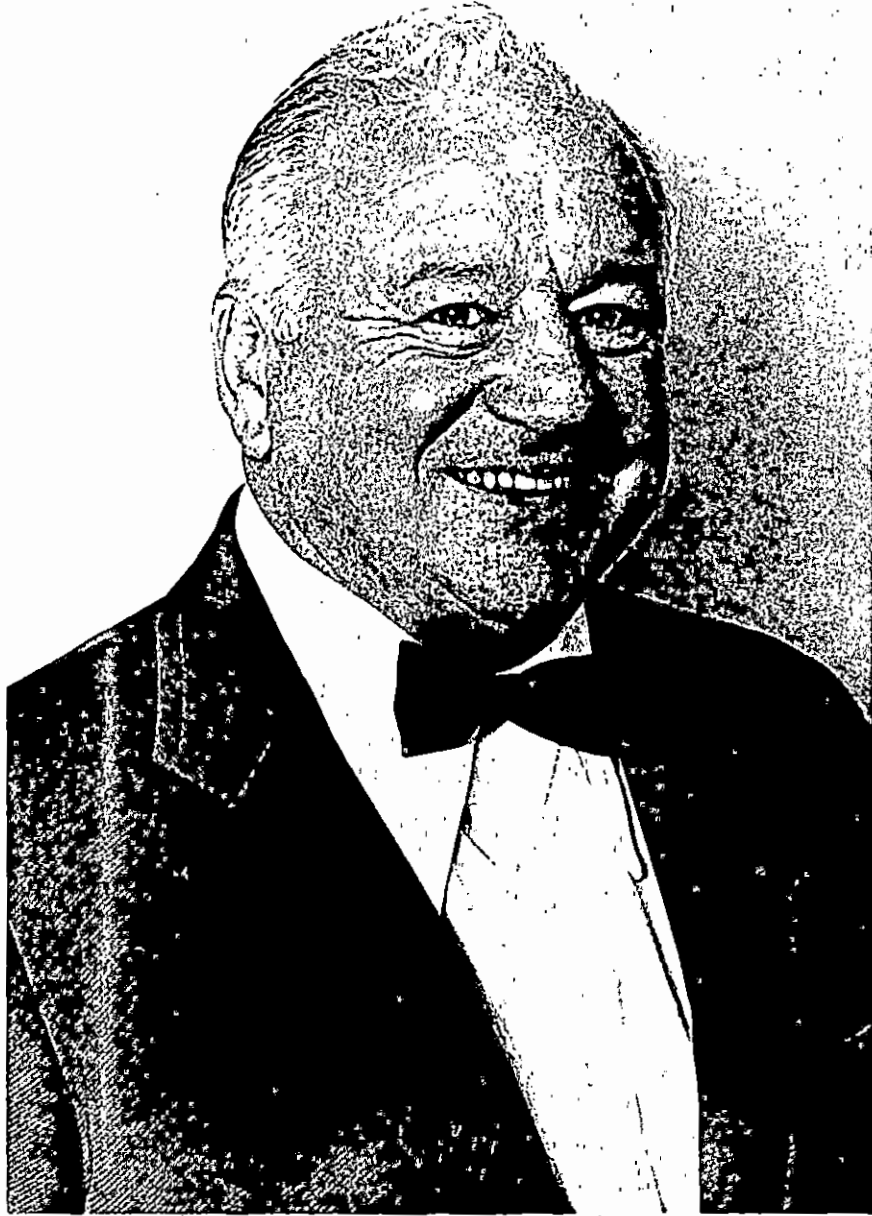

Dr. Barbour, a Morehead native, is a nationally known zoologist and retired professor at the University of Kentucky. Known for his naturalist writings and field guides, Dr. Barbour and wife, Bernice, recently had a retrospective showing on campus and in town of their photography of the Morehead area. He spent two years teaching in Indonesia and is a former faculty member at MSU.

He and his wife, the former Bernice Lewis, have three children and seven grandchildren.

Tickets for the Candlelight Buffett are available at the ADUC Cafeteria door. Open to all, the Buffett cost is $6.75.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The 1984 Kentucky Logging Show was "a great success" and Morehead State University wants to continue its co-sponsorship of the annual salute to the state's lumber industry.

That was the message MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard delivered Tuesday night at a dinner meeting of Morehead business leaders.

"We have informed the leadership of the Kentucky Forest Industries Association of our strong desire to continue our partnership with the Kentucky Logging Show," Dr. Reinhard said.

"We plan to meet with the KFIA staff and local lumber operators in the near future to begin work on the 1985 show."

MSU and KFIA have co-sponsored the weekend observance since its inception in 1983.

"This year's show was a great success and we hope to do even better in the years ahead," Dr. Reinhard said.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Chris Perkins and Aubrey Russell, candidates for Kentucky's 7th U.S. Congressional District seat, will debate during a forum Oct. 30 in Button Auditorium at Morehead State University.

Perkins, a Democrat from Hindman, and Russell, an Ashland Republican, will address U.S.-Soviet foreign policy issues. Each candidate will present his view on the policy and follow with responses to questions from a four-member panel of MSU students and the audience.

Panel members will be Duane Osborne, a sophomore English major from Morehead; Scott Coburn, a senior business administration major from Grayson; David Chapman, president of Students for Reagan and Bush, a senior physical education major from Morehead; and Aaron Polston, a graduate agriculture student from Garrison.

Dr. John Hanrahan, professor of history, will serve as forum moderator. The forum is sponsored by The Young Democrats and Students for Reagan and Bush.

The debate begins at 10:20 a.m. and is open to the public. For more information, contact Dr. Hanrahan at MSU, UPO 841, Morehead, KY 40351, or call (606) 783-2090.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Our job is to help existing businesses and help bring new industry to the area," says Wilson C. Grier, assistant director for Business Development in Morehead State University's Appalachian Development Center (ADC). "For example, we recently helped with the groundwork in bringing the new Tecumseh Woodworking Company from Michigan to Rowan County."

The new Tecumseh operation, recently announced by the Morehead/Rowan County Industrial Development Authority, used ADC services to compare costs of operation in Michigan versus Rowan County. Grier and Phil Kenkel, ADC agribusiness specialist, took Tecumseh owner Terrance Beland on a three-day tour of possible sites for the new factory.

"Any Eastern Kentucky individual or business may contact us for assistance," said Grier.

Part of the ADC Business Development Program is the East Kentucky Small Business Development Center, directed by Robert Justice, a program funded by the Small Business Administration to provide direct business counseling.

Other staffers include Kenkel, who works primarily with farm marketing efforts such as Mattox Enterprises in Fleming County and new regional cooperative efforts such as the Northeast Kentucky Beef Improvement Federation and the Kentucky Mountain Farms Cooperative. Another, more recent staff addition is Pete McNeill, whose work focuses on efforts to bring new tourism and industry to Eastern Kentucky.

The primary effort, according to Dr. Donald L. Fogus, ADC director, is in the areas of agriculture, wood products and service industries. Research efforts maintain data on Eastern Kentucky's population, employment levels, tax base and other economic statistics. Both ADC staff and MSU faculty members can become involved in research and service.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The Morehead/Rowan County Arts Council opens its 1984-85 Arts In Morehead (AIM) Series by presenting The Masterplayers on Thursday, Nov. 1, at 8 p.m. in Morehead State University's Button Auditorium.

The Masterplayers, a chamber orchestra of 17, is composed of leading solo and chamber music players from all over Europe. Directed by distinguished Swiss conductor Richard Schumacher, the ensemble has won wide critical acclaim throughout Europe, Latin America, the United States and Canada.

Since 1954 The Masterplayers' home in Lugano, Switzerland, has been a center for the outstanding instrumental musicians on the Continent. Between 1960 and 1968 The Masterplayers were responsible for over 1000 performances in Europe alone. After a triumph in 1973 at Lincoln Center's Mostly Mozart Festival, the "New York Times" said the concert..."was the kind of playing that invited rather than demanded attention and that rewarded the listener with pleasures of a kind one does not often hear these days."

Many celebrated virtuoso string and wind players were given early opportunities to perform with the orchestra, including Julian Bream, Jean-Pierre Rampal and Halina Stefanska.

Although The Masterplayers draw mostly on the music of the great masters of the past, the ensemble also includes in its repertoire several contemporary works of unusual interest.

UPO BOX 1100

MOREHEAD, KY 40351

Currently on exhibition in the art gallery in the Claypool-Young Art Building at Morehead State University are the works of five contemporary photographers. Entitled "Faces of America," this exhibition is thought-provoking and instructive in the diversity of its subject matter and the individual artists' use of the photographic medium. It is often thought that photographs are only mechanical recordings of facts. They are. Yet there is much in every photograph that could be otherwise, such as subject matter, framing, distance, size and the relation of tonal values. These factors shape our perception of the facts, and when handled creatively and sensitivity, they result in photographs that are not only recordings of facts, but transformations which reveal other dimensions of the world and of ourselves.

Despite its title this exhibition is certainly not an exhaustive portrait of America. What it shows, ironically, is that there is no simple face of America, only faces. Not just an ethnological melting pot but an awful, rich complexity of differences of race, nationality, age, class, sex, occupation, education, wealth and power. Each of the photographers in this exhibition explores a different level of this complexity through their unique sensibility and use of the medium.

Mark Goodman's images are close-up portraits of children and teenagers of Millerton, a small rural community in upstate New York. Through a remarkable closeness without intrusion Goodman has coaxed their vulnerability out of hiding and caringly protected it. In these softly printed intimacies, painfully crooked teeth and lopsided ears disturb the innocence of childhood, and the wariness, rebellion, and confusion of adolescence in the 70's is presented with an unremitting affirmation that makes them "works of love," as James Kaufmann has put it.

Richard Colburn's photographs are also direct, but he sees from a greater distance. A black man pauses for the camera while hoeing his backyard garden. A couple with young children pose in their living room surrounded by memorabilia, the kitchen in the background. We are not touched by these people. The distance is not just physical. Colburn is not concerned with intimacy, but with the theatricality of life in larger, more public spaces. His subjects are characters. They occupy sets. They are usually illuminated by harsh frontal lighting like that of the stage. Indeed, the surface of one of his photographs is like the proscenium of the theater, an invisible wall which separates us from, and at the same time allowing us access to, another world beyond the obvious.

The work of David Read deals not with individuals but with momentary glimpses of everyday happenings; bizarrely masked youthful ball players at a night game; a woman granting her dog a rest stop in the middle of the highway. The invention of the hand-held camera and the perfection of very sensitive films earlier in this century dramatically altered our perception by allowing photographers to "freeze" events, to lift brief moments out of the continuous flow of our experience. By isolating what Cartier-Bresson called "the decisive moment," Read's photographs show us, in a quiet understated way, comical, surreal and poignant facets of our lives that we could not otherwise observe.

Susan Ressler's images are at the opposite extreme. Her very deliberate, very carefully composed photographs of the Los Angeles offices of Fortune 500 financial megaliths transform the austere interior design of corporate America into two-dimensional cerebral abstractions. Her work best fuses the photograph as recording and the photograph as creative transformation. In her images the formal dance of geometric shapes has an unworldly repose and is also the perfect cold, shiny mirror of a real world in which space, time and value are reduced to pure number.

Charlee Mae Brodsky presents a series of photographs of torsoes, each framed to crop the figure slightly above the neck and below the waist. With the exception of one, each is clothed. The limitation imposed by the cropping allows a wealth of detail to come to the fore: the way a belt is cinched, the contour of a stomach or breast, the way a shirt hangs from old shoulders. The body in these photographs is neither an idealized aesthetic object nor an inert material object, but the lived body. The clothing is not an artificial covering for the unseen natural man, but a second skin through which the lived social body becomes what it is. The clothes wear the body as much as vice-versa. Ironically, these faceless torsoes reveal what is perhaps our most human face.

Bartlett Review
4-4-4-4-4-4-4-4

In sharing these glimpses of America, overlook the title. These photographs are less a collective portrait of the country than disparate but essential pieces which invoke a vast boundaryless mosaic. And this in a way which neither diminishes the greatness of our nation nor aggrandizes our humble attempts to come to know ourselves.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's speech team brought home the third place team trophy from Miami University's Rosebowl Speech Tournament in Oxford, Ohio, last week.

More than 20 schools from eight states, including eight of the top ten teams in the nation, competed in the events.

Individual achievements at the tournament included:

*Margaret Holt, a sophomore radio-television major from Radcliff, won third place in Epideictic (a speech to praise or criticize) speaking, with a speech praising the effort of Mothers Against Drunk Drivers. Holt also placed fifth in Rhetorical Criticism.

*Lisa Shemwell, a sophomore journalism major from Winchester, won third place in Rhetorical Criticism, with a speech that examines the persuasive elements in the television show, "Family Fued."

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's Computer Center probably has the closest thing to an annex in the Cartmell Hall residence hall.

Mike Feldhaus, a senior electronics-robotics technology major from Burlington, lives in room 711 with his computer and his roommate, Scott White, a sophomore math major. Feldhaus accesses the MSU computer through a modem and the telephone. The convenience of late night computer availability is not lost on his friends.

"A lot of guys in the dorm come in late at night to use the computer for their homework," said Feldhaus.

Feldhaus first became interested in electronics in his high school physics and computer science classes.

"I knew what the computers could do, but I wanted to know what made the computers do what they did," said Feldhaus.

To help him answer the question, he is taking classes such as robotics 270, which deals with operating robots, physics 201 and special problems in robotics interface.

Feldhaus says he likes working with digital electronics and power control the most. He also enjoys working with automating machinery and robots.

In his room, he says, he just "tinkers with programming" on his personal computer but with access to the university computer, he is able to do "a lot of basic programming."

Feldhaus

Presently, he and his fiancée, Missy Hunt, a junior sociology major, are working on a program that will print out word searches.

Feldhaus has a summer job as a technician on electronic equipment, but in the future he wants to work in the robotics industry, starting as a technician. His future is in designing robots and automated equipment, which, he says, could be "anything from a dishwasher to a tobacco setter."

Feldhaus already holds an associate degree in electronics and will get his bachelor's degree in the spring of 1985. He will continue study, though, until he receives his bachelor's degree in robotics in the spring of 1986.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- The first performance in the Arts in Morehead series, The Masterplayers Chamber Orchestra at 8 p.m. on Nov. 1, is a good time to purchase a season subscription for the artists' series.

With six presentations scheduled for 1984-85, AIM is offering subscribers a generous deduction from the ticket-at-the door prices. Each presentation will cost $6, adult, at the door, while individual subscriptions for the year are only $18. When the family subscription is purchased at $35 for the season, even more is saved. The cost for students, those 18 and under, at the door is $2.50 per presentation, while high school student subscriptions are $10.

In addition to the Masterplayers, the following artists will perform, all at 8 p.m., on the Morehead State University campus:

*March - The Lexington Children's Theatre: "Play on Words," a comic approach to language arts studies for the elementary child, date and time to be announced; and

For more information on subscriptions for the season of artistic performances, write Arts in Morehead, PO Box 250, Morehead, KY 40351, or call (606) 783-2483.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- "Stress Management in Business and Industry" is the topic of a Nov. 10 workshop at Morehead State University.

Instructors for the one-day session are Dr. William K. Redmon, associate professor of psychology at West Virginia University, and Dr. Bruce Mattingly, associate professor of psychology at MSU.

Both instructors have extensive experience, have served as stress management consultants to industry, and have published articles on the effects of stress on business and industry.

Research has shown that stress is a leading contributor to poor physical and mental health and a major factor in lowered productivity. This workshop will deal with identifying stress symptoms and teaching participants how to effectively deal with stress.

The $30 registration fee includes lunch, refreshments and workshop materials. The sessions will run from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 10, in the West Room of MSU's Adron Doran University Center.

The workshop is coordinated through the East Kentucky Small Business Development Center (SBDC), part of MSU's Appalachian Development Center. Other sponsors are the Small Business Administration and the Kentucky Commerce Cabinet.

For information, or to register, contact Robert Justice, SBDC, Appalachian Development Center, Morehead State University, Morehead, KY 40351, or phone (606) 783-2077.

UPO BOX 1100

MOREHEAD, KY 40351

606-783-2030

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Persistence and luck are only part of his success, according to Dr. Mont Whitson, professor of sociology at Morehead State University. Whitson has received funding for 21 grant proposals from universities, state and national organizations throughout his career.

"I guess, fundamentally, it's believing you can do it...being willing to take the time to think a project through and write your proposal, then submit it according to the requirements of the foundation (to which you're applying for a grant)," Whitson said.

He received his first award as a fellowship from the Tennessee Public Health Department when he was 19 years old. A stint in service during World War II made him eligible for funds from the GI Bill program. That was followed by fellowships, scholarships, and special national and state grants he received while working on his graduate degrees. From the beginning of his undergraduate work in 1944 until the completion of his doctorate in 1961, Whitson funded his entire college education with grants and fellowships.

Dr. Whitson says the grants, which are funds from private or public organizations awarded for research and compilation of findings on a problem or subject within a field of study, have allowed him to take either credit courses or fellowship-type studies at 15 universities across the country during the past three decades.

Whitson

"I am involved in a wider world than I would have been otherwise, understanding different types of people and those that have majored in different areas," said Whitson of the grants. "And so the greatest advantage has been my sharing information with others and their sharing with me. I've been able to share that directly, or indirectly, with students over the years."

It is a worthwhile experience for every faculty member, according to Whitson. He especially encourages younger faculty members to pursue grants. He says the grants are a way to "broaden experiences," and study at various universities in a variety of fields.

But receiving the grant is a challenge, according to Whitson. One or two weeks during Christmas break may be used simply researching and writing proposals for the grants.

Each proposal, Whitson said, must show that the applicant has an understanding of the problem being researched and that the writer can contribute to the project or study group. He also advises sending out at least three or four proposals in order to receive one response.

Grant availability is not widely publicized, Whitson says, so, it's a matter of "keeping your eyes and ears open." He recommends reading as many publications as possible, especially the "Chronicle of Higher Education." Subscribing to the mailing list of various foundations, such as the National Science Foundation and the National Endowment for the Humanities, also helps.

The grants he has received have allowed Whitson to explore a variety of topics, ranging from plant closures in Rowan to civil religion, in a variety of fields. Getting proposal research published is a definite possibility and is even encouraged, he said, once you have presented your material to the foundation.

"Usually all these groups, public or private, expect you to write a paper or monograph and present it to them within a few months of finishing the funded program. Then you may get something published that will be read by a larger audience," Whitson said.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Morehead State University's MSU Players will be presenting Ira Levin's "Deathtrap" at the MSU Kibbey Theatre Nov. 9-17, excluding Nov. 11 and 15. "Deathtrap," a murder mystery, ran on Broadway for several years and was made into a 1982 film starring Michael Caine, Christopher Reeve and Dyan Cannon.

Play director Bill Nichols, a graduate student, described the play as a thriller about a playwright who receives a manuscript of a thriller in the mail from a young author. The playwright, who has had four flops in a row, jokes with his wife about killing the young author for the manuscript, and the play ends with an unexpected plot twist.

"Deathtrap" begins each night at 8 p.m. Tickets are $3.50 for general admission, $2 for students and free for MSU students with ID.

DANNY R. WRIGHT, DIRECTOR

MOREHEAD STATE UNIVERSITY

UPO BOX 1100

MOREHEAD, KY 40351

606-783-2030

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Starting in the fall of 1985, Morehead State University will require incoming in-state students to meet admissions standards beyond possession of a high school diploma.

Adopted Tuesday by MSU's Board of Regents, the raise in admission standards will continue the tradition of access for students through a joint summer program for academic preparation of those falling below the requirements.

The higher standards and a Summer Enrichment Program will raise academic quality while keeping the spirit of higher education opportunity, according to MSU President Herb. F. Reinhard.

"These academic standards, while affecting perhaps 5 percent of the incoming class, are very, very fair to young people," said Dr. Reinhard in an impromptu press conference following the meeting. "We will slowly raise the standards over the next few years, and will continue the Summer Enrichment Programs to offer those interested students who are short of the standards the opportunity to bring themselves up to an expected level of academic achievement. It is desirable of us as a regional university to do that."

Admission requirements in the new program will be based on a formula using ACT scores and high school grade point averages. In the past, MSU in-state students were admitted upon reception of a high school diploma.

The Summer Enrichment Program, to become effective in the summer of 1985, is nine credit-hours of writing, reading and arithmetic. Successful completion of the eight weeks of classes will bring students to an acceptable admissions level.

In other business, the board elected Circuit Judge James M. Richardson of Owingsville as vice chairman. The board had been without a second-in-command since Robert M. (Mike) Duncan of Inez became chairman following the March resignation of former chairman Jerry F. Howell of Jackson.

MOREHEAD, Ky. --- Albert J. Bowen has been named director of Morehead State University's Office of Admissions by President Herb. F. Reinhard.

Bowen, 42, has served for the past four years as director of student services at Indiana Vocational Technical College in Sellersburg, Ind. In that position Bowen handled recruiting, admissions, student records and activities, placement and other responsibilities for the state-wide college system.

"I'm really excited by the challenge presented by this new post," Bowen said. "I look forward to working with the new administration in achieving its objectives."

A veteran of communications intelligence and public information in the U.S. Army, the U.S. Army Reserve and the U.S. Naval Reserve, Bowen has served in Japan, Korea, Okinawa and Vietnam. He holds a bachelor's degree from State College in Salem, Mass., and a master's degree from the State University of New York at Oswego. Both degrees are in secondary education. He completed advanced studies in educational administration at the SUNY at Oswego and post-master's work in administration at Purdue University.

Bowen is married to the former Jacqueline Reed. They have eight children ranging in age from five to 20.
